The first business of the striking telegraphers, when they could rally after their defeat, was to withdraw their secret organization from that monopoly of trade lodges, the Knights of Labor. A dispatch from Pittsburg the other day says that this whole order is honeycombed with internal dissension and must fall to pieces. A strong Pittsburg faction has led the fight and has been joined by the communists of New York and the freetraders who are said to be under pay of an English society. When Mayor Powderly of Scranton, Pa., wrote in the North American Review last year as Grand Master of the organization, he expected that it would shortly solve all difficulties about the labor question. The whole world of working men were to be absorbed into a grand secret lodge that should dictate terms to capital. The miserable failure of his plan only proves what thousands of working men as well as employers are slowly and with severe experience coming to learn—that a war waged with the weapons of lodgery is pretty sure in the end to injure friends more than foes.

The Aretic king celebrates another triumph over the attempts of man to penetrate his frozen citadel. Some years ago the establishment of a number of Aretic stations about the pole was undertaken by different governments, for the purpose of scientific observation and to provide relief stations for further explorations. In 1881 the American government sent out Lieutenant Greely with an expedition to establish one of the American links in this chain of Aretic observatories. This was named Fort Conger, and was equipped with all necessary supplies to last until the summer of 1884. The Proteus, of the U. S. navy, which had taken the Greely expedition out, was sent last summer to communicate with him and if necessary to bring him home. July 23rd the Proteus was crushed in the ice and foundered, losing the whole cargo of supplies but no lives of her crew. The relief party escaped and have just returned. The failure of this relief expedition causes great anxiety among government officials and the families of the explorers. Lieutenant Greely and his party have not been heard from for two years, and there is much speculation as to whether the voyagers will be able to extricate themselves from their perilous position. It is reported from Washington that the Secretaries of War and of the Navy have decided that to send another relief expedition would be folly. The most experienced in Arctic navigation advise them that nothing can be done after October 20th when there are but a few hours of daylight in that region. The danger of wrecking a new relief party in its attempt to reach Upernavik, in Greenland, is estimated to be far greater than should be incurred for the chance of rendering any aid to Greely. From Upernavik no aid could be given except by sledging, and this is regarded as totally impracticable. The case of Lieutenant Greely is not, however, hopeless, since his orders were to return by September 1st, when he would have time to reach some of the supply stations which have been planted at intervals for the relief of parties which have fallen into the same difficulty. He may thus subsist until he can be extricated next year.

Postmaster General Gresham is in deep earnest about the Louisiana lottery and the mails. His last order goes beyond anything yet attempted in the suppression of the lottery business. The postmaster at New Orleans has been directed not to deliver registered letters or to pay money-orders to the New Orleans National Bank. This institution, chartered by the government, has placed itself "in the shoes of M. A. Dauphin"—to use Gen. Gresham's expression—in an attempt not only to evade but practically to defy the laws of the United States. The advertisement of the lottery company, printed since the recent order forbidding any delivery to M. A. Dauphin, directs lottery-ticket buyers to remit to this National bank. It is probable, therefore, that the principal portion of the bank's money-order and registered mail is on lottery business, and until the bank can prove to the contrary it will be dealt with in the same manner as a lottery company would be. The Postmaster General has taken this resolute step after consultation with Attorney General Bliss. He should be supported by the moral sentiment of the country with enthusiasm. It is rare that we have a public officer of nerve enough to lead the country in its demand for the suppression of such evils.

The Postmaster General has attacked another serious abuse in his department. As it is the fashion for the men that run the political machine to sieze the spoils, the post-offices have in many cases fallen a prey to these harpies. Hence the order, not long ago issued to postmasters, that absence from duty on political errands would forfeit their places. Mr. Paul Vandervoort, connected with the railway postal service, received his dismission under this order, for giving more attention to the Grand Army of the Republic, of which he was commanding officer, than to the business of the government which paid for his time. The Grand Army of course stood by their chief and made an uproar for a few days all over the country. At last Vandervoort comes out with a weak letter explaining his case and begging for sympathy against his government. He confesses that out of the 313 working days in the year, 265 were given to his lodge affairs. He claims that this was done with the consent of Postmaster Generals Howe and Gresham, though he presents no written order to that effect, as so considerable absence from duty should require. Although the case is so clear and every patriot needs no second thought to see that for such neglect of public duty somebody should be punished, yet the Grand Army lodges, true to their secret instincts, stand by the man to whom they have stricken hands in a wicked oath and condemn the Postmaster General. They are proclaiming in the most emphatic manner that if a public officer is a "good fellow" and member of their lodge he must be kept in office though to the great disadvantage of the public service. Such is the patriotism begotten by the lodge.

Mr. Gladstone, in the House of Commons some months ago, said: "We suffer more year by year and every year from intemperance than from war, pestilence and famine combined; those three great scourges of the human family." Charles Buxton, member of Parliament, said: "Through intemperance there are five hundred thousand homes in this country (England) where home happiness is utterly unknown; and the struggle between it and the church, the library and the school is one phase of the warfare between heaven and hell."

SHALL WE CONQUER THE LOGGE BY PRAYER.

Ye did run well, who did hinder you.—Gal. 5:7
Having begun in the spirit are ye now made perfect by the flesh?—Gal. 3:3.

The term flesh means human instrumentalities. The Galations, instructed by Paul, had received God's plan of doing God's work, and his methods never failed. They were mighty to the pulling down strongholds, and building up of the kingdom of God. The Galations were a mere handful in the midst of a world full of idolatry, environed with institutions of wickedness hoary with age, and terrible in power. Acting upon God's methods they not only established the kingdom of God, but carried it forward against all opposing powers. "They did run well." Why did not they continue? Who hindered them?

Looking back at them through the intervening ages we wonder at them for not devoting every power in God's methods in doing his work. They commenced and succeeded with them. They were a perfect success. They were invincible, nothing could resist them. They accomplished wonders. All had confidence in them. None doubted their efficacy. No power could prevent their continuing to use them. And still they dropped their tried and true weapons. They laid aside God's methods, and took their own; gave up divine, and took human wisdom; commenced in the spirit and ended in the flesh. And we wonder at them.

And they looking down from the battlements of heaven wonder at us for doing the same thing. We make the same fatal mistake. God's way of doing we insensibly let slip out of our hand, and we find ourselves using our own methods in our own spirit. The human is palpable, the divine is unseen. The agents are manifest, and are urged forward with intense earnestness. The mighty God who works all our works in us and gives efficacy to all we do is but little more than a figure head to embellish our enterprise. Hence we begin in the spirit and complete our work in the flesh, and God is afar off, and his work ceases. We do not doubt God's methods. We know they are efficient; that nothing can stay them; that they will set his work forward with power. Who doubts the almightiness of the prayer of faith? that the fervent, effectual prayer of the righteous man availeth much? that if two agree as touching the same thing that it shall be done unto them? that if we abide in Christ and his words abide in us that we may ask what we will and it shall be done?

These truths blaze forth from every book in the Bible. Who will hinder us in the use of these methods? We have used them. They have accomplished wonders. The reform has been established, and has made such progress as has impressed the world and astonished us all. God has done great things for us. We can't doubt it. Let me call witnesses onto the stand and let them testify.

Brother Kimball of New Hampshire, come forward and testify. Tell the mighty struggles you have been through; the bitter persecution you have met; the opposition you have faced, until you had nothing left you but believing prayer. Tell us, my brother, has the Lord heard your prayer, and brought you into a large place, and given the hearing ear and the understanding heart to hundreds?

Brother Bancroft of Wisconsin, as you go from house to house giving witness to the truth, tell us if the Lord hears and answers your prayers?

Brother Feemster of Kansas, does the dear Lord hear your prayer? Does he keep his promises? If he does, speak out and give testimony.

Brethren Hinman and Stoddard, does the Lord hear and answer you? If he does, speak, "for ye are my witnesses, saith the Lord."

I cannot call by name all the true men and women engaged in this reform. My heart is greatly called out towards you. Will you speak and say whether the Lord hears and answers your prayer? If so, give in your testimony that he is a prayer-hearing and a prayer-answering God; and let us solemnly raise a memorial before him, by constituting something like the Fulton street prayer meeting in some place where the incense of prayer shall constantly ascend. And shall we not, all of us, renew our covenant with each other to offer the prayer of agreement touching this one thing that God will come and dwell in all the friends of the reform, giving them the spirit of prayer and an unshaken confidence that God in answer will do great things for us?

A SEPTUAGENARIAN.

THE POLITICAL FRANCHISE.

BY GEN'L J. W. PHELPS.

The plan proposed by the present governor of Massachusetts for regulating the franchise is an ingenious one, although not very new. He virtually proposes to give every man the right to vote, whether he knows how to read, or owns property or not, and then to control his vote by a comparatively small, select ring, called the Masonic lodge, which is practically composed only of men who know how to read and write and who own a considerable amount of property. By this ingenious plan the ignorant man is pacified with the idea that he has the right to vote, while a select, privileged ring controlled by rich men, in which the governor himself stands on the highest round of the ladder, is to run the government for its own interest. This is one of the great reforms that Governor Butler, Freemason of the 33rd degree, proposes to establish during his term of office. He thus combines the virtues of an aristocratic government with those of a universal democracy, which is precisely the government that the French Jacobins established when they placed the power in the hands of Napoleon I. and his military aristocracy.

Under these curious reform notions of Governor Butler, he would continue to the negro of the South the same right to vote which he holds now, but would insure to the Ku-klux lodge the power of holding the negro and poor white man in a perpetual state of peonage. Under this system the negro laborer would find himself always in debt to his master, however many bales of cotton he might raise.

The governor is anxious to hold out the idea that he has been elected by Republicans. But in this too, he either deceives or is deceived. He has been elected to his present office by Freemasons. Any attentive observer in Massachusetts previous to the election could have perceived that the lodge was going for Butler. And an effort at reform like this is the only kind of reform, viz., a change from one corrupt party to another, which the partizans of the lodge can ever make. They do not possess the moral power necessary for a reform. Their morality is spurious; it is measured out by compass and square, and possesses no vitality, unless it be of low craft and sly cunning.

Is Freemason Butler sincere? Is he honest in his great concern for the rights of the poor? When he gives up to the poor man the money which he has plundered from the "poor man's government"; when he shall have given up the high position that he holds in the select, privileged circle of the Masonic lodge, then we shall believe that he may possibly shed tears over the wrongs which Massachusetts and Rhode Island are inflicting upon their poor men.

When Freemason Butler was sent to the Southwest to command, he had to deal with the brother Masons who had got up the rebellion. He therefore recognized his Masonic obligations, and began by returning "contrabands" to "their owners"; for Masons nowhere, not even in Massachusetts, admitted negroes into their lodges. The negro was not considered man enough for that! Least of all was he regarded fit for a soldier. General Butler continued this policy during most of the time of his stay in the southwest, until he was forced, against his efforts, to recognize the negro as a man and soldier. And even then, it was only free negroes, generally men of property, whom he admitted to this privilege. Soon afterward he was recalled. After a few months of command, he was removed and another devoted Mason was sent to take his place. Now, if Gen. Butler's services were so valuable and distinguished as his fellow Masons pretend, why was he recalled? Why were not his valuable services continued in that quarter? Why have so many other generals and so many Congressional Commissions been sent there to remedy the disorder which he left there at his recall? None but Freemasons or their dupes will ever maintain the idea that General Butler rendered valuable services in the Southwest, unless, indeed, those services are considered valuable which are rendered to and for oneself. It must prove ruinous to all just government, and in fact to all sense of justice, to let an administration recall a general from a post where he is supposed to be doing valuable service, and at the same time applaud both the administration and the general too. But such must ever be the character of the government where Freemasonry enters as a principal element, as it has done with us during the last half century. Masons will be applauded whatever they may do.

The Massachusetts lodge offers us as a reformer one of its highest dignitaries, who, in the course of his political career has once waited till his own party had turned their rebel cannon against the Republic before he became converted himself. No reform by such leaders becomes possible until it is announced from the mouths of cannon warning the world of their own misdirection! There should be no proper room for Masonic duplicity about the political franchise. It is a matter that ought to have been adjusted by the war of the rebellion, and probably would have been if it had not been for the sinister influence of the lodge. Every true American is in favor of universal franchise, provided universal education of the American character goes with it. But this is a proposition which the Masonic demagogue does not fancy. The Republican party, which has long been under the control of the lodge, has virtually given universal suffrage to the South, but has made no provision for rendering education universal. But it must be evident to all right-minded men that every one in a republic should know how to understand the Constitution and the Bible. Nay, he should know how to read and understand the Mormon Bible and other Masonic monitors, in order that he may comprehend the sophistries, the deceptions and the shams that are taught and practiced by the Masonic lodge.

Nothing could be more paltry and inconclusive than the election of General Butler viewed as a reform movement. It ranges far below any issues by which reform becomes possible. The first step toward reform must consist in throwing off the domination of the Masonic lodge. It is not an American institution; and never can become Americanized, any more than the Inquisition could be. The American voter must vote it down or it will put down the American voter. The franchise must have an American basis, and not a Masonic one. It must be controlled by the public school, and not be the tricks of the Masonic lodge.

QUESTIONS TO BE CONSIDERED IN REFORMS.

As a rule no man has a right to interfere with the utterance of truth. All men belong to God and all truth belongs to him, and he has a right to put every truth before every man. The truthfulness of a man's utterances may be called in question; his manner of stating truth may be criticised; the propriety of stating certain truths at times and in certain places may be doubted or denied, but no man's right, privilege or prerogative to utter truth must ever be ignored. Every high-minded man, every free-born Briton, and especially every heaven-born Christian will insist on this right. When you deny this to any man you assume to be his master and denude him of a God-given function. You destroy the very foundation of his accountability to God, blot out the distinction (to him) between right and wrong, and degrade him to the condition of a slave.

It is every man's duty not only to forsake sin, but to oppose it in every place and in all its forms: "And now also the axe is laid unto the root of the trees; therefore every tree which bringing not forth good fruit is hewn down and cast into the fire." Christ was manifested to destroy the works of the devil and all sin is the work of the devil, and that church or that individual who is not a living protest against sin in all its forms, is not faithful. We are not responsible for consequences if we act according to the light that is within us. Christ has assumed that responsibility himself, and no doubt he is capable of over-ruling our honest mistakes as well as the wrath of men to his own glory.

According to God's word the Gospel, if faithfully preached will awaken antagonism on the part of men. Christ said, "Think not that I am come to send peace on earth but a sword: For I am come to set a man at variance against his father, and the daughter against her mother, and the daughter-in-law against her mother-in-law. And a man's foes shall be those of his own household." The Master has also said, "The world hateth me because I testify of it that the works thereof are evil," and, "If the world hate you ye know it hated me before it hated you. If ye were of the world the world would love its own; but because ye are not of the world, but I have chosen ye out of the world, therefore the world hateth you. Remember the word that I said unto you, the servant is not greater than his lord. If they have persecuted me they will also persecute you: if they have kept my saying, they will keep yours also." Jno. 15: 18-20. "These things have I spoken unto you," said Christ, "that ye should not be offended. They shall put you out of the synagogues. Yea, the time cometh that whosoever killeth you will think that he doeth God service. And these things will they do unto you because they have not known the Father nor me. But these things have I told you that when the time shall come ye may remember that I told you of them."

Now it is evident from these teachings that the preaching of the truth will kindle the antagonism of unregenerate men, and to whatever extent even professed Christians are defective in piety or hold defective views of Christian character and duty, the plain truth, especially when it conflicts with their practices or prejudices will embitter them. How foolish we are, then, to expect to rid the world of sin without opposition, without war, without stirring up all the malignant passions of men! The religion of Jesus or the wisdom that cometh from above, is first pure then peaceable, but we must never reverse the divine order and demand first peace then purity. It is no proof, therefore, that any man or any movement is wrong because it awakens the hatred, hostility and bitter enmity of men. It is possible therefore to purchase peace at too great a cost.

This consideration, perhaps more than any other, demonstrates the folly and wickedness of Christian men joining in any compact or alliance with wicked men. In doing so they place themselves between the batteries of truth and the ramparts of sin, and expose themselves to the very shots that were aimed at the church's foes. The result is either that the church must fire into the air and waste her ammunition, or wound her own friends. But what would you think of British and French soldiers during a time of war between Britain and France, entering an alliance with each other and swearing their allegiance, fidelity and love to one another? And suppose the British soldier on the French ramparts got wounded by a gun from his own batteries who would be most to blame, the British general who directed the fire, or the British soldier who strayed among the foe? Now, there are more than Christian Masons guilty of this folly and that, too, in direct opposition to their Lord's command to "Have no fellowship with the unfruitful works of darkness, but rather reprove them." Eph. 5: 11. Also the apostle says to the Corinthians, "But now I have written unto you not to keep company, if any man that is called a brother or a fornicator or covetous, or an idolator, or a railer, or a drunkard, or an extortioner with such an one no not to eat." 1 Cor. 5:.11.

The fact is that whenever we try to blend the church and the world for any purpose we dishonor the former without benefiting the latter. In fact I am not aware that any man pleads as his reason for joining secret societies or worldly institutions that he is actuated by a desire to do such good, but rather to avail himself of the advantages of such institutions for his own good. This is undoubtedly to love the world and subverts the divine precept which says, "Whether ye eat or drink or whatsoever ye do, do all to the glory of God." Nay, verily, brethren, the thing is inconsistent, inasmuch as by joining hands and linking arms with ungodly men you not only compromise your own characters, but the character of Christ whom you profess to have put on, and you not only place yourselves in a position where you cannot openly and earnestly fight for Christ but you make yourselves targets for all shots fired at the evils of such institutions, and at the same time you make yourselves a kind of barricade for bad men to hide behind. Such conduct reminds one of the young woman who married a drunkard, professedly to reform him, but most people thought she married him because she loved him, and that his reformation was in her eyes quite a secondary consideration.—The Iconoclast.

LODGE BENEVOLENCE.

The lodge carpenters refuse to work became nonlodge plasterers are employed. The Telegraphers' brotherhood swears that "No member of this organization shall instruct any person in the art of telegraphy until the local assembly of which he is a member shall have first granted permission to do so, and until said permission shall have been ratified by the Executive Board of the district assembly."

And the Declaration of Principles, fifth article, says "that all members of this order shall abstain from teaching our profession, except to a brother, sister, son or daughter, and use all honorable means to suppress fraudulent telegraph offices." By "fraudulent telegraph offices" is meant those not run by lodge men (see Rev. 13:17). The narrow selfish spirit of the secret lodge is clearly seen in such oaths and principles. A Freemason more honest than most of his class, recently commended Masonry to me because while he was a seafaring man by giving the Masonic sign he could land his cargo on the warf before his turn came by ordinary course of business. In his blind and selfish zeal he said: "Wouldn't you let your brother in ahead of others?" "No," said I, "not even my mother." The spirit of lodgism kills the conscience. Hence, Masonic preachers "do not see any hurt in Masonry." Slaveholders saw no hurt in slavery. Rumsellers see no hurt in rumselling. It is common for sinners to apologize for sin and blinded by sin, they are in a certain sense sincere. President Charles G. Finney who was a Freemason before he was a Christian said truly of Freemasons: "They have seared their consciences by what they have done." Hence the solemn duty of every man who can discern right from wrong to make the welkin ring with the proclamation of the truth.

AN UNPUBLISHED LETTER OF JOHN QUINCY ADAMS.

[From the Christian Instructor, Sept. 13.]

To the Editor of the Christian Instructor:—During my abscence from home this summer I made the acquainance of an estimable physician in a small town in Pennsylvania, who showed me among his literary treasures an autograph letter from President John Quincy Adams, which he believed had never been published. The letter relates entirely to the contest against Freemasonry, which was hotly waged about the time of its date. The views of President Adams on this question are well known, yet a special interest may attach to this paper, now published for the first time, as showing the importance which he assigned to the struggle against secretism. Although the opposition to Freemasory has long since ceased to be a question of practical politics with the American public, it is well for each individual to consider it as a moral question, and to examine the principles involved. The testimony of the United Presbyterian church most emphatically condemns the practice of secretism, and every member should understand the reason why; not only that he may resist the enticement of others to join with them in this evil, but that he may be able to show them that it is an evil. So far from this being the case, alas! it is commonly reported that there are many members of secret societies unrebuked in our midst. Although the letter of President Adams was written to the editor of a political paper there is in it no expression that makes it improper for publication in a religious paper, and therefore I submit it to you for that purpose. J. P. L.

Philadelphia, Pa., Sept. 1. 1883.

WASHINGTON. Dec. 13th, 1832.

"T. C. H———, Esquire.

Dear Sir.—I have received the Pennsylvania Republican, of the 5th and 12th inst., together with your letter of the 14th. For the sentiments of personal regard and esteem, contained in which, I assure you of a grateful return. I accept with pleasure the tender of your favor in the continued transmission of your paper during the session of Congress; and shall value it, not only as a vehicle of communication to the public, of the opinions of my excellent friend, Mr. Rush, on various topics of National interest, but as devoted to the promotion of the cause of virtue. I say the cause of virtue, because it cannot be more effectually served than in the removal of vice; and there is in the condition of the people of the Union no vice so shameless in its effrontery, so corrupting in its organization, so formidable and so mischievous in its power as Freemasonry. It is now a standing and permanent conspiracy against the whole community to which its members belong—still organized for, and acting by secret and concerted co-operation throughout the whole Union—not for the preservation of its own senseless secrets, which have all been divulged, but of its blasphemous oaths, of its fraudulent promises, of its brutal penalties as a means of preying upon the vitals of the community under the mask of religion and benevolence, and charity and good fellowship. As one step towards the demonstration of this, I appealed to the plain sense and honest feeling of my country in the four letters on the Entered Apprentice's Oath, of which friendly notice is taken in your letter, and which I find republished in the Pennsylvania Republican. The main object of these letters was to prove to the honest, unsophisticated sense of feeling of every one who should read them, that the very first step of initiation to the order of Freemasonry, analyzed and tested by the laws of God and man, was inherently, essentially and indelibly vicious and immoral, and if the position is not proved in those letters, with the precision of mathematical demonstration it is because the letters themselves are imperfect—a deficiency of the writer, and not of his theme. Well, Virtue is the first word in the admirable motto to the Arms of Pennsylvania. Virtue is the fountain, the first fountain of her helaldry. Can a Pennsylvanian look at the escutcheon of his native State, and in the first word that meets his eye not feel as if he heard that word uttered to him as a precept from the lips of his mother? Can a Pennsylvanian ever forget that in the banners of his State, when they float on the gale, the first word they speak to him who serves under them, bound, if need be, to die in their defense, is virtue? And is virtue compatible with aggregation to a band of conspirators, the very act of initiation to which is vice? These are considerations to be pressed hereafter, and perhaps by stouter hearts and firmer voices than mine. The letters on the Entered Apprentice's Oath were intended, so far as was in the writers power, to establish a principle; let that be clearly understood and admitted, and then will commence the argument that in Pennsylvania at least, even if in no other community under the sun, the question between Masonry and Anti-masonry is the question between vice and virtue; and upon that question my call to Pennsylvania would be—"Stand to your Arms."

I am, very respectfully, sir,

Your obd't servant, J. Q. ADAMS.

THE SERMON.

PREACHED BY H. H. HINMAN AT THE CAMP-MEETING OF THE KING ST. CHURCH, CHAMBERSBURG, PA.

"For if thou altogether holdest thy peace at this time, then shall there enlargement and deliverance arise to the Jews from another place; but thou and thy father's house shall be destroyed; and who knoweth whether thou art come to the kingdom for such a time as this." Esther 4: 14.

The Jewish people were in imminent danger. The providential coming of Queen Esther to the kingdon gave her a grand opportunity to plead for her deliverance. She might not hold her peace, but must speak at that time, even at the risk of her life. True, God would surely deliver his people. If not by her, then by some other means, but she was the Divinely chosen and blessed agent for the deliverence. No considerations of self-interest, no plea that she was a woman and belonged to a despised nation would excuse her. She must go in and speak to the king.

This history suggests much.

1. That every minister of the Gospel is placed in a similar position of responsibility. Evils innumerable beset the people of God. Satan like Haman, is seeking their destruction, and is proud and haughty in his power. God's ministers have no right to

ALTOGETHER HOLD THEIR PEACE.

The Divine commission is the same as of old. "Cry aloud and spare not. Lift up thy voice like a trumpet and show my people their transgression and the house of Jacob their sins." Now, as of old, the voice of the Lord cries, "O, Son of man, I have set thee a watchman unto the house of Israel, therefore thou shalt hear the word of my mouth and warn them from me."

There is no place for silence or quietness or false peace. The curse pronounced on Meroz was not because her people had gone over to the enemy; it was not that they had even wished him success; but "because they came not up to the help of the Lord, to the help of the Lord against the mighty." The same voice saith as of old, "Cursed be he that doeth the work of the Lord deceitfully, and keepeth back his sword from blood."

AT THIS TIME.

Every time has special dangers. These of Esther's time demanded her especial attention. Those of to-day demand ours. The questions and the conflicts of Luther, Knox, Wesley, Garrison and Lincoln were of great importance, and the glory of these men is that they met their responsibilities. But new questions and new dangers have arisen. We may not spend our time on old issues. We must meet the dangers of to-day, and meet them now or our opportunity will be lost. If impending calamities are to be averted by our efforts it will be because we hold not our peace at this time.

THEN SHALL ENLARGEMENT ARISE FROM ANOTHER PLACE.

God has said of his church that he has founded it on a Rock, and "the gates of hell shall not prevail against it." Moreover, he says to her, "No weapon that is formed against thee shall prosper, and every tongue that shall rise in judgment thou shalt condemn. This is the heritage of the servants of the Lord." Yea, this is our heritage. We shall be more than conquerors through him that hath loved us. We will fear not then to go up to the battle, for "though hand join in hand, the wicked shall not be unpunished." God hath said, "To me belongeth vengeance and recompence; their foot shall slide in due time, for the day of their calamity is at hand, and the things that come upon them make "haste."

"Surely "the Lord knoweth how to deliver the godly out of temptation, and reserve the unjust unto the day of judgment to be punished," and he is not dependent on any arm of flesh. "Oh that God's people were wise, that they understood this. "How should one chase a thousand and two put ten thousand to flight."

But, (if thou holdest thy peace,

THOU AND THY FATHER'S HOUSE SHALL BE DESTROYED.

God has inseparably united the grace that saves with the grace that seeks to save others. He that selfishly seeketh his own life shall lose it; but he that in the spirit of his Master is willing to give his life for others, "shall keep it unto life eternal." Had Esther failed to meet the responsibilities of her time she would have suffered dreadful loss, and so will all those that refuse to meet the moral responsibilities of to-day. Among the things they will lose are:

1. Their self-respect. No man can respect himself who is a moral coward. He may plead a thousand excuses for silence. He may vainly imagine that the forces against him are more than are on his side, and that he can do more good by not arraying them against him; but when he considers that souls may be lost through his neglect, he will hear the voice of God saying, "If thou forbear to deliver them that are drawn unto death and those that are ready to be slain. If thou sayest, Behold we knew it not. Doth not he that pondereth the heart consider it, and he that keepeth thy soul doth not he know it."

2. They lose the respect of man. However much the world's time-servers may be applauded, the men of endearing honor are the moral heroes; for so constituted is the human mind that even the wicked do involuntary homage to Christian courage, manliness, and self-sacrifice. The fools that seek honor one of another, rather than the honor that cometh from God only, will utterly fail of either. When Moses chose to "suffer reproach with the children of God rather than enjoy the pleasures of sin for a season—esteeming the reproach of Christ greater honor than treasures in Egypt," he made a wise choice. The ministers of to-day who have forgotten that God has said, "fear ye not the reproach of men, neither be afraid of their revilings," have made a fearful mistake which endangers their everlasting shame.

3. They lose the Divine power. The prophet says, "But if the watchman see the sword come, and blow not the trumpet, and the people be not warned; if the sword come and take any person from among them, he is taken away in his iniquity but his blood will I require at the watchman's hand." When he saw the vision of the six men each with a destroying weapon, who were utterly to destroy old and young, it was those only to be spared, who "sigh and cry for all the abominations that are done in the midst of Jerusalem."

"And who knowest but thou art come to the kingdom

FOR SUCH A TIME AS THIS."

The Lord has made no mistake in the time and work he has given us. It should be a matter of profound thanksgiving that we have been called to these conflicts; and if faithful, we shall rejoice forever. Who of all those who have endured the trials and conflicts of foreign missionary work but has looked back with unspeakable joy that he was permitted to do and suffer in the cause of the Master. Who that passed through the great anti-slavery struggle and endured the odium that came on all those who sought "to undo the heavy burdens and let the oppressed go free," but rejoices that he was permitted to suffer shame for Christ's sake? God surely has called us to his kingdom for such a time as this.

II. Having briefly enumerated the reasons why as good soldiers of Christ we should meet the conflicts of the hour, I can but notice some of the many forms of anti-Christ that we are called to meet. The chief and great danger to the church is not from outward foes. Jesus could not be delivered into the hands of men until Judas had betrayed him. It is only the betrayal of false friends that endangers the church.

Among these evils are

1. Unbelief. Ingersollism would have but little influence if there were not so much latent infidelity in the nominal church. Unsoundness of doctrine and immorality in conduct have always an intimate relation. There is great need that we take heed "of an evil heart of unbelief in departing from the living God."

2. Worldly conformity. This has become so common and prevalent that the reproach of an ordinary religious profession has altogether ceased. The word of God which declares that "if they have persecuted me they will persecute you also," and that "they who will live godly in Christ Jesus shall suffer persecution" has no application to the average church member. It is only those who have come out from the world and are separate of whom it is true.

3. The malign influence of the secret orders over those professors of religion who are connected with them. This evil power is seen: (a). In unequally yoking believers with unbelievers. (b). In substituting a spurious, selfish brotherhood in place of the brotherhood of Christ. The great example and elder brother in the Masonic fraternity, Hiram Abiff, it is said, died to conceal important truth from those who desired to know it. The Elder Brother and Great Example of Christians died to reveal the truth which men did not desire to receive, but which was of infinite importance, both for time and eternity. There cannot in the nature of things be a more marked contrast than between these opposing influences. (c). They deny to the church all right to know whether the conduct of her members who are connected with these orders is in accordance with Christian principles or not. The oath to conceal all that is done in the lodge makes this impossible, and erects another tribunal superior to the church. (d). They teach lying. An oath to conceal the truth and to pretend that what is well known is unknown is an oath to lie. (e). They require blasphemy. To ask God to be a party to, and help execute an unholy covenant with an unlawful penalty, is positive blasphemy, and yet this blasphemy is practiced largely by ministers and members of churches. (f). They do not confess and honor the name of Christ. This is much less than the truth, but is sufficient to show that they are anti-Christ. "For every spirit that confesseth not that Jesus Christ is come in the flesh, is not of God; and this is that Spirit of anti-Christ whereof ye have heard that it should come, and even now already is it in the world." 1 John 4: 3.

There are many other foes that seek to destroy us. I have not spoken of intemperance, because, though an exceeding great evil, it does not threaten the life of the church. We need like Esther, humiliation, fasting and prayer. "Blow a trumpet in Zion; sanctify a fast, call a solemn assembly, gather the people, sanctify the congregation, assemble the elders, gather the children, and those that suck the breasts. Let the bridegroom go forth out of his chamber and the bride out of her closet. Let the priests, the ministers of God, weep between the porch and the altar. Let them say, Spare thy people, O Lord God, and give thy heritage to reproach." Joel 2: 15–17.

That "a man can't be a good Mason without being a good Christian" is an expression familiar to all but just how much it means but few stop to consider. In the Masonic view Christianity is only a part of religion but "Masonry is religion itself." Hence to say that a man may be a Christian without being a Mason but can't be a Mason without being a Christian," is to say in plain language that Freemasonry is superior to and greater than Christianity. This is a positive denial of Chrirt as the power and wisdom of God.—Banner of Truth.

"The life of Christianity," said Luther, consists of progressive pronouns." It is one thing to say, "Christ is a Saviour;" it is quite another thing to say, "He is my Saviour and my Lord." The devil can say the first; the true Christian alone can say the second.—J. C. Ryle.

NEW ENGLAND LETTER.

BUTLER AND ANTI-BUTLER — PLANS FOR REFORM — JOHN TANNER.

WORCESTER, Mass., Sept., 19, 1883.

The very earth is trembling. The deafening roar of cannon has just startled us. Has the rebellion broken out afresh? Have the Sir Knights of the Pacific coast invaded the commonwealth? What mean these echoes of the enginery of war? Why, the Republicans have just nominated for governor, by acclamation, Congressman Robinson. If it had been "Captain Jinks" the same cannon would have belched forth its volley.

Strange things occur in politics, and an honest man is led to wonder what is behind the curtain. We make our offering to the mysterious god of politics and the oracles respond from hidden recesses, telling us, the common people, what to do if we wish the heavens to smile upon us. Here is one of the curiosities of politics. A great campaign is just at hand. Differences are to be "sunk." Butlerism is about to be branded. A half dozen candidates are "named." One is "named" more than the other five. One at a time the other five withdraw in favor of the one. It is settled that he is to be nominated. He moves among respectable people, but he is also well related to the other class, for he is a Freemason and opposed to prohibition. These are favorable qualities for he has the happy faculty of being white with white men and black with black men.

But now comes the strangeness of this series of events. The evening before the Republican convention meets in Boston to nominate, this candidate withdraws and refuses to be nominated. What is the secret history of these strange maneuvers? It looks as if there were men, high up in the councils, who had determined to let Butler in again and they had "warned" brother Pierce, their candidate, "of approaching danger"! Last year Robert R. Bishop was nominated to be slaughtered; this year it is Congressman Robinson. This is guess-work, but there will be no harm in watching developments. Robinson is well spoken of by good men and is not known to be in the lodges, but is reported to be a Prohibitionist. His election is doubtful. Massachusetts politics are likely to be of national interest till after November.

Brother J. P. Stoddard has been with us part of two days, departing on the midnight train last night for New York and the West. Friends of reform in Worcester came together last evening to hear statements from brother Stoddard concerning the progress of the work elsewhere. Considerable enthusiasm was manifested over the Washington project and a series of resolutions were passed recommending the speedy cancelling of the remaining indebtedness on the Washington building and the immediate formation of a joint stock company to publish a paper there. Senator Pomeroy, who was here recently, favors this programme and has some excellent ideas about it which deserve a hearing. The recommendations of the Worcester meeting last evening may need some modification and alteration as the plan develops but the outlines suggested should be set in motion speedily and the stock subscribed without delay. A little enthusiastic effort on the part of friends throughout the country would make it possible to finish paying for the building by the time the National Convention meets. Brother Stoddard will make known the details as may seem necessary. If the State conventions take hold of the matter vigorously its success will be certain.

ANOTHER GAP IN THE RANKS.

Death has again invaded our ranks. Brother J. Tanner has gone. Young in years, ripe in experience, rich in good works, he has closed his earthly career to begin a happier existence above. Thursday night Sept. 16th he died. He had been failing in health for more than a year and it was evident that consumption was making of him a sure victim. His journey to Minnesota last year was for his health, and again last winter, when he went South, it was with the hope of a more favorable turn in the disease, but the progress was unchecked. Only the Monday before his death he was able to walk out, but commenced then to fail rapidly, suffering much toward the end, but dying at last peacefully and triumphantly. "Almost home," were his last words to his pastor, faintly spoken as the death damp gathered. Not once during his long sickness did he murmur against God for afflicting him, nor did he seem to regret that death was coming. His Christian faith and joyous triumph was remarkable.

A few facts of his life deserve to be preserved in memory of his devotion to the cause of reform. He was born in Barrington, N. H., Nov. 14, 1856, moved to Boston in 1875, remaining there till reeently, when he settled at Nashua to die. He was converted during a revival in Park Street church, Boston, and was an active member of that church, till he removed his membership to Pilgrim church, Nashua. His conversion was thorough and his convictions radical. He commenced to study for a foreign missionary, but his health was not sufficiently vigorous to continue. He endeavored to put away from himself everything that would be any hindrance to the cause of Christ. A statement of his Anti-masonic principles was made at his funeral and he was followed to the grave by an affectionate wife and friends, who laid him to rest in a lot selected and purchased by himself in anticipation of his own death. A good man has gone but he has left a precious memory of piety and godliness.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

While we are sending missionaries to convert the "heathen" on the other side of the globe would it not be well to look after the heathen nearer home? The State of Missouri, where they glorify bandit murderers and defy the law to convict them, would seem to be a ripe field for missionrry effort.—Evening Star.

This refers to the ease of Frank James. Yes the acquittal was a reproach upon the good name of Missouri, especially when it is remembered that one of the witnesses refused to testify on account of his "prior obligation to secrecy." But when the authorities of this District shall conviet the Star-route thieves and the ex-detectives; or when they shall even make a vigorous effort to punish Capt. Howgate for his enormous robberies, then it will be time to talk of sending Washington missionaries to the border. As it is, I think Missouri missionaries might be profitably sent to Washington. In Missouri they havea law designed to seeure the sanctity of the Sabbath, and a worthy Governor who seems determined to make the saloonkeepers obey it. It would be a great improvement on Washington morals if we had a similar law and equal executive ability in its enforeement.

The Superintendent of the police reports a diminuation of erime. This is good news, and it is hoped that the time may speedily come when the quickest and surest way to save property from being stolen, or recover it when lost, may not be to conpound with the robbers by giving them from 25 to 50 per cent. of the value. When the people who are the victims shall cease to do this, and find it safer and better to trust courts and juries instead of avowed thieves it will be time to talk of the missionaries to Missouri.

SATAN REPROVING SIN.

The N. Y. Herald in its report of the convention of trades-unions says:

"On this subject in general the convention adopted resolutions directing their president, Mr. Gompers, to appear before the Senate Committee on Education and Labor, now in session here, and direct their attention to the system adopted by the Western Union of compelling its employes to accept certain conditions under oath or be refused employment. This, the resolutions say, destroys every principle of manhood and the freedom of action guaranteed by the constitution, and introduces a servile system far more degrading than the slavery of olden times. Mr. Gompers was therefore instructed to advocate before the committee the advisibility of Congress making this rule of the Western Union a criminal offense."

By all means. Surely the Western Union has no right to impose such obligations on its employes, and ought to be legally restrained. But how about the lodges and trades-unions? They impose oaths on all their members. Does this great and cruel wrong, this "servile system far more degrading than the slavery of olden times," become sweet and amiable when enforced with a hoodwink over the eyes and in semi-nudity? What a wonderful difference it makes in men's conception of "manhood and the freedom of action guaranteed by the constitution" when it is determined whose ox is gored! The truth is that all such oaths whether open or secret, whether imposed by employers or by a secret order, are extra-judicial, have no binding obligation, and violate the spirit if not the letter of the civil law. More: they are manifestly blasphemous and clearly forbidden by the Divine law. The Divine command, "Swear not at all,—Matt. 5:34; Jas. 5:12,) if it means anything, must apply to extra-judicial oaths. All swearing is profane that is without Divine warrant. This will be evident if we consider the nature of an oath.

In every oath there is presumed to be three parties: the administrator, the reciever, and the Almighty, who is called on to witness and confirm the covenant. If this covenant is of such a character that God cannot become a party to it; if it is simply frivolous or involves something contrary to perfect holiness; then to ask him to conform it by becoming a party to its execution, is simple blasphemy. Now who supposes that the Divine Being ever becomes a party to the selfish and cruel exactions of the Western Union Telegraphic Company? Who ever imagines that he ever promised to hear the prayer of those who swore under penalty of having their "throats cut from ear to ear," and say, "So help me God!" If this is not blasphemy, then nothing can be profane.

I shall cheerfully sign Mr. Gomper's petition to Congress to make all such swearing, whether by the Western Union or others, a criminal offense.

COMPROMISING WITH THIEVES.

Major Dye, of the police, says it is surprising how many of the complainants in the numerous cases of petit larceny now being reported are willing to compromise with the thieves, and refrain from prosecuting on the promise that the property is restored. The evil is a growing one, and the complainants do not seem to realize that they are doing a wrong to society and violating the law. Such compromises, he says, are of almost daily occurrence. He states that so far as he is concerned he will try and break up the practice of compromising felonies.—Evening Star, Sept. 13.

Major Dye need not be surprised. For many months some of the legal officers of this city practically compromised with thieves and robbers, and shared in their thefts. Honest citizens who were the victims found that about the only and the surest way to save a part of their losses was by compounding with the villains who were in office and out of office. The thieving detectives have been dismissed, but their punishment seems about as hopeless as that of their partners in crime.

There is no disguising the fact that members of the secret orders in this city constitute a priviliged class, and that many unite with these orders to escape the penalties of the law. So long as the oaths of witnesses and jurymen are counterbalanced by previous oaths to conceal the crimes they are called on to expose and condemn, there is little hope of any improvement. It is notorious that the great criminals almost uniformly escape. Their prosecution involves vast expense and results in a steadily diminished confidence in the civil law as a safeguard against crime. In the South and West men vindicate outraged justice by mob violence, but people are more conservative here, and choose rather to buy out the thieves.

When the law is made a terror to evil doers, and a praise to them that do well these things will cease; but this can never be so long as oath-bound favoritism is the rule.

QUESTIONS IN GOOD BEHAVIOR.

CASE.—In a free country, where the religious sects are numerous, and where a man may be buried according to any rite that pleases him, an Episcopal minister is called on to officiate at the funeral of a Freemason, a Mormon, a Ku-Klux, Molly Maguire or some other secret society man.

Now the question is: First—Would it be good behavior in this Episcopal minister to abandon the forms prescribed by his own church, and observe Masonic rites on the occasion?

Second.—Would it be proper to mingle the forms prescribed by his own church with those of the Lodge, half and half?

Third.—Would it be proper for him, when in a Buddhist country, to bury men in the Buddhistic fashion; or with part Buddhist and part Episcopal fashion?

Fourth. -Does not moral decency require that the Episcopal minister should use his own forms and none other?

Fifth.— Is it not his moral duty, so long as he remains an Episcopal minister, to see that his own church forms at funerals are not mingled with any other forms in the remotest degre?

EPISCOPALIAN.

—Frances E. Willard of the Woman's National Christian Temperance Union took barely two weeks to rest after her return from lecturing and organizing branch societies in all parts of the trans-Missouri and Pacific States, before she is again in the field. She addressed full houses in Frankfort, Ky., Jeffersonville, Ind, and at New Albany, Ind., within a few weeks. Her appointments at Newport, Covington, Ky.; Dayton, O.; West Randolph, St. Albans, and Bennington, Vt.; Ponghkeepsie, N. Y.; Kennebec and Portland, Me., run through the present month. During a large part of October she will be in Canada.

The cry of religious oppression, as against Sunday observance, is a device of the enemy. It is but the voice of soulless corporations, and of the proprietors of drinking-saloons and other demoralizing places, who wish to make their great gains on Sunday, and care nothing for the welfare and happiness of the people. They are the oppressors, and the advocates of a day of rest are the staunch supporters of a true freedom.—Century.

REFORM NEWS.

NEW HAMPSHIRE.

The Seventh Annual Meeting of the New Hampshire Christian Association will be held at Canterbury Tuesday and Wednesday, Oct. 23, 24. Friends in New England are invited.

S. C. KIMBALL, Sec'y N. H. C. A.

—The State Convention of the Wisconsin Christian Association is to be held this year at Menomonee, Dunn county, by order of the last convention. The time will be in early part of November instead of October 24th as announced last week, probably November 7th to 9th. Definite notice will be given next week. Meantime remember that Dea. M. R. Britten of Vienna, Wis., as treasurer, is anxious to receive contributions to defray the expenses of the meeting.

INDIANA.

TO THE FRIENDS IN INDIANA:—By the concurrence of the Executive Committee I hereby announce the eleventh annual meeting of the State Christian Association to be held at Oakland City, Gibson Co., Oct. 16th, 17th and 18th inclusive, (commencing Tuesday evening, Oct. 16th). Eminent speakers will be there, of whom due notice will be given. We confidently hope the friends in Southern Indiana will help make this a grand meeting by having the meeting well advertized in the annual conferenees and other church meetings, by coming themselves, and having others come. S. L. COOK.

AGENCY WORK IN WESTERN NEW YORK.

DALE, N. Y., Sept., 15, 1883.

EDITOR CYONSURE:—At the request of the president of the N. C. A., I would like to make the following report of my summer's work.

The voice of the Empire State is still heard in condemnation of Masonry. Though one voice was hushed by Niagara's waves, its echo was heard from hill-top to hill-top arousing many sleeping souls, causing them to commence a fight which grows stronger as they near the grave. The man is ignorant indeed who has not heard of Morgan and his dire fate.

There may be found here as elsewhere two classes of people. The first class drift on the tide of public opinion, walking in the same ways that their fathers walked, believing as they believed, living in the same houses occupied by them. Their houses if they ever were painted, have not received any of that article for many years. They loaf around country stores; tell how much smarter than other people they are. They can cut more wood than any other living man—in the summer; can bind two acres of wheat in a day—by the stove in the winter. They would never go West. O no, not they! They are too smart to go to Dakota to be blown away in a cyclone.

The second class are industrious, hard-working people, live in neatly painted houses, keep their fences up, and are always ready for every good word and work. It is among the latter class that I usually find the reformers.

Let us call at the house of one of the first class. We enter through the gate, which perhaps is hole a torn in an old rail fence, and knock at the door. Presently a red-headed miss stieks her head out of the window and shouts, "You can't fool me, Tom." Then she discovers her mistake, runs away to tell her father, who comes to the door and bids us enter. Upon entering, the man staring wildly, remarks, "And what you got to sell now?" We reply that we are working in the interests of the reform opposing all oath-bound secret societies.

"Working in the intrests of what!" exclaims the man, raising his hands in astonishment, and looking as savage as a meat-axe. We then explain our work, producing publications of the N. C. A. He seizes one, goes into the next room where his wife is tending the children, and exclaims, "Here is something that tells all about them a'r S. S. Hadn't I better take one ov um?" She replies, "Well John, do what you want to. You know I never was a drunkard or anything of that kind. It's no good to me nohow." He returns and says he "guesses he'll take that little book where they're knocking that air fellow into a blanket;" hands us a quarter, and we depart.

We next stop at the house of Mr. McMillen, a representative of the second class. As we approach the house we notice a neatly trimmed Arbor Vitae fence enclosing some tasty flower beds, a fountain clear as crystal sending forth its sparkling waters. We step to the door and ring the bell. A servant answers the call, and ushers us into the waiting room, retiring to call Mr. McMillen. He shortly enters and after introduction enquires, what can I do for you to-day. We make known our business, and ask if he has ever read anything on the subject of S. S. He replies, "Well do I remember Morgan's taking off. I was but a boy then, but it is as vivid in my recollection as if it had transpired but yesterday. From that time to this I have been an Anti-mason and expect to be as long as I live. Sometimes it seems as if I was fighting alone in this town. My school companions have long since passed away, and I realize that my time is fast approaching. For 83 years I have trod this world of sin and sorrow. I must soon give place to younger men. I have taken the Cynosure for many years and find it a weekly messenger of good tidings. During my absence some time since my subscription expired, and I am glad again to renew. After interchanging ideas in regard to our work and how it should be carried on, we pass on, perhaps to meet some high-tempered Mason, or to be again cheered by friendly greetings, and a hearty "God bless you." I think the foregoing is a fair representation of two classes that I find here. There are of course here as elsewhere adhering Masons, Jacks, policy men, fence-riders, etc., but it is a significant fact that the fence-riders are rapidly getting on one side of the fence or the other. This is due I think chiefly to the recent agitation of the question. Brethren Starry, Butler, Mathews, and others have done much valiant work in this section. We need more such work. The field is indeed white for the harvest. There are strong United Presbyterian and Covenanter churches in York about twenty miles from this place, whose doors are open for discussion on this question. While in that vicinity last week many expressed a strong desire that there should be some meetings held. Then there are Perry, Castile, and many other places where meetings could be held at advantage and profit. I trust that brethren Starry, Mathews and others will feel that they have a call in this direction and will respond soon. There might be some glorious meetings held in this vicinity, previous to the State and Washington meetings.

In regard to my own work I would say, I have distributed several thousand pages of tracts, sold a number of N. C. A. publications, and taken some subscriptions for the Cynosure. Owing to Bro. Capwell's kindness in giving the use of his horse, I have been enabled to canvass largely among the farmers of this section. I have also visited the towns of Castile, Perry, Gainsville, York, Fowlersville, Peoria, Wyoming, Attica, Warsaw, and many others. It was my privilege to attend a temperance campmeeting and there to distribute our literature. There was a large attendance, about 15,000 being present on the Sabbath previous to its close. Messrs. Bain, Fanning Caiswell, and Mrs. Hunt and Foster were among the speakers. Those who have heard these speakers may know that we enjoyed an intellectual treat. In short, the cause here is moving right along. May God speed the right. W. B. STODDARD.

BESET BY "BULLS OF BASHAN."

STRAWBERRY, Kansas, Sept. 15, 1883.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—Sickness has hindered my seeing the parties here whose subscriptions expire on the 27th, but I will see them now and send in names as fast as I can.

A United Brethren minister and myself were surrounded by a mob, called many disgraceful names, cursed and threatened and driven from the field, recently, for distributing literature on the streets of Clifton. "The Secret Empire" was the tract they seemed to take umbrage at, and especially denounce. They produced such arguments as the following: "Anti-secret literature a pack of lies." "Lecturers set of liars, and followers blockheads." In regard to ourselves we heard the following flattering compliments, etc.: "Die with boots on;" "Ought to have a ball through him;" . . . . . [Too bad to print.—ED.]; "Be nose splitting done pretty soon;" "Better leave or there will be trouble" (repeated a number of times); "Shut up" (repeated); and many other things of less importance. An M. E. minister was prominent in the affair. The usual amount of lies are in circulation to screen the outrage. This took place at a lodge picnic some distance from Clifton.

Bro. Feemster and Bro. Kiggins will understand this. Pray for us, readers, for the lodges are hard after us with persecutions and threats, and some of the Antis are ready to desert me. S. HART.

—A gentleman in Alabama suggests for the next Republican Presidential ticket the names of Robert T. Lincoln and Charles Francis Adams, Jr., a combination which he thinks would capture the South.

NEW HAMPSHIRE NOTES.

A Freemason was recently appointed as referee in a law case. The parties were a Mason and a non-Mason. When the non-Mason found that one of the referees was a Mason he objected to him, and the Mason prudently declined to serve.

A Congregational deacon deploring the low state of the church, says a decided stand must be taken against Sabbath-breaking, intemperance, and organized secrecy, or the worldly element will overbear the spiritual.

A New Hampshire Congregational pastor and a deacon in the same church have abandoned Freemasonry and bear a decided testimony against it.

The Anti-masonic interest is gradually increasing and Christian men are slowly waking up to realize the enormous wickedness of Freemasonry and the folly and sin of the minor orders. The Lord is moving the hearts of his children all over the State; the outspoken utterance of a few emboldens others, and the time is fast approaching when the anti-Christian tendency of organized secrecy will be reorganized by all sincere and intelligent Christians. S. C. KIMBALL.

CORRESPONDENCE.

A STARTLING FACT.

During the war of the rebellion and since a secret ring of men calling themselves Freemasons have been steadily at work getting possession of the offices and the government of the country. They have so far succeeded in their object that hardly any but their tools can hold office. The consequence is that service rendered to this ring, whose secret principles are disgraceful, are rewarded with the honors of the country, while they who sustain the interests and the honor of the country are opposed, persecuted and defamed.

Leaders of this ring have organized an army, which goes by the name of the Grand Army of the Republic, but which is in fact a mere army of pension seekers. The machinery of the lodge is a convenient means for getting fraudulent pensions. The initiation fees paid by its recruits furnish funds sufficient for keeping the machinery in working order. While the country has been made to reject Negro recruits which might have been had only for the asking, and at the same time to pay millions of bounty money for white recruits, this lodge, by its trickery and fraud, compels its own recruits to pay, instead of being paid, for admission into its service. The funds furnished by the recruits who are enlisted through the Masonic lodge into the Graud Army of the Republic are sufficient to sustain the leaders in their election schemes, in stumping States, buying votes, and bribing the press.

The masses said by Universalist and Methodist ministers over dead bounty-jumpers on Decoration Days, are better suited for getting office and pensions for the living than honors for the dead. Who originated these masses? Who organized this Grand Army? It was the slavocratic, democratic, Masonic, political generals, Sickles, Logan and Butler. Who organized the armies that defended the government against rebel forces? It was West Point, not the Masoic lodge. Never was it known in all the history of the country that West Point ever originated anything so unAmerican, so greedy of plunder, and so void of manliness and patriotic devotion as is manifested by this political, pension-getting machine, the Grand Army of the Republic.

What will the republic do? Will it intrust its military defense to West Point or to the Masonic lodge; to enlightened professional men of prineiple and character, who are taught to act and speak openly and above board or to a set of irrespousible tricksters who are given to the dark and crooked ways of the lodge? Where Grand Armies of the Republic are honored with political favor and office, West, Point, as well as many other valuable institutions, must be overwhelmed and destroyed.

The people should distrust all Grand Army leaders, and especially all West Pointers who have connived with those leaders to the diseredit of their own institution. The best possible service that the West Pointer can render to his country is to maintain the eharaeter of that institution, and not to give way to the unworthy schemes of Grand Armies of the Republic. It is the duty of the West Pointer to maintain the interests of the country, and to keep his name and character clear from political shams; something which he cannot do if he throws himself into the foul current of secret association.

OLD SOLDIER.

GOD'S HIDDEN ONES.

The following letter was enclosed to the General Agent by Rev. George Clark of Oberlin, with a donation of $100 for the Washington building. The sister who writes was a member of the First church, Oberlin. Her father was killed by a fall from a building many years ago; and some five years since the mother died in Florida, soon after the family had gone there for their health. "May the Lord," writes Bro. Clark, "who has helped you in his work hitherto, lead his stewards to remove all incumbrance speedily. There are many 'hidden ones' like Mrs. Risley, who are praying, and with Michael and his angels working with the N. C. A. against the false and treacherous leagues against Christ and his kingdom." Miss Risley's letter will be an encouragement for every praying Christian who sees the evil arising to the church through the lodge curse:

In sending you this gift from my dear mother through our friend, Rev. Geo. Clark, he thinks it due you and myself that I write you something concerning my family. I only feel that you discover true friends that you did not know before. I believe there are many like my mother who can give but little beside earnest prayer to the work they so long to see prospering in your hands.

Not until after I was twenty did the subject of Masonry come to me in any way that I need give it any thought. Good men—some of our friends—belonged to the order, so I concluded it could not be very bad. My father died in 1864. Soon after, while visiting an uncle, he wished my sister and I to read Elder Bernard's "Light on Masonry." We did, or tried to; one of us would read as long as we could bear it then the other would try it. We gave back the book saying we were too disgusted with Masonry to finish it. I well remember how we felt as we named over our friends who had humiliated themselves to join the "Great," "Grand," "Illustrious," etc.

On our return to Oberlin, our home, the church, and I might say the town, was greatly exercised over Mr. Finney's lectures or expose of Masonry, as it was called. Our minds were ready for the truth and the whole truth. Our mother was in feeble health and had been for two years. The subject took a very wonderful hold upon her. She felt the time had come for the church, especially our church, to purify herself of such idolatry. Her prayers never ceased for that one thing.

When it was decided to have a paper published in advancement of the cause, she had a burden of prayer for it that was unaccountable to me. For four months or more she read her Bible and prayed day and night for the paper to come, and all in any way connected with it. I well remember wishing the Lord had given that burden to a body physically stronger. I was truly afraid it would shorten her days.

In due time the Cynosure appeared. My mother read every copy till her death, Oct. 12, 1878. I need not say she rejoiced and gave God thanks for the paper and the good it accomplished. When the publishing house at Chicago was projected, she longed for means to assist in the work, but could give nothing in comparison with her desire.

Since her death I have been in Florida. I came to Oberlin to attend the "jubilee." I do not find the cause which is ever near to my heart prospering in Oberlin as I expected, but I learn of your need just now in Washington, where my mother so longed to have the true light shine. I send you $100, and may God honor the gift as he did the prayers of my mother for the Christian Cynosure.

Most truly yours,

MISS ELLA S. RISLEY.

FAINT YET PURSUING.

Bro. Galloway of Florida, who has been enduring much for the Lord's sake, has had, beside physical trials, the persecutions of lodge enemies to withstand. For some time during the summer he feared daily that he might fall into their hands and suffer a suit upon a charge falsely made against him. In a late letter to the N. C. A. treasurer he says:

If I could step into your Sunday-school and tell them how the Lord has cared for me this year, it seems to me they would unanimously say, "O bless the Lord, for he is good." In the early part of the year the Lord sent thunder, clouds, and rain to deliver me out of their snare. I thought I would raise watermelons for sale. It was too dry for the seed to get up. When they did come he sent the honey dew and blighted them so I have not had a good melon this year. I expected to have guavas to sell. The trees first died back and then grew so luxuriantly they did not fruit enough to supply the family. My back was so lame I could not ride. Then the mule had fistula and was not able to work, etc. I was very much discouraged. When I was disposed to complain in prayer to God, he seemed to say, Be patient; wait. Now I see if my plans had prospered I would have fallen into the enemy's hands. "Behind a frowning providence he hides a smiling face." I imagine our hearts will be filled with praises when we come to understand how our blessed Father has overruled all things to make them work together for our good. I sometimes feel as if we would (if we could) be ashamed then of our murmurings and complaints here. The future is dark to me now, but I feel that the Lord has a way for me to live and do good. I intend to stand for the Lord till I die

OPEN LETTER TO DR. LORIMER.

ST. PAUL, Minnesota.

Rev. G. C. Lorimer, D. D.,

DEAR SIR:—Having learned from your own lips your position in regard to Freemasonry it becomes my duty to address to you an open letter. If you are about to look in the Baptist Year Book for my name, I tell you beforehand that you will not find it there. And yet, I can use the language of an Apostle and say, "I also am an Elder," and also, "God has counted me faithful, putting me into the ministry;" and Baptist ministers recognizing such to be the case laid hands upon me in a regular manner. A Presbyterian minister preaching upon the subject of Freemasonry, said in his printed sermon, that if a minister preaches aganist Freemasonry before a church containing one true Freemason the Masonic edict at once goes forth, "that minister must be got out of that pulpit, and in disgrace if possible." Hence it would be a marvelous thing indeed if my name appeared in the Baptist Year Book. But nevertheless I can speak with authority and claim a hearing upon a matter of simple truth involving such issues as Freemasonry does with Christianity.

You told me that at the age of 21 you joined the Masonic order, and that you are a Knight Templar, also that you regarded your Masonic obligation as binding upon you; and that you considered it an insult to ask a Mason if he believed his Masonic obligation to be binding upon himself. You also quoted the language of the lodge, and said, that there was nothing in Freemasonry to conflict with one's duty to his God, his country, his family, his neighbor or himself; and that your pastoral duties prevented you from giving as much attention to Freemasonry as you otherwise would. Now sir, there are thousands of people in this country who never were Freemasons but know as much about it, both esoteric and exoteric, as any ordinary member of the fraternity; and therefore what I have to say about Freemasonry in this letter is quite common-place with people who are not willingly ignorant upon this subject. We are of course to suppose that you have taken the degrees of Masonry in their order as given by the regularly constituted lodges of the fraternity. When, therefore, you tell us that you consider that your Masonic obligations are binding upon you, you tell us that you are bound to extricate a brother Mason from any difficulty, whether he be right or wrong, and to keep all of his secrets not excepting murder and treason. Murder evidently being one of the crimes contemplated in that obligation because you yourself swore to be murdered if you did not conceal their murder, treason, etc.

Now I cannot, either from your language or your manner, doubt your sincerity in your devotion to your Masonic obligation—you in common with thousands of Masons, in the churches and out of them, are perfectly sincere, perfectly conscientious in your devotions to the obligations taken in the solemn conclave under the awfully solemn circumstances of a Masonic initiation. And to avoid the shedding of your own blood are ready to obey them; having given your conscience and your devotional powers to the blasphemous, lying absurdities of Freemasonry; such as, for instance, that blasphemous insult to God and his word in the Masonic lie known as the murder, burial and resurrection of Hiram at the building of the temple. We see plainly that your conscience is corrupted and your devotional faculties perverted to fables; that you are under a strong delusion, and that you believe a lie in that you believe in the lying pretensions of that lying fraternity with its false and blasphemous assumptions to impart the new birth, to save the soul from iniquity, and transfer it to a heaven in the world to come.

When I held the Masonic ritualist before your eyes and called your attention to the Masonic proclamation of the new birth to the candidate, you defended it. Now I do not say that God has sent this strong delusion upon you and given you over to believe a lie for the purpose declared in the Scripture referred to. But I do say that you are under a strong delusion, that you manifest all sincerity in a lie, and that unless you come out from that strong delusion and abandon that lie, it will in the end appear that God has sent a strong delusion upon you for your condemnation.

WILLIAM FENTON.

PITH AND POINT.

A brother living some fifty miles west of Chicago, who has with his worthy wife been doing a good work among the Swedes, feels the importance of this time in our work. May his words inspire others:

"I see that now is the time for every man and woman who can spend some money and time, for to save this 'Land of the Free and Home of the Brave,' from becoming the land of the bondmen to Satan and the home of the vilest of all the nations of the earth. Now is the accepted time to invest. I would to God that every one who has a particle of interest in the the welfare of the church, or of our beloved country, would stop a moment and consider the vortex of ruin we as a nation are about to drop into, i. e., the secret empire."

Dea. Joseph Powers of Harford, Pa., puts $10 into the Washington building with this earnest prayer:

"May the Lord put it in the hearts of his children to pay for that building at once."

A friend in Alabama, J. H. Vandegrift of Branchville, has lately sent for Anti-masonic documents for distribution. There is he says a great awakening in that part of the country in regard to Masonry, especially in respect to ministers of the Gospel and church members joining the order. Some two years ago, he with four others formed a company to get options for the sale of mineral lands in two counties, St. Clair and Blount. The two partners who were operating in the latter county, pretending that their part of the business was successful, persuaded the other partners to share with them profits made in St. Clair county. This is the kind of lodge work that followed:

"We then made a division, paid them a portion of the money and gave a due bill for the balance. Afterwards we found out that they never had any options signed by any one to the Branchville Mineral Co., and that they practiced this fraud in order to get a division. Then we refused to pay the due-bills; they entered suit for the money, and we agreed to submit the matter to an arbitration. We picked three as good men as we thought in the country, and made our proof before them—proved more than our counsel expected we would be able to do—and behold, they decided against us! The truth is the arbitrators were Royal Arch Masons, F. M. Burnum was an Arch Mason, Will. T. Barnum was a Master Mason. [These were the Blount county partners.] Now I can say with all my heart that I had a very good opinion of Masonry up till now, but now I am forever disgusted with it. This was too plain a ease, I and the other partners are not Masons; but ever after this circumstance will be Anti-masons."

BIBLE LESSONS.

LESSON I.—October 7. Eli's death.—1 Samuel 4: 10–18.

GOLDEN TEXT.—His sons made themselves vile, and he restrained them not.—1 Sam. 3: 13.

TIME.—B. C. 1114, 20 years after the prophecy of Samuel in last lesson.

PLACE.—1. Shiloh (place of rest). The capital of the nation, about a mile east of the road from Jerusalem to Shechem, and 17 miles north-west of Jerusalem.

2. Ebenezer (stone of help). So called from Samuel's victory over the Philistines 20 years later (1 Sam. 7: 12). It was probably situated a few miles west of Jerusalem, and about 15 miles south-west of Shiloh.

PERSONS.—1. Eli, who resided at Shiloh, by the tabernacle, and was at once high priest and the 14th judge, an office which he held 40 years, dying at the age of 98.

2. Samuel. About 30 years old.

3. Hophni, "the fighter," and Phinehas, "the brazen-mouthed," degenerate sons of Eli, who filled the sacred office of priests at Shiloh. They were licentious, impious, rapacious, "Sons of Belial, who knew not the Lord." "Their brutal rapacity and lust seemed to increase in violence with their father's increasing years."—Smith. They are the true exemplars of the grasping and worldly clergy in all ages.—Stanley.

4. Samson, in another part of the country, was just beginning his exploits, B. C. 1116–1096.

"The ark of God was taken." After their first defeat (ver. 2), the elders of Israel proposed to bring the ark of God upon the field. "Instead of feeling remorse and seeking the help of the Lord their God by a sincere repentance and confession of their apostacy from him, they resolved to fetch the ark into the camp, with the delusive idea that God had so inseparably bound up his gracious presence in the midst of his people with this holy ark, which he had selected as the throne of his gracious appearance, that he would of necessity come with it into the camp and smite the foe."—Keil. The ark was becoming an idol; and therefore the ark was suffered to be made captive by the unbelievers.—Kitto. It is just the same now when we take merely a historical Christ outside us for our Redeemer. He must prove his help chiefly internally by his holy spirit. to redeem us out of the hand of the Philistines; though externally he must not be thrown into the shade, as accomplishing our justification. If we had not Christ, we would never stand. For there is no help in heaven or earth beside him. But if we have him in no other way than merely without us and under us, if we only preach about him, teach, hear, talk, discuss, and dispute about him, take his name into our mouth, but will not let him work or show his power in us, he will no more help us than the ark helped the Israelites.—Berleburger Bible.

"Hophni and Phinehas, were slain." Visiting the iniquity of the fathers upon the children, and upon the children's children, unto the third and to the fourth generation (Ex. 34: 7). The soul that sinneth, it shall die. The son shall not bear the iniquity of the father, neither shall the father bear the iniquity of the son; the righteousness of the righteous shall be upon him, and the wickedness of the wicked shall be upon him (Ezek. 18: 20). The death of these two men was the "sign" given by the man of God that the whole doom pronounced against Eli's house would be executed (chap. 2: 34). The psalmist's account of the catastrophe should be compared (Ps. 78: 56–64).—Cambridge Bible.

"Eli sat upon a seat (or, his seat) by the wayside watching;" i. e., his official seat by the outer gate of the tabernacle enclosure. It was not by the town gate on the road by which the messenger entered, for the news does not reach Eli till it has been published in the town (ver. 14). It was the seat or throne of the ruler or judge, as afterwards in the palace of Solomon.—Cambridge Bible.

"His heart trembled for the ark of God." He felt a responsibility for it. He had a foreboding of disaster. Perhaps the ark had been taken against his judgment, he yielded with characteristic weakness. Such a use of the ark, unless authorized by God himself, as in Josh. 3: 7, 8, was little less than a temptation of God, as it put him, in the opinion of the people, under the necessity of giving them the victory in order to save the symbol so intimately associated with his honor. It was an imitation of a heathen custom (2 Sam. 5: 21), and had its sources in the wickedness and superstition which distinguished the recreant people.—Johnson.

"He died." Eli's death, under a devine rebuke for his sins, has been a salutary warning to others, even to this present day. Yet, in the circumstances of it, he testified his supreme regard to the honor of God and the interests of religion, above all personal and relative considerations, and notwithstanding all his faults, he died in a lively exercise of love to God and his ordinances, and even by occasion of it.—Scott. What pious Israelite can live with any comfort, when God's ordinances are removed? Farewell all in this world, even life itself, if the ark be gone. So fell the high priest and judge of Israel when he had lived within two of 100 years, and judged Israel about 40 years. Thus did his sun set under a cloud; thus were the folly and wickedness of sons, whom he had indulged, his ruin at last. Thus does God sometimes set marks of his displeasure on good men in this life, who have misconducted themselves, that others may hear, fear, and take warning.—Henry.

BAND OF HOPE BIBLE LESSON.

PROFANITY A SIN AGAINST OUR NEIGHBOR.

6. But whoso shall offend one of these little ones which believe in me, it were better for him that a millstone were hanged about his neck, and that he were drowned in the depth of the sea.
7. Woe unto the world because of offences! for it must needs be that offences come; but woe to that man by whom the offence cometh!
8. Wherefore if thy hand or thy foot offend thee, cut them off and cast them from thee: it is better for thee to enter into life halt or maimed, rather than having two hands and two feet to be cast into everlasting fire.
9. And if thine eye offend thee, pluck it out, and cast it from thee; it is better for thee to enter into life with one eye, rather than having two eyes to be cast into hell-fire.
10. Take heed that ye despise not one of these little ones; for I say unto you, That in heaven their angels do always behold the face of my Father which is heaven.
11. For the Son of man is come to save that which was lost. Math. 18: 6-11.

GOLDEN TEXT.—Prepare the way; take up the stumbling-block out of the way of my people. Ps. 57: 14.

CENTRAL TRUTH. — Profanity hurts others.

1. To offend means to cause to stumble. Profane, or even light and irreverent, talk may be an occasion of stumbling to others.

2. Bad words will often live in the memory when good ones are forgotten.

3. One profane person will make others profane. One boy who uses bad language can infect a whole school.

4. In nothing are we so imitative as in the matter of speech. It is through the faculty of imitation that a child learns to talk, and it cannot learn to use pure and refined language unless those around it do.

5. It is said that the natives of some of the South Sea Islands greet approaching vessels with wild oaths learned from English sailors who have landed on their shores. These poor heathen are perhaps no more to blame than parrots which are sometimes taught to swear in a similar way, but we can thus see how profanity as well as drunkenness, and other vices of civilization, are stumbling-blocks in the way of their conversion to Christ.

6. Sin and suffering are necessary as the world is now constituted. There must needs be stumbling-blocks, but our duty is to take them out of the way.

7. When by words or example others are lead to do wrong it makes the sin much greater, and the more severe must be the punishment.

8. In Napoleon's wars some of the French peasantry mutilated themselves to escape being conscripted; and I once read a story of a little boy employed in a factory who purposely cut his finger off with the machinery that he might have a chance to attend school for a few months. We ought to be willing to sacrifice any habit, though as cherished as a foot or a hand, which makes others do wrong.

9. In Eastern courts persons highest in rank were intrusted with the care of the royal children. So our Father sends his holy angels to take care of the feeblest little one who loves Jesus, and is trying to keep his commandments.

PRACTICAL TRUTHS.

It is a great sin to cause another to do wrong.

We must be willing to make great sacrifices to prevent sin in others.

We must not despise the young, the weak, the ignorant, for they are dear to Christ who died for them, and to the angels who watch over them.

LESSON TALK.

One of the most beautiful incidents in the life of Cæsar Malan, the eminent evangelical reformer of Germany, is thus told: At one period of his life he was an instructor of youth; and though a Christian, was in the habit of using the common French expression, mon Dieu (my God). He noticed with great sorrow that some of his lads indulged in profanity, but to reprove them was not easy while his conscience told him that he himself was guilty of the same sin. So he called his boys around him, and while he talked plainly to them, confessed his own shortcoming. He then entered into an agreement with them that they were to watch him, and he would watch them, in order to correct this sinful practice. At length one day while he was speaking with great animation to the school, he used the words again, mon Dieu. Instantly the school arose and very respectfully remained standing. On his inquiring the cause, the head boy answered by telling him the name he had used. He stood still for a moment, then after expressing his contrition for his fault, he knelt down, his scholars kneeling also around him, and asked God to pardon the past and give grace and strength for the future. It is surprising how soon we learn to imitate the language of those around us. A refined Christian gentleman whose business had lead him to spend some time among the miners in New Mexico, astonished an acquaintance on his return by the use of a slang phrase common among them, and which he had heard so often that it dropped from his lips unconsciously. Of course children and young people learn most easily, and for that reason they should shun the society of profane, vulgar, or irreligious talkers. And we should also be very careful ourselves not to say anything which may harm the soul of another.

LESSON HYMN.

What we sow
Will surely grow,
Though the harvest may be slow;
It may be,
We shall see
Heritage in eternity;
For some deed
Dropped like seed
For a soul that was in need.
Let us strive,
While yet we live,
Worthy things to do and give,
Striving still
With good will,
Empty granaries to fill;
For what we sow
Will surely grow,
Though the harvest may be slow.
—G. W. Clarke's Reform Song Book.

FULL OF GRAND IDEAS.

"Masonry and Mormonism are political engines with religious driving wheels. Their conductors are kings; their engineers, priests; their motive power, popular depravity combined with popular conscience, and their practical end is the luxury and power of leaders who form men's interests for eternity that they may tax and govern them in time."

The above is a sample of the vigorous and striking thoughts, the grand ideas of which the pamphlet on the Batavia Convention is full. Get this book by all means. Price, post paid, 25 cents each.

The Christian Cynosure.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 27, 1883.

"WE AND I."

TO OUR READERS:—"We" clip the following paragraph from the Advance and follow it with an "I:"

"The editor of the Religious Telescope, Dayton, O., has shown a good deal of enterprise in getting expressions from various papers concerning the use of the words 'we' and 'I,' in the conduct of a newspaper. Notes received from the Christian Advocate, Independent, Congregationalist, Observer, Christian Union, Cincinnati Commercial Gazette, and Advance, agree in the opinion that the word 'we' is properly used only in the editorial utterances of the paper; that when the editor writes a personal letter he should write over his own signature and say 'I;' that correspondents should never use 'we.'"

While you are reading this article I expect to be with our good and brave brother Faris at the State convention in Sparta, Ill., below St. Louis. Returning I have promised a visit through Iowa from College Springs in the southwest corner of the State, stopping with the Doctors Norris at Birmingham and with Bro. Elliot of Fairfield, and perhaps others, on my way home. Then, after a short stay I hope to see Mr. Capwell at Syracuse, N. Y., on my way to Washington, where, with Mrs. Blanchard, I may continue through the coming winter.

This will make me substantially an editorial correspondent, and put Mr. Kellogg in the place of editor in chief, a post which he has held during my sickness of two years; and indeed, his constant presence in the office has given him virtually the editorial control of the paper for years.

I have, with the assistance of others, passed as editor of the Cynosure, now from its first number in the summer of 1868, for which, until last annual meeting, I have received in all one hundred and twenty dollars for fifteen years' service. The last annual meeting voted unanimously that I should go to Washington, under the direction of the Board of Directors, and designated the rate of compensation. The Board under this action has voted me one hundred dollars a month for salary and expenses from now until next annual meeting. Under the plan suggested by Secretary Stoddard and ex-Senator Pomeroy for the season's work there will be considerable travel and expense. I hope to speak as God gives me strength, both on the religious and political bearings of the secret lodge system, especially on the latter during the coming national canvass. It will be just for those who wish me to speak or preach, to pay expenses of travel, and these amounts, with other donations, will be reported through the Cynosure and credited to the National Association.

My conviction agrees with the judgment of a friend who said to me this week: "Public sentiment has changed in our favor more in the last twelve months than in twelve years preceding;" and I believe we shall see greater and mightier changes still.

I have written this article with a desire to a perfect mutual understanding and for the good of the cause; and as I never expect or intend to hold a civil office or receive a nomination for one, I hope you will pardon this long personal explanation, and suffer me henceforth to use the pronoun "I" without the imputation of egotism, and to put the initial "B." at the foot of my articles except when I write as the organ of others. I trust only in Christ and am yours in him.

J. BLANCHARD.

THE "STRONG CONSOLATION" mentioned in Hebrews 6:18 means, literally, from the Greek text, "Strong encouragement to come to God." Whoever, in his hour of weakness, comes to, flees for refuge from his troubles to Christ, will find that supernatural strength, or consolation, springing up in his breast. This is our experience, at least.

THE SEPTUAGENARIAN'S letter in this number is a very forcible and happy exhortation to all who pray and labor for the reform. Read it carefully and let all profit by its advice.

THE Independent mourns over the fact that secret societies are on the increase among the negroes of the South. But if secret societies are a good thing, why should it be a calamity that the negroes join them? But perhaps the Independent will not allow that they are good.—The Advance.

Charles G. Finney was engaged to write a series of articles for the Independent on secret societies. He had not gone far before so many discontinued the paper that the series was broken off to save from ruin. This "perhaps" explains why the Advance seems doubtful what estimate the Independent puts on secret societies. But what must God and angels think of religious papers which throw a dim and doubtful light on the secret lodge system of the United States, absorbing, as it does, young men by thousands and their money by millions?

THE PACIFIC notices an able paper on "Why do we not see greater spiritual results in our churches?" read before the Congregational churches of San Francisco. This humiliating confession is general, East and West. Dr. Little, in the Moody Convention, in some able remarks, insisted on the same thing.

THE Cynosure and its editor have suffered more at the hands of good men for refusing to support the National Council of the Congregationalists than from all other causes put together. Now, behold, the Advance is taking precisely our ground, viz., that a Puritan council with a Masonic head is a monster. But hear the Advance and hail it:

"The dissatisfaction over the arrangements (?) for the meeting of the next National Council which was voiced in this paper two weeks ago, has grown into a positive protest against having the Council held at present under such circumstances. Letters and messages come every day to this office advising that the meeting be postponed. There is really nothing else to do. The Chairman of the Provisional Committee [Dr. A. H. Quint] should be removed without delay, and some one appointed in his place who will give less time to Masonic rites and political wire-pulling and more to the affairs of those who employ him."

UNITED BRETHREN EXPELLING SECRETISTS.—An Odd-fellow has been turned out of the North Michigan Conference of the United Brethren church, Bishop Weaver presiding. In this we rejoice, but regret that no word or hint is given against the vile system of Odd-fellowship, but only against deceiving the church in joining it. See below:

ANOTHER DECEPTION. North Michigan Conference seems to have its early history begun in a tempest. Somehow it has fallen into perilous hands. Our readers remember that last year one of its presiding elders was lost to the church on account of having gone off with the Odd-fellows. This year a like affliction has befallen the conference. A correspondent furnishes us the following: "The deceptiveness of secrecy has been shown up. Rev. W. R. Bundy, presiding elder of the East District, made his report, and during his examination the question was sprung in regard to there being reports afloat of his being connected with the order of Odd-fellows. He said it was true that he did join the lodge during the conference-year of 1882, and concealed the fact from the conference, and allowed himself to be elected presiding elder, and during this year traveled a district. He evidently designed to deceive the conference. He expresses no regret for what he did, and says he will join some other church organization. The conference unanimously said that he was out of the church, and is so recorded on the journal. Bishop Weaver handles these cases well." It is the essence of folly and criminality for a man to go about deceiving his brethren, and thus betraying his trust and the church. But North Michigan Conference will triumph under God and do a blessed work for the Master.—Telescope.

Will the American press, the pretended enlightener of the people, ever tell them that Joseph Smith was a Freemason; that he constructed Mormonism on the model of the oaths, blasphemies and threatened murder of the lodge? And that no party, civil or religious, which fellowships Masons, will or can ever destroy Mormonism?

A GENERAL AWAKENING.

Mr. Moody thinks there are tokens of a mightier religious awakening in this country than he has ever before seen. May it prove true. But men filled with the Spirit of God, in all ages have seen the kingdom of God at hand; because they looked with the eyes of eternity, or, of "The Eternal Spirit." But the Christian Convention in Chicago last week, encouraging, glorious, even as it was, lacked one fundamental element of the early Christian revivals. Take "Phillip the Evangelist," Mr. Moody's prototype, and his revival in Samaria; or the revivals under Paul at Ephesus and elsewhere, (Acts 8th and 19th). The people, in those cities, where "bewitched" by solemn tricks, sorceries, and ceremonies, corresponding in all points to our secret, swindling lodge-worships. Let any candid mind analyze and study, and compare those ancient "mysteries" with our lodge-mysterics, and he cannot fail to perceive their moral identity. The Interior calls this conceding to the modern lodges their false and imprudent claims to antiquity. But the Interior is mistaken. Because all lies one falsehoods, it does not follow that they are the same falsehoods. Masonic antiquity is true in that which they do not claim and false in that which they do. A rogue invents some swindle and swears he got it from Herculareum or Pompeii, and swears false to give dignity to his worthless cheat. Yet doubtless just such tricks were practiced in those old cities, and with other vices brought down on them the vengeance of God. All idolatry is worship of devils. Adam and Eve were idolaters when they took an invisible, lying spirit for their guide instead of God. But the pretence that Diana of the Ephesians, was as old as Jupiter was humbug and imposition, like our lodges which are identical in their principle and ground method with all religious lies, from Cain's altar down.

Phillip and Paul set the gospel in open, square antagonism against those sorceries and tricks of blackant: so that they seceded from their lodges, exposed openly their "curious ants;" and brought their "books," rituals, and tools of incantation, "and burned them before all men," as Knight Templars have theirs of late, to the amount of "fifty thousand pieces of silver."

This the Moody convention did not do; and if anyone had attempted it, he would have been held to be an offender "switching off" the meeting. It was a brave act when Major Whittle informed us faintly, that the interesting Dayton convert, who spoke at Moody's invitation, had forsaken Masonry to find Christ. But those who distributed the Moody tract among the crowd at the door were threatened with prosecution by a leading manager of the convention; and doubtless two-thirds of the crowd of the ministers on that platform would lose their places if they uttered their convictions to their people concerning the lodge. The word of God is bound at this day, eclipsed, and devils hide in the churches, under the shadows of suppressed truths, and while the sober, sound, level-headed men give place to devils through "fear of man," which "bringeth a snare,' 'Salvation armies" with military titles, and fanatics blowing soap-bubbles in religion, are feeding the sincere natures in the churches with glitter and glare.

But God blesses the meek and the imperfect. True the pulpit in this country has a padlock on its lips, put there by the lodge, and the press has a fetter on its heel. But the pulpit is throwing off its padlock and the press its fetter. And God's changes are often sudden, and Mr. Moody's prediction of a universal awakening may be nearer than we now dare to hope.

NEW VOLUME.—The present number begins the sixteenth volume of the Cynosure. Was there time for a retrospective view it would be one on the whole of great satisfaction at the appearance and character of the paper in comparison with its first issue; but far more when we mark the onward march of the reform, which is in large degree due to the paper. This has not been accomplished without some severe struggles and the overcoming of great difficulties, insurmountable except for grace and help from heaven in answer to the thousands who pray daily for the paper and the truth for which it stands. Plans for the improvement of these pages are being completed for the opening of the new year. Enlargement in respect to news from foreign countries respecting the work of the secret lodges, and from our own States in the report of local work, will be attained if possible, and the popular and excellent feature of illustrated biographies will be continued. While contributors, correspondents, editors and readers, sinking personal considerations for the sake of the great work for the crown and kingdom of our Lord Jesus Christ, use every effort with diligent and earnest prayer to promote that cause through the Cynosure, its pole-star light must be ever brighter, clearer, the hope of the struggling slave of the lodge longing for freedom, and a beacon for the hosts of God while yet they wait the coming of their Lord.

—Bro. J. P. Stoddard returned on Friday morning from New England by way of New York, Syracuse, and Oberlin, where he stopped to arrange for meetings. About midnight of the same day he started for Topeka and the Kansas State Convention, expecting to reach there before the Sabbath. He will come back to Illinois in time to attend the State Convention at Sparta.

—Prof. L. N. Stratton, president of Wheaton Theological Seminary and Rev. M A. Gault, of Blanchard, Iowa, lecturer for the National Reform Association are attending the Kansas State meeting at Topeka this week.

—Bro. M. N. Butler is yet laboring in south-western Iowa and is expecting to make Page county his headquarters.

—The article on the San Francisco Conclave and its drunken Knight Templar Masons, from the Pacific Missionary Advocate, has been reprinted in Worcester and a copy put in every house in that city.

—Bro. W. M. Love, editor of the Banner of Truth writes that he is about to move from Baker, Mo., to Osceola in the same State, where he will have better facilities for the publication of his excellent reform journal. Friends in Missouri and elsewhere will notice this change.

—Bro. Isaac Bancroft, Wisconsin Agent, started last week for the northern part of the State hoping to work in that district through the winter, the calls for help from thence encouraging him to hope for plenty of work and willing aid in the reform.

—A card from Bro. Starry says that in response to urgent invitations he will attend the Kansas Convention this week to work the Masonic degrees on two evenings. Bro. Starry should be kept at work from now on. No seceder tells the story of his bondage and freedom more simply and effectively.

—Father Catterlin of Kewanee, Ill., a patriarch of the extreme age of 94 years has just removed to this city. He leaves still in Kewanee and vicinity three Anti-masons who are willing to be known as such by all men: Ebenezer Kent, aged 90; A. B. Kellogg, 84; and Mr. Cutler, 83 or 84. There are many opposed to the lodge in that loeality, but none whose sentiments are so well known as these four old men. A recent visit with three of them was almost as good as a whole convention. Can a parallel ease be found elsewhere?

—Our old friend Jason C. Bartholomew, of Cedar Rapids, Iowa, has lately taken to himself a wife—Mrs. Susan Rice, a widow lady with a family of four children.

—Bro. H. L. Hastings of Boston, editor of the Christian, after attending the great Gospel meeting last week, visited Wheaton on Friday evening and spoke on the "Inspiration of the Bible" to a large audience in the College Chapel. His address was one of the most complete answers to the assaults of infidelity, clear in argument, keen in wit and grandly eloquent in the closing passages, none who heard will ever forget the occasion, the speaker, or his lesson. He has spoken upon this subject in many places, and some of our readers may have an opportunity of hearing him. We counsel them not to lose it. Bro. Hastings speaks in several of the Chicago churches, among them the Moody church, and also visits Springfield, Ill., this week.

—Some 4,000 tracts, No. 3 and No. 44, were distributed to the crowds at Farwell Hall on Thursday last. The tracts were received by many with eagerness and gratitude. Frequently men would turn back and step up from the sidewalk with a special request; some came back for more. One stout policeman after reading No. 44, asked for several copies to give to friends, remarking his approval of the seutiments, as he knew something about the lodges himself. He is evidently not Boston bred, Only one objection was made by Mr. T. W. Harvey, a promi nent lumber merchaut, who has been active in assistiug Mr. Moody in his Chicago meetings of late years. He possibly misunderstood the contents of the tracts, or from an unwise zeal for Mr. Moody was led to make unwarranted threats. Almost the only persous who positively refused tracts were the leaders in ecclesiastical affairs in Chicago. The uniformity and the air with which the refusal was made was striking. So with Christ—"the common people heard him gladly," but who amoug the scribes and Pharisees believed on him.

—A brother in Kansas who believes he may be counted on as one "of a large class of friends to the cause, of whom you have heretofore never heard" sends a slip from a local paper at Welliugton, Kansas, giving an account of the lynchiug of a man named Cobb, whô had murdered the sheriff of Cowley county. The murderer seemed to be penitent after his arrest, confessed his crimes and owned that it was the reading of such books as the life of the outlaw James, that inspired an evil and fatal ambition within him. The sheriff was a high Mason and was buried by the lodge. The details of the lynching show that every step of the affair was carefully planned in some secret place. It would be well in such a case as this to inquire into the responsibility of the lodge—yes, in every lynching case. If the life or death of criminals is to be decided behind the tyled door of a lodge room, we are far on the way to the half-savage condition of Europe during the wars of the Roses when the secret tribunal of the Rhine dispeused justice or injustice at its pleasure.

THE CHRISTIAN CONVENTION.

The three-day's meetiug presided over by Mr. Moody iu Farwell Hall last week was an era in the religious work of Chicago. Whether it be the crowds, the unity of feeling. the enthusiasm, the singing, the seusible and practical as well as eloquent addresses, this convention has seldom been surpassed. The programme published last week was carried out promptly and with that surpassing tact and generalship that contributes so much of Mr. Moody's power as a conductor of such meetings. The singing led by Mr. Sankey, seconded by Mr. and Mrs. McGrannahan, was in delightful harmony with the spirit of the meeting and when the whole congregation joined in hymns of prayer or praise it seemed like the chant of the myriads about the throne. The whole country adjacent to Chicago contributed to the immense audiences. Farwell Hall was packed full in every aisle and corner, and afternoous and evenings large overflow meetings were held in the lower hall and the First M. E. church. The latter were addressed by Major Whittle, Pres. C. A. Blanchard and Elder H. L. Hastings, of Boston.

To give any connected review of so long a meeting our space will not allow, but some of the rich and stirring passages are herewith given to the Cynosure readers.

On the question, "How can we best secure a preparation for Christ's work?" Dr. E: P. Goodwin said:

"You will find that when, in Nehemiah's day, they held great gatherings, perhaps like these, they read for hours every day the book of the law. You will discover all their names written to the solemn covenant to God that they would keep his law, obey his commandments, eleanse themselves from every form of defilement, and from that time be his people and his alonc. I am sure there is meaning in that. I am sure that if wc are willing to have God's spirit pourcd upon us we shall be willing to cast aside our pleasures and pridc of the flesh. I am sure if we are willing to do that, to put all things of the home life and the business life temporarily aside aud write over all this is for the glory of God, to take, every man, his lips, his hands, and his feet into the closet, and say, as the old priest said, these shall be kept for God, these are for the service of God—we shall have for ourselves solved the question that will gets its blessing of answer, for every quality, and in every home, in every business-place, the power of God; and the power of God will not longer tarry to come upon us for the salvation of souls."

Mr. Moody upon the same topic said: "I once heard a man say he had a very good well with two exceptions It would go dry in summer and freeze up in winter. There were a good many Christians like that well. They are good in spots. What we want is an even temperature, good for 365 days in the year. It is this spasmodic Christiauity that is doing to much agaiust our work to-day. They are enthusiastic for a time and then they fall back into the cold. There must be a personal experience and an evenness. One way to secure this is to call together all the hungry in our churches. There may not be a dozen in any one church, but let them come together, for it is often in such small meetings that we find the richest results. We are told that "Blessed are they that do hunger and thirst for righteousness, for they shall be fiilled." When I came home from England in May last I found an old oak tree near my house still filled with the dead leaves of last year. I tried to pull the leaves off, but I found that would be a big work which I could not hope to complete soou. One bright morning I found the leaves nearly all off, and the new buds were putting out, showing signs of the new life. This new life new sap, was casting off the old life. There are a good many old things in our lives that should be cast off by the new life. Let us pray for this blessing. Let us pray for this new life. Let the motive, however, be pure. Too ofteu our motives are not right. We want to take up the service before we reccive the holy life. This is not right. We want the holy life first."

Rev. P. S. Henson, D. D., in discussing the topic, "What shall be done to secure a more general attendance upon public worship?" gave this fine testimony for simple Gospel preaching:

"In this age of culture and advanced ideas a minister may think that he must be fully posted up with all that is in the latest books, and to tell it all to show his hearers that he is on a level with the age, and that they may be profoundly impressed with his stores of knowledge. I don't know anything about that kind of preaching, and I thank God for it. [Applause.] I remember preaching some sermons in answer to Tyndall. There were others answered him, and so I thought I must take my chance at him; that I must launch a polished shaft at him. And I did—not one, but many. Coming out of the house one day, after one of these sermons, a big-bodied, big-hearted man met me, laid his hand on my shoulder, and said, 'We don't care a continental about that man. [Laughter.] Preach Christ crucified, and we shall like it better.' I replied, 'Forgive me, and I hope you will forgive me.' And since then I have delivered all the scientists to the special care of Jehovah. Talk about Tyndall! The biggest-brained men in the community who come to occupy seats in your church do not care on the Lord's Day about your logical concatenation of scientific arguments. They have wants that want to be fed, and arc full of infinite yearning after the old Gospel. The old, old story is the newest thing out—the most beautiful thing below the shining stars."

Dr. Herrick Johnsou spoke on "How can the social and personal study of the Bible be increased?" A single paragraph is quoted:

"It was my pleasure to follow Albert Barues as his successor—all honor to his blessed memory. It was his habit, Sabbath after Sabbath, year after year, to take passages at considerable length and unfold their meaning: and the result was that I fouud in the church men and women who knew far more of the word of God than I did: who were familiar with the sacred history from beginning to end, who were in the habit of talking about it day by day, for they had been taught by that good man of God to do so by his preaching and by the manner of his preaching. Before God I believe, if we want to have more study of God's word, we must show by this connected way of preachiug what the way is."

The whole meeting was replete with grand ideas like these, inspiring to the zeal and streugtheuing Christian faith and courage.

The Western Union Telegraph Compauy has at last made importaut concessions to its operators. The working days after this are to number twenty-six to the month, instead of thirty, and work on the Sabbath is to be paid for extra. The hours of night work are also shortened to seven and a half. Taken together, these concessions re present about half of what the Telegraph Brotherhood demanded when they made the strike.

AMERICAN POLITICS.

NOMINATIONS FOR 1884.

For President,

JONATHAN BLANCHARD,
OF ILLINOIS.

For Vice President,

JOHN A. CONANT,
OF CONNECTICUT.

PLATFORM.

We hold: 1. That ours is a Christian and not a heathen nation, and that the God of the Christian Scriptures is the author of civil government.

2. That God requires and man needs a Sabbath.

3. That the prohibition of the importation, manufacture and sale of intoxicating drinks as a beverage is the true policy on the temperance question.

4. That the charters of all secret lodges granted by our Federal and State Legislatures should be withdrawn, and their oaths prohibited by law.

5. That the civil equality secured to all American citizens by articles 13th, 14th and 15th of our amended Constitution should be preserved inviolate.

6. That arbitration of differences with nations is the most direct and sure method of securing and perpetuating a permanent peace.

7. That to cultivate the intellect without improving the morals of men, is to make mere adepts and experts; therefore, the Bible should be associated with books of science and literature in all our educational institutions.

8. That land and other monopolies should be discouraged.

9. That the government should furnish the people with an ample and sound currency.

10. That maintenance of the public credit, protection to all loyal citizens, and justice to Indians are essential to the honor and safety of our nation.

11. And, finally, we demand for the American people the abolition of electoral colleges, and a direct vote for President and Vice-president of the United States.

—We learn that a brother in Iowa, who has warmly approved the resignation of President Blanchard in favor of Senator Pomeroy on the American ticket, refused to take a few copies of the Senator's Farwell Hall speech because he did not print them. How many votes are to be gained iu that way, brother?

—Ex-Secretary Blaine has given positive denial Wednesday to the remarks recently credited to him, viz: That Butler would again be elected Governor of Massachusetts, and later win the Presidential contest for the Democrats. Mr. Blaine says the reverse of this are the views which he holds.

General C. H. Grosvenor, of Ohio, was recently interviewed while in New York concerning the pending political contest in his State and the report was published in the New York Tribune. He reviews the situation at length, cousidering the liquor question as the main issue of the campaign, and thinks the Repnblican party certain to win the election on the merits of the Scott Law. This law taxes saloons, and so he thinks will gain the support of those who wish to pay less taxes and have less liquor drunk. Then it will have friends on the other side also. He says, "It is simply a tax law which permits anybody to engage in the sale of liquors and beer who can pay the tax, and it makes the tax a lien on the real estate on which the business is done. It repeals the statute of 1854 and thereby affords protection to the liquor seller. While it is unpopular with the brewers of beer for obvious reasons, it is popular with the dealers generally, for it gives them a quasi-respectability." This puts the case exactly. The Republicans expect to gain temperance support because they have enacted a law taxing saloons, and liquor support because there is much secured by that law which the liquor men desire.—Christian Statesman.

A POLITICAL DISCOURSE.

TEXT:—James Ridgeway of Brooklyn has been removed from the New York Senate chamber on the charge by Senator Jacobs that he was a paid lobbyist of British steamship companies. Ridgeway had printed a charge that Senator Jacobs and others orruptly opposed certain bills.

It seems to mc, my fellow citizens, that it is a most preposterous thing to eject oue single man from a Senate chamber on the grounds that he is a "paid lobbyist."

Is not every Senate chamber in the United States full of Freemasons whose institution is a lobbying machine, than which nothing is better for conveying bribes from capitalists in Englaud to legislative bodies in the United States?

What was the object of ejecting this one single paid lobbyist but to remove suspicion as far as possible from the charitable (?) pious (!!) fraternity of "the ancient and honorable institution of Freemasonry?"

Now if this Seuator Jacobs in his zeal for legislative honesty will move the ejection of the Masonic lodge from the Senate chamber, and succeed in the measure, we shall begin to think that the American party may have something to say about the next Presidency. Did Senator Jacobs really act from spite, and not from principle? Is the American party to come in power only as the result of a quarrel between rogues?

AMERICAN CITIZEN.

THE HOME.

"TAKE NO THOUGHT FOR THE MORROW."

"The Christian should he like a little bird that sits on its twig and sings, and lets God think for it."—Luther.

Like Luther's bird, I sit and sing,
Not knowing what the day may bring;
Nor have I any need to know,
My Father doth protect me so.

I do the work he gives to me,
Not heeding what or where it he;
And more my Father will not ask
Than that I do my daily task.

He sees, he knows my every need,
Then why should I take careful heed?
He bids me cast on him my care,
And every burden he will bear.

If trouble comes, to him I fly,
Who will my every want supply;
Each day will bring some new surprise,
Some token of his watchful eyes.

Who then so free and glad as I,
With such a Friend forever nigh?
Beneath his shadow I may hide,
And, peaceful in his love abide.

And so I calmly sit and sing,
Content with what each day may bring.
My Father orders what is best,
And in his will I find my rest.

AN EXAMPLE OF CONVERSION.

A Boston sea captain was an inveterate sinner. He was intemperate, passionate, profane and violently opposed to religion. His wife was a Christian woman and never failed to pray for him for twenty-three years, though often well-nigh disheartened by his constant and unceasing wickedness. At length he forbade her attending the prayer-meeting of the church to which she belonged, of which Wm. Butler was the pastor. She laid her case anew in God's hands and waited the results. When the time for the next meeting came, he proposed to go in her place. She feared that he would disturb the meeting and expected that he would make it a new subject of ridicule. He went, and while listening to the prayers the Holy Spirit began to open his eyes to see his own many and aggravating sins. On his return home he had nothing to say to his wife in ridicule of the meeting as she expected. Next day he went to his work as pilot on a ferryboat between Boston and Chelsea with a heavy heart. His burden was great; he began to think of Christ. As he was making his last trip for the day a great change came over him. He thought the trip but a moment, but found it had occupied the usual time. He hastened home and told his wife to bring him the Bible. She expected only a renewal of the old scenes of blasphemy. He took the book, and saying, "We must have family prayers," read a lesson and then prayed. He gave up his drink, tobacco and profanity. His love for these things was all taken from him. He arose the next morning at three o'clock, and with a lantern in his hand called on the next-door neighbor, a deacon for whom he had always indulged great dislike. Half dressed, the deacon came to see what was wanted at that untimely hour. "Deacon," said he, "I have come to tell you that the Lord converted my soul yesterday." "Praise the Lord, brother," was the answer. The rejoicing wife called on the pastor to ask him to go and see her greatly changed husband. He found him at his post, joyful in his new experience, overflowing with love and wondering at the grace of God that had found him after he had gone around the world committing the vilest sins. His was a Paul-like conversion, a miracle of grace.—Selected.

THE NEW TESTAMENT SABBATH.

Three things are found implied in the Sabbath of the Jews; it was a day of rest from toil; it was a day of special worship; it was a day kept in commemoration of the work of Creation. The New Testament Sabbath, instead of celebrating the creation, is observed in commemoration of the greater work of redemption; it celebrates the resurrection of Christ—that greater event, in view of its stupendous significance, than even the primal event of creation. Or, perhaps it may be regarded as inclusive of both, as celebrating both the creation of the primal world, and also the re-creation, that is, the redemption of a sinful and lost world. With this exception, the fundamental ideas of the Christian Sabbath are identical with those of the Jewish. The Sabbath, then, is sacred as commorating the resurrection of our Lord, the one great event on which depends all our hopes of eternal life. It is also sacred as a day of special religious exercises. Thus the apostles and the early church observed it. It is, furthermore, sacred as a day of rest from toil. At the most, no more work should be done on this day than a good conscience can approve, as coming strictly within the limits of necessity or of mercy. As to popular forms of recreation or amusement, we infer that nothing can be right, however proper in itself, which unduly wearies body or mind, tends to deprive another, man or beast, of his needed rest, or interferes in any way with the proper duties of the day. Remembering what the day celebrates—the resurrection; remembering the obligations of worship; remembering also the natural object of the day—rest, we should be careful to do nothing which shall not be in keeping with these facts. If we err at all, it is far better to err on the side of serious caution, than of careless license.—Morning Star.

"ALL THINGS."

I do not propose to talk upon the subject of healing by faith, but the grander subject of taking everything that faith will cover; and if you can put any limit to that command, I do not know where you will put it. If you limit faith, you limit the power of the Lord, for he puts no limit to his own power, and he puts no limits to our requests. He says, "Seek first the kingdom of God and his righteousness, and all things shall be added unto you." "All things!" Christians are so slow to believe that the promises are true. Why, there is not a soul here but would say, "Of course they are true!" But that is not the point. Are they true to you? are they true to me? Vanderbilt may have a hundred million dollars; I may believe he has it; and, if I am starving to death, his wealth is no comfort to me; but rather it is a distress to me to think of that which I cannot have.

I believe that we have upwards of twenty thousand promises between the covers of the Book; we are saved children; we have been washed in the blood of the Lamb; but, more than all else, we are here to know what fulness of salvation means; to know more of God. It took me some years to learn these lessons of faith. I used to pray, but I never expected to have my prayers answered. I looked upon these higher experiences as something which came late in life or to a favored few, but never looked for such an experience for myself. Blessed be God! He gives to all who will ask him, and gives the indwelling Holy Ghost to abide with us. Nowhere in the Bible does God say we are to walk by sight. It is simply by faith, not by sight. Glorious privilege! And we may trust him in the dark. When difficulties pile up mountains high, he will bring deliverance. We do not want to look at the obstacles and trials, but to Jesus.—Dr. Cullis.

"A MOTHER'S GIFT."

Taking a morning walk, one bright spring day, I passed the door of a friend. On the step was seated a demure little maid of five summers or thereabouts, who gave me a quick smile of welcome and ran down to greet me.

"Should you like to come with me for a walk?" I said.

"When I ask mamma," was the reply, as she disappeared for a moment and then rejoined me, putting her soft, warm hand confidingly in mine. She danced along in the sunshine a short distance, when, looking up, she said earnestly, "Isn't this a pretty day? the sky is so bright." I assented. After a thoughtful pause she continued, "God makes the sunshine. Isn't he good?" Before I had time to reply, she added quickly, "And Jesus."

I was strangely stirred as I looked down into the tender little face uplifted to mine, and beaming with love and gratitude. Already she had learned to know the source of every good and every perfect gift. Even so early she had been taught to number daily blessings, and her sweet thankfulness exhaled unconsciously as the perfume of a flower. We continued our walk for an hour, while my little companion chatted merrily at my side.

To me it was the heartsome music of a child's untroubled happiness, and long after we parted the first strain returned to me over and over, "God makes the sunshine. Isn't he good?"

Happy little one, to have been nurtured in such a home. It is not the abode of wealth. Its walls are not lofty, nor its chambers spacious, and in it costly decoration finds no place. Its sole external charm consists in thrift and order, and that shining cleanliness which seems only fitting in the homes of the "pure in heart."

Thrice happy little Bessie, with such a mother as she who makes this home and creates its warm, loving atmosphere. Not irreverently might she say to her child, "Silver and gold have I none, but such as I have give I thee." Does not the promise to the pure in heart seem even now fulfilled? for with her eyes of childhood's perfect faith does she not already "see God" in all the beauty of earth and sky?

In a world where all is transitory and so fraught with trial and sorrow, what dower can be so precious as the "calm and thankful heart" which accepts direct from the Father's hand all of the good gifts of life? What talisman could be hidden in the heart so sweet and strong as the quick, loving perception of all the minor blessings, the small mercies that crowd our daily path? What better armament for the long conflict of life than this little one's mother is furnishing?

Is she not in her home the veritable "good genius who turns everything into gold"?

Young mothers—you who are devoting long hours to beautifying the little bodies that God has already stamped with the seal and likeness of his own glorious image—will you not rather strive to develop this immortal beauty which comes only from within, which shines from the soul through the face, and which can only glow with a brighter radiance when the dark days come, as come they must to all children of earth?—*Am. PREACHING AS A CANDIDATE.

A clergyman was a candidate for lectureship in one of the old city churches of London. Desirous of giving a most favorable impression of the ingenuity with which he could torture a text to his own meaning, he took for his subject the word "but." This disjunctive conjunction led him to dwell upon the truth that there is no lot in life without its cross: "Naaman was a mighty and honorable man of valor, but he was a leper." "The five wicked cities were as fruitful as the garden of God; but the men of Sodom were wicked, and sinners before the Lord exceedingly." "The inhabitants of Ai thought they had put the Israelites to flight: but they knew not that there were liers in wait behind the city;" and so on went the divine, probably well satisfied with his ingenious performance. After service, in the vestry, he was met by the chief trustee of the lectureship, who said to him, "Sir, it was a most ingenious discourse and we are exceedingly obliged to you for it, but you are not the preacher that will do for us."—Sel.

HEALTH HINTS.

EATING SAND FOR DYSPEPSIA.—A new and simple cure for dyspepsia is suggested by Hon. Pope Barrow. He says: "You know Webb Barber in Athens. Well, sir, he has cured himself of dyspepsia by eating white sand. Just common white sand picked up in the bed of a branch. He says that chickens eat sand to digest their food with, and he didn't see why men might not do the same with profit. He ate a dose of sand every day, and it cured him. Judge Henderson, the Commissioner of Agriculture, told me last night he was eating sand for dyspepsia with good results.—Atlanta Constitution.

WHAT TO DO FOR A BURN.—To prevent pain and blistering from a burn or scald apply at once a saturated solution of the bicarbonate of soda—baking soda—in either plain water or camphorated water. The common carbonate of soda—washing soda—is too coustic for this use. By "saturated solution" is meant water which has dissolved all the soda it can. For applying the solution, all that is necessary is to cut a piece of lint, or old soft rag, or even thick blotting paper, of a size sufficient to cover the burned or scalded parts, and to keep it constantly well wet with the sodaic lotion so as to prevent its drying. By this means it usually happens that all pain ceases in from a quarter to half an hour, or even in much less time. When the main part of a limb, such as the hand and forearm or the foot and leg, has been burned, it is best when practicable, to plunge the part at once into a jug or pail, or other convenient vessel filled with the soda lotion, and keep it there until the pain subsides; or the limb may be swathed or encircled with a surgeon's cotton bandage previously soaked in the saturated solution, and kept constantly wet with it, the relief being usually immediate, provided the solution be saturated and cold.—Mastery.

CARPETS OR NO CARPETS? That is the question, and not a very easy question to answer, as the circumstances differ greatly. A hard wood floor is much used now, but if carpets are preferred for the kitchen or dining-room, I can make a few suggestions that may be of use. There is a paper made expressly for putting on the floor before the carpet is laid. It is not expensive, and will last a lifetime. It takes all the dust and makes house cleaning much easier. A carpet sweeper is a great comfort. The ordinary broom sweeps the dust up into the room, and covers the sweeper as well as the furniture and curtains with dust, which never gets quite out of the room. Another plan for keeping clean is to have a carpet that does not cover the entire floor; a space of two feet is left, and the heavy furniture does not need to be moved. The carpet can be taken up and beaten as often as convenient, and the floor mopped up. If the floor is new and can be painted, this is a good plan. Such a carpet must be heavy, and can be lined with bagging or coarse brown straw bed covering to give it weight. In Germany the painted floor is wiped up every morning, and the smaller mats are beaten. In France, the beautiful hard-wood floors are waxed and polished; after all is finished and the room dusted, there is a sweet, clean odor and a shining polish to everything, that is the very perfection of comfort.—Ex.

OUR BOYS AND GIRLS.

THE YOUTH'S WISE CHOICE.

I would not wear the warrior's wreath,
I would not court his crown,
For love and virtue sink beneath
His dark and vengeful frown.

I would not seek my fame to build
On glory's dizzy height,
Her temple is with orphans filled,
Blood soils her sceptre bright.

I would not wear the diadem,
By folly prized so dear,
For want and woe hath bought each gem
And every pearl's a tear!

I would not prize the golden chest
That sordid spirits crave,
For every coin (by penury curst),
Is gathered from a grave.

No! let my wreath unsullied be!
My fame be virtuous youth;
My wealth be kindness, charity,
My diadem be truth!

POOR KATIE.

Mrs. Lovell, Katie's mother, was a seamstress, and there were very many days when she had but little work to do, and the pay was always small—only a few cents for a garment that she must work at all day long. But she struggled hard to pay the rent and keep Tim and Katie in school.

In school—that was the great thing. "Plenty of money may come one day, little ones," she would say, "but it will not be worth much if you do not know how to use it. This is the most wonderful country in the world, my birdies. Tim may be President and Katie a Mrs. President, and you can't know too much of school-books. So don't mind the patched clothes, but keep at the head of the class, if you haven't a hat for your head!"

But the winter Katie was eleven years old, the brave little mother had less money than ever before, and as the spring-time came on they grew so very poor that there was not always enough of bread left after breakfast to make a school-luncheon for Tim and Katie.

"Give it all to Tim," Katie would say; "I believe I don't want anything at noon." Poor little Katie! How hard she tried to think that she was not hungry! How empty her hands felt at first as she trudged along without her dinner! And how her heart beat, and how the blood burnt in her cheeks when the nooning came, and she of all the girls had no luncheon to eat! Oh, if anybody else should notice it, she thought, and she studied how she might behave that nobody should know she was so very poor. The hunger in her stomach was not half so hard to bear as the fear that somebody would know that she had nothing to eat.

But after a few days poor Katie began to think that the girls noticed that she brought no luncheon. Then she thought that perhaps if she brought something that looked like one, they would never think about her eating it. How she thought it all out I can not tell; but if any of you have ever been in trouble and tried to think your way out of it, perhaps you remember that you thought of some very foolish and queer things, and this was the way with Katie. She might tie up a few pieces of coal in a paper, she thought, but her mother would need every coal to keep up the fire. There were some blocks in one corner of the small room—Tim's blocks, that Santa Claus had brought him one Christmas, two or three winters before. She could tie up some of those in a paper for a make-believe luncheon, and nobody would know. So she tied up a few blocks neatly, and when her mother noticed it as she started for school, and asked in surprise what she had in the paper, the poor child hung her head, and then burst into tears.

"Oh, Mamma," she sobbed, "I wanted to make believe that I had some luncheon—it's only Tim's blocks."

For one moment the little mother did not understand, and then suddenly it all came to her mind—how the pride of her child was wounded because she could not appear as the other children did, and that she had fixed upon that simple device to hide her want. And how it made her heart ache more than ever that her poor little girl must go hungry. But she would not deprive Katie of the poor comfort of trying to "keep up appearances," and her throat was too full of choking lumps for her to trust herself to say much; so she smoothed the little girl's hair and wiped away the tears from her face, and said bravely: "Never mind, Katie, better days will come. Mother feels sure of it." And then Katie slipped away with her little bundle and the poor little mother sat down and sadly wept at the hardships that had befallen her little ones.

When the nooning came, Katie sat at her desk with her make-believe dinner before her. Her teacher noticed that she kept her seat, and seeing her luncheon, went to her and said: "Why do you not go into the lunch-room and eat your luncheon with the other girls?" at the same time reaching out for Katie's bundle.

"Oh, teacher!" cried Katie, bursting into tears, "don't touch it; and oh, teacher, don't tell, please! It's only blocks!"

"Only blocks!" softly repeated the teacher, and tears filled her eyes. "Never mind, Katie, I'll not tell the girls. You are a brave and a dear little girl, and one of the best in school."

Poor, poor child! the kind words were like manna to her heart; but, longing as the teacher was to give the child a portion of her luncheon, she would not hurt her pride by the offer before others. But during a short session of the teachers when school was over, she related the incident, and spoke in such high terms of praise of the little girl, that each one resolved to do all possible to bring "better days" at once to the poor mother; and early next morning the better days began. No one touched the brave little mother's self-respect by offering her charity, but plenty of work, with good pay, was carried to her, and enough of bread and milk, and new shoes, and coal, and all other needful things, soon came to their home through the mother's industry. And Tim's blocks went back into the corner to stay there.—Selected.

GOOD MANNERS.

Tom's father was a rich man, and Tom lived in a large house in the country. He had a pony and many other pets, and wore fine clothes. Tom was very proud of all the very fine things his father's money bought. He began to think that being rich was better than being good. He grew very rude, and was very cross to the servants. Once he kicked Towser; but the dog growled, and Tom was afraid to kick him again.

One day when Tom was playing in the yard he saw a boy standing by the gate. He was ragged and dirty, his hat was torn, and his feet were bare. But he had a pleasant face. In one hand he carried a pail half full of blackberries.

"Go away from here," said Tom, running to the gate. "We are rich, and we don't want ragged boys around."

"Please give me a drink," said the boy. "If you are so rich you can spare me a dipper of water."

"We can't spare you anything," said Tom. "If you don't go away I will set the dogs on you."

The boy laughed and walked away, swinging the tin pail in his hand.

"I think I will get some blackberries, too," said Tom to himself. He went out of the gate into a lane leading to a meadow where there were plenty of berries.

Tom saw some fine large ones growing just over a ditch. He thought he could leap over it very easily. He gave a run and a very big jump. The ditch was wider than he had thought, and instead of going over it, he came down in the middle of it.

The mud was very thick and soft, and Tom sank down in it to his waist. He was very much frightened, and screamed loudly for help. But he had not much hope that help would come, for he was a long way from any house.

He screamed until he was tired. He began to think he would have to spend the night in the ditch, when he heard steps on the grass. Looking up he saw the ragged boy he had driven from the gate.

"Please help me out," said Tom, crying. "I will give you a dollar."

"I don't want the dollar," said the boy, lying down flat on the grass. He held out both hands to Tom, and drew him out of the ditch.

Tom was covered with mud, his hat gone, and one shoe was lost in the ditch. He looked very miserable.

"Who is dirty now?" asked the boy.

"I am," said poor Tom; "but I thank you very much for helping me out of the mire. And I am sorry I sent you from the gate."

"The next time I come perhaps you will treat me better, said the boy. "I am not rich, but I am stronger than you are, and I think I have better manners."

"I think so, too," said Tom.

The next day when Tom saw the boy going by the gate, he called him in, showed him his rabbits, drove the little ducks, and gave him a ride on his pony.

"You have good manners now," said the boy.

"Yes," said Tom, "I found them in the ditch."—Our Little Ones.

A HINT FOR "OUR BOYS." A visitor at a state-prison was looking over the list of names in the prison-register, and noticed that under the head of "Occupation," the words "No trade" were written against nine-tenths of the names contained in the register. Dr. Watts knew what he was writing when he said—

"Satan finds some mischief still For idle hands to do."

—Union-Signal.

THE BOOK TRUE.—A negro was once told by a friend that some man had said the Bible was not true. Now, this poor man had never thought anybody could doubt the Bible; but his quick way of disposing of the novel difficulty was, "Dat book not true! Why, I take it into my house, and I sit down and read it, and it make my heart laugh. How can it be a lie dat make my heart laugh? I was a drunkard, thief, and liar, and dat book talk to me and make me a new man. Dat book no lie."

A scientific man has been watching "baby ants." He says that the tiney insects, as seen under the microscope, remind him of human babies. They are washed, brushed, and fed by their mothers just as human babies are. They are educated, too. They don't exactly go to school, but they are led around the nest and taught to work. Later on they learn to distinguish between friends and foes; and when the nest is attacked by foreign ants, the young ones carefully remain behind their elders. As an experiment, three young ants, each belonging to a hostile tribe, were placed in a glass together; but they had not learned from their parents to be enemies, so they lived peacefully together several months, until they were released.

TEMPERANCE.

The Burlington Hawkeye comments upon the fact of a New York man being fined $300 for giving tobacco to a giraffe in Central Park, and adds: "But they wouldn't fine him a cent if he only gave whisky to a boy."

When an Indian chief refuses to hold conference with the Senate Committee on Reservations, on the ground that said committee is drunk, it begins to look as if Sitting Bull ought to sit in the Senate himself.

"The Prohibitionists of Ohio have set apart a day in each month, until after the election, for prayers." Yes; and what is equally important, they have resolved to devote the remainining days of each month to work. Prayers are heard; ballots are counted; and politicians account the latter as of most weight.

Ex-Governor St. John, of Kansas, in a speech delivered at Silver Lake, N. Y., said: "High license is a second edition of the Missouri Compromise;" and, he might have added, will meet with the same fate. He also remarked (speaking of the metropolitan daily press), "The time is coming when we shall have another New York Tribune with a Horace Greeley for our cause."

Eight hundred and ninety-three maid servants in Germany have received the Empress Augusta's golden cross since 1876. This means that the happy recipients have lived for forty years in the same family. Happy people, all round, who can look back on such relations! Think of it! Thirty-five thousand seven hundred and twenty years, counting all together. 35,720 years, in which there was no "giving notice," no upheavals or broken pledges, no necessary drilling of the same instructions forty or eighty times over to different people; no seeking new homes and consorting with strangers every season to find the same difficulty in getting on together everywhere.

In Kings County, N. Y., the friends of temperance are making great efforts to close up unlicensed liquor saloons, and in many cases they have been successful. The police captains in some of the precincts of Brooklyn have expressed their desire to do all they can to enforce the law. But, at best, it is hard work. Between the Excise Commissioners and "intelligent" juries the wicked often escape punishment. A look at some of the jurymen is enough to convince the most credulous that the boasted trial by jury is not all that could be wished. Still, the activity of our temperance friends is making the illicit sale of intoxicating drinks "a hard road to travel." And it ought to be.

The Montague (Ga.) Northwest tells the following story "Monday evening a stranger came into a saloon in Montague and called for a drink, which was handed him. He raised the glass to his lips, when a large dog took him by the collar and tried to pull him out of the door. A crowd collected around and attempted to take the dog off, supposing it would hurt him; but the stranger said: 'Let him alone—he is my dog. I have been on a spree at Bowie, and the dog pulled me out of the saloon there and made me sober up.' The stranger left without his drink, accompanied by his faithful dog."

Among women in the highest walks of life in Chicago, liquor drinking and drunkenness are fearfully common. Dr. Duncan says that he could count twenty such cases, first and last, in his practice. He says that the women living in fashionable hotels and boarding houses are in a shocking manner inebriates. In many cases they have completely broken up their homes and gone headlong to ruin. Dr. Singley says that drunkenness in its very worst forms will be found in some of the very first families in the city.—Chicago News.

THE TENTH ANNUAL MEETING OF THE NATIONAL W. C. T. U., will be held in the Central M. E. church, Detroit, Michigan, beginning Oct. 31, and continuing four days. The convention will be composed of the "Executive Committee," the State corresponding and recording secretaries and treasurers, the superintendents of departments, the editor and publisher of our official organ, one delegate at large from each auxiliary State and one delegate for every five hundred paying members of auxiliary State Unions. Territories and the District of Columbia will be represented on the same basis.

Addresses will be made in several churches of the city on Sunday following the convention, and the last hour of each morning session will be regularly observed as a time of religious devotion.

SHUT THE DOORS.—"Please sign the pledge?" was the request of an advocate of temperance. "What's the use?" was the reply of a poor inebriate, "while on every block doors are open for me to walk in and add to my disgrace the sin of a broken promise." The Chicago Lever on this subject says:

"The State should prohibit the liquor traffic as the only thing it can do to save its citizens. It is all very well to talk of resolution, moral force, and all that, but experience proves every day that these are not sufficient. One of the richest men in Illinois, passing a saloon, pointed to the open door and said: "Give me resolution to pass that door and I will share my wealth with you to-morrow." No person, no law could give him that resolution, but the law could shut the door. In that way alone could it save the man.

When once this liquid fire is taken into the system, the wretched slave of the demon is ready for anything and I would hold him who furnished the devilish poison equally responsible with the perpetrator for what ensues. I see no difference between the man who commits the murder and he who provides the material. Both should suffer alike. Let the laws be administered in that spirit, and in less than six months the number of rumshops and distilleries would be diminished one-half. Henry Bergh.

Paulding circuit, Oct. 6th; Hicksville, Oct. 13th; Center, Oct. 20th; West Unity, Oct. 27th; Montpelier, Nov. 3d; Mount Pleasant, Nov. 10th; Hillsdale, Nov. 17th; Ransom, Nov. 24th; Pioneer, Dec. 1st; North Line, Dec. 8th. All to begin at 1 o'clock, P. M.

J. K. ALWOOD.

—At a tent meeting in South Chicago, reported in the Free Methodist a large number were converted, among them one young man who left three secret societies. By taking this stand for his Saviour he expects to lose his position in business. Another left his Sunday work and was discharged, but two other places were opened for him.

—Major Whittle and Mr. and Mrs. McGranahan will sail with Moody and Sankey for London, Oct. 2. Major Whittle spoke for the last time in Chicago Avenue church Sabbath morning, and at Farwell Hall in the evening.

—The Rev. Edward Judsou, the son of the late Dr. Adoniram Judson and of his second wife, Mrs. Boardman, recently settled in a wonderfully successful ministry at Orange, New Jersey, and now carrying ou a similar work in this city, has yielded, it seems, to the importunity of friends who looked on him as the proper person to do it, and edited a Life of his distinguished father.

—Bishop Dickson, says the Telescope, has recently sold his property at Westerville, Ohio, where for the educational advantages he has resided for a number of years. It is his purpose to remove to the East about the first of November. He has not decided where his residence shall be, but it is probable that he will reside in Baltimore or Chambersburg.

—Mrs. Spurgeon has for seven years been making collections of books for pastors whose salaries are small. In this good work she has collected and distributed over 50,000 volumes. Last year's work was 9,146. She gives it to be understood, also, that she wants donations of readable works, and not of old rubbish.

—At a convention of the Protestant Episcopal church recently held at Chattanooga, Tenn., composed of bishops, ministers, and laymen from thirteen Southern States, it was resolved to be the sense of the body, that the General Convention of the church which meets this fall, be memoralized to establish schools for the education of colored men who desire to enter the ministry of that church, and that all colored ministers of that church have equal rights and powers in all church councils.

—At the Michigan U. B. Conference held in Salem, Allegan county, the following good resolutions were passed: "Secret combinations of men are not demanded by any worthy interest at the present day. They have never been needed. They have never accomplished any worthy end that could not be attained by an open and public organization. Many of them are connected with that which is evil, and their object is only secured by thwarting justice and encouraging crime. They are all contrary to the spirit of the gospel and the example of Christ. We regret to see the number of these organizations multiplying, for soon, like the devil in the hogs, their name will be legion. We believe in the righteousness of our position set forth in our secrecy law, that connection with the lodge should be made a test of church-fellowship. We will therefore boldly maintain our principles and enforce our rule, and will ever earnestly protest against the lawlessness manifested in this matter by other conferences in our beloved Zion."

"We regard with favor the telling efforts of Ex-bishop Milton Wright, of Richmond, Ind., in the publication of the Richmond Star in defense of the church upon the question of secrecy and temperance, and bid him and his paper a hearty God-speed."

—Mrs. Adeline M. Smith, of Oak Park, Ill., has proposed to give $10,000 to found the "Smith Medical Mission," to be located at Nanking, China. Mr. Smith designs this as a memorial of her deceased husband. She especially charges that the work be made earnestly evangelistic, and proposes to enlarge the gift as God may direct.

—A coffee house has been opened in Constantiuople as a center of Gospel work. On its outer walls is printed in Arabic, "Come unto me all ye that are weary and heavy laden, and I will give you rest." It has a lady director who speaks four languages. Within two months it has sold more than a hundred Bibles, Testaments and Psalms.

—It is reported that the demand for Bibles aud Testaments for the last three months has been so great that the American Bible Society, although it publishes seven complete Bibles and Testaments every minute of working time, is unable to supply it promptly.

—The world is gradually realizing what Christians have always known —that "Godliness is profitable" even in a commercial sense, which is the lowest favorable view. The Rev. George Hood presents this truth by referring to the trade of the United States with Micronesian and adjacent islands. It seems that the first missionaries went to these islands in 1852, and in 1879 business was carried on which has yielded profit amounting to nearly $700,000. The Board during that year appropriated for that mission $16,795. Or, in other words, missions paid out $1, and commerce in trade created by the missions, received back $40.75. And this before most people knew such a missiou was in existeuce.

—The Rev. Arthur T. Pierson, D. D., formerly of Detroit and later of Indianapolis, has accepted the call of Bethany Presbyterian church, Philadelphia. This is the church which John Wanamaker founded nearly a quarter of a century ago as a mission in what was then a forlorn suburb of the city. "Bethany" now has a handsome browu-stone house of worship and an immense Sunday-school, which is ouc of the famous ones of the world. Dr. Pierson will here find the largest field for putting into operation his favorite theories as to gathering great multitudes of hearers of the Gospel.

—In Rome there is a Military church which has a Sunday-school connected with it, the members of which are soldiers of the army. Every soldier recites a verse of Scripture he has committed to memory, and reads in turn from his own Bible. The prayer is made by one of the soldiers every Sunday.

A remarkable dedication occurred last year in the communion of the Free Church of Italy, at Venice. The congregation of that city purchased the venerable and imposing Catholic shrine, the Church of Santa Margherita in Venice. On the day of its consecration to the worship of the Reformed faith, the following inscription over the interior of its chief portal was unveiled:

"After Three Centuries, the Temporal Power of the Priests having forever fallen, this temple, restored to the true worship Christ, records to Venice, to Italy, to the world, the holy martyrs of Gospel truth, 1882. Drowned in the Canal Orfano, Ghirlanda Giulio of Treviso, October 19, 1562. Ricetto Antonio of Vicenza, February 15, 1566. Sega Francesco of Rovigo, February 25, 1566. Fra Baldo Lupetino, Franciscan Provincial, of the nobles of Abano. Prete Francesco Spinola of Milan, January 31, 1567. Burned alive at Rome, Pomponio Algiere of the University of Padua. Slain through imprisonment, torture, exile, Galatio Girolamo, Mentonini Vincenzo, Spiera Francesco, Altieri Baldassare."

Precious iu the love of their brethren, after three centuries, wherein their very names seemed to have been forgotten, are the death and the memory of these martyrs of the Reformation. Who could have foreseen, at the time of their murder, that their memory would be redolent, their names graven enduringly in stone, after the lapse of three hundred years, to be read reveringly and with sorrow, perhaps by the descendants of the inquisitors who procured their death!—Zion's Herald.

GOD WAS THERE ALSO.

It seems a great pity that two such self-denying, self-sacrificing, cross-bearing, unworldly, secrecy-hating, rum-hating, spiritually-minded, God-fearing, God-loving people, as the Wesleyans and Free Methodist are, should not love each other enough to be joined in the bands of wedlock.

In all things fundamental they are alike. And in so very few things unlike that a union would seem a mutual God-send. In doctrine and practice they are as one. The Free Methodists lay a little more stress on plainness of dress; but the Wesleyans are a very plain people in that item of practice; and God is manifestly among and with them both crowning their convocations with the very Shekinah of his presence so that their faces we are the visible halo of the Divine manifestation.

I thought the meeting of the Free Methodists at Memphis transcended all I had ever witnessed. And I thought the same of the Wesleyans at Spring Arbor. United, "lovely in life would they be, and in death not divided.' A mighty volume of prayer with tears and strong crying went up to heaven during my address of an hour to the Sunday-school. Nearly every child iu the house was hopefully converted. There were many powerful addresses during the convention by both men aud women. Brothers Stratton and Kinney, sisters Depue, Frink and Haviland were a quintuple inspiration. And by many others many hearts were made glad. The people of the parish opened wide their doors and hearts for the entertainment of the unusual number in attendauce. Much anti-secrecy literature was distributed.

C. C. FOOTE.

A VIRGINIA CAMP-MEETING.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—On Saturday the 15th I crossed the Potomac to E. Falls church, about eight miles from Washington, where the Free Methodist people are holding a camp-meeting. They have two small societies, one in Washingtou and one in Alexandria, and have for the past year been without a pastor. But what they have lacked in wealth and numbers they have made up in devotedness. I know of no people more zealous and self-sacrificing. It was at much expense they have procured these pleasant grounds and commodious tents and it is a matter of much satisfaction that they resorted to no method of obtaining money but such as commended itself to every man's conscience in the sight of God. The attendanee has been fair, but on Sabbath it was large; many people being there from Washington and Alexandria as well as from the country round about.

The preaching was all thoroughly Methodistic and eminently earnest aud practical. Popular iniquities were not spared aud practical godliness was strongly insisted on. Whatever of dissent there might be from some statements of doctrine and manifestations of religious emotion, no real Christian could fail to approve the plain and honest preaching of practical Christianity. The great congregation listened with intelligent interest, and I doubt not that a deep and excellent impression was made.

It would be perhaps too much to expect that there should be nothing to criticize. Our F. M. brethren here, in their intense denominational strictness, have, I fear, unconsciously fallen into the mistake of supposing that they must distrust every body but themselves, and so have somewhat failed "to keep the unity of the Spirit in the bonds of peace." It would add immensely to the moral power of such a meeting to have it known as including and representing all who love our Lord Jesus Christ in sincerity, and where the Holy Spirit was the leader rather than a man. It is a blessed thing to be zealous for God, but zeal is sometimes mistaken and misdirected.

THE

CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE

A NEATLY PRINTED SIXTEEN PAGE WEEKLY JOURNAL, UNSECTARIAN AND OPPOSED TO SECRET SOCIETIES.

THE POLE STAR OF REFORM.

EVERY Christian, every Prohibitionist and every Patriot should read it for the followiug among other reasous:

1. Because it meets the wants of the general public by giving in brief the latest reliable information on all questions of Reform, having the special object of exposiug and opposing organized seerecy. Besides able editorial, contributed and selected articles upon this topic, which is of more than natioual importanee, it has interesting sketches of progress and incidents from the reform lecturers in all parts of the country, reform news and notes, letters from the Old World, etc., etc. It is the especial organ of this movement in Ameriea—a movement which is sustained by the utterances of some of the ablest statesmen and divines whom the country has produced. Every person interested in either the family, government, or religiou—the most sacred interests of humanity—is directly affected by secret societies, and needs to keep posted in this movement.

2. Because it is uncompromising on ALL questions of the day. On temperauee, tobacco, Sabbath desecration, Mormonism, the Southern and Indian questions, civil-service reform, monopolies, the rights of labor, and every other question, its only aim is to be RIGHT, and advocate the TRUTH. It is hence FEARLESS and OUTSPOKEN.

2. Because it emphasizes the fact that political aetiou should be directed by conscience enlightened by the WORD aud SPIRIT of God and that Christ must be acknowledged KING of NATIONS, and presents a platform epitomizing the science of civil governments based on the supreme authority of the DIVINE WORD.

4. Because, iu addition to these features, it contains a choice selection of wholesome reading for the family, from oldest to youngest, with religious and secular news, market reports, etc.

IN BRIEF.

An ingenious invention has lately been patented in Germany for the use of the traveling public especially. It consists of a book whose leaves are of perfumed toilet-soap. One leaf is sufficient for one washing of the hands, and after tearing out this leaf the little book can be returned dry to the pocket.

A company of scientists has lately been formed in Paris, called the Nile Society, which proposes to explore and study the entire Valley of the Nile much more minutely than has ever been done before, with hopes of adding materially to the world's knowledge of that interesting region, in all branches of science.

I admire Mr. Whitfield's reason for always having his linen scrupulously clean. "No, no," he would say, "these are not trifles; a minister must be without spot, even in his garments, if he can." Purity cannot be carried too far in a minister.—Rev. Mr. Spurgeon.

A little boy, weeping most piteously, was interrupted by some unusual occurrence. He hushed his cries for a moment; the thought was broken. "Ma," said he, resuming his sniffle, "what was I crying about just now?" Just like many bigger boys and girls too.

If I am between two moral evils I will not have either. "There is small choice in rotten apples." I am to reject both. A man is not to lie to save from the necessity to steal; nor to break the Sabbath, lest he should not be able to pay his debts. Never choose to do wrong.—John Hall.

Deeds are powerful, mere words are weak,
Batt'ring at high heaven's door.
Let thy love by actions speak;
Wipe the tears from sorrow's cheek;
Clothe the poor.

A comparison between English and American agricultural statistics may not be uninteresting: England has this year under wheat 2,600,000 acres; America has over 30,000,000 acres; 2,975,000 acres under oats, against about 30,000,000 acres in Ameriea; 2,300,000 under barley, which is about the acreage in this country. America has 64,000,000 under corn. England of course does not grow corn. Great Britian has but about 6,000,000 head of cattle, against 30,000,000 in America; it has about 25,000,000 sheep and lambs, against about 50,000,000 in America.

The New York Evening Post says: "A careful survey of the murders, suicides and other great felonies committed in the chief cities of the United States during the last ten years, shows that a heavy fraction of the perpetrators were atheists and free thinkers. These unhappy persons, persuaded that life is the be-all and end-all here, imagine that they can jump the life to come.

It is assertad by a San Francisco paper that leprosy is becoming more and more frequent among the Caucasians of the Pacific coast. It used to be held that leprosy was not contagious, and that it rarely if ever affected white people, but the California experience has been painfully to the contrary. Just now the case of Erick Erickson, a Swedish sailor, is attracting attention. He is lying at the pest-house, step by step approaching a horrible, loathsome death. He came from Merced. A year ago he noticed a peculiar swelling of the hands. This symptom was followed by the appearance of large, red blotches and pustules on his arms and legs. They resembled the signs of the tertiary of a venereal disease, and Erickson was at first treated for that disorder. But the remedies were unavailing. Finally the telltale yellow hue came over his skin. The man now presents a dreadful sight, his flesh rotting away by inches, with scarcely a sound spot on his entire body. It seems advisable to the authorities of coast towns to declare quarantine against the Hawaiian Islands, which are infected with leprosy. The cholera would certainly be more welcome than this awful plague.

THE PUREST IS THE BEST.

In the selection of SUNDAY-SCHOOL PAPERS, the most important point to be considered is the moral tone of the subject matter. If this is of a questionable character, the papers should be shunned, no matter how large, how attractive, or how low the price. Such papers are

COSTLY AT ANY PRICE.

The country is being flooded with S. S. literature that is largely composed of what may be properly termed "RELIGIOUS FICTION," the tendency of which is to create a distaste for sound reading and foster an appetite for fiction of a more deleterious character.

The engravings of these papers are equally objectionable. In many cases a lady or girl dressed in the height of fashion is made the HEROINE OF A STORY, thus putting the highest sanction to extravagance and pride. With such instructors in our Sunday-schools we cannot expect the children to grow up with a love for sound literature and with correct ideas of Christian propriety. With a view of supplying S. S. papers, of a pure and elevating character, the publishers are issuing

FOUR MONTHLY PAPERS.

They are FREE FROM FICTION, and the cuts are chosen with great care. While they are thus carefully edited, they are not lacking in attractiveness. They are well printed on beautiful tinted paper. The children are delighted with them. The very low price at which this line of S. S. papers is issued, places them within the reach of even schools of limited means

FARM NOTES.

RAISING LARGE CROPS OF POTATOES.

Until the present year I have never succeeded in raising more than two bushels of potatoes to the square rod, or 320 bushels per acre; and that yield has only been reached on small portions of the field, the average for the whole lot never having exceeded 250 bushels per acre. I will confess I could hardly believe reports which have been published of yields of four, five, and even six hundred bushels per acre. But I shall be more ready to believe such reports in the future, as I have just measured the ground and picked up and measured the potatoes, where they yielded over three bushels of large potatoes to the square rod, or 500 bushels per acre. The small ones from the size of a hen's egg down were not picked up. We tried it on several square rods, and in the presence of reliable witnesses, so that we can prove it. This was the very best portion of the field, so far as we could judge from the vines. A meaured quarter of an acre, not all of it the best, filled 102 bushel boxes with large potatoes. The secret of the great yield is found in the adjective "large," twice used in connection with potatoes. When there are several potatoes in a hill weighing from half a pound to a pound each, and the hills are as close together as they will bear to be put, one does not have to go over much ground to get a bushel. There are two things that can be done this Fall which will help to make potatoes, and, consequently a large yield next year. I will speak of these in particular this time and other points in due season.

The first thing is to select for seed good sized, perfect shaped, well-matured tubers with large, strong eyes. I know there is a great difference of opinion on this point. A single experiment may not show any decided results in favor of the large, choice seed, particularly if it is a very favorable season, or the trial is made on very rich ground: but any one who will select such seed as I have described, and follow it up for ten years, taking as good care of the crop in every other respect as he does in the selection of seed, will get his reward. Five hundred dollars is a good deal of money for a farmer to get in a lump; but so sure am I that I am right on this point, that I would not take that sum in addition to the market price for my seed potatoes this Fall, after they are selected, and run the risk of buying new seed. Every one has probably noticed when digging potatoes, that some hills without any apparent cause perhaps, will have several large, fine potatoes in them, while their neighbors will notyield half as well. My way of selecting seed is to walk along after the diggers with a small basket and pick up the choice potatoes, of perfect shape, and with large eyes, from these hills. When the basket is full, it is carefully emptied into a bushel box; and the boxes are kept covered if the sun shines. As soon as a few are filled they are taken to the cellar and set away till the tubers are through sweating, when they are laid (not poured) in barrels and covered up from the air, not to be moved again till planting time,

This is too much trouble, some may say. Well, my friend, if you are satisfied with an average crop of say eighty or one hundred bushels per acre, of rather inferior potatoes, do not read any further. If you want to raise a big crop, and have fine potatoes, you will have to go to a good deal of trouble; but if you manage rightly you will get well paid for it. The progressive, successful potato-raiser makes money. The "average" one will have to figure closely to show any profit. Whether the tubers for seed are kept in pits in the field, or in the cellar, the point is to keep them at a low, even temperature, so they will be sound in the Spring, and the eyes just beginning to start when you want to plant. We take pains to get them from the cellar into the ground without warming them up any more than we can possibly help. They are brought from the cellar, cut and plantcd, usually, the same day.

I have been able to kecp them as described for years past, in a very poor cellar, by watching closely. I am now having a large cellar built, with hollow walls, an air space overhead, and ventilating flues running to the top of a tall chimney. In this cellar I hope to be able to keep seed and other botatoes in perfect condition till late planting time, with very little trouble, and without any possible injury to the health of the occupants of the house above. I often begin to select seed as soon as the first of September. The nights are cool enough by that time, so that in a properly constructed cellar, the temperature can be kept quite low. As soon as possible I reduce it to 35 degrees; and keep it as low as that all Winter if I can. If covered up in barrels a temperature of 28 degrees for a short time will not hurt the potatoes. Who knows how much cold the sprout will stand after it gets above ground? Last Spring I had some up when the thermometer placed by the side of the plants showed 28 degrees at daylight, and ice froze ⅛ of an inch thick. The leaves, which were just unfolding from the stalks, were blackened, but no permanent injury resulted.

The second thing that ought to be done this Fall, is to manure the ground, if it is not already rich enough. Fall manuring is altogether the best, and my experience is all in favor of rotten manure or compost, rotted under conditions that do not allow of much waste by evaporation or leaching. The land spoken of that yielded 400 to 500 bushels per acre, had 50 manure- spreadcr loads (about a cubic yard each) of rotten compost put on it for squashes last year, and was not manured any further for the potato crop. In a letter about raising Winter squashes, not long since, I said that the cost of the manure need not all be charged to the squash crop, as part of it would remain for the following crop. This yield of potatoes shows that a good deal remained. If the land you wish to plant next year is in grass now, spread the manure evenly over the surface early in the Fall, and let it lie till Spring. Kemp's manure spreader will do the work best. If you spread by hand be sure and fine the manure thoroughly with a brush harrow. If you intend to plant on stubble ground, spread the manure on the surface and pulverize and work it into the soil, and do not be afraid of overdoing the matter. If the land is not already dry enough, underdrain it before you put the manure on. Do not risk it without. You run the risk of the seed rotting in the ground, of the weeds getting the start of you in a wet time, because you cannot get on the ground to work it, and of the potatoes rotting in the ground after they are grown. The loss in a single season may be more than enough to pay for the tile draining "Lock your barn doors before your horse is stolen." With suitable soil, well-drained, and manured with rich, rotten manure which has been thoroughly fined, and with choice seed in your cellar well cared for, you may feel as though you had done about all you could till Spring opens, toward a good crop next year.—T. B. TERRY, in Country Gentleman.

Smith's Tonic Syrup

FEVER and AGUE

Or CHILLS and FEVER.

AND ALL MALARIAL DISEASES.

The proprietor of this celebrated medicine justly claims for it a superiority over all remedies ever offered to the public for the SAFE, CERTAIN, SPEEDY and PERMANENT cure of Ague and Fever, or Chills and Fever, whether of short or long standing. He refers to the entire Western and Southern country to bear him testimony to the truth of the assertion that in no case whatever will it fail to cure if the directions are strictly followed and carried out. In a great many cases a single dose has been sufficient for a cure, and whole families have been cured by a single bottle, with a perfect restoration of the general health. It is, however, prudent, and in every case more certain to cure, if its use is continued in smaller doses for a week or two after the disease has been checked, more especially in difficult and long-standing cases. Usually this medicine will not require any aid to keep the bowels in good order. Should the patient, however, require a cathartic medicine, after having taken three or four doses of the Tonic, a single dose of BULL'S VEGETABLE FAMILY PILLS will be sufficient.

The genuine SMITH'S TONIC SYRUP must have DR. JOHN BULL'S private stamp on each bottle. DR. JOHN BULL only has the right to manufaoture and sell the original JOHN J. SMITH'S TONIC SYRUP, of Louisville, Ky. Examine well the label on each bottle. If my private stamp is not on each bottle do not purchase, or you will be deceived.

NIGHTS IN A BAR-ROOM

T. S Arthur's great temperance book, complete and illustrated. By mail, 5c each; 50c per doz. By express, $3.50 per 100.

THE LIQUOR TRAFFIC THE GREAT SOURCE OF CRIME.

Leaves from the diary of an old lawyer.—By Hon. A. B Richmond, author of "Court and Prison," etc. A book of intense interest, rivaling the famous "Diary of a Physician," and, in its truthful, terrible pictures of the power and crime of intemperance, excelling the well-known "Ten Nights in a Bar-room." The temperance issue of the present time is. Shall prohibition be partial or entire? Shall the branches of the death-bearing tree be pruned and trimmed, or shall the tree itself be cut down and its stump be torn up by the roots? The answer of "Leaves from the Diary" is, "Cut down the tree, tear up the roots, leave not a shoot or shred behind." It is certainly a very strong and eloquent volume Complete edition on fine, heavy paper, with colored lithograph of Sewall's stomach plates By mail, 30c each, $3 per doz. By express, $20 per 100. Abridged edition, by mail, 15c; $1.25 per doz. By express, $9 per 100.

THE LIQUOR TRAFFIC AND THE SOBER CITIZEN.

An able and telling work, by Rev. J H. Sherman, which brings out the effects of the liquor traffic in a new light. The following are some of the commendations of the first edition.

"The author drives the nails of conviction through and clinches them."—N Y Christian Advocate.

"Speakers and workers in the temperance field will find valuable aid in this pamphlet. It is crowded with convincing facts "—Zion's Herald

"One of the ablest reviews of the drink curse ever issued from the press."—The Morning and Day of Reform.

"The arguments are put in telling form "—Judge Pittman.

New revised and enlarged edition. By mail, 10c each, $1 per doz By express, $6 per 100.

DRINKS FROM DRUGS.

A startling exposure of the liquor traffic, by El. Johnson. A book that cannot fail to arouse the American people to the gigantic swindle now being perpetrated. The writer was offered $10,000 by a leading brewer to keep still Liquor not only doctored, but made entirely from drugs. Extracts from a whole library of secret books, giving receipts for making and doctoring; advertisements of essences, fac-similes of labels, engravings, etc. etc. Claret, port, sherry, champagne, whisky, brandy, gin, rum, etc., all out of one barrel. and made at less than 25 cents a quart. Wine that never saw grape juice; cider that never saw apples; beer factories in place of breweries, fine cream ale without barley or brewing; whisky from arsenic; millions of gallons of liquor that pays no revenue tax. The farmer's corn and barley "all in your eye." A wholesale liquor store in a ten-foot square cellar; more French wine sold in New York City than is produced in the whole of France. By mail, 10c each; $1 per doz. By Express, $6 per 100.

W. C. T. U. ORGANIZATION AND WORK.

A book of general information on how to organize and run successfully a Woman's Christian Temperance Union. This book should be widely distributed among W. C. T. U. presidents, pastor's wives and other representative women. By mail, 10c each; $1 per doz. By express, $6 per 100.

HOME PROTECTION.

A lawyer's view of it. By J. C. Wells, attorney-at-law. The question of female suffrage for the protection of home ably discussed from a lawyer's standpoint. A book for the times. By mail. 10c each; $1 per doz. By express, $6 per 100.

BAND OF HOPE RECITERS.

172 pages. 164 choice recitations of poetry and prose, containing some of the choisest bits of temperance material for the platform ever uttered, accompanied by an article on elocution. By mail, 10c each; $1 per doz. By express, $6 per 100

For $1.60 Small size genuine Oxford Teacher, gilt edges, flexible morocco cover, circuit, or protection, leather all around. Postage, 10cts.

For $2.50 The same style of binding, medium size. Postage, 12c.

THE PERSIAN SEAL BINDING

Is very handsome and durable. It is this style of binding which is so much admired by Bible readers. Please notice particularly that these Bibles are kid lined and silk sewed. Many Bibles in this style outwardly are lined with black paper and sewed with thread in place of silk.

LEVANT MOROCCO BINDING.

The Persian Seal bindings are the best kept by most Bible dealers, and usually pass for the best teachers' Bibles made; and, to all appearance, they are so. There is, however, a better wearing binding, of which the Persian Seal is a good imitation; this is known as "Levant Morocco" In all respects the Levant morocco Bible corresponds with the Persian Seal description, except as to leather used for cover which, though looking like the Persian Seal, is stronger, and will last a lifetime.

Prices on genuine Levant Morocco bindings:

For $4.50—Small size. Postage, 10c.
For $5.50—Medium size. Postage, 12c.
For $8.00—Large size. Postage, 20cts.

Handsome Gift Bibles at Low Prices.

For 45c. Embossed morocco cover, gilt edges, gilt title on back. Very neat and durable. This is the handsomest 45c. gift Bible we have ever seen. Postage, 5c.

For 60c. Morocco cover, brass bound and plated, with handsome gilt clasp and gilt edges; two patterns; square and round corners. Exquisite lettering on side; printed in large clear type. Bibles no better are sold as high as $1 and $2. Postage, 6c.

For 70c. Similar size and style of binding to our 60-cent Bible; square corners, brass bound, with clasp and handsome tasseled book-mark; also medallion inserted on side in gold and red.

This was a new importation with the fall of 1882, and a very pretty design. It should be seen to be appreciated. (See cut.) Postage, 6c.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

—The announcement comes from Washington that the pension office is unable to expend the money appropriated at the last session. Commissioner Dudley called for $170,000,000, and now finds that $75,000,000 will suffice. As a result a large amount of bonds will doubtless be called in.

—Supervising Architect Hill has tendered his resignation to Secretary Folger, to take effect on the appointment of his successor.

—The Agricultural Department at Washington has issued its September report on the cotton crop, the average of which is now reduced to 74, while at the same time in 1882 it was 92 per cent. Drought has had this bad effect in almost every state, and rust, caterpillars, and the boll worm are prevalent in many districts.

—The New York Tribune, following the lead of the New York Times, (which reduced its price Tuesday to two cents from four cents), announces a cut of one cent, and will sell hereafter for three cents.

—The engine, baggage car, and one passenger coach of a Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul train ran off the track east of Rockford, Ill., Wednesday, and came near plunging into Rock River. A misplaced switch caused the accident.

—A construction train on the West Shore Road, carrying 150 laborers, collided with a hand car near Syracuse, N. Y., early Wednesday morning causing a fearful wreck, by which three men were instantly killed and about twenty wounded.

—Between 1 and 2 o'clock Thursday afternoon the boiler in the flanging department of the Sligo Iron Works at Pittsburg, exploded, shattering the structure, and setting fire to a block of buildings opposite and to the Lake Eric Railway Car Shops. In the debris were found eleven employes, three of whem were dead, and eight badly wounded, four fatally. Four children of Charles Douglass, residing in a house across the street were seriously injured. The shock of the explosion was felt throughout the city, many buildings being shaken and windows smashed. The loss to the mill-owners is $10,000, and to the Lake Eric Road and dwellings about $3,000.

—The royal family of Denmark and the Czar of Russia lunched with Mr. Gladstone Tuesday of last week in his yacht off Copenhagen. The poet Tennyson read sclections from his works after the repast, after which Mr. Gladstone set sail for England.

—The visit of Gladstone to Copenhagen is made the subject of considerable comment by continental journals, who profess to see in it a deep-laid scheme to form a coalition against the Austro-German alliance. The English journals ridicule the idea. They declare there is no political purpose to effect, and say if Gladstone had any object of this nature in view, it was simply to exercise a purely moral influence in favor of peace.

—O'Donnell, charged with the murder of Informer Carey, was landed Tuesday at Southampton, England, amid extraordinary precautions by the police, thence conveyed to London, then taken to Milbank Prison, and later appeared in the Bow Street Court, where he was charged with murder. The prisoner was remanded until the arrival of witnesses from Australia.

—A London correspondent at Paris says: "The Austro-German alliance is directed against Russia and France. In the event of war between Germany and France, Austria is to maintain an armed neutrality. In the event of war between Austria and Russia, Germany is to do likewise. If a third power attack Germany or Austria, armed neutrality will be converted into active co-operation.

—Appeals have been made to the trade-unions of Great Britain to render pecuniary aid to the 10,000 weavers now on a strike in Lancashire.

—O'Donnell, who removed Informer Carey, feels bitterly against the Dublin Irishmen who have taken no steps to raise funds for his defense.

— Sir William Wheelhouse, addressed the British Society for the Advancement of Science Thursday to the effect that the present commercial depression in England is owing to the free trade, and advocating a return to a protective tariff.

—Nordenskjold, the Danish explorer, has penetrated into Greenland for a distance of 360 kilometres, and reached an altituce of 7.000 feet above the sea. He finds the country simply an ice desert, with no open water. On the northwestern coast he found a vey low temperature but on the eastern shore the weather is comparatively moderate.

—A correspondent at Hong Kong says the French are in difficulties through want of troops. Many Chinese are deserting to the Black Flags. Lau, their chief, is very powerful, and France may have to negotiate with him. Foreigners have been seen fighting on the side of the Black Flags. General Bouet admits that he was unable to hold his position after the last fight. The French are still buying steamers and horses.

—The chief organ of the Russian Nihilists, which seems to favor Jew-baiting, says that in the recent riots at Ekaterinoslav the military killed 200 of the populace.

—The Netherlands Trading Company has remitted 137,000 florins to Batavia to aid the sufferers by the catatrophe in Java. The government of the Straits settlement, by the authority of England, advanced $25,000 for the same object.

—The London Times' Calcutta dispatch states that the published account of the French outrages at Tamatave falls far short of the truth, and adds that when the English Consul Pakenham was dying French priests endeavored to force him to become a Catholic and compelled him to kiss a crucifix.

—Missionary Shaw, recently imprisoned by the French at Tamatave has arrived at Funchal, Madeira, on his way to England. His residence at Tamatave was pillaged during the bombardment, and he was threatened because he refused to remove the debris left by the robbers.

—The inhabitants of Pekin and the mandarins in the imperial palace have demanded that the emperor of China, who does not seem energetic enough to suit the popular demand, shall abdicate in favor of Prince Tun, his uncle. This is regarded as but another phase of the Franco-Chines question. Judging from present indications there will probably be either an iuternal war or an open fight with France.

HOLDEN WITH CORDS.

From "The Free Methodist."

"Holden with Cords, or the Power of the Secret Empire." Price, postpaid, handsomely bound in cloth, $1.00; paper covers, 50 cents.

There is no important history extant but has connected with it numerous other histories of which was the initial point or the dominating influence. The abduction and murder of Morgan set ten thousand secret springs in motion as the surrender of the charters of so many lodges at that time, and the severing of their connection with the order of some forty thousand of its members indicated. The story is one of these histories, and is a collection of facts woven into a story. It cannot fail to be read with interest. Address National Christian Association, 221 West Madison St., Chicago.

A gentleman who has several years served on committees in the Illinois State Fair said the other day that this year he refused because the management had brought in the horse-race in order to make expenses. For several years the race has been rejected, in the hope that the county fairs would follow the example and that this vicious excrescence upon our agricultural fair system would be lopped off altogether. Two other arguments, beside that of meeting expenses, have prevailed this year — a Chicago crowd would be attracted by the race, and the Fair was held on the race grounds of the Jockey Club. The Fair was held all last week. The crowd came, the treasurer was happy, and the races were kept up through the week. They were the great attraction. The Fair itself was a disappointment. California sent the fruit, of which there would else have been little, the railway exhibits of grain and vegetables at our annual Exposition surpass all that the great State of Illinois could display, and importers of foreign horses were on hand to advertise their stock; but for all the purposes of an agricultural fair for the farmers of Illinois it was by no means a success. One Sabbath day filled with the preparation and another in removing added to the condemnation of a management which seemed neither to fear God nor regard the moral conduct of mankind. The Covenanters will not support an agricultural show that permits racing. Let all our farmers take this high moral ground and their example will be an untold blessing to the nation.

Reports from Canada show that Pope Leo is becoming anxious over the numerous defections from the Romish church to the Masonic and other secret lodges. He has dispatched an ambassador to inquire into the reason of the rapid spread of Freemasonry, and last Sabbath at high mass in Toronto a letter was read from the archbishop informing the worshipers that the Pope desired special prayer to be made during the present month for the deliverance of the church from its foes, chief among which are the secret societies. It is conjectured that the excitement in Montreal a few years since over the burial of a prominent Freemason whose body was refused interment in a Catholic cemetery, has led many members of this church to despise the commands of their religious instructors, and, as the Marquis of Ripon, Grand Master of English Freemasons, found refuge from Masonry in the Romish church, these Catholics find refuge from priestly domination in the despotism and folly of the lodge. To pray that men may be delivered from this curse is the first duty, but of what avail is it that the Catholics of Canada count their beads and cry to their god-mother, the virgin Mary? That is no better than a Freemason praying in the name of Hiram Abiff or in the name of his own "works," miserable as they are. There is One only who can cast out this devil.

The "most important" gathering ever held in the Roman Catholic church in this country, says the press, is now in session in New York, representing a half dozen dioceses, and 2,000,000 Catholics, or about one-third the whole number in this country. So far as is known to the outside world, the object of this meeting is the extension of the church and especially the establishment of a great university, such as that presided over by Capel, the English Catholic now visiting this country on some important mission. A noticeable feature of this meeting is its secrecy. Its results will not be known until the Pope has passed upon the business transacted and the action of the Bishops shall gradually unfold the schemes hatched in such an un-American, un-Christian fashion.

In reply to a personal question the other day, a colored porter on a sleeping car said, "No, I'm not a religious man, though I know well enough what I ought to do. It's pretty hard for a railroad man to be religious." Another young colored man was mentioned who was at one time deeply engaged in Christian work and is yet a member of a Christian church, though now living in neglect of religious exercises as a result of his labor on the train. The Christian Statesman remarks most truly upon a similar case thus: "It may have been intended for a joke on the part of the conductor who when asked if he was a Christian replied, 'No, I am a railroad man;' but if so, it was a truth that might suggest some very serious reflections. It is a solemn fact that it is difficult in these days to be 'a railroad man,' and at the same time to be a Christian. The railroads, by causing unnecessary labor to be done on the Lord's day, force Christian men to abandon their employment, and prevent other Christian men from entering their service. The policy is injurious and suicidal, as it deprives the railway companies of the services of those whom conscience controls, and puts them in an attitude of opposition to the laws of God, which command all corporations as well as individuals to remember the Sabbath day to keep it holy."

The Land League fund was some time since easily changed for a Parnell testimonial, and now the ever-loyal but unwise followers of the Irish agitators are subscribing for the defense of a cold-blooded murderer, O'Donnell. The editor of the Irish World in New York has collected $6,000 and expects to glean possibly $50,000 from Irish pockets. Enthusiasts in this business believe that not less than $100,000 will be spent in O'Donnell's defense. What can better show the infatuation of Irish-Americans, or what more logical proof of the evil counsels they are following? A man who confesses the crime of assassination and criminates his confederates is shot for the act to avenge it as a crime against Ireland; and now his countrymen in America rise up with a unanimous demand for his acquittal, and are willing to spend $100,000 to secure it. Next year when famine's work begins again will they contribute a penny? There is, too, something to dread in all this clannishness on the part of men who have given their allegiance to our government. Suppose the Germans, the Welsh, the Swedes should encourage in the same way foreign agitation and strife. Or, what should prevent any of these nationalities from turning against the government which has given them a shelter and a home at the command of demagogues who may get control of their prejudice and sympathy?

What is being done in your town for the TEN THOUSAND Cynosure subscribers?

SECRETISM IN RUSSIA.

BY REV. JOHN BOYES.

We need not wonder at the numerous publications issuing from the press on the subject of Russia, now that the coronation of the Czar has been effected so successfully. Perhaps the most opportune is the work of M. Stepniak which appears under the title of "Underground Russia". This gives a needed insight to the secret doings or rather idlings and vaporings of the Nihilists. The book is the work of a thinker and is of great value as showing the hopelessness of any secret organization in securing for a nation political enfranchisement. The conspirators are regarded as half-educated fanatics, who have no definite aim, or who aim at the most impractical things—for reading the doings of such agitators as Jessy Helfman the poor Jewess, the mentally deranged Perovskaia, the heroic but unpractical Zera Zassulic, and the great attitudiniers as Stefanovic, Ossinsky and Krapotkine, we are led to ask what they are doing toward giving to Russia a healthy social and political life? Are they not really standing by their extravagances in the way of the attainment of true freedom? We look in vain through the whole range of history for a single instance where underhand and isolated conspiracies have resulted in infusing regenerating ideas into a community. All the attempt at murder, whether of police officials or a Czar, cannot lead to the reformation of a nation, and especially such a nation as Russia. The most rudimentary attempts at educating the young would be more effective in securing the final elevation of a people than all the heroic proclamations and the useless terrorism of the Nihilists. History, which gives a faithful record of human success and failure, ought to teach the Russian conspirators, that the most powerful secret organization that Europe ever witnessed, did nothing beyond raising up an Imperator who ruled with the same autocratic will as the Czar. It is evident from the statements of "Underground Russia" that the Russian nation takes no direct part in these revolutionary movements; but they are the work of an isolated few who are combined to carry out notions respecting which the people generally are unconcerned. One great and terrible thought forces itself upon us as we read its pages, respecting the mysterious sums of money that are coming to the revolutionists, without their knowledge of the source from which they come. It seems to us evident that these deluded patriots are but tools in the hands of a far more powerful and wealthy secret organization which rules deeper than underground. There is some power that keeps hold both on governors and revolutionaries. It is somewhat suggestive that the Nihilists are generally employed whenever the Imperial atmosphere is filled with liberal promises. Were revolutionary ideas to gain the ascendency the Nihilists, who are but the tools of this deeper power, would be swept away as hindrances to its purposes. The "secret police" seems to us the real curse of Russia and the feeder of all that is revolutionary. Secrecy has never yet won freedom for a nation, and if Russia gains it in this manner it will be the first instance of such a victory. The one and only true way to freedom is by the way of enlightenment, and does not come through the dramatic efforts of women and orators who can only speak when they see a crowd ready to listen to them, but through the gradual infusion and operation of Christian ideas.

Grimsby, England, Sept. 1883.

—Says the Christian Advocate: "Times change. There is a Bible-stand near the Piazza Sella Signoria, in Florence, where Savonarola was burned at the stake in 1498. A resident thus writes: 'The ashes of the celebrated Prior of S. Marco were thrown into the Arno, but the Word for which he and many others suffered is now being publicly sold midway between the stake and the river.'"

—The attempts to form Jewish colonies or settlements of immigrants in Palestine are generally not successful, the Jews not inclining toward agriculture. Dr. Schmidt, British Vice-Consul at Caiffa, Syria, writes that the Jewish colonists at Samaria, Palestine, are literally dying of starvation, and he pleads for relief. A similar telegram has reached England in regard to the colony at Rosh Pinah.

POLITICAL PRINCIPLES.

BY H. H. HINMAN.

The recent State political conventions in Massachusetts, New York, and Maryland show conclusively that bitter as is the antagonism of party leaders they are not divided on any living issues or contending for any important principles. Col. Codman in his address to the Republican convention in Massachusetts, said, "No national questions are now pressing for settlement, and that party lines as they now exist might soon become obliterated and political organizations be recast." This is obvious to all.

The last quarter century has been the most eventful in our national history. Questions that twenty-five years ago had not been raised have now been settled past peradventure. Other questions have been raised which approximate final settlement, and there are still others that are no near adjustment than at the beginning of that period. Of the first class are emancipation, civil rights, manhood suffrage, universal free common school education, and a circulating medium of uniform value. Of the second class are the policy of peace with and education for the Indians, national aid for education in the States in proportion to their illiteracy, civil service reform and State and national prohibition. Of the third class are woman suffrage, the rights of labor and capital, the tariff, the tolerance of secret orders, the protection of our Christian institutions, and the arbitration of international differences.

I desire to make some suggestions in reference to the labor question which now is receiving special attention from a committee of the U. S. Senate, and which is to be one of the most important in the civilized world.

The 13th Amendment of the Constitution makes all labor free, subject only to the great law of supply and demand. Were labor absolutely free this would be a final settlement. Among the obstacles to the success of free labor are:

1st. Combinations of laborers in the form of trades unions. These have sometimes increased the price but have greatly diminished the actual amount of labor, its actual gains, and the aggregate wealth, both of the employers, but also of the laboring class. No class has suffered so much from strikes as the members of trades unions that have resorted to them. Millions of dollars have been annually lost by those least able to bear the burden, and rarely has there been any resulting advantage. There has been, too, a sacrifice of individual freedom on the part of every member of such union. He could not make any contract with his employer except with the consent of the union, nor could he continue to labor if they required him to cease. Nor does the tyranny stop with the order; non-union men are put under practical compulsion to join these unions or be in perpetual warfare with them. Intimidation, crime and murder are most common occurrences growing out of these combinations.

Nor has the evil influences of these combinations stopped here. The relations of labor and capital which ought to be harmonious have become antagonistic. Combinations of laborers have led to corresponding combinations and exactions on the part of employers, and so has tended to promote and perpetuate the very evil against which these unions were organized to contend. Scarcely any department of business in the cities, the mining and manufacturing districts but has come under the control of these unions. Here in Washington every negro hod carrier belongs to his union, and works or plays at its absolute dictation. This is doubtless something better than absolute slavery, but far short of real freedom. Unquestionably the amount of labor, of wages, and of aggregate wealth would have been far greater if these trades unions had not been, and the best interests of the laborer demand their suppression, or, at least that their meetings and doings be open to public inspection. This would not prevent the transaction of any business consistent with the public good, but would render practical conspiracies impossible.

But labor will never be truly free until all men are free to sell the products of their labor when and where they can sell them the best, and buy the products of other men's labor where they can buy them the cheapest. This is a natural right, and as inalienable as personal freedom in other respects. There are rights which belong to humanity, and over which no government has any legitimate control. Among these rights is that of the free interchange of the products of labor. There are duties which we owe to our fellow men, without regard to nationality, and from which no government can absolve us. Among these is that of according them a free market for such legitimate articles of commerce as they need to sell. There is really no such thing as over-production of any legitimate product of labor. The world needs all the grain and cattle which our nation can produce. It needs not less the products of our looms and mines. Whatever cheapens the price to the consumer will be a blessing to mankind. But it is the unnatural restrictions on commerce that cause local accumulations of certain products, great depression of price, reduction of wages, poverty of the laborer, and loss to the manufacturer.

The remedy is not in trades unions. They have not put a stop to exactions, poverty and suffering. Not in high tariffs, they have not prevented over-production, but rather stimulated it. The great depression in the iron interests from 1873 to 1878 was the result of over-production under a high protective tariff. But the remedy is a free interchange of commodities among nations. So long as we can make agricultural and mining machinery better than Mexico, and she can send us coffee, sugar and cochineal better than we can raise them, both countries will be greatly benefitted by the free interchange. Cheap Mexican labor will be for our benefit, while our manufacturing facilities would be a blessing to the Mexican laborer. Already the two nations are being bound together by bands of iron. Let these highways become free to all legitimate commerce, and they will bind us in perpetual peace.

The political party that demands freedom from all restrictions upon labor and its products will be the party (if any) that will secure peace on earth and good will to men.

WEEK-DAY SERMON.

BY E. E. FLAGG.

To say that God hears the sinner's prayer for pardon yet cannot or will not heal him of a physical infirmity if he ask in equal sincerity and faith, is about the same thing as to say that he is a God for the soul but not for the body. It is true that all nature being under a system of fixed laws disease does not come or go by chance or caprice. But is it only in this lower realm of sense that order and fixedness reigns? Is not the spiritual world governed by laws as fixed and immutable as any which control our bodies? Yet what would become of the poor, miserable, diseased soul that has broken every law of its spiritual being, if these laws could not be — not set aside, not annulled — but overborne by that other and higher law of grace which makes it whole? Which is the hardest thing for omnipotence to do, to heal a sick body or a sick soul? If our human weakness must make a distinction should we not say that spiritual healing, the pouring of new life into a soul paralyzed by pride and selfishness, atrophied by the lust for riches, or gangrened by some evil appetite or passion is a greater wonder than any miracle of bodily healing, inasmuch as it has to do with far more subtle and delicate agencies? Yet there are still many Christians who doubt the numerous instances of healing by the prayer of faith, and there are many more who fully believe in the reality of such things for others, but never, in their shrinking humility, for themselves. They mournfully tell you that they lack faith, yet they linger longingly over the story of the Syro-Phœnician woman; they read with wondering eagerness of Dorothea Trudell, and George Muller, and Dr. Cullis. If they only had this magic sesame which should open the gates of heaven and rain down blessings on themselves and others! But is not faith like a grain of mustard seed — a growing thing? And have we not all read of the tiny rootlet that grew and grew till it lifted a rock of many tons weight?

Mrs. F. told me an experience of hers the other day, for she is one who is always having "experiences." I do not mean that any life can be lived altogether without them; it is the recognition, the very pressure of the Giver's hand felt along with the gift that makes one Christian so much richer than another in these same "experiences."

"My husband left me well provided for," she began; "but my son in Kansas has the managing of my property, and when I want money I get my daughter to write and he sends it to me. But a few weeks ago I got clear out. I was without a cent, and no one to write for me. My daughter was too hurried to attend to it, and almost sick with household cares and anxieties. Now it always worries me if I can't pay my board bill every Saturday night, and meet every little item of expense at the moment it is incurred. Then it came into my mind, Why not ask the Lord to move Aaron to send me what I want without writing? I did so. I cast all my care on the Lord, and thought no more about my empty purse. A week passed, and then came a letter from Aaron enclosing a fifty dollar check, sent without the least knowledge of my pressing need. Oh,"—and her sightless face grew radiant—"it may seem a little thing, but now that God has answered me so wonderfully in a small blessing, I feel more faith to ask a great one!"

Dear friend, do you desire some great thing of the Lord yet lack the faith to pray for it? Try him first by asking a little blessing. Like the common barnyard fowl to which we scatter crumbs or corn our spirits get an attitude of expectancy when we pray for help to bear some petty daily cross, for ease from the small worry or perplexing burden, and receive it. Faith comes to be the natural habit of the soul; and by and by when a precious life trembles in the balance, or some sore malady invades your own clay tabernacle you will find that your faith is strong enough for this greater demand upon it—strong enough to wrestle with the angels of pain and death, and prevail.

ARE YOU A CHRISTIAN?

BY E. RONAYNE.

Are you a Christian? Because, if you are not, your opposition to lodge religion and lodge worship, if made a virtue, is simply a delusion and a snare. Perhaps you are religious. You may have some sort of a form of family worship; you may possibly read your Bible semi-occasionally, as one might say; you may be even a class-leader or Sunday school teacher or even a preacher of the Gospel so-called, but are you a Christian in the true and scriptural sense of that word? In these "perilous times" of "the last days" amid so much glare and glitter and excitement and confusion, when many churches are, as it were, vying with the theaters on every return of the Lord's day as to which can make the most noise with their wind instruments, and when often the dressed out clerical in the pulpit is just as noisy and as empty as the organ which furnishes the music for the man-made arrangement, it would be well for every reader of this paper to pause just for a moment and ask the question as in the presence of the living God, "Am I a Christian?" "Have I peace with God?" (Rom. 5:1.) "And if so how did I become a Christian and how did I obtain that peace?" This question is of the deepest and the most solemn importance and ought to be attended to without the delay of a single moment.

But some one will ask me "What is it to be a Christian?" Well, friend, I shall try to answer from God's Word, and may the Holy Spirit abundantly bless his own precious truth to your soul even while you read.

Some thirty years ago when engaged with several others in mission work among the Roman Catholics of the south of Ireland, the sixth chapter of John's gospel was almost constantly under discussion in connection with the Romish doctrine of transubstantiation. The church of Rome teaches, and every true Roman Catholic believes that when the priest pronounces the words hoc est enum corpus meum, over the bread and wine, it is no longer bread and wine but the substance of it is changed into "the body and blood, soul and divinity, bones and sinews of the Lord Jesus Christ;" and this change of substance is called transubstantiation. Well, to prove this doctrine, if they can, John 6:51–57 is always quoted, and especial stress is laid upon verse 53: "Jesus said unto them, Verily, verily I say unto you, except ye eat the flesh of the Son of Man and drink his blood ye have no life in you." Now while this verse, and in fact this whole chapter of the sixth of John has not the remotest allusion to the Lord's Supper or to the idolatrous worship of the Romish mass, yet it tells you in most unmistakable terms how you are to be a Christian, how you are to receive "eternal life." The Lord Jesus has plainly declared, "Except"—mark that word "except"—"Except ye eat the flesh of the Son of Man and drink his blood ye have no life in you. He uttered these words to the unsaved multitude, to those who were dead in trespasses and sins and they were positively assured by the divine lips of the Son of God that there was no possible way in which they could receive "eternal life" and be the children of God or Christ's ones (Christians), but by eating his flesh and drinking his blood.

Beloved reader, have you done this? Has your soul feasted upon the Lord Jesus Christ himself as that eternally Blessed One who has so glorified God in this terrible scene of sin and death, and finished that work which alone can save you? Have you eaten the flesh of the Son of Man and drank his blood? If not you have no life in you; you are merely a dead soul; you have never been born again. And remember this is God's testimony concerning you, not mine; and should you die as you are you would assuredly be in hell for all eternity with Masons and Odd-fellows and all other rejectors of Christ.

But you will ask me, how am I to eat the flesh of the Son of Man and to drink his blood? Listen: In John 1:10–13 the Holy Ghost says, "He [the Lord Jesus Christ] was in the world and the world was made by him and the world knew him not." Is not that wonderful? The world was so lost, so far away from God that it did not know its own Creator, and this is truly the condition of every unsaved soul to-day. "He came unto his own and his own received him not, but as many as received him to them gave he the right or privilege (margin) to become the sons of God, even to them that believe on his name, which were born .... of God." That is the way, beloved friend, you are to eat him; that is the way you are to feed upon his flesh and blood; to receive him as your own individual Saviour; to appropriate him to yourself as if there was not another single person but yourself in the whole world; to take your place as a lost, helpless, guilty sinner, and believe on him as having died for you individually, as having borne your sins in his own body on the tree (1 Peter 2:24; 1 Cor. 15:3) as the Apostle Paul expresses it. "The Son of God who loved me and gave himself for me." (Gal. 2:20.) When we eat and drink we make a personal application of the food to our own individual use—we receive it specially each one for himself and so in the same simple way the Lord Jesus tells us we must each one receive him. Not receive a doctrine, not believe about him but receive himself, believe IN him as your own personal Saviour. Remember what he said, "Except ye eat the flesh of the Son of Man and drink his blood ye have no life in you." And so the Holy Ghost in 1 John 5:12 most beautifully declares, "He that hath the Son hath life." Not he that hath religion or has joined the church, but "he that hath the Son."

Have you the Son, dear friend? Have you accepted Christ yet? "God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son." John 3:16. Have you yet received God's unspeakable gift? Can you from the heart say with the Apostle, "Thanks be unto God for his unspeakable gift," 2 Cor. 9:15. If you cannot truthfully say this, how much better are you than a Freemason or Odd-fellow? And notice again that "he that hath the Son hath life." Not he hopes to have life, or he strives to have it, or he'll have it if he does the best he can, but he hath it already, has it now at this present moment and has it forever, for "we are members of his body, of his flesh and of his bones." Eph. 5:30. Have you ever in your life as a lost, hell-deserving sinner received the Lord Jesus Christ as your own? Then if you have "all is yours," all that God has, all that Christ has. You are an heir of God and a joint heir with Christ. Rom. 8:17. You are a Christian, but if you have not received Christ himself personally you have nothing.

THE EDUCATING POWER OF SECRET LODGES.

The lodge exercises an educating power over its members. The oaths, ceremonies, charges and lectures; the monitors, manuals, lexicons and histories — all these exert an influence upon the lives and characters of men, which must be considered in all our calculations upon the moral factors of society. Without being aware of it men who go into these lodges will be influenced more or less by what is there said and done. To analyze this educating power would be no small task, but a few obvious facts lie on the surface and may be seen by all.

A man learns that secret combinations are worthy methods for running human affairs. If he adheres to his lodge this lesson will be deeply impressed upon him and must sooner or later become an active principle in all his operations. The art of concealing his true intentions becomes second nature to him. The idea that truth will bear an open conflict, that justice can triumph without intrigue, that frankness is a virtue, that sincerity is laudable, that true courage scorns the ambush, gives place to secret methods and selfish combinations. He concludes that if one set of men can secretly gain the advantage over another set it is a triumph of superior prowess and is praiseworthy.

This is the foundation principle of all "rings." In business one set of men combine to control the market. Their league is secret. In politics a few men set on foot some scheme for their own enrichment, Credit-Mobilier, Star-route, or Stalwartism — it is all the same. A few men secretly conspire against the public interest. If the lessons of the secret lodges are correct they have a right to do so and any attempt to punish such "conspiracies" is persecution. The men who carry on these combinations are first thoroughly schooled in the lodges. They learned their secrecy there. They learned there the principle "You help me and I'll help you."

Now it happens that these rings disturb our business interests and endanger the Republic more than all things else. We have nothing to fear in the open issues of politics. But the under-currents of selfish combinations are a continual menace. We must hold the secret lodges responsible for this. They are ingraining these methods into the characters of our citizens. They furnish the model for every "ring" and give facility for its use. There is no escape from this conclusion. The writer recently attended a Republican caucus. Men wearing the badges of secret lodges came with plans "cut and dried" to run the caucus. Each man of the ring had his part assigned and was prepared to fulfill it. As there was no opposition in this case the people ratified each move and went home thankful for the rights of freemen, supposing they had again enjoyed their sovereign privilege when in fact they had only reinstated a "ring."

The effect of this method is to destroy all confidence. Men do not know whom to trust. They soon become suspicious that every move is in the interest of some clan and that they are certain to be fleeced whatever else happens. When confidence is gone anarchy follows, and hard upon the heels of anarchy will follow despotism. The man who trades with a neighbor and is repeatedly deceived soon distrusts his neighbor. The people who vote for parties pledged to certain principles only to be betrayed by their rulers will soon despise all parties and all government.

Open societies, the honest avowal of righteous principles and courageous adherence to them, honor, frankness, sincerity, truth — these are essential to the existence of the Republic. The substitution of secrecy, rings and clans will hasten our downfall.

TRADE UNIONS.

Every one admits that working-men are entitled to combine for the promotion of their mutual interests. Such organization as will enable them to act together when occaion arises, and thus enable them to exert a greater influence upon the labor market than they could do individually, is often their only means of counterbalancing the undue influence of large capital. It is clearly within their right to strike at their option and when they believe the advantages to be gained by so doing will be greater than the disadvantages. Whenever such a strike is conducted within the law, and for the redress of undeniable wrongs, as in the case of the telegraph operators, it may count upon public sympathy, even when it causes grave public inconvenience.

But, unfortunately, trade unions, as a rule, cannot be considered a benefit to the men composing them, and the strikes they precipitate entail, in one way or another, far more loss than gain. In too many cases the leaders of the unions are men who claim salaries because they are "black-listed" and hence cut off from employment, and who when thus receiving salaries, naturally want to appear to be doing something to earn them. In this way they are led into meddlesome interference between men and their employers, and into ordering strikes without rightful occasion. Men who are contented with their pay are obliged to strike at the bidding of leaders whom they have bound themselves to obey, and whose personal interest is not identical with that of the strikers. Some of the rules of the unions are unreasonable and detrimental to the interests of the community, such as that limiting the number of apprentices, and that requiring employers to hire all union hands or none. When strikes occur, the men often lapse into intemperance and habits of idleness, and resort to illegal violence. Even when they succeed, they generally do so at the expense of more money in wages lost than they can make up in months, if not years.

Nothing is more certain to give trade unions a bad name than such unwarrantable conduct as that of the Builders' Trade Union in this city. This union appoints a committee to visit buildings in process of erection; if this committee finds non-union men at work, it tries to intimidate them into joining the union on pain of loss of employment, and then it tells the contractors that they must cease using non-union men or there will be a strike. These contractors have figured closely, and cannot afford to pay all hands union figures; and perhaps they are bound to finish the structure by a certain date, and cannot incur interruption. For example, the contractors erecting the new opera-house were under bonds to have it ready by October 2, or forfeit $1,000 a day after that. They had to yield. It is not claimed that the men in the building trades are not well paid and well treated. It is not clear that employers can afford to pay more. The tactics of the Builders' Union may not be illegal, but they are so ill-advised and tyrannical as to merit public condemnation. Workingmen should keep their eyes open. Capital is not the despotism they have most to fear.—N. Y. Witness.

THE SHUT-IN BAND.

In many families into which the Cynosure goes are those who belong to the "Shut-in Band." By those I mean those whom disease has shut in between the four walls, and shut out from the active duties and enjoyments of life. Now how much those dear ones need comfort, only those who have suffered in like manner can have any idea, and cannot the Cynosure let fall from its table some crumbs of comfort especially for them?

In looking over its pages, I find very, very little to reach the longing heartache peculiar to the life of an invalid. I enclose a few stanzes that I think may comfort some one of the suffering "Shut-in's" who read the Cynosure.

DRIFTING AWAY.

Is it death to leave the dusty road which our weary feet must tread, and rest in the green pastures and beside the still waters of God?

Drifting away from the old to the new,
Drifting away from the false to the true,
Drifting away from the low to the high,
Drifting away to the "sweet by-and-by."

Drifting away from the friends of the past,
From friendships, wanting in strength to last,
Drifting away from cloud and storm,
Into a haven sunny and warm.

Drifting away from darkness and night,
Into the radiance of heavenly light—
Away from the world, its cares and unrest,
To the peaceful, restful home of the blest.

Drifting away, aye, slowly but sure,
Nearing the holy, the peaceful and pure;
Drifting away in the current of time,
Nearing the isles of a happier clime.

Drifting! Not drifting, for One's at the wheel,
Who quiets the winds and the waves as he will;
With me he'll abide until life's journey o'er,
My life-boat is landed on heaven's blest shore.

And the ear hath not heard, nor the eye ever seen,
Nor the heart ever thought of the joys there, I ween;
Where all shall be banished for heaven unmeet,
And naught shall be wanting to make bliss complete.

MASONIC INCIDENTS.

BY BISHOP J. DICKSON, D. D.

I was traveling on the train some time ago, and a gentleman, representing himself to be from Kansas, sat in the seat in front of me. He was somewhat loquacious, which is apt to imply a shallow brain. He was full of Masonic greatness, such as it is, and like many others of the white-apron fraternity, spoke as among its many excellences of its great antiquity. He forgot that old Apollyn is himself quite hoary with years. He asked me if I did not know that John the Baptist was a Freemason? I told him I did not, and in return asked him where in the Bible he got that information That was a stumper. I then asked him in what profane history he found it. That was as much a stumper as the other. His only reply was that it was found in the Masonic books. Wonderful, is it not? But he was not satisfied. "You know," said he, "that Solomon was a Mason—that he is the author of the system." I did not know that either. "All the great men of antiquity," he continued, "were Masons. Noah and Abraham were Masons." Why, I said, how can that be? You just now said that Solomon was the author of Masonry, and these men lived centuries before his time. He had no reply to make, and seemed content to drop the subject. This was, seemingly, a man of average intelligence. But the dumb Masons do not all live in Kansas. I have been astonished to find what ignorance of their own system prevails among them.

I was conversing with a minister not long since, and he told me that for two reasons he could not be a Mason. The one was that a brother minister once told him that he was going to join the fraternity to ascertain for himself what is in it, remarking at the same time that if he found it to be bad he would quit it. He did so, and told the brother that he had quit it forever, finding it to be no place for a Christian. The other was that of a prominent Mason, a man of general influence. When he came to his death-bed he sent for his brother, and requested that he should officiate at his funeral, saying he wanted no Masonic ceremonies, and would not allow it. He then sent for his own preacher, who was also a Mason, and told him what he had done, and the Masonic preacher had to acquiesce. The first preacher, one of our own ministers, (the brother who related this to me, and no fanatic, either,) attended the funeral, and no Masonic nonsense was allowed. And some people think the United Brethren church is narrow because it excludes by law this blasphemous twaddle from its pale. My judgment is, we had better keep all the devil out of the church we can. If this cannot be done by mild, persuasive means, then resort, as we have done before, to something else. "Peaceably if we can, forcibly if we must."—Telescope.

The little things which you may do for those about you will fall back upon your heart as the summer dews fall upon the vineyards. What if it is nothing but a kind word to a schoolboy crying in the street; it dries his tears, and the aching heart grows light and glad again. Who knows what cloud of darkness one kind work may dispel?

SHALL WE EXCLUDE ADHERING MASONS FROM CHURCH FELLOWSHIP?

[By the Editor of the Cynosure in the Interior.]

The Christians of this country are divided on this question, and its discussion is widening and deepening. I congratulate the readers of the Interior, not only for the general excellence of their paper, but that its editor utters himself distinctly on a question whose importance cannot be easily over-estimated, since the lodge encircles our globe.

It is far less wonderful that good men should differ on the above question than that they should have differed concerning the justice of holding slaves—the plainest question ever submitted to the human mind. Yet good men differ on the question of two men, one black and the other white—which owned, by the law of God, the black body? The good men who have been drawn blindfold into the lodge, then remaining after knowing its interior—the just abhorrence of bigotry, and dread of adopting too narrow views of the Supper commemorating the death of Christ, with manifold other reasons—make it no surprising thing that men should hesitate to insist on a complete divorce of the lodge from the Church of Christ. But, above all, the fallacy which clouds the question is the chief shelter of Masonic fellowship.

Freemasons are excluded from communion, in theory, by much more than one-half the professed Christians of the United States. But we do not exclude them because they are Masons, but for contumacy in adhering to the lodge, after loving labor. The question is stated and discussed as if the secret orders were excommunicated by sections, or in the mass, as all unclean. But, instead of this, we receive Masons who seem to be Christians; listen to their experiences in Christ, and treat them with courtesy and consideration proportioned to the evidence they give of being children of God. But if they are living in practices plainly and positively subversive of the Christian religion, we endeavor to convince them, and, failing in this, we ask them to wholly refrain from the lodge, as Paul refrained from meat, as an offence to the brethren "while the world stands."

Now, if the lodge be such subversion; if organized deism, caste, false worship, contempt of Christ's example against secrecy, false history, profane oaths, setting at naught human law, and converting God's laws into lodge laws so as to protect only Masons by them—(for all these things can be proved); but above all, if the secret lodge-system is a substitute for the atonement, making false promises of salvation; if, in short, it is the rival of the church and the antagonist of Christ; then adhering to the lodge is, "in works," denying Christ, and must be excluded from his church.

AUTHORITY.

The Presbytery of Chillicothe, Ohio, April, 1831.

Resolved, That in deciding on applications for membership and in watching over those who are already members in the Presbytery, we will consider connection with a Masonic fraternity unlawful and inexpedient.

The Synod of Cincinnati, in October, 1831,

Resolved, That in the opinion of this Synod, a connection with the Masonic Institution should not be countenanced as consistent with Christianity.

In that Synod were Drs. Joshua L. Wilson, Sam'l. Carothers, the three Dickeys, Rankin, Fullerton, Gillcland, et. al., who, for cool judgment, sound doctrine, aud solid worth, have never been excelled. Dr. N. S. S. Beman, one of the mightiest minds in the whole Presbyterian connection, said to the writer: "No, I never could endure Freemasonry! It attempts to revive the old shams of king-craft and priest-craft which have cursed the world too long alrcady."

And, five years before Masons murdered Morgan, Charles G. Finney was converted in a Presbyterian revival, in Jefferson county, N. Y. He was then a Master Mason. He said to me, in relating his conversion, "As soon as I was converted to Christ my moral nature loathed it, and I went to the lodge and demanded my discharge." His life-long, burning testimony against the whole lodge system is well known. This testimony began five years before political Anti-masonry had birth. Presbyterians, Baptists, Methodists, Congregationalists, Lutherans, Mennonites, United Brethren, Friend Quakers and others are now living, who have been entrapped in lodges, and who renounce and confirm the testimony of Mr. Finney.

We hold that they are right for a myriad of reasons.

1. The lodge is Gentile worship (see Moses, Deut. 32: 17, and Paul, 1 Cor. 10:20) and so demon-worship; and its perpetrators were executed under the Old Testament, and disfellowship under the New. Deut. 13:6 and Eph. 5:11 and 1 Cor. 10:14. He that hath a strange worship hath a strange god. The absence of Asiatic idols from lodges does not change the nature of the worship. Society Islanders had no visible idols; yet they were all idolators. But Masons worship the "Master," and their tools of incantation.

2. A Masonic writer calls Masonry "The Modern Eleusinia," or The Eleusinian Mysteries modernized. Warburton (see Macknight on the Epistles) shows that "the unfruitful works of darkness" (Eph. 5:11) were those mysteries which Christ, by Paul, commands to disfellowship. To disfellowship "works," is to disfellowship those who do them; that is, Freemasons. The proofs are superabundant that those mysteries were Masonic. Like Masonry, they blinded and tamed the candidate; filled him with "horror;" took him through "darkness to light;" and pretended to restore him to God! One system is a moral transcript and copy of the other. To forbid fellowshipping one, is to forbid fellowshipping the other. God, by Paul, forbids one; therefore he forbids both. Therefore we must disfellowship adhering Masons or disobey God.

3. Masonry is identical with the world-worship called in the Old Testament "abominations." Every grove of Greece and hill-top of Palestine became a brothel and place of assignation, making night hideous with the shrilling shouts of female Bacchantes, and worshipers of Tammuz.

The whole mischief is done when the false worship cuts the soul loose from the true God, and gives it up to the invisible embrace of Satan. It leaves it a rolling thing before the whirlwinds of animal passion. Of course, the nation runs down. There is nothing left to swear a witness by, but hobgoblin oaths; and nothing to enforce them but the vengeance of the clan.

4. But the lodge must be cast out of the church because it is Christ's rival and antagonist; promising salvation by Masonry. The proof is superabundant. The book which is authority in all the lodges says:

"The initiation (of Apprentices) is a type of the new life:" "He stands without our portals in darkness, helplessness and ignorance, seeking the new birth." "Initiation is, as it were, a death to the world, and resurrection to a new life." "The world is left behind. . . . and Masonry stands before the Neophyte, to be revealed to him only when the new birth has been completely accomplished." Then follows a Christless prayer, asking wisdom for the candidate; "that he may, by the secrets of our art, be better enabled to display the beauties of godliness," etc. And, in the Master's degree, the salvation is complete: "The Master Mason represents a man saved from the grave of iniquity and raised to the faith of salvation." Mac. Rit. pp. 20–24 and 109.

These are but an introductory sketch of facts and arguments, showing, as by a shower of sunbeams, in the words of the Synod of Cincinnati, that Masonry is incousistent with Christianity, and therefore adhering Masons must be excluded from the church of Christ.

We, and our children and children's children must live under the same institutions in this country. There are not two interests on the subject of secret societies, and when the facts are put before the Ameriean people, good men will have but one opinion concerning them.

PREPARATIONS IN INDIANA.

Sept. 21st, 1883.

Dear friends in Indiana to the front. I am on my way to our annual meeting. I have been stopping along the route, and find the friends greatly encouraged in this work in the fields over which I have traveled and worked, in Central Indiana for the last seven years. I find not less than thirty appointments awaiting me. The people are in earnest, the cause is gaining, the forces weakening; let us to the work, the cause must be sustained. The outlook is for a good meeting at Oakland City. Come! come! come! in the name of the Lord. Our Executive Committee requests all who cannot come to send a contribution, it will be reported every cent to the meeting and your letters read if you wish it. Good speakers will be there, among whom I understand Rev. J. P. Stoddard, Revs. Gordon and Martin and we believe many others in the south part of the State. At Oakland you need have no fear you will meet a hearty welcome. You who cannot come will save something and help the cause by counting up the fare and then sending the half of what it would cost you. My friends, in order to prosecute this work your co-operation is an absolute necessity; we all have a work to do, if we cannot drive the sickle we can gather up the sheaves. If you wish to send contributions I will say that it is not yet certain that our treasurer can be there, you may address to me and every cent shall be reported to the meeting and to Treasurer Benjamin Ulsh.

Respectfully, S. L. Cook.

Oakland City, Gibson Co., from Oct. 10th to 20th.

FROM THE GENERAL AGENT.

Cleveland, O., Sept. 20th. 1883.

The monotony of to-day's journeying has been relieved by conversation with an elderly gentleman by the name of J. C. Drake, who, with his sister was on the way from Eastern New York to visit friends in the West. At one time in his life he made up his mind to join the Freemasons. The lodge was in a neighboring town and "benevolently" offered to initiate him for $3.00. Rigging up in in his Sunday best he drove over to the town where the ceremony was to transpire, and having securely fastened his team repaired to the store over which the lodge met. While waiting for the lodge to open several of the brethren came to the store in such a state of intoxication that Mr. Drake became suspicious that he was in danger of unpleasaut and unprofitable contact with men of the "baser sort," and concluded to go no further. Thus by obtaining a glimpse of the inside before taking the mystic bond he escaped what he has since looked upon as an institution dangerous to the morals and personal habits of its members and a curse to all who feel its influence. Among his acquaintances was a devout and successful minister who after repeated solicitations felt strongly inclined to join. But not feeling quite satisfied to take a "leap in the dark," he took the precaution to secure a position where he could see the men who went in and then waited until they came out, and from the well-known habits of the men who composed the lodge and from the condition in which they appeared on retiring, Rev. Mr. Palmer concluded that it was no place for a "total abstainer" or a Christian, as he would find very few in sympathy with his views and the prospect for making converts was not, in his judgment, very hopeful. The example of these two brethren deserves commendation, and if copied would deter many from taking the first step that leads to ruin.

Sept. 22d, 1883.

We have just crossed the Illinois river, passed "Pearl Station," and our express train is dashing over the steel rails of the Chicago & Alton R. R. on its way to Kansas City. After occupying a "car chair" for the night and partaking of a square meal at the square price of seventy-five cents, in the hotel attached, I have read over the letters that awaited me on my arrival at Chicago yesterday, and am thinking what next. I would like to reply to Bro. Capwell, Bro. Elliott and the letters of others, but the situation is not favorable to correspondence. If I succeed in making characters intelligent to the ingenious compositor I shall do well. I trust the brethren will exercise patience, and I know they will when I tell them that for four consecutive nights I have not occupied a bed or berth or slept save as I could "catch a nap on a fly." I hope by a forced march to reach Topeka before noon today, but should I be compelled to stop over Sabbath in Kansas City I will try and write a few letters before Sabbath begins.

My Eastern trip was made hastily, but will, I trust, result in good to the cause. The principal points visited were, Washington, D. C., New York city twice, Willimantic, Putman, Conn, Worcester, Mass., Syracuse, N. Y., and Oberlin, Ohio. In Washington I met Bros. Hinman, Ford, Bowes, and Dr. Bread, and spent three days looking after the interests of the N. C. A.; in New York ex-Senator Pomeroy, Thos. and Charles White; in Willimantic Bros. Barlow, Conant, Smith and many others. At Worcester a number gathered for conference at the office of the N. E. Board. At Syracuse I had a conference with Bro. Wardner about time, place and manner of New York State Meeting. At Oberlin I spent three hours enjoying the Christian counsels and hospitalities of Bros. Clark and Burr. Leaving on the 8:15 P. M. train I reached Chicago a little the worse for wear. Yesterday morning finding that some expected to be at the Kansas meeting were detained I am pushing on hoping to supply in part the deficiency at Topeka, and to reach Sparta, Ill., in time to greet the brethren in annual counsel.

Our train has just struck the Missouri shore and we are now, 12:30 P. M. at the town of Lousiana on the west bank of the father of waters where I drop this in the office. J. P. S.

East St. Louis, Sept. 27th.—Kansas Convention closed last evening with a grand success from first to last. Bro. Starry was at his best, the Senate chamber was filled including the galaries, and I never saw the third degree given with better effect. At the close, a geutleman accepting a general invitation for any one to make remarks, stepped forward and after stating that he was made a Mason in Ohio, complimented Bro. Starry very highly and confirmed the perfect accuracy of his work. The craft was out in force and up to this time observed excellent order. At this point their determination or discretion gave way and a somewhat tumultuous scene ensued, but nobody was "put out" or injured, so far as I have learned. Some to whom such "confirmations" of the work are not common were slightly nervous, but there were too many "John Brown" men and women there to be an easy crowd to scare. It reminded me of Boston for a few moments, but subsided much sooner. I left Topeka at 2:30 this A. M. and am detained for a train to Sparta until to-morrow A. M., which place I hope to reach and greet the brethren in convention assembled before they take a recess for dinner. J. P. Stoddard.

A VIRGINIA VISIT.

Portsmouth, Va., Sept. 25, 1883.

Dear Cynosure:—I left Washington yesterday at 5 P. M. It had rained hard all day, but the weather bureau said it would be fair from the south. The Lady of the Lake, a fine steamer, carries passengers 160 miles to Norfolk for half a dollar, and I woke up this morning finding that we were gliding into Hampton Roads under a clear sky and amidst a multitude of sailing craft coming from Baltimore, Norfolk and other ports.

Soon we were opposite the Rip Raps and presently were tying to the wharf at Old Point Comport. A ten cent hack took me three miles to the Hampton Institute and Indian Training school. Here during the past year 110 of the Indian and 400 of the negro race were educated and trained in industrial pursuits. A large share have remained during the vacation, and the fine farm, planing mill and other shops have been kept in operation.

I found Gen. Armstrong away, the school not yet open, and no opportunity for doing more than leave a quantity of tracts for distribution. I was received kindly by those in charge and thanked for an article for their paper, the Southern Workman.

While there they were burying in the National Cemetery the 5647th soldier. He was one of the 1200 in the Soldiers' Home at Hampton. I also visited Fortress Monroe, the strongest fortification in America, and saw the great 15-inch guns which weigh from 60 to 80 tins. There are a little less than 400 officers and men in the fort, which encloses about 45 acres of land, and in the center of which there is a grove of Live Oaks. This probably is the northern limit of their growth. They are not the grand trees that grow along the Gulf, and I was only surprised to see them at all. I ate also some very fine figs just picked at Hampton. The soil about Hampton is excellent. There is a church in the village made from bricks brought from England in 1650, but the native people seem thriftless and can be almost always be seen driving about little one-ox-carts; doubtless the sad heritage of slavery.

At 4:30 I took the steamer for Norfolk and stopped on the Portsmouth side. They just erected here a fine granite monument to "Our Confedesate Dead," which shows that the people have more energy thau is indicated by the general outlook.

NORFOLK AND PORTSMOUTH.

Here is probably the finest harbor on the Atlantic coast and one of the most important of the ports for the exportation of cotton. Norfolk has a population of 26,188; Portsmouth and Barkly, which ought to be included in the same city, have together about half as many. There are in Norfolk twenty-six white and twelve colored churches, and thirty-seven secret lodges. In Portsmouth the proportion is about the same. Most of the colored pastors are Masons. The only minister I found who has an intelligent sympathy with our reform is Rev. M. Clarke of Norfolk, formerly of Pittsburg, Pa., who, with his wife and two assistants, has established a mission school supported by the United Presbyterian Board. They have but recently commenced their work and have under instruction over 500 pupils, who are taught one-half in the forenoon and the other half in the afternoon. I visited their schools and was impressed with the fact that it is truly a missionary field. He reports about 3,000 colored children in Norfolk for whose education the city makes no provision. They all seem eager to learn, and Mr. Clarke informs me that they have not been able to admit nearly all who have applied.

I visited two colored pastors in Portsmouth, one of whom, Rev. J. M. Armistead, is the editor of the Virginia Baptist, a well conducted weekly paper. He told me he was a Mason, but said he had not been in a lodge for three years. He promised to read and consider the subject. Rev. A. C. Lewis is pastor of a church of about 400 members; is not a member of any secret society, and not in favor of them. He invited me to address his congregation at some future time.

I visited the old cemetery in Norfolk and saw gravestones dating from 1673 and 1687. There were quite a number that were over a hundred years old. I visited also the Portsmouth Navy-yard, which was turned over to the confederacy, and where the Merrimac was built. The great buildings seemed scantily manned and remarkably quiet. May they ever remain so.

I was shown through the torpedo gunboat Alarm with its single brass 16-inch gun, its water-tight compartments, and torpedoes—a most singular craft.

May the 16th we began a general canvass of Page county, Iowa, and Atchison county, Missouri. Upwards of thirty lectures have been given, some forty thousand pages of Anti-literature has been distributed in the villages and through the country and a general interest awakened. Men talk Freemasonry everywhere, the little boys toss the signs and hawk its sacred pass-words on every street, ministers thunder their anathemas against it from the pulpit and the local press has been compelled to speak out pro or con. The Anti-churches have been booked, outspoken Americans listed and their names enrolled for future reference, with other matters of interest looked into. The expenses have been readily met and everything in this preliminary but necessary work omens greater success in the near future. Although entering the field a stranger and working as a forerunner yet we are proud of the noble men who have given us aid and good cheer. For them we have conceived the highest regard and esteem. They are God's noblemen. As to the general public where we have labored it is intelligence and refinement in every sense of the term. The strong American sentiment has to a great extent put a curb on the subsidized Masonic press. Some individuals, true to their lodge instincts, have soundly denounced the truth and its friends, but for the most part our work, although arduous at times, has nevertheless been pleasant and has taught us the better use of facilities. Profiting by the experiences of the past we hope to do more effective work in the future.—M. N. Butler in the Albany Freeman.

CORRESPONDENCE.

FROM THE SON OF GOVERNOR RITNER.

Mt. Rock, Pa. Sept. 18th, 1883.

Editor Christian Cynosure;

Dear Brother:—I have had a very busy summer on the farm and when I had a little leisure was too tired to write with comfort or satisfaction. The Cynosure [of August] came to hand all right. There are two small errors in the sketch. My father's birth place is now included in the limits of the city of Reading, (Berks county); and it was my father's younger brother, Peter Ritner, who was with General Scott at Bridgewater and Lundy's Lane. I am sorry that my bungling way of telling things should have led you into these errors. With these exceptions, the sketch is correct.

You ask whether I am afraid of the lodge? My answer is most emphatically no. In my humble sphere I have never let an opportunity pass to denounce the institution as "the sum of all villanies." And with God's help shall continue to do so. But my field I know is a narrow one, and all that I can do or say will have little influence in the great battle which you and your associates are waging. I pray that the church of Christ may not become obnoxious to the curse pronounced against "Meroz and the inhabitants thereof." It needs to be roused to a sense of duty; and if you can induce Dr. Robinson to make a move at the next meeting of Synod, at Pittsburg, I shall be proud aud happy to add my feeble voice to sustain him in any movement he may inaugurate. I am delegate to Synod from our congregation, and hope to be able to attend the meeting in October.

I received a very kind letter from the office editor of the Cynosure some time ago. He requested me to give any further reminiscense of my father that I might think of.

I met an old gentleman, named John McCulloch, recently, a native of this county, residing at present in Greensburg, Westmoreland county, Pa. He told me that the first time he saw Joseph Ritner was when on a visit to Harrisburg, while he was Speaker of the House of Representatives. The subject before House was a law presented by a committee from the legislature of Virginia to facilitate the capture and return of fugitive slaves. The bill provided that any slave-owner coming into any county of the State, and notifying the sheriff of the county that he believed that his slave was in said county, the sheriff should then notify the constables of the several townships, whose duty it was to search the township and call for whatever aid was uecessary to arrest any fugitive slave when found; and any citizen refusing to assist when called on was made liable to fine and imprisonment.

When the bill came up in committee of the whole, several dough-faces spoke favorably of the bill and felt highly flattered with the politeness of the distinguished gentlemen from Virginia who had honored Pennsylvania by their visit, and hoped nothing would be said or done to wound their feelings. The Speaker called a member to the chair and took the floor in opposition to the bill. He was the first to stem the tide. He denounced the bill as wicked and unjust; and also the legislature of Virginia for their impudent attempt to dictate to Pennsylvania by sending a committee with a bill all ready framed for their action. He concluded by saying that they might pass the bill, but if he were fined to the extent of his property, and imprisoned to the end of his life, they never could make a slave-catcher of him.

This talk killed the bill, and the Virginians went home disappointed. So you see he refused to basely "bow the knee to the dark spirit of slavery" at an early day. * *

Whether we meet again on earth or not, rest assured of my highest consideration. With sincere prayers for your fullest success, I remain your brother in Christ.

Peter Ritner.

THE DOUBLE REIGN OF JESUITRY AND THE LODGE.

There is no other State which is so directly under the double influence of church-Jesuits and lodge-Jesuits as Louisiana. A party of Jesuits was sent from France to New Orleans the very same year that the Masonic lodge was first established, viz., in 1717. The consequence is that New Orleans is more of a Latin city than an American one. Jesuits and Freemasons have prevented the State from being American, though a very large majority of its people are of American origin.

It is in the school interests of Louisiana that one can trace the most disastrous consequences of Jesuitry. While immense sums are expended in the State for Mardi Gras and Masonic lodge demonstrations, so poor is the provision for education that all public schools outside of the cities will have to be shut up, it is said, for want of funds.

Of the three hydra heads of the rebellion, Richmond, Charleston and New Orleans, the latter was the most spiteful, though the least effective, because of its energies having been more weakened by the doubly drugged doses from the lodge and the confessional. Its hiss was sharp, though its bite was weak. Freemason Butler merely trifled with it. A 33d degree Mason will never hurt Freemasonry nor the confessional. American.

CONCERNING A MISTAKE.

AN OPEN LETTER TO ELD. A. L. POST.

My dear brother:—I am sorry that I have been obliged, for so long a time, to defer an explanation of my connection with the so-called "mistake" alluded to in the Cynosure of June 29, 1882. But I have been obliged to it only from continued ill health; and for the same reason I can say but a few words now, and perhaps the fewer the better.

The Cynosure of the above date, under the head of corrections said this:

"The Cynosure of June 15th stated that Rev. A. D. Lowe was 'on the editorial staff with Wareham Walker and Dr. Nathan Brown.' The excellent Dr. A. L. Post writes us that the statement, made in his letter by Bro. Lowe himself, is a mistake."

After partially recovering from the shock produced by the reading of this first public impeachment of my moral character, I concluded with the late Bishop Peck in a similar case: "If fifty years of life will not protect my reputation, words can not." Since then, the tacit, I hope not intentional, indorsement of this statement by my old fellow-laborer and "companion in tribulation," A. L. Post, has determined me to try, even at this late day, to set this matter right.

A mistake indeed! My dear brother, after uttering the appreciative words quoted from your letter printed in the Cynosure of the 6th of July following, in regard to my former labors as a moral reformer, how could you allow eveu your silence to represent me as base enough to tell a positive falschood, and foolish enough to tell it to the huudreds, if not thousands, of the old readers of the American Baptist, to say uothing of the public at large, who now read the Cynosure? Had you forgotteu that your humble servant, in connection with several others—including yourself if I mistake not—served the American Baptist Free Mission Society for three consecutive years as "Corresponding Editor" of their official organ, the American Baptist?

To be sure this may be a matter of little interest to the general public; but to a man whose motives during a life-loug service in the cause of God and human reformation, he has never known to be called in question even by the enemies of that cause, to be held up before the public by parties supposed to be reliable as both a falsifier and a simpleton, and this too on the very eve of the final closing up of his earthly career, seems certainly too unjust, too unbrotherly, and too cruel, to be passed by without a protest.

I hope, therefore, that this letter will find its way into the Cynosure, just as it is written, and that it will call out such an explanation of the part you at least have seemed to take in the affair as shall fully justify the confidence with which I subscribe myself now, as heretofore,

Your brother in Christ, A. D. Low.

Atlantic, Iowa, Sept. 13, 1883.

NOTE FROM ELDER POST.

Dear Cynosure;—I enclose to you a letter which I wish you to publish with this. I thought of the implications to which Bro. Low refers, and very much regret it was left so on my part. His reference to the fact of the Baptist having what were called "Corresponding Editors" in different parts of the country explains all that. and I regret much that the fact was out of my mind. Now I wish to be distinctly understood that I was well acquainted with Bro. Low all through the Free Mission and Anti-slavery contest, and that I always looked upon him as one of our truest and most reliable men under all circumstances. Whoever failed, I never knew him to do so. So I wish that if anybody got an idea that I meant to convey any impression of the kind, they will accept this denial, and that he may pardon what though seeming never was intended to be in the least implied.

Montrose, Pa. A. L. Post.

LITERARY.

"Manual of Short-Hand Writing" is the title of a small and unpretending volume by G. G. Allen, principal of the Allen Stenographic Institute, of Boston. Since Pitman introduced his system years ago, and Graham and others improved upon it, multitudes of students and professional meu have purchased manuals and begun the perplexing study of phonography, only to weary of the continual practice necessary, and to be disappointed that they did not find a royal road to the proficiency of a reporter.

Many devices have been made public for the purpose of simplifying the short-hand method, among the best of which is that called Takagraphy. Mr. Allen's method is an attempt to shorten the time of acquiring some facility in short-hand, and from an examination of his work there is no doubt that to follow the course marked out would give great satisfaction to a diligent student. One very encouraging feature is that what is learned can be immediately put to use. We doubt if there is a work on this subject that presents the whole system in so compact and simple a manner. Lee and Shepard, Boston, publishers, Price 50c

The North American Review for October presents a most attractive table of contents. Senator N. P. Hill writes of "Gold and Silver as Standards of Value." In "Some Aspects of Democracy in England," A. V. Dicey makes clear to the American reader how it is that, while all the forms of monarchy and aristocracy persist in Britain, the democracy, or, in other words, public opinion, absolutely controls the action of the government. Under the title of "Co-operative Distribution," the Rev. Dr. R. Heber Newton gives an instructive historical sketch of the rise, progress and fluctuations of co-operative merchandizing in the United States during the past fifty years. Prof. W. Boyd Dawkins writes of "Early Man in America." "Astronomical Collisions," by Prof. C. A. Young. "Saint Patrick Myth," "Board of Trade Morality," "Historics of the French Revolution," and "Social Forces in the United States," are other articles.

Prof. Julius Kostlin's "Life of Martin Luther," which Mr. Froude, in his recent articles in the Contemporary Review, cites so often and so warmly commends, will soon be published by Messrs. Charles Scribner's Sons simultaneously with its appearance in England. Now that the 400th anniversary of Luther's birth (the 10th of November) is so rapidly approaching, the book will be looked forward to with peculiar interest. For many years Prof. Kostlin has made a thorough study of his subject; twenty years ago he published his book "Luther's Theology and its Historical Development," and the present work which first appeared in Liepsic was at once accepted as beyond question the best biography of the great reformer as it is the latest. In preparing it he has been able to make use of a mass of entirely new material which has come to his hands. Reproductions of numerous rare and interesting portraits of Luther, his family and his friends, and fac-similes of important historical documents which are printed with the text, add not a little to the interest and value of the volume.

—We expect in a few days to issue the third edition of "In the Coils." The work is popular not only in our own church, but in many others. And the testimony from all sources is, that it is doing a noble Christian work. Some who have learned of the existence of this book only "by the hearing of the ear" call it by peculiar names, as In the Cells; Coils and Conflicts; Out of the Coils; Among the Coils; In the Folds; In the Snares, etc., etc. The following, from an old countryman, probably refers to the title of this book in the Swedish translation: "Having read in other language, 'Fettered; the Strife that will Come,' by an 'Fantast,' I want a copy in English." We knew what he wanted, though he didn't touch the title in a single point.—Christian Instructor.

The series of papers on "The New Era in American Architecture," announced last year as in preparation for the Century, has been largely increased in value by many illustrations of recent architectural work, and will appear in the coming volume of that magazine. It is announced that these papers will present drawings and popular descriptions of public buildiugs, churches, commercial buildings, city and country houses, the aim being to include the best work of American architects.

It may not be generally known that the late Mr. Richard Green, author of that fine "History of the English People" which has almost introduced a new form of historical writing, was at one time a clergyman of the Established Church of England. He started out with high purposes, but with a radically wrong conception of the business of a Christian minister, as the results following his efforts clearly showed. His idea was, to use his own words, "that high thinking, put into plain English, was more likely to tell upon a dockyard laborer than all the simple gospel sermons in the world." That Mr. Green was capable of "high thinking" and of embodying it in faultless English his works well attest. But it did not "tell" on the people of his parish as he anticipated at the outset He preached in four or five different places, and finally gave up the ministry altogether, and lapsed into, it is intimated, some form of skepticism. The incident, somewhat negatively perhaps, yet forcibly, illustrates the old truth that Christ is the power of God, and the wisdom of God.—Ex.

Bible Lessons.

LESSON II.—October 14.—Samuel the Judge.—1 Sam. 7: 3–17.
Golden Text.—Hitherto hath the Lord helped us.—1 Sam. 7: 12.

"Samuel," now about 50 years old, has been living for 20 years in comparative seclusion at his native Ramah. Like Moses, during his 40 years in the desert, and Paul in Arabia, he was learning the lessons which were to fit him for his work as a reformer. Yet he could not have been unknown and unnoticed in Ramah (1 Sam. 3: 20). Such a revival as appears in our lesson must have been the result of years of faithful effort.

"If ye do return." The turning of the people to the Lord their God had already inwardly commenced, and the demand is that the inward turning of the heart to God should be manifested outwardly by the putting away of idols, and thus carried to completion.—Keil.

"Ashtaroth." "The Baalim and the Ashtaroth" of verse 4. Baalim is the plural of Baal, Ashtaroth of Ashtoreth; and the plural denotes either (a) the numerous images of these deities, or (b) the different forms under which they were worshiped—as Baal-Peor, Baal-Berith, Baal-Zebub. Baal (lord) was the supreme male deity of the Phœnician and Canaanite nations, and probably is to be identified with the Babylonian Bel. It was the sun. Ashtoreth (Greek Astarte) was the corresponding female deity, worshiped in Babylonia under the name Ishtar as the goddess of battles and victories, war-spoils being dedicated to her (chap. 31: 10). Her symbol was the Asherah (rendered "grove" in Judg. 3: 7 and frequently), probably a wooden column or image resembling the sacred tree of the Assyrians. The Baal-worship which began in the wilderness, when the Israelites "joined themselves to Baal-Peor" the god of Moab, seems never to have been thoroughly eradicated during the period of the Judges (see Josh 24: 23; Judg. 2: 11–13; 3: 7; 8: 33; 10: 6).—Cambridge Bible.

"I will pray for you unto the Lord." Other instances of Samuel's prayers are mentioned in chapters 8: 6; 12: 17–19, 23; 15: 11. He is quoted as the type of successful intercessors in Ps. 99: 6; Jer 15: 1.—Cambridge Bible. "As Abraham is a pattern of faith, and Job of patience, so is Samuel a pattern of intercessory prayer." As he prayed for others; so Elijah prayed at Carmel (1 Kings 18: 36, 42); so Ezra prayed at the evening sacrifice (Ezra 9: 5); so the high priest prayed for the house of Israel on the day of atonement (Dictionary of Bible, vol. 1, p. 137): and so does our Lord Jesus Christ ever live at God's right hand to make intercession for us.—Speaker's Commentary.

"Poured it out before the Lord." They poured out water before the Lord to show that their words and promises had gone forth, and were "as water spilt upon the ground, which cannot be gathered up again." To pour water on the ground is a very ancient way of taking a solemn oath in the East. When the god Vishnu, in the disguise of a dwarf, requested the giant Maha-Ville (Bali) to grant him one step of his kingdom, the favor was conceded, and confirmed by Maha-Ville pouring out water before the dwarf. The children of Israel, in their misery, came before the Lord; they wept, they fasted and prayed, and made their solemn vows, and in confirmation of their promises, they poured out water before the Lord.—Roberts.

"We have sinned." If thou wouldst be justified, acknowledge thy injustice. He that confesses his sin begins his journey towards salvation; he that is sorry for it mends his pace; he that forsakes it, is at his journey's end.—Quarles.

"Went up against." It was bad policy for the Philistines to make war upon Israel at a time when Israel was making peace with God.—Henry.

"Afraid." Where was their faith in the conclusion of the sermon? Note the contrast between the preparation for this battle and the second (chap. 4: 5). Unrepentant then, and superstitious in presence of the ark, they did not fear; but now, repentant and humble, they are afraid. It is a fear that throws them upon the divine power (ver. 8). "What time I am afraid I will trust in thee" (Ps. 56: 3).—Peloubet.

"Heard," rather answered. There is no illusion here to his name—Samuel, the asked or heard of God. It was but one suckling lamb he offered; for God looks at the integrity and intention of the heart, more than at the bulk or number of the offerings. The one lamb (typifying the lamb of God) was more acceptable than thousands of rams or bullocks would have been without faith or prayer.—Henry.

"Ebenezer," i. e., "the stone of help," a memorial set up between Mizpeh and Shen (in Hebrew with the definite article) "the tooth," probably some conspicuous "tooth" or spire of rock (comp. 14: 4). The exact place is unknown, but "exactly at the spot where 20 years before they had obtained their great victory, the Philistines were totally routed."—Cambridge Bible.

"Samuel judged Israel all the days of his life." This, like the statement of verse 13, must be understood with qualifications; for (1) Samuel in his old age made his sons judges (chap. 8: 1); (2) Saul was made king a considerable time before Samuel's death. But it does not contradict the subsequent history. Clearly, his sons supplemented, but did not supercede their father's judicial office; and Samuel retained a civil and religious authority even after Saul had become the military leader of the people.—Cambridge Bible.

"Judged Israel." He probably summoned to him the elders of the people, laid before them their duties, reminded them of the miseries of the past when they had forsaken Jehovah and turned to idols, and warned them against any relapse. He would also hear and decide questions between man and man.—Geikie.

PRACTICAL.

1. The fruit of years of labor may be reaped in a day.
2. One sermon may bring out the results of many.
3. Convictions must be followed up immediately. "Now."
4. True repentance must precede all thorough reformation.
5. The prayer of a righteous man availeth much.
6. A revival of religion excites a revival of opposition.
7. Israel was punished with the absence of the ark, the Philistines with its presence.
8. Consecration is followed by victory.
9. A godly fear leading to trust in a divine power results in victory; a superstitious courage leading to self-confidence results in defeat.
10. Better piety without the presence of the ark, than the presence of the ark with impiety.
11. Effective help is divine help.
12. Ascribe the glory of deliverance to God.—Peloubet.

BAND OF HOPE BIBLE LESSON.

CAST OFF THE WORKS OF DARKNESS.

10. Love worketh no ill to his neighbor; therefore love is the fulfilling of the law.
11. And that, knowing the time, that now it is high time to awake out of sleep: for now is our salvation nearer than when we believed.
12. The night is far spent, the day is at hand; let us therefore cast off the works of darkness, and let us put on the armor of light.
13. Let us walk honestly, as in the day; not in rioting and drunkenness, not in chambering and wantonness, not in strife and envying.
14. But put ye on the Lord Jesus Christ, and make not provision for the flesh to fulfil the lusts thereof. Rom. 13: 10–14.
11. Dearly beloved, I beseech you as strangers and pilgrims, abstain from fleshly lusts which war against the soul;
12. Having your conversation honest among the Gentiles: that, whereas they speak against you as evil doers, they may by your good works, which they shall behold, glorify God in the day of visitation. 1 Pet. 2: 11, 12.

Golden Text.—Put ye on the Lord Jesus Christ. Rom. 13: 14.

Central Truth.—Secrecy is opposed to the Gospel.

1. If love were universal nobody would sell rum. There would be no secret lodges, for love is never clannish nor selfish. And so with war and all other evils that afflict society.

2. St. Paul refers to the "night" of heathenism, broken by the dawning "day" of the Gospel.

3. The Middle Ages in Europe was "a night" of ignorance and superstition. The Bible was forbidden to the common people, besides being too costly for laboring men to own. There were Christians then as well as now, but they could not be very active or intelligent with so little light. Many became monks and nuns, and slept away their lives in convents. Now the whole world is awake, for all this darkness and ignorance has passed, and Christians ought to be awake too.

4. These works of darkness were secret rites of heathen worship called mysteries.

5. They were cruel, unclean and debasing, and in the morning light of the Gospel were as much out of place as owls and bats after the sun has risen.

6. Freemasonry, by the testimony of its own writers, is borrowed from these heathen mysteries. As the minor secret orders are founded on Masonry they too belong to "the works of darkness" which Christians are commanded to cast off.

7. "Honestly" means in the original "decently"—i. e., in a seemly decorous way, not doing anything we are ashamed of. Now there is nothing decent in a man's appearance, blind-folded and half naked, with a rope tied around his waist. He would blush to have his mother, wife or sister, see him in such a plight. There is nothing decent in the frightful masks or the coffin and skeleton in Odd-fellow lodges.

8. We are expressly told that charity, which is only another name for true religion, "doth not behave itself unseemly."

9. The wife of many a Mason and Odd-fellow dates her husband's drinking habits from the time he joined the lodge. Secrecy always encourages vice.

10. To put on Jesus Christ is to have his mind and spirit. We know he would never join a secret lodge, and the Christian who enters one cannot have his Saviour with him.

PRACTICAL TRUTHS.

Secret societies are works of darkness.

Their ceremonies are indecent, and therefore unchristian.

They often lead men into bad habits.

Just as darkness is opposed to light, so secrecy is opposed to the Gospel.

LESSON TALK.

When it is dark we can easily miss our way, or hurt ourselves by running against a fence or stump; but when the sun is up and we see our way distinctly there can be no such danger unless we are very careless or heedless. Seventy years ago people were "all in the dark," to use a common expression, about Masonry. They might have their thoughts regarding it, but unless actual members they had no chance to know what it really was, until William Morgan exposed the first three degrees. But there is far more light on secret orders now than there was then. All the degrees of Masonry known in this country have been revealed, and any one can now for a trifling sum read these exposures, so that there is no excuse for ignorance. But our greatest source of light is the Bible. Dr. John Hall tells the following story: In an English cloth-manufacturing establishment cloth disappeared, stolen when unfinished and unmarked. A watch was set, and sufficient reason found to arrest a smaller dealer. He set them at defiance with these words: "How can you prove your case, gentleman? The cloth bears no mark." A workman spoke up: "My lords and gentlemen of the jury; we have a way of drying our cloth by stretching it on hooks. If the holes in these webs fit our hooks it will be proved that it is our cloth." Every hole fitted a hook, and the thief was convicted. Now this illustrates the way in which all the histories, the warnings, the counsels of God's Word fits in to our need. The holes fit the hooks just as well to-day as they did two thousand years ago. We can prove this by taking this great question of secrecy and trying it by the Bible test. We shall find that it describes Masonry and the kindred secret orders, and warns us against them in terms as plain and emphatic as it warned the early Christians against their false worships.

LESSON HYMN.

The soldiers of the cross, we stand
Beset with foes on every hand;
God, by the Holy Spirit saith
To us, Be faithful unto death!
Chorus.—Then we'll march up the heavenly street
And ground our arms at Jesus' feet.

Environed by the ranks of sin
Through many sieges dark we've been
God may command through many more;
But he will lead till all are o'er.
Chorus.—Then we'll march up the heavenly street
And ground our arms at Jesus' feet.

THE NORTHERN PACIFIC RAILROAD.

The dream of 1835 becomes to-day the reality of 1883. For it was forty-eight years ago that the construction of a railroad from New York to the Columba river was first proposed, and as early as 1845 a menchant of this city, Asa Whitney, made a proposition to Congress to build a road from the great lakes to the mouth of the Columbia, in consideration of a land grant of sixty miles in width along the entire route. Despite Mr. Whitney's most earnest efforts this plan failed to win Congressional approval. These dates, however, are the basis of the Northern Pacific Railroad's claim to being the first projected transcontinental line. When the government, in 1853, surveyed five routes to the Pacific, the northern route was laid out by Governor I. I. Stevens, of Washington Territory, and his report was a most favorable one. The subject was soon pigeonholed, however, and when it was brought out later, and a charter for the road sought in 1862, the effort resulted in failure, although at the same time charters were granted to the Central and Union Pacific roads.

Josiah Perham, a New England merchant, at last secured a charter, in 1864. His terms were, to have no subsidy in money or bonds, but a land grant of the alternate sections of land twenty miles on each side of the road through the States, and twice the width through the Territories, with an additional ten miles on each side as an indemnity limit, within which he could select land to compensate for those already settled within the original grant. Perham failed to secure capital to build the road. So in December, 1865, he sold the franchise to some New England capitalists for barely enough to pay his debts, and died three years later, before the first spadeful of dirt had been turned on the proposed road.

But no progress toward actual construction was made until Mr. Jay Cooke assumed financtal direction, obtained legislation authorizing the issue of bonds, and put the bonds on the American market, being prevented by the Franco-German war from negotiating them in Europe. From the spring of 1870 to the spring of 1872 he sold about $30,000,000 worth of bonds.

Meanwhile work was begun on the road in 1870 at Thompson Junction, twenty-three miles west of Duluth, and also at Kalama on the Columbia river. In 1871 the road was finished from Thompson Junction to the Red River of the North, and 1873 saw it extended to Bismarck, on the Missouri river, while by that time 105 miles had been finished betwecn the Columbia river and Puget Sound, and the terminal city of Tacoma laid out.

Now came bankruptcy. The panic of 1876 destroyed Mr. Cooke's banking house, and left the railroad paralyzed, with a large floating debt, and a bonded dept of $30,000,000 at 7 3-10 per cent. interest. Earnings on the completed portions hardly paid running expenses. Few settlers moved into the country along its line.

In 1875 a reorganization of affairs was effected, the bondholders accepted preperred stock in lieu of their bonds, the road was hurried through the bankruptcy court, and by 1879 it had paid off its floating debt and was earning some net profits on the completed portions.

A thirty-mile road was built from Tacoma to the Cascade Mountains coal beds. Wheat culture was begun in the Red River Valley, and settlers flocked in rapidly. Work was carried forward at both ends of the route.

In 1881 a controlling interest was purchased in the road by Mr. Henry Villard, who was largely interested in various transportation lines in the Northwest.

Work went steadily on at both ends, and at the beginning of the present year only 300 miles of the track remained to be laid, on most of which line the grading had been done. During the summer this gap was closed up, so that to-day there is an iron highway complete and ready for travel from Duluth to Tacoma, a distance of a little more than 1,980 miles. There are also 674 miles of branches, mostly completed, giving a grand total of more than 2,654 miles of road.

Going westward from Duluth, at the head of Lake Superior the Northern Pacific Railroad runs for many miles through the almost unbroken forests of valuable timber that cover so large an area of Northern Minnesota. Then it passes through the lake region, and enters the fertile valley of the Red River of the North. Crossing that stream at Fargo, the vast plains of Dakota are reached. These are valuable agricultural lands as far west as the Missouri river, which is crossed at Bismarck. Beyond are the so-called "Bad Lands," a country bad by name rather than by nature, consisting of curiously broken and upheaved hills and "buttes," and narrow valleys. Most of the area is covered with bunch grass, and forms admirable pasture land.

Reaching Montana, a high table-land is traversed. In Central Montana the Rocky Mountains are reached, and on to the Idaho boundary the road passes among towering mountains, rich in silver and copper, and valleys of fertile farming land. Running northwest, through the Flathead country, the boundary of Idaho is reached only a few miles south of the British colony of Columbia, and the Territory is crossed at its narrowest part, a region heavily timbered, as is also the western part of Montana. Then the road turns sharply to the southwest and crosses the Great Plateau of Eastern Washington Territory to the Columbia river. This is a high grassy plain, containing exceedingly fertile wheat lands, and extends south into Oregon and west to the Cascade Mountains. Then the road follows the Columbia river, skirting northern Oregon, to Portland, whence the Pacific division runs northward to Tacoma, on Puget Sounds.

The road has two lake ports at its eastern terminus, Duluth and Superior. Its principle eastern depots, however, will be at Minneapolis and St. Paul, where it connects with three trunk lines to Chicago.

At the Pacific coast tidewater is reached at Portland, Oregon—near the junction of the Willamette and Columbia rivers—and at Tacoma on Puget Sound. Both these ports are easily accessible by ocean steamers of the largest size.

There are two tunnels on the line worth mention: One 3,600 feet long at Bozeman Pass in the Belt Mountains, and one 3,850 feet long at Mullan Pass in the Rocky Mountains proper. The Bozeman tunnel is 5,548 feet above tidewater, and is the highest point on the road.

The road has two great bridges, at Bismarck, across the Missouri—so high as to require no draw—and at Ainsworth, Washington Territory, across Snake river. These bridges are of stone, iron and steel. The Yellowstone is crossed three time, the Upper Missouri once, and Clark's Fork of the Columbia three times.—N. Y. Tribune.

The Christian Cynosure.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, OCTOBER 4, 1883.

Ex-Senator Pomeroy.—Did our readers notice Mr. Pomeroy's checrful and sensible letter in number before last? We shall hope to meet him in Washington soon, and exact the fulfillment of his promise to "have done with this rambling and settle down to work." His "work" in Chicago was splendid and won "Golden opinions from all sorts of people."

Frederick Douglass has lately made one of his calm, solid speeches in the Louisville (colored) convention. He was chosen chairman, against opposition, by an overwhelming majority. He demands the Vice Presidency for the colored voters, but the Masonic partics will not grant it.

EDITORIAL CORRESPONDENCE.

Sparta, Ill., Sept. 28, 1883.

Our State Association has come "down into Egypt" and our meetings, though not crowded, as in other places, are interesting. Several Reformed and United Presbyterian ministers not hitherto well posted take an interested part with us. The Presbyterian pastor, Allison, though not united with us, wishes well to the cause, and my article in the Interior, of Sept. 20th, is regarded by him with a profound interest, as also Mr. Gray's editorial remarks on it. I have heard of that article in several families here, and, though some may be opposed to it I have yet to see or hear of the first one. All I am likely to meet would naturally favor it.

I asked a high Mason and M. E. preacher if Gen. Weaver, of Iowa, was a Mason.

"I think not," he replied, "I am a Mason and should probably know it if he was."

"Is he a Christian?"

"I think so. He has always been regarded as on the side of Christianity, though I don't know what church he attends."

THE DECLARATION OF INDEPENDENCE A COVENANTER'S DOCTRINE.

Rev. Mr. Faris has just now given me to read "The Informatory Vindication," a book issued in 1791. This book gives the true American doctrine of government "by consent of the governed," issued by Covenanters against the Stuarts more than two centuries ago. I commend this book and its doctrines to our Bro. Miller of Coulterville, and all who object to the "consent of the governed" as the basis of government. Here it is:

"We profess then * * * 3. In things civil, though we do not say every tyrannical act makes a tyrant, yet we hold that habitual, obstinate and declared opposition to, and overturning of religion, laws and liberties * * * etc. Thesc sufficiently invalhis [the ruler's] right and relation of magistracy; and warrant subjects to revolt from under and disown allegiance unto such a power."—P. 201-2.

Here again:

"The articles and conditions agreed upon and mutually covenanted unto betwixt a people and the person or persons whom they intrust to rule over them for their good, are the only fundamental laws whercupon the ruler's right to govern, and the peoples' obligation to obey, are founded."—P. 221.

Thus these Covenanters, in the middle of the 17th century, in hourly danger of death by "mangling," "drawing and quartering" by the king's dragoons, issued the above "declaration" from whieh Jefferson borrowed "the consent of the governed" in our Declaration.

Yet they say that magistracy, though "not founded upon grace," but good for "both Christians and heathens," "is a holy and divine institution," and Christ who is "head over all things" is head over this. This is grand and beautiful. William of Orange, when one asked, "What kings have you secret treaties with, that you dare to fight against all the nations that surround us?" replied:

"Before I took up my sword to establish the liberties of my people, I took care to enter into a firm alliance with the King of all these kings." So Holland became a republic and sheltered our Puritans. This, this is the true American theory—Christ King of the nations, and government in the breast of the people expressed by "consent of the governed."

B.

A Webster's Unabridged Dictionary fully illustrated, a whole library in one book, to the one who sends the largest club for the Cynosure before January 1st.

—A friend in Evansville, Ind., wants to know why the State Convention is to be held at Oakland City, where Anti-masons are in a majority, and not in his own place, which is overrun with the lodges, and needs sadly the proclamation of reform truth. This brother brings forward a strong reason, and should attend the conveution and present it there.

PROGRESS AT HOME.

There has been no small labor and expense devoted to the reform work here in Chicago. Much of the effort has seemed like seed on obdurate soil which returns a thankless harvest. But at occasional intervals we rejoice to see sure marks of the good effects from the tracts, lectures, expositions and conventions. Never have these indications seemed so strong and checring as now.

First, and in some respects of greatest importance, is the demand of the Advance that Dr. A. H. Quint be removed from the high office given him by the National Congregational Council, and that it be given to another who will not sacrifice to Freemasonry and politics the duties given unto his hand by the representatives of the churches. The Cynosure has insisted from the first that the official recognition of the lodge in the person of Dr. Quint, Grand Lodge Chaplain, Sublime Prince of the Royal Seeret, etc., on the part of Congregational pastors who are nearly all opposed to the lodge, and by representatives of Congregational ehurches, which in their associations condemn seeret societies—that this tradition was a betrayal of the truth by those set for its defence, weakening the testimony of the ehurehcs and giving joy to the realms of death. The demand of the Advance is a confession that this lodge patronagc is unprofitable. It means, too, that more respect will be given to the resolutions of church associations.

Next is the opening of the columns of the Interior to a discussion of the lodge. After publishing an editorial condemnation of Freemasonry, this, the most influential and widest circulated of the Presbyterian journals in the country, has published an argument by the editor of the Cynosure against the fellowshipping such an organization in the Christian church, and the discussion is not likely to stop with the Interior's reply. But the publication of such an argument in this influential paper is as valuable for the reform as an ordinary State eonvention; so, too, is the demand of the Advance.

So, too, is the fact that for several wecks a blow has been given the lodge in the Saturday noon prayer meeting in lower Farwell Hall, in as eloquent, forcible and clear-cut language as the leader, Pres. C. A. Blanchard, could use. That this testimony on a "disputed question" could be given thus freely in a meeting where the very mention of the subject has been held to be almost an unlawful thing; and that it should awaken the eonvictions of many fearful saints to consider their own duty toward the lodge eurse, is one of the most eheering marks of the receiving of the truth the Cynosure maintains by the popular heart.

The testimony of Major Whittle, showing in the ease of a lately converted man the necessity of giving up the lodge with other sins before Jesus can forgive and cleanse the soul; and of Mr. Moody, condemning the lodge meeting as one of the hindrances in the way of many men who should be found in a Christian gathering, were not unnoticed during the great Christian convention. The eagerness of the people to take the tracts at the same meeting is a straw which helps show that the conseienee of the masses is coming over and must be felt by the lodges.

The N. C. A. Board Meeting of September 20th should have been mentioned last week. Every member of the Board was present except Prof. Stratton who was siek, and Mr. Wallace whose business engagements detained him. The action of the previous meeting when no quorum was present was ratified unanimously, providing that Secretary Stoddard should go to Washington and rent such part of the building there as was not needed for the business of the N. C. A., and seeure also a person to take charge of the building; also that Pres. J. Blauchard should receive $100 per month for services and expenses until next annual meeting, and that he should spend the winter months in Washington and vicinity. The recommendation of the New England Board, for a ehange in their constitution by whieh the number and efficiency of that body may be increased, was adopted. The renting of part of the N. C. A. building, purchase of signs, etc., was referred to a committee. The Secretary was empowered to write to the American Board respecting Bro. A. D. Zaraphonithes and his work in Smyrna. Settlement with Bro. P. S. Feemster for work in Kansas up to date was ordered. The business was dispatehed under the chairmanship of Dr. Meloy rapidly and harmoniously.

—The difference between r and n is trifling, but it made some bad work in the editorials of last week. The mistake was too palpable to cause misunderstanding, but was not on that account less provoking.

—The editors of the Cynosure attended the State Convention at Sparta, Ill., last week and contributed what they were able to a quiet, but earnest and important meeting. If the deliberations of this meeting are followed with good work, there will be much to say for Illinois during the eoming year. The local burden of the convention fell upon Rev. D. S. Faris of the Reformed Presbyterian church, whose excellent eounsel and aid was felt at every stage of the meeting. Our columns are too full this week to allow the full report which the meeting deserves.

—An aged brother, Sanford Ward of Adams, Jefferson county, New York, is 93 years old. He writes with a elear hand renewing his subscription to the Cynosure, and says he shall take the paper so long as God spares him here if it is ninety-three years longer. God bless the old men and women who are near home, and yet pray and work for the Master's triumph to their latest breath.

—The New York State Association are arranging to hold the annual convention at Syracuse this month immediately after the meeting of the Wesleyan General Conferenee. The New York brethren should have a grand meeting at such a time and place.

—Bro. Stoddard, the General Agent, reached the Illinois State Convention at Sparta Friday noon, and spoke to a full house in the United Presbyterian church in the evening. He spent the Sabbath in Jacksonville, and will attend the Indiana State Convention at Oakland City, on the 16th inst.

—The brief report of Bro. Butler's work in southwestern Iowa and the adjoining county in Missouri which appears in another page, shows what may be done in any eommunity by persistent labor. Fifteen years ago Rev. D. R. Barker of the Congregational church of College Springs began to organize the opposition to seeretism and leeture in Page county. Soon the efforts of Rev. Wm. Johnston brought in the strong eo-operation of the United Presbyterian churehes. Leeturers have been over the field, Hinman, Gault, Levington, Ronayne, the N. C. A. Seeretary and others, aud from this abundant sowing the harvest begins to make glad those who expeet the triumph of Christianity.

—Bro. Hinman, who has been exploring the regions to the south of Washington, sends the names of several colored preachers to whom the weekly visits of the Cynosure would be blessed means of instruetion and spiritual encouragement. Who will supply them?

THE COLLEGES.

At Wheaton there is rejoicing at the manifestations of deep religious interest at the very opening of the school year. The second weekly students' prayer meeting was attended by some ninety young men and women, a number rose for prayers and several aeeepted Christ. The attendance on the different departments is larger than for a number of years—one-third larger than at the same time last year, and the number increases week by week. The Theological Seminary opens in the early part of October, and Prof. L. N. Strattou and his assistant instructors are expecting full classes.

Monmouth.—The United Presbyterian says of this institution: "The college year opens at Monmouth with fair promises. The number of new students is greater than for several years. During vacation the spacious building has undergone a thorough renovation from basement to chapel. It looks like a new creature. President and professors are all at their posts in good health, good spirits, good natured, and about as good looking as ever."

Dover Academy at Dover, Ill., under the eharge of Prof. Mason, has a large increase of studeuts this fall and Bro. Mason and Rev. Wm. H. Chandler, who, as pastor of the United Brethren church in the place, has the institution mueh upon his heart, are much encouraged. The Academy is in the care of the United Brethren conferences.

Joseph Medill, editor of the Chicago Tribune, in his testimony lately before the Senate committee on labor and edueation, in reply to the question as to the causes of poverty among the laboring people, said that about $400,000,000 was spent by them for drink, and probably $200,000,000 for amusements. Mr. Medill offers high license as a cure for the worse than useless expenditure by the working people of the extraordinary sum of $400,000,000. Had Mr. Medill been a statesman, he would not have stopped at the half way measure of high license, but said prohibition is the only radical means of reaching the trouble.—Topeka, Kans., Daily Capital.

—It is frequently reported that women who have the privilege of voting do not care to make use of it, but 300 women voted at the school election at Binghampton, N. Y., last Friday.

NEW ENGLAND.

THE NEW ENGLAND BOARD of the National Christian Association has its headquarters at No. 8 Portland St., Worcester, Mass. A full supply of books and tracts constantly on hand, Orders promptly filled. Correspondence solicited.

NEW HAMPSHIRE ANNUAL MEETING.

The Seventh Annual Meeting of the New Hampshire Christian Association will meet at Canterbury Center, Oct. 23–24, to commence Tuesday at 2 o'clock P. M. Friends coming by rail will stop at Canterbury Depot on the Boston, Concord and Montreal R. R. Please notify A. H. Brown, Canterbury, N. H., on what train you will come and he will meet you with team. All who propose to attend the convention will please notify Bro. Brown by postal, that he may make suitable preparation for entertainment. Prof. E. D. Bailey of Worcester, and S. H. Atkins of Milton Mills, N. H., who has been a Freemason, Odd-fellow and Knight of Pythias, will address the convention. Other able speakers including Rev. D. McFall of Boston, and Elder Geo. C. Bowles of Sugar Hill, N. H., a seceding Mason, have been invited to speak. Rev. J. P. Stoddard, General Agent of the N. C. A. is hereby cordially invited to be with us. N. E. friends, we welcome you to our Sabbatic annual meeting. We believe the Lord has a great blessing in store for us. May the Holy Spirit fill the hearts of all who come.

J. G. Smith, Pres.

S. C. Kimball, Sec'y.

NOTES.

The Congregationalist discusses in a long editorial "labor unions" without once mentioning their secret character—a convenient way of avoiding an unpleasant theme.

E. M. Curtiss of Bristol, Conn., distributed 250 copies of the Cynosure at camp meetings this summer and felt greatly blessed in the work. He found some former Masons who had abandoned their lodges. One Mason said "There is more truth in the Morgan book than Masons are willing to admit."

Miss F. M. Mitchell has had an open encounter with an emissary of the secret orders who attempted to organize a Good Templars lodge among their church members. The people lingered after meeting to organize. Miss Mitchell says: "The Missionary" had with her six Good Templars from Gardner. They were on her side while God and myself were on the other." The sword of the Spirit was effectively wielded and the lodge was not organized. It pays to oppose evil.

"Last spring I saw a man selling books disclosing the secrets of different societies, Odd-fellows, etc. I wanted one of those books but I did not want to buy it in the crowd, knowing the feeling they have for any one that buys anything like that, so I obtained your address, thinking, perhaps, I might send for one some time." The above is taken from a letter recently received. What terror these secret orders have awakened in the country. Already men are afraid of them. Can such societies be good? They threaten the very liberty of the people and are destructive to all interests but their own.

NEW ENGLAND LETTER.

IMPUDENCE AND ARROGANCE — REPUBLICANS DROP OFF A GOOD PLANK—BUTLERISM—20,000 DUPES.

Worcester, Mass., Sept., 26, 1883.

At Bristol, Rhode Island, a memorial building to General Burnside has been projected and yesterday the corner stone was laid by the Freemasons, President Arthur honoring the occasion by his presence and a speech. The dispatches from that place indicate that Masonry was specially favored in the opportunity to air itself. "On arrival at the site of the building President Arthur was seated in the place of honor by the side of the Grand Master of Masons." So reads the account. The Grand Master, of course, occupied the chief place of honor and the head of the United States government was honored with a place at his side.

The nominee of the Republicans for governor has spoken on the temperance question. It is to his credit that he has defined his position early in the campaign, but it is probably in accordance with a previous understanding. Mr. Robinson spoke at a ratification meeting at Springfield as follows:

"From my boyhood up I have never known anything but to let intoxicating drinks alone, and I have never found any difficulty in practicing this in my home or when away on pleasure or on business. There's enough for me in God's good air and water to furnish all the stimulus I want. I do not mean to give you a temperance lecture. But what of the law? Massachusetts has tried many experiments in liquor legislation. A law that the people will not enforce is of little effect in any State, and I believe that the present local option law of Massachusetts is all that the people are now prepared to enforce. This is my position and it is all just as I have stated it."

Mr. Robinson's position will give him the Republican portion of the liquor vote. His total abstinence principles are creditable. But temperance people ought not to be contented with a poorly executed local option law. Their position ought to be aggressive. They have nothing to hope from the Republican party in this State. That party has receded from the prohibitory position and is not likely to take satisfactory ground again.

The Democratic convention is to-day in session at Springfield. It is regarded a foregone conclusion that Butler will be nominated. The Greenback convention has already nominated him, but the party has divided and a new convention is called by what appears to be the best part of the party. Well, the political conflict goes on, each day furnishing some new phase for contemplation.

The Sovereign Grand Lodge I. O. O. F. has made a big display of its work in Providence. It claims a net gain of 20,000 members during the past year. But the study of its figures will soon prick the bubble of its popularity. Young men, workmen and mechanics out of the shops, are being drawn in by the hope of gain. Their eyes will be opened in due time. But we cannot be too diligent in exposing this fraud. Last year the four printed prayers in the Sovereign Grand Lodge minutes all omitted the name of Christ and an attempt was made to compel the lodges to use none other, so as to cut off the extempore prayers sometimes used. The matter was however referred to the several Grand Lodges. E. D. Bailey.

WENDELL PHILLIPS.

Considerable interest attaches to the position of this distinguished orator and independent politician. It was rumored that he was now an enemy to Butler and would oppose his re-election. This brought out a statement from Mr. Phillips which is appended below. The vituperation being heaped upon him now by the Republican press is evidence that he has struck that party in a tender spot.

Mr. Phillips statement of his own political views shows him to be largely in sympathy with the American party. Those who remember his frank and undisguised letter to the Boston Anti-masonic convention will readily supply the one item omitted in his letter to bring his statement into harmony with the American platform.

It is safe to say that Mr. Phillips has no sympathy whatever with Butler, but that cunning politician posed before the people as a reformer, a friend of the laboring classes, an enemy of rings. Many good men, like Mr. Phillips, have labored long to break the power of the dominant party in Massachusetts which had arrayed itself against all reformes and almost in despair they suffered themselves to be drawn into the Butler movement to beat the Republicans. Butler has betrayed them, as was to be expected, and made an alliance with the money power, and they in turn will drop him when the Republican party is demoralized.

"The temperance men have always betrayed us at the polls" says Mr. Phillips. The prohibitionists of Massachusetts in a recent manifesto say: "The people are kept divided by designing politicians and a corrupt press." These two statements are alike in import and refer to the same bitter experience of reformers. There are some temperance men who can always be relied upon to help their political party (Republican or Democratic) out of a tight place. They shout temperance to keep in favor with prohibitionists, but they have no notion of losing caste with their own party. These men are fawned and petted. They belong to the same secret lodges as the saloon-keepers and party leaders, and consciously or unconsciously are influenced to betray temperance or any other reform. A man who resorts to a secret lodge is not a reformer. He shows his weakness. He has already commenced political trimming. Members of secret temperance lodges are no exception. They are the tools of politicians. Open opposition to the whole secret society system is the only hope of reform in this country.

One trick of political leaders is to separate reformers from their leaders and thus demoralize the reform party. The Republican press of Massachusetts is just now berating Mr. Phillips and Mr. Faxon. The design is evident. Every blow at these men is a warning to temperance men to join the Republican ranks or suffer a like fate with their leaders. This is a Masonic trick. It is just such a trick as cheated John Quincy Adams out of the second term of the Presidency and put a Freemason in his place. Does Mr. Phillips realize the power of the secret empire?

AMERICAN POLITICS.

NOMINATIONS FOR 1884.

For President,

JONATHAN BLANCHARD,
OF ILLINOIS.

For Vice President,

JOHN A. CONANT,
OF CONNECTICUT.

PLATFORM.

We hold: 1. That ours is a Christian and not a heathen nation, and that the God of the Christian Scriptures is the author of civil government.

2. That God requires and man needs a Sabbath.

3. That the prohibition of the importation, manufacture and sale of intoxicating drinks as a beverage is the true policy on the temperance question.

4. That the charters of all secret lodges granted by our Federal and State Legislatures should be withdrawn, and their oaths prohibited by law.

5. That the civil equality secured to all American citizens by articles 13th, 14th and 15th of our amended Constitution should be preserved inviolate.

6. That arbitration of differences with nations is the most direct and sure method of securing and perpetuating a permanent peace.

7. That to cultivate the intellect without improving the morals of men, is to make mere adepts and experts; therefore, the Bible should be associated with books of science and literature in all our educational institutions.

8. That land and other monopolies should be discouraged.

9. That the government should furnish the people with an ample and sound currency.

10. That maintenance of the public credit, protection to all loyal citizens, and justice to Indians are essential to the honor and safety of our nation.

11. And, finally, we demand for the American people the abolition of electoral colleges, and a direct vote for President and Vice-president of the United States.

INDEPENDENT VOTERS.

For several years the number of independent voters in the different States of the Union has been greatly increased. Dissatisfaction with existing parties and a desire to see new issues brought forward have tended to weaken the hold of the old parties upon their followers and encouraged the spirit of independence. There is nothing to regret in this fact, but, on the other hand, it is one of the most hopeful tokens before us.

Political parties are only valuable while they maintain the rights of the people, and make and administer laws which are necessary for their prosperity. When any party ceases to put principle before policy it should be discarded. Political leaders should be taught that the people are not "dumb driven cattle," but freemen who know their liberties and dare maintain them.

The questions which are now most important to our welfare are treated coldly or with open hostility by both Republicans and Democrats. It cannot be denied that the leaders of these parties are scrambling chiefly for the privilege of administering the government and receiving the emoluments. What interest have statesmen and Christians in such issues? What choice can there be between the Butlers, Arthurs and Logans of the parties? Such men represent the "bummer classes" of society dressed in broadcloth. They are the upheavals of war or the dregs of peace. What do such men care for the laboring classes except to win their votes? What respect do they show to the laws of God? What will they do for temperance? What for the abolition of secret clans? What for the overthrow of Mormonism?

A great show of conflict is made. Political papers begin to talk about the gravity of the situation. Every individual consideration must be forgotten, all moral reforms must be set aside, everything must bend to the success of the party. Pray what is at stake? Both parties drink the same whisky, smoke the same cigars, meet in the same lodges, play the same games, rob the same treasury. Both parties are fixing up compromises with the people, both are asking us to keep our moral questions back just this once!

The parties which are just now struggling for recognition at the polls are too timid. They style themselves "independent," but dare not get away from the apron-strings of the old parties. They play with their principles. Temperance voters especially lose all claim to the respect of the people. They allow political parties to trifle with them. All compromises are destructive to moral issues. It will be a blessing to the country when a party arises which fear not be decoyed by siren promises or frightened by first of the wrath of politicians. The party which will secures an unwavering support of a faithful few will yet wield the destiny of this nation.

The Home.

THE OLD CHURCHYARD.

Breathe soft and low, O whispering wind,
Above the tangled grasses deep,
Where those who loved me long ago
Forgot the world and fell asleep.
No towering shaft or seulptured urn,
Or mausoleum's empty pride,
Tell to the curious passer-by
Their virtues or the time they died.

I count the old familiar names,
O'ergrown with moss and lichens gray,
Where tangled brier and creeping vine
Across the crumbling tablets stray.
The summer sky is softly blue;
The birds still sing the sweet old strain,
But something from the summer-time
Is gone, that will not come again.

So many voices have been hushed—
So many songs have ceased for aye—
So many hands I used to touch
Are folded over hearts of elay.
The mossy world recedes from me—
I cease to hear its praise or blame;
The mossy marbles echo back
No hollow sound of empty fame.

I only know that, calm and still,
They sleep beyond life's woe and wail,
Beyond the fleet of sailing clouds,
Beyond the shadow of the vale;
I only feel that tired and worn,
I halt upon the highway bare,
And gaze with yearning eyes beyond
To fields that shine supremely fair.

HEART SOIL AND ITS FRUITS.

BY L. R. DE WOLF.

Like the seasons of the year the heart has but one spring time, but one summer. The early years are the nurseries of the strong and manly, or the puny and self indulgent lives of the future. Many a child endowed with a fine intellectual germ and a healthy body, has become a failure for all good by the faulty home, or school, or street training he has received, for in these first years impressions stamp themselves upon the mind (unconsciously and never to be wholly effaced) of the sentiments, the manners and the character of those with whom the child associates and by whom he is trained. And it requires constant watchfulness to uproot the weeds from the tender heart soil before they have taken too deep a hold and refuse to yield their place or their power.

It is in blessed childhood we catch the sweetest lessons of our lives. Then we are in love with God through his works, which teach us to look to him as the Benevolent One of all beings, and if the thoughts are rightly directed true and abiding faith will surely follow on. Children are imaginative beings, holding fellowship with leaves and flowers, or worms and insects. My little son once brought me his tiny apron halt filled with bugs and caterpillars. Instead of putting them in the stove, as requested, we sat down to watch their curious motions, and magnify their mottled and hairy backs. Nor could the dear child forget for days how God striped one with red and gave a woolly coat to another, and how wonderful God's inventive power must be. Soon after he called me down stairs to grieve over a dead lady-bug that "God had made too beautiful to be stepped upon." His little palm cradled it lovingly while the microscope revealed its charms to his loving heart. It was all the same to him whether it was a dead bird the cat had brought in or an ugly caterpillar. "The worm would be a butterfly some day, and have wings, and didn't God love it and mean it to live?" This method of showing forth God's care for little things gave to the child a sensitive, thoughtful nature that began to look closely into "the hidden things" of God. He was my only child, and for me to watch over alone, his father having been called "up higher" before the child was a year old. I was young and my heart full of sorrow, while my precious babe was my comforter. "Don't weep, mamma," he would often say, "for doesn't God take care of us, and my pa too?" "Will there be flowers and birds and pretty things up there?" And then I would tell him of that beautiful home and how Jesus was the light thereof, until his rapture knew no bounds. "My pa is happier than we," he would exclaim, "so we'll not weep any more," and climbing into my lap he would wipe and kiss away the tears.

We train our children by our words and ways, little thinking how the seeds will spring up. We tell them too much about earthly things and too little about heavenly. My little lad of six years was digging with a mate in the garden. I saw he was standing with animated look and head erect talking earnestly. I listened. "Where is your father, then?" I heard the other child ask. "In heaven." "He's dead, then," said Willie. "No, he isn't dead, for the good never die." "Yes they do, Eddie, or else they would not get into heaven." "I tell you Willie, that THE GOOD never die. My mother says so, and the Bible too, for God sends his angels and takes them right up there and they live forever." I went into my closet trembling. If my child had gathered up these thoughts from my teachings what else had he learned from my words and by my daily life? I could only cry, "Dear Lord, help me always to lead my child aright."

Children catch the style of those who attract them, and sometimes charm us by their ideas and ways of true politeness. It reminds me of two young girls who once lived near us whom all our visitors admired for their natural, simple, quiet ways. Their mother was unlearned, but beautiful for simplicity of style and modesty. They had without knowing it copied her. "I see my own faults reproduced in my son," said a father to me many years since. "I'm trying now to correct my own faults to save my son." I have watched that son and loved him half my life. He is one who preaches the very things he himself practices, and God adds to his church those who love him. Much is due to that father's thoughtfulness and self-denial; and not only will he reap a blessed reward for so doing, but so will all others who put away follies and sins from their own lives for the sake of their influence. God will crown it with success.

OLD AGE CREEPING ON.

"We do not realize," says a writer, "that we are growing old, until it becomes an accomplished fact. Children grow up around us, but we get used to that, and seldom stop to compute their ages, and realize the swift flight of the years. In fact, our children never get old to us. The wife who has stood lovingly and faithfully at our side so long, never changes, and is always the fair young bride of the old and happy days. And so with the husband to the wife. Though his hair may have grown gray in some way which we do not understand, and his firm step may seem a little less elastic or firm than it was, the husband does not seem to have changed much, after all. The friends of your youth become gray-headed; yet they are not old. Some one—he may have been a philosopher—has said that if we doubt whether we are really growing old, we should look in the face of a friend whom we have not seen for twenty years. The writer, a few days ago, looked in the face of a friend whom he had not seen for nearly forty years. What his friend's thoughts were of him, he does not know. They were both too polite to express their thoughts. He knows that he kept wondering, and wonders yet, what had happened to his friend that he should look so very old. It was a shock to him, and brought him face to face with an unwelcome fact."

"O God, thou hast taught me from my youth: and hitherto have I declared thy wondrous works. Now, also, when I am old and gray-headed, O God, forsake me not, until I have showed thy strength unto this generation, and thy power to every one that is to come." Psa. 71: 17, 18.

A DIVIDED CHURCH.

"Thorough-going unbelief is on the increase, and the church with its endless division is weak to cope with it. The very spectacle presented by the divided church, broken up into innumerable sects, is apt to breed contempt in the unbelieving camp, and to supply it with an additional weapon against the faith. Our Lord prayed for the unity of the church as fitted to convince the world that he had a divine mission. Does not the division of the church, and the estrangements of its various sections tend in the opposite direction—to the thought that Christianity is not a divine or exceptional religion, but like all other religions, a product of the human spirit and vitiated by its weaknesses?.... Missionaries feel that they cannot afford to let the heathen see in their operation a reflection of the divided state of the church, that it is a matter of life and death to them to wear to the world the aspect of unity. And the home churches respect and sympathize with their feeling, and are beginning to take action in the direction of union in the foreign mission sphere. It is to be hoped that the time will ere long come when the pressure of unbelief within the pale of Christendom will be felt not less strongly than that of outside paganism. When that time does come it will be seen, and in some practical and effective way be acknowledged, that in comparison with the common faith "such differences as those which divide" many believers, "are literally of no account."—Prof. Alexander Bruce, in Independent.

"THEN I WILL ASK YOURS, JOSEPH."—Joseph Bradford was for some years the traveling companion of the renowned preacher John Wesley, for whom he would have sacrificed health and even life, but to whom his will would never bend, except in meekness.

"Joseph," said Mr. W., one day, "take these letters to the post."

"I will take them after preaching, sir."

"Take them now, Joseph."

"I wish to hear you preach, sir; and there will be sufficient time for the post after service."

"I insist upon your going now, Joseph."

"I will not go at present."

"You won't!"

"No, sir."

"Then you and I must part."

"Very good, sir." The good men slept over it. Both were early risers. At four o'clock the next morning the refractory helper was accosted with, "Joseph, have you considered what I said—that we must part?"

"Yes, sir."

"And must we part?"

"Please yourself, sir."

"Will you ask my pardon, Joseph?"

"No, sir."

"You won't?"

"No, sir."

"Then I will ask yours, Joseph." Poor Joseph was instantly melted; smitten as by the word of Moses, when forth gushed the tears, like the water from the rock. He had a tender soul; and it was soon observed when the appeal was made to the heart instead of the head.—Sel.

The children should be trained to put their things away in an orderly manner and in the assigned places. There should be a closet or a set of shelves for the children, and each should have his or her place to which his right should be protected. Thus the good mother saves trouble for herself, and, which is more important to every good mother's mind, saves trouble for her boys and girls, who will carry the habits of the nursery into the school-room, the counting-room and the parlor; in short, into life.

HOME HINTS.

Waste of sugar in cooking.—At a sanitary convention in Michigan, the President of the State Board of Health called attention to a bad practice of cooks, by which cane sugar is converted into grape sugar in cooking, thereby losing more than half of its sweetening power. Some women, he said, will put the sugar in with a mass of acid fruit to be cooked, and keep cooking and keep adding sugar, while it keeps on growing sourer, until at last they will use two and a half times as much sugar as they ought, to secure the desired result. The cane sugar has been changed to grape sugar. Now, if the sugar had been added after the fruit was cooked, much less would have been required, and the result would have been far more satisfactory.

Rusting Iron Tea-kettles.—The second of these recipes, lately published in the New York Tribune, appears to be a new one: Place one or more oyster-shells in the bottom of the tea-kettle, having first removed all the rust that will come off conveniently. When, after a few months, the shells become coated with rust, remove and supply fresh ones. Since trying this remedy I have no trouble with rusty tea-kettles. An infallible remedy for a rusty tea-kettle is to brown coffee in it. A thorough washing with soap and water will remove all the odor and smoke of the coffee, and leave the kettle smooth and free from rust.

THINGS WORTH KNOWING

1. That fish may be scaled much easier by dipping in boiling water about a minute.
2. That fish may be as well scaled, if desired, before packing them down in salt; though, in that case, don't scald them.
3. Salt fish are quickest and best freshened by soaking in sour milk.
4. That milk which is turned or changed may be sweetened and rendered fit for use again by stirring in a little soda.
5. That salt will curdle new milk; hence, in preparing milk porridge, gravies, etc., the salt should not be added until the dish is prepared.
6. That fresh meat, after beginning to sour, will sweeten if placed out of doors in the cool over night.
7. That clear boiling water will remove tea stains and many fruit stains. Pour the water through the stain, and thus prevent its spreading over the fabric.
8. That ripe tomatoes will remove ink and other stains from white cloth; also from the hands.
9. That a teaspoonful of turpentine boiled with your white clothes will aid the whitening process.
10. That boiled starch is much improved by the additon of a little sperm, or a little gum-Arabic dissolved.

11. That beeswax and salt will make your rusty flat-irons as clean and smooth as glass. Tie a lump of wax in a rag, and keep it for that purpose. When the irons are hot, rub them first with the wax-rag, then scour with a paper or cloth sprinkled with salt.

12. That blue ointment and kerosene, mixed in equal proportions, and applied to bedsteads, is an unfailing bed-bug remedy; and that a coat of whitewash is ditto for the walls of a log house.

13. That kerosene will soften boots or shoes which have been hardened by water, and render them as pliable as new.

14. That kerosene will make tin tea-kettles as bright as new. Saturate a woolen rag and rub with it. It will also remove stains from clean varnished furniture.

15. That cool rain water and soda will remove machine grease from washable fabrics.

CHILDREN'S CORNER.

THE CHOICE OF RUTH. RUTH 1:16.

BY REV. W. T. SLEEPER.

Entreat me not, ye things of earth,
Ye charms of youth, ye ties of birth,
Ye promises of fame and gold,
To turn away from Israel's fold.

I am resolved with all my heart
With God's dear church to have a part;
Her God and people mine shall be
Through time and in eternity.

Ye people of the living God,
Ye little flock of Jesse's Rod,
Your toils and triumphs I would share,
Your crown of thorns and glory wear.

Your songs of praise my tongue shall sing
Your promised Christ shall be my King,
Your earthly Zion I will love,
But more the Zion built above.

"I CAN AND WILL."

A writer in the Evangelist tells of a boy who was wise enough to decline the assistance which would have weakened him mentally and injured his self-reliance. The story, which conveys its own moral, is as follows:

I knew a boy who was preparing to enter the junior class of the New York University. He was studying trigonometry, and I gave him three examples for his next lesson.

The following day he came into my room to demonstrate his problems. Two of them he understood, but a third—a very difficult one—he had not performed. I said to him, "Shall I help you?"

"No, sir! I can and will do it, if you give me time."

I said, "I will give you all the time you wish."

The next day he came into my room to recite a lesson in the same study.

"Well, Simon, have you worked that example?"

"No, sir," he answered; "but I can and will do it, if you give me a little more time."

"Certainly, you shall have all the time you desire."

I always like these boys who are determined to do their own work, for they make our best scholars, and men too. The third morning you should have seen Simon enter my room. I knew he had it, for his whole face told the story of his success.

Yes, he had it, notwithstanding it had cost him many hours of the severest mental labor.

Not only had he solved the problem, but, what was of infinitely greater importance to him, he had begun to develop mathematical powers, which, under the inspiration of "I can and I will," he has continued to cultivate, until to-day he is professor of mathematics in one of our largest colleges, and one of the ablest mathematicians of his years in our country.—Youth's Companion.

LOST IN THE WOODS—HOW TO GET OUT.

Men used to the woods are able to find their way through almost any forest by observing marks too slight to be noticed or understood by those unlearned in woodcraft. There are, however, other and more obvious ways of getting out of a forest.

If you are bewildered in a hilly country endeavor to reach a valley or trough, as you are almost certain to find running water there, and by following down the stream you are quite sure to come out—somewhere. But if you have an idea of the direction necessary to be taken—an idea that you may strengthen by taking an outlook from an exposed slope or tall tree top—you may guide yourself by the sun, making sure, by shadows of trees, that you are continuing in the direction in which you started. If the sun is not shining, or if the forest be too dense for its rays to penetrate, you must proceed more cautiously and adopt another plan, else you will find yourself walking in circles. This circle walking is caused by our one-sided development, the strong side of us leading away the weaker. Most people are right-handed and right-sided.

The right leg outwalks the left, so that when lost, where the way cannot be seen far ahead, the wanderer will usually swerve to the left until he has gone around a ring anywhere from a quarter of a mile to two miles in diameter. A left-handed man will bear off to the right. The writer, on examining his own tracks over perplexing ground, has found that while supposing himself to be walking in a straight line, he had been diverging about one foot for every thirty of advance.

In order to counteract this tendency to travel in circles the traveler must keep his direction by "ranging" trees and other objects. Having determined the direction to be pursued, select two trees as far apart as possible, that stand one behind the other, in a line with the eye. If you turn aside ever so slightly the trees will seem to fall out of line, and you may know that you are going astray. Note these trees well and walk toward them, but before reaching the first one observe some trees still further on, that stand directly in your line of march; then, before reaching the second tree, select a fouth in line with the third, and so on, always keeping a line of trees ahead of you in the direction that you intend to take. In case you are lost in an open space, rocks, stumps and bushes will serve to guide you.

In winter you can make an interesting experiment in walking at a mark, challenging your playmates to walk a straight line across a snow field, and easily winning the match unless they discover your secret. They will probably look about six feet before them, and when they turn around to see their tracks through the snow they will find that they resemble the tracks of a drunken man, for they will curve from one side to the other, while yours will be as straight as the furrow of a plow. Why? Simply for this reason—that when you started you fixed your eye upon a tree, or chimney, or steeple, or fence rail at the end of the field and walked directly towards it, or else "ranged" two or three objects in the field and kept the line.

There is still another way of going straight through an unfamiliar country, and that is by aid of the compass. If you undertake to walk by compass, first turn the box so that the black line on its inner rim will come opposite the point that indicates your route. For instance, if you find, on looking at a map or by making an examination of the country from a hill top, that to reach your destination you must travel east-northeast, turn the compass box until the black line comes in front of the point marked "E. N. E." on the disk; then face in that direction and forward march! To watch the compass incessantly would be fatiguing; if you did not notice where you were walking you might trip over a log or stumble into a bog or brook; consequently the best way is to proceed somewhat as if you were "ranging." On "taking your bearings" note some object lying east-northeasterly from your starting point—supposing that to be your direction—and walk to it without consulting your compass. On arriving at this object examine your compass again and fix upon some landmark further on in your path. Were you in a wide bare plain, prairie or sandy desert, you would have to watch your compass closely and constantly, as the helmsman does at sea, but it seldom happens that the landscape is void of any object large enough to serve as a landmark.

After offering these hints, there remains one still more important that should not be omitted, and that is: Don't get lost if you can help it.—Mastery.

NEVER SWEAR.

1. It is mean. A boy of high moral standing would almost as soon steal a sheep as swear.
2. It is vulgar—altogether too low for a decent boy.
3. It is cowardly—implying a fear of not being believed or obeyed.
4. It is ungentlemanly. A gentleman, according to Webster, is a genteel man—well-bred, refined. Such a one will no more swear than go into the street to throw mud with the chimney-sweep.
5. It is indecent—offensive to delicacy, and extremely unfit for human ears.
6. It is foolish· "Want of decency is want of sense."
7. It is abusive—to the mind which conceives the oath, to the tongue which utters it, and to the person at whom it is aimed.
8. It is venomous—showing a boy's heart to be a nest of vipers; and every time he swears one of them sticks out from his head.
9. It is contemptible—forfeiting the respect of all the wise and good.
10. It is wicked—violating the Divine law, and provoking the displeasure of him who will not hold him guiltless who takes his name in vain.—Ex.

—A Christian, proposing to join the Masonic lodge, would be greatly encouraged if he could find in some Masonic book a statement like this: "God is to the Freemason, Jehovah, as the Jews call him; that is Saviour, as the Christians call him, revealed in Jesus Christ." This would be a comforting assurance. What must be the feeling, however, on searching to find anything like it, but instead of it he runs into the following statement. p. 548 of Mackey's Ritualist, and learning the evidence of truthfulness: "God is to the Freemason, Al-Gabil, as the Arabians call him, that is the Builder; or as expressed in his Masonic title, the "Grand Architect of the Universe." Now the Arabians were idolators, not Christians; yet the Masonic god and the Arabian god are announced to be the same. This is not an isolated statement, but accords with the teachings of all Masonic writers.—Sandy Lake News.

TEMPERANCE.

It is said that the Prince of Montenegro, who some time ago closed all the cafes and drinking shops in his dominion, regarding them as schools of effeminacy extravagance and corruption, and abolished all titles, so that while formerly every other man in Montenegro was an "Excellency," now even the ministers have to be content with plain "Mr," has recently issued an interdict against all "luxurious wearing apparel," including cravats, gloves, walking sticks, parasols and umbrellas.

Congressmsn Dingley, of Maine, in an address at the recent temperance mass meeting at Lake Maranocook, took occasion to urge the adoption of the pending prohibitory constitutional amendment in that State, and in defense of prohibition he said: "Taking Maine as a whole, the number of arrests for drunkennness last year was only 2,952, or only four arrests to every thousand of the population, judging by partial statisics received.

A test case has been decided in favor of the saloon-keepers of St. Louis, who persist in violating the Downing law. Judge Noonan holds that a local and special act passed in 1857, allowing the sale of all refreshments other than distilled liquors on every day of the week including Sunday, could not be repealed by any general act, and the Downing law does not affect it. The Judge instructed the jury to find the defendant not guilty, which was promptly done. The saloon men are jubilant.

One county in Kentucky, according to a missionary of the American Sunday School Union, boasts of nineteen flourishing distilleries; and the manufacture of whisky is the chief industry of the section. "We hope," he says, "our Sunday schools will soon create a different sentiment. In one meeting in which I labored, of the fifty-five Christians present, twenty were from the Sunday school. Never before, since I came into the work, has the call to labor for the salvation of souls in the Sunday schools been so great.

Early in the year 1823 the merchants of Portland felt the necessity of having a mark for their captains to steer by if they should wish to enter the harbor at Stage Island near the pool. A monument was commenced, and, when about fifteen feet had been built, it gave way. One of the five workmen was badly injured by the accident, and one killed. In the fall of the same year the present monument was commenced. It is about twenty feet across the bottom, with walls three feet thick, and one door. It is forty feet high, and on the top is a large cap of stone. Upon the top of this cap at its completion was left a bottle of Santa Cruz rum.

Bombarding liquor shops is said to be the chief occupation of the salvation army in Calcutta. The siege is carried on very quietly, as any great salvationist excitement brings the army into trouble with the authorities. Soldiers walk up and down in front of the shops night and day, seizing on all intending customers and entreating them not to drink, generally with success. In one case the bombardment has gone on for a week, and large crowds assemble every evening to watch the fun. The proprietor of the liquor shop finds his business so diminishing that he contemplates moving off altogether.

Alas! for the Tribune, "wounded in the house of its friends," its own house in fact. For here is a paragraph from a recent letter written by ex-Governor Bross, one of its deitors, from out on the Canadian Pacific railway:

After the line passes the boundary of Manitoba, not one drop of liquor is allowed to resident or railway passenger. Baggage of all kinds is searched for it, and all that is found is incontinently confiscated. Let thirsty souls take warning and avoid the scrutiny and the unflinching energy of the "red-coats," for they do their duty with impartial severity. Gambling in any form and cognate vices are equally under the ban. Hence the contrast between the quiet and the good order of these border towns and what we have seen at Laramie, Promontory Point, and other places while our continnctal railways were building, shows what a burning curse whisky is to mankind. Where its sale is strictly forbidden by law, and that law is enforced, quiet, peace, and thrift prevail; gambling, drunkenness, and debauchery are unknown, the laborer is protected from the wiles of the wicked, and saves his hard earnings for those he loves.

Lo, a Daniel come to judgment. But where was the lynx-eyed editor when this went in? What base metal made the types that could print such statements in the Chicago Tribune. Procal a Jove, procul a fulmine.—Signal.

THE TOBACCO CURSE.

Of course every callow school-boy, straining at the end of a cigarette, thinks he knows more about tobac cothan the whole medical faculty. But possibly an exceptional smoker may be found who will "read, ponder and digest" the reasons given by the surgeon-general of the United States Army for the prohibition of tobacco in the National Military and Naval Academies. This gentleman declares: "Beyond all other things, the future health and usefulness of the lads educated at the military school require the absolute interdiction of tobacco." The most eminent authorities testify to its evil effects on the digestive organs, the nervous system, the voice and the eyesight. A special form of irritability of the heart is named "tobacco heart." In the Ecole Polytechnique, in France, the non-smokers take the highest rank. Even down South, the chewer's paradise, the best schools forbid the use of tobacco. Prof. Richard McSherry, president of the Baltimore Academy of Medicine, declares that "the effect of tobacco on school-boys is so marked as not to be open to discussion." In a late lecture on tobacco by the Rev. R. L. Carpenter, of England, the subject of its singular effect in rendering its devotees insensible to the discomfort of others, is sharply put. There is no doubt that, next to dram drinking and licentious habits, the use of tobacco is one of the most dangerous of the national focs to the true development of manhood—a habit to be discouraged by every teacher of youth.—Journal of Education.

WHY ARE THEY FIRST?

"(4) Masonic order, (5) Odd-fellows, (6) citizens" this is the way the programme for the 4th of July celebration had it iu our county this year. What great things have the Masons done for the United States that they must be honored above the common citizens on our national birthday. What does a man want to be known as a Mason or an Odd-fellow for on that day? Is it not glory enough for that day to be simply an American citizen? Every American citizen should indignantly refuse to march in any procession where the members of a despotism like that of Freemasonry thrust themselves between the common citizen and that which represents our government. Suppose it had been (4) Baptist, (5) Methodist, (6) citizens," then you would have heard a howl. Masonry and Odd-fellowship have their anniversary days and nobody thinks of putting a procession of citizens betweeu them and the head of their column. Neither would they suffer it. If Masoury is not seeking iufluence why does it intrude itself at the corner-stone laying of public buildings, uational anniversaries, etc.? Every thing that tends to give prominence and preference to any political party, church, or secret order on a national American celebration day is a vile prostitution of the spirit of the day. While we would as soon march alongside or in the rear of a Mason or Odd-fellow, simply as a citizeu, as to march with any other citizen, yet we have too much of the spirit of '76 in our make-up to ever be guilty of toading along in the rear of petty despotic orders which live in the dark and only come out on public occasions to give their regalia a little airing.—Banner of Truth.

THE FINANCES OF ODD-FELLOWSHIP.

The Providence papers give much space to the late meeting of the General Lodge of Odd-fellows in that city. The following article was sent to the Evening Telegram by a business man in Providencc and that paper refused to publish it. Read it carefully.

"In the Evening Telegram, of Providence Sept. 17, appears an article on Odd-fellowship, in which is a table of figures, showing or purporting to show, "the general condition of the order." From that table, although an incomplete one, we gather the following facts:

The receipts for 1881 were	$4,854,877.17
Paid for relief	1,831,171.38
Leaving a balance of	3,023,705.79
For 1882 the receipts were	$5,245,946.00
Relief	1,882,443.88
Balance	3,363,502.12

Of these balances nothing whatever is said in the Grand Sire's report. Why not? Surely not because of insignificance, for they represent amounts nearly double those paid for relief. What was this more than six million dollars paid for, in the short space of two years? In forming just estimates of the efficiency of the order, this point is a very important one to notice and consider. Whatever was done with it, this much is clear, that of over $10,000,000 paid into the order by its members in the two years mentioned, only $3,700,000 was received back again. This surely is a very bad showing. It could scarcely be worse. What business man would continue a business that sunk $6,300,000 of his $10,000,000 capital in two years?

And yet the report says, "Our finances are in a prosperous condition." That means, poor, hardworking men are willing to continue to pay in $5,000,000 a year, and be content to receive back $1,500,000. No financier worthy of the name, would ever do such a thing. He would put his moncy where it would bring him back some slight return at least over his investment. Book-keeper.

A. Railroad on Morality.—Dodge City, Kansas, is notorious for its Sunday gambling and drunkenness. The mauagers of the Atchison, Topeka, & Santa Fe Railroad gave notice to the people of the place that an effort to reform the city must be made or the track and machine-shops would be removed. While several railway officials waited in a special car, the council ordered the enforcement of the ordinance relative to gambling and prostitution, and passed another prohibiting music in the dance-houses. Sabbath before last, for the first time in the history of Dodge City, the gambling-houses, dance-halls, and saloons were closed. Some of the bad characters with which the place swarms are leaving in disgust. This is a good example in railroad management. These hellish whisky, gambling, aud lewd businesses are enough to drive all legitimate business from parts of our great cities —Telescope.

—The pew system in churches, both in this country and in Great Britain, is awakening considerable attention. It is fouud to be closely connected with church-going and non-church going, with attention to and neglect of church ordinauces. At a recent meeting of the London Congregational Board Rev. Newman Hall, in a special paper devoted to the subject, discussed the question in all its bearings. He compares the pew rent system to the means adopted for raisiug funds at concerts, theatres, at lectures, and similar entertainments. It differs mainly in this one thing—that it invites others than seat-holders. Dr. Newman Hall argues against the system on Oospel and upon economic grounds as well, and he comes to the conclusion that the system is not reasonable, not equitable, not expedient, and that it is beyond all question unscriptural. If for no other reason than that it makes improper distinctions in the house of God, he argues that it ought to be abandoned.

The Churches.

—In response to a strong religious conviction among the students at Wheaton, special meetings were begun on Monday evening in the College Chapel under the charge of Miss Fannie E. Townsley, former student, whose labors for several years as an evangelist have been remarkably blest by the presence of the Holy Spirit.

—Rev. G. H. Filian, the eloquent and pious Armenian, who was ordained by an undemoninatioual council of Christian churches at Wheatou during last year, is now in Constantinople where he has begun missionary labor. The Christian Commission for Native Missions is sustaining him, of which Mrs. L. A. Plumb of Streator is treasurer.

—Prof. L. N. Stratton advocates in the Wesleyan the revision of the hymn book used by that denomination by the General Conference and the selection of good and appropriate music to be printed with the hymns, that thus this part of the public worship may be made more efficient.

—The General Conference of the Wesleyan Methodist churches meets this year at headquarters Syracuse, New York, Oct. 17th. This is the eleventh quadriennial meeting of this body, and a large atteudance from all parts of the country where Wesleyan churches aae established is expected.

—Dr. John Hall, of New York, has only missed two Sundays from sickness during the sixteen years of his American ministry.

—Rev. Dr. Stephen R. Riggs the veteran missionary to the Dakotas, is dead. He was the creator of the written language of that people.

—The American Missionary Society and the Home Missionary Society acknowledges the receipt of $10,000 each from the estate of the late John B. Eldridge, of Hartford.

—Premier Gladstone, amid his constant and multifarious duties, has found time to translate into Italian Cowper's beautiful hymn, commencing

"Hark, my soul! it is the Lord,
'Tis thy Saviour, hear His word;
Jesus speaks, and speaks to thee,
'Say, poor sinner, lov'st thou Me.'"

The version will prove a most valuable additiou to the literature of the evangelical churches in Italy.

—The Kentucky Methodist conference indorsed the withdrawal of Sunday trains by the Louisville road, and resolved that campmeetings shall be abolished unless unnecessary traffic on the grounds is stopped during the Sabbath.

—The Rev. Chauncey Murch, who has been appointed Uuited Presbyterian missionary to Egypt, will probably sail for his field of labor in the month of October.

—The widow of Senator Chandler has given $1,000 to establish a scholarship in the Chicago Woman's Medical College for the benefit of women who intend to become missionaries.

—There are 120,000,000 of women and girls in India, and not more than one in every twelve hundred has yet beeu placed under any kind of Christian instruction.

—The cholera has almost disappeared from Egypt. So far as is known none of the United Presbyterian missionaries have been affected by it. A few of the native Christians have fallen. Some of these were prominent in mission work and in their places in the church. The mission suffers through the loss of them, but it is a matter of thankfulness that the lives of so many have been preserved when thousands have fallen around them.

—The Indian Witness states that "evidences multiply every year that the Holy Spirt is moving upon the great deep of Hindu and Mohammedan thought in India. Many thoughtful men are found who are deeply impressed with what they know about Christ, and the spectacle of devout Hindu worshippers in Christian churches may be witnessed in Calcutta every Sabbath. We have recently heard of a "panchayet" being called to excommunicate a number of Christians, not one of whom had been baptized. In another place a Christian friend found a company of Hindus assembled together for the purpose of seeking the way of salvation. They seemed to be earnest and sincere and were more than half Christian in their faith.

—The last news from the Livingstonia Mission in South Africa is that the whole of the New Testament has been translated into the language of the Chinyanja, and that the sections of the steam launch of the London Missionary Society have arrived at the head of Lake Nyassa.

—Rev. Wm. Paxon, superintendent of the Southwestern department of the American Sunday-school Union, gives this summary of seventeen years' work: Schools organized, 4,320; schools aided, 7,493; membership of the same, over 400,000; Bibles and Testaments distributed, 34,538; books and other supplies distributed, $52,485; expenscs of the work, $118,813.

—Rev. Henry Blodgett, for mauy years a missionary in China, after a vacation of two years spent in this country, has returned to his field. He was offered $5,000 a year to ast as an interpreter, but dcclined it, preferring to continue a missionary.

—Religious statistics show the total amount contributed by the various dcnominations in the United States the past year for benevolent and congregational purposes to be $106,962,000, of which the amount collected for purely beneficial purposes is $31,331,160. The amount contributed for church purposes, including the maintenance of the church, sustaining the ministry, etc., is $75,252, 866. There are 92,653 Protestant churches in the United States, with 71,602 ministers and 9,003,030 members. These figures may safely be left to tell their own story.

—The Baptist Christians in Hungary have suffered much from persecution the past year, according to the Examiner. More than 15 have been imprisoned in filthy jails for several uights and days without food. Some of them were carried a disiance of 25 miles in chains, returning home sick and sore with the chafing of their fetters. In some cases the imprisonment has been repeated. Several members were seriously injured by stones thrown at them during a baptismal service at Derecske; and one opposer beat out a sister's brains with an irou pitchfork. Two policemen forcibly carried away the child of a Baptist family in order to have it christened by a priest, and the pareuts were fined ten shillings. In some places the houses of the brethren have been nearly demolished and rendered uninhabitable. Taxation for the support of the State church has also pressed heavily upon the Hungarian brethren, and in some instances resulted in the seizure of their goods.

A NEATLY PRINTED SIXTEEN PAGE WEEKLY JOURNAL, UNSECTARIAN AND OPPOSED TO SECRET SOCIETIES.

THE POLE STAR OF REFORM.

EVERY Christian, every Prohibitionist aud every Patriot should read it for the following among other reasons:

1. Because it meets the wants of the general public by giving in brief the latest reliable information on all questions of Reform, having the special object of exposing and opposing organized secrecy. Besides able editorial, contributed and selected articles upon this topic, which is of more than national importance, it has interesting sketches of progress and incidents from the reform lecturers in all parts of the country, reform news and notes, letters from the Old World, etc., etc. It is the especial organ of this movement in America—a movement which is sustained by the utterances of some of the ablest statesmen and divines whom the country has produced. Every person interested in either the family, government, or religion—the most sacred interests of humanity—is directly affected by secret societies, aud needs to keep posted in this movement.

2. Because it is uncompromising on ALL questions of the day. On temperance, tobacco, Sabbath desecration, Mormonism, the Southern and Indian questions, civil-service reform, monopolies, the rights of labor, and every other question, its only aim is to be RIGHT, and advocate the TRUTH. It is hence FEARLESS and OUTSPOKEN.

2. Because it emphasizes the fact that political action should be directed by conscience enlightened by the Word and Spirit of God and that Christ must be acknowledged King of Nations, and presents a platform epitomizing the science of civil governments based on the supreme authority of the Divine Word.

4. Because, in addition to these features, it contains a choice selection of wholesome reading for the family, from oldest to youngest, with religious and secular news, market reports, etc.

It is now owned and published by the

—There is now a boat on the Thames which is successfully propelled by electricity. The expense is about the same as that of steam, but the convenience is much greater, and there is no heat, or smoke or cinders. That electricity is to be the motor of the future on the water as well as on the land there is very little doubt.

Growth of a Large Industry

Such has been the growth of the bnsiness of Wm. Knabe & Co., piano manufactnrers, that even their immense factories have not been large enongh for them. To accommodate their increasing business they have leased a large and convenient bnilding jnst opposite their factories. The building was formerly used as a tobacco factory, and its size snits well for the pnrposes to which it will now be pnt. The bnilding is on the sonthwest corner of Entaw and West srreets, fronting 155 feet on West street and 45 feet deep, with an engine honse 40 by 45 feet. It is four stories in height, with a basement. By this extensive addition the firm will be able to increase its production to 70 pianos a week.—Baltimore American.

History of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan. As prepared by seven committees of citizens, appointed to ascertain the fate of Morgan. This book contains indisputable, legal evidence that Freemasons abducted and murdered Wm. Morgan, for no other offense than the revelation of Masonry. It contains the sworn testimony of over twenty persons, including Morgan's wife; and no candid person, after reading this book, can donbt that many of the most respectable Freemasons in the Empire State were concerned in this crime. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

Judge Whitney's Defense before the Grand Lodge of Illinois. Judge Daniel H. Whitney was Master of the lodge when S. L. Keith, a member of his lodge, murdered Ellen Slade. Judge Whitney, by attempting to bring Keith to justice, brought on himself the vengeance of the lodge, but he boldly replied to the charges against him, and afterwards renounced Masonry. 15 cents each; per dozen, $1.25.

Ex-President John Quincy Adams' Letters on the Nature of Masonic Oaths, Obligations and Penalties. Thirty most interesting, able and convincing letters on the above general subject, written by this renowned statesman to different public men of the United States during the years 1831 to 1833. With Mr. Adams' address to the people of Massachusetts upon political aspects of lodgery; an Appendix giving obligations of Masonry, and an able Introduction. This is one of the most telling anti-secrecy works extant, aside from the Expositions. Price, cloth, $1.00; per dozen, $9.00. Paper, 35 cents; per dozen, $3.50.

Oaths and Penalties of Freemasonry, as proved in court in the New Berlin Trial. Also the letter of Hon. Richard Rush to the anti-Masonic committee of York County, Pa., May 4th, 1831. The New Berlin trials began in the attempt of Freemasons to prevent public initiations by seceding Masons. These trials were held at New Berlin, Chenango Co., N. Y., April 13 and 14th, 1831, and General Augustus C. Welsh, sheriff of the county, and other adhering Freemasons, swore to the truthful revelation of the oaths and penalties. 10 cents each; per dozen, $1.00.

Oaths and Penalties of the 33 Degrees of Freemasonry. To get these thirty-three degrees of Masonic bondage, the candidate takes half-a-million horrible oaths. 15 cents each; per dozen, $1.00.

OUR NEW AMERICAN LEVER WATCH!

After months of labor and experiment, we have at last brought to perfection A NEW WATCH. It is a Key Winding Watch with the celebrated Anchor Lever Movement, Expansion Balance, Fully Jeweled.

They are made of the best material, and in the very best manner so as to insure good time-keeping qualities. The Cases are made of our Celebrated Composition metal known as Aluminum Gold. This metal has a sufficient amount of gold in the composition to give the watch a genuine gold appearance. Indeed it cannot be told from a genuine Gold Watch except by the best judges as the metal stands the acid test as well as pure gold. The cases are finely engraved or engine turned and are massive and strong and very handsome making it just the watch for Railroad men, Mechanics and all laboring men who require a good strong watch and an accurate time-keeper. For trading and speculative purposes, it is superior to any watch ever before offered. They can be sold readily for $15 and $20 each, and traded so as to realize double those amounts. Farmers as well as Agents can handle these watches to advantage, as they can be readily exchanged for stock or goods. We send the watch free by registered mail, on receipt of $8.00. Or we will send it C. O. D. on receipt of $1.00 on account; the balance can be paid at the express office. We also have very fine Aluminum Gold Chains at $1,00 each. Beautiful Medallion Charms 50 cents. We have hundreds of testimonials, but have room for only two.

Hot Springs, Ark. June 3d, 1882.

World Man'f'g Co. Gents:—The New American Aluminum Gold Watch I ordered of you some time ago was duly received, and I am so well pleased with it that I enclose Seven Dollars, P. O. order, on account, for which please forward by express C. O. D. for balance, three more of the same style with chains to match. Respectfully, Carleton Taylor.

Leavenworth, Kan., Aug. 7th, 1882.

World Man'f'g Co. Gents.—The Aluminum Gold American Lever Watch purchased from your firm has proved a good time-keeper, and gives perfect satisfaction. Enclosed find cash for two more, same style. Yours, G. P. Eckert.

Send all orders to WORLD MANUF'G CO.
122 Nassau Street, New York.

It is seldom that we meet with an article that so fully corresponds with its advertised good qualities as does the New American Lever Watch. It has the advantage of being made of that precious metal Aluminum Gold; its works are of the best make, and the general style of the case rank it with the best Watches made anywhere. We recommend it to our readers as a Watch that will give entire satisfaction.

FARM NOTES.

—Grapes, peaches, and other perishable fruit may be preserved fresh for a long time it is said in carbonized wheat bran.

According to a St. Paul paper, the Big Woods of Minnesota are rightly named, for they cover 5,000 square miles, or 3, 200,000 acres of surface. These woods contain only hardwood growths, including white and black oak, maple, hickory, basswood, elm, cottonwood, tamarack, and enough other varieties to make an aggregate of over thirty different kinds. This hardwood tract extends in a belt across the middle of the state, and surrounding its northeastern corner is an immense pine region covering 21,000 square miles, or 13, 440,000 square acres.

Undoubtedly the best grass for low land that remains moist during the greater portions of the year is fowl meadow. The hay is especially valuable for horses, being free from dust, and containing as much nutriment as the best tame hay. Dairymen who are acquainted with it consider it valuable hay for milk cows. The grass grows to a heighth of two and three feet, and yields from one-half to two and a half tons of hay per acre. The season for pasturing it is May to November, and the season for cutting the hay is from July to August.

Dr. E. L. Sturtevant, speaking of the fecundity of weeds, speaks of one vigorous purselane plant which contained nine branches, the average branch 15 branchlets, the average branchlet 212 seed capsules, one average seed capsule 75 seeds, thus making for an estimate a grand total of 2,146,500 seeds.

Beans as Food for Sheep.—People who are keeping sheep in the west, especially those who are located on or near the great plains, would do well to experiment in raising field beans for food during the fall and winter. Beans do better on poor and dry soils than almost any other crop that is raised for stock. By planting the seed as soon as danger from frosts is over the crop can be matured before the summer drouths occur. The value of beans for sheep has been acknowledged by all who have feed them out. They contain a very large amount of nitrogen which adds to the formation of flesh. They constitute the most concentrated food that is fed to stock with the exception of oil-cake or cotton-seed. The amount of nutriment contained in beans is remarkable. The owners of mines in South America compel their workmen to eat a ration of beans every two or three days whether they relish them or not. Sheep of all ages are very fond of beans, and will eat them in preference to any kind of food offered them. They may be raised to good advantage on inverted sod by sowing the seed broadcast and covering it with a harrow. They may be raised in the same manner on old ground that is free from grass and weeds. It is better, however, to plant them in drills and to work the ground between them with a cultivator. Beans should not be cultivated when the vines are wet with rain or dew, as disturbing the leaves at these times causes them to rust. When mature, the vines should be pulled from the ground, partially dried in the sun, and then placed under cover or in small stacks. A stack for beans can be made by driving three stakes into the ground about three feet apart so as to form the corners of a triangle. The stakes should incline outward so they will be about four feet apart at the top. A support for the vines can be made by tying withes or cords about the stakes a foot or more above the surface of the ground. The vines should be crowded between the stakes with their roots toward the inside. The stacks when completed should be egg-shaped. The top may be covered with long grass or straw so it will completely shed rain. The beans can be thrashed at any time they are wanted with a hand-flail. It is not necessary to thrash them for sheep, as they will eat the entire pods and the leaves that remain on the vines.

The Best Breeds of Cattle.—The question is often asked, Which is the best breed of cattle a farmer can keep? It is impractical to answer the question without knowing for what purpose the animals are raised and where they are to be kept. If the production of beef is the sole object of raising cattle, a farmer can not do better than devote his attention to raising Herefords, short-horns, polled Angus, or Devon cattle. The former are preferable for farms in a good state of cultivation and well supplied with barns, and the latter for portions of the country where animals are obliged to travel long distances in search for food, and to get along with little protection. The polled Angus and Devon cattle are of comparatively small size and quite active, and are accordingly well adapted to traveling. They are also hardy, and capable of enduring considerable exposure without great injury. The best dairy stock is afforded by the Holstein, Ayrshire, and Jersey cattle. Holstein cows are generally preferred by farmers who produce milk for supplying towns and cities, Ayrshire cows by those who are interested in the manufacture of cheese, and Jersey cows by those who desire to make superior butter, or supply their own tables with very rich milk and cream. The Jersey is specially adapted to the wants of persons in towns, as it does well when kept in confinement, consumes a comparatively small amount of food, and continues to give milk during the greater portion of the year. Many short-horns, particularly those belonging to the Princess family, are large milkers. The Holsteins, Ayrshires, and short-horns are readily fattened when they have become too old to breed or to give a large amount of milk. For working cattle, there is nothing superior to the Devons, as they are strong and lively. The short-horns and Herefords mature early, and on that account are preferred by farmers who desire to turn off their stock when the animals are three years old, or younger. In deciding which breed of cattle to keep, a farmer should take into consideration the purpose for which they are designed and the kind of treatment they are to be given.

Cause and Cure of Shying.—Shying or dodging horses are made so, generally, by impaired eyesight, which gives them an imperfect view of objects, and they do not recognize ordinary things and are frightened by them; whereas, if they could see well they would not shy. Poor eyesight may be caused by over-heating, over-drawing and by wolf teeth. For the first there should be cooling diet, such as grass, carrots, and bran-mashes, together with laxative medicine, glauber salts being the best, fed daily with the mashes, one-fourth pound, until the animal gives evidence, by the brightness of its coat and general appearance, that its blood has become purified and the fever is out of it. When this condition is reached the eyesight will be improved and perhaps restored. Over-loading horses is both stupid and wicked and strains the nerves of the eyes, for which the only remedy is to wash the eyes two or three times daily with a mild extract of witch-hazel or some good eye-water. When this straining is severe nothing will cureit, and the horse usually becomes blind.

Smith's Tonic Syrup
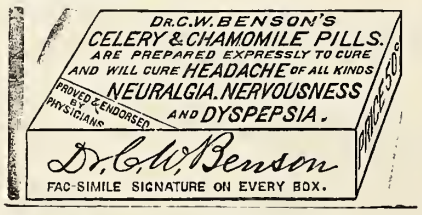
FEVER and ACUE
Or CHILLS and FEVER.
AND ALL MALARIAL DISEASES.



The proprietor of this celebrated medicine justly claims for it a superiority over all remedies ever offered to the public for the SAFE, CERTAIN, SPEEDY and PERMANENT cure of Ague and Fever, or Chills and Fever, whether of short or long standing. He refers to the entire Western and Southern country to bear him testimony to the truth of the assertion that in no case whatever will it fail to cure if the directions are strictly followed and carried out. In a great many cases a single dose has been sufficient for a cure, and whole families have been cured by a single bottle, with a perfect restoration of the general health. It is, however, prudent, and in every case more certain to cure, if its use is continued in smaller doses for a week or two after the disease has been checked, more especially in difficult and long-standing cases. Usually this medicine will not require any aid to keep the bowels in good order. Should the patient, however, require a cathartic medicine, after having taken three or four doses of the Tonic, a single dose of BULL'S VEGETABLE FAMILY PILLS will be sufficient.

The genuine SMITH'S TONIC SYRUP must have DR. JOHN BULL'S private stamp on each bottle. DR. JOHN BULL only has the right to manufaoture and sell the original JOHN J. SMITH'S TONIC SYRUP, of Louisville, Ky. Examine well the label on each bottle. If my private stamp is not on each bottle do not purchase, or you will be deceived.

NIGHTS IN A BAR-ROOM

T. S Arthur's great temperance book, complete and illustrated. By mail, 5c each; 50c per doz. By express, $3.50 per 100.

THE LIQUOR TRAFFIC THE GREAT SOURCE OF CRIME.

Leaves from the diary of an old lawyer.—By Hon. A. B. Richmond, author of "Court and Prison," etc. A book of intense interest, rivaling the famous "Diary of a Physician," and, in its truthful, terrible pictures of the power and crime of intemperance, excelling the well-known "Ten Nights in a Bar-room." The temperance issue of the present time is Shall prohibition be partial or entire? Shall the branches of the death-bearing tree be pruned and trimmed, or shall the tree itself be cut down and its stump be torn up by the roots? The answer of "Leaves from the Diary" is, "Cut down the tree, tear up the roots, leave not a shoot or shred behind. It is certainly a very strong and eloquent volume. Complete edition on fine, heavy paper, with colored lithograph of Sewall's stomach plates. By mail, 30c each, $3 per doz. By express, $20 per 100. Abridged edition, by mail, 15c; $1.25 per doz. By express, $9 per 100.

THE LIQUOR TRAFFIC AND THE SOBER CITIZEN.

An able and telling work, by Rev. J. H. Sherman, which brings out the effects of the liquor traffic in a new light. The following are some of the commendations of the first edition

"The author drives the nails of conviction through and clinches them."—N. Y. Christian Advocate.

"Speakers and workers in the temperance field will find valuable aid in this pamphlet. It is crowded with convincing facts."—Zion's Herald

"One of the ablest reviews of the drink curse ever issued from the press."—The Morning and Day of Reform.

"The arguments are put in telling form."—Judge Pittman.

New revised and enlarged edition. By mail, 10c each, $1 per doz. By express, $6 per 100.

DRINKS FROM DRUGS.

A startling exposure of the liquor traffic, by El. Johnson. A book that cannot fail to arouse the American people to the gigantic swindle now being perpetrated. The writer was offered $10,000 by a leading brewer to keep still. Liquor not only doctored, but made entirely from drugs. Extracts from a whole library of secret books, giving receipts for making and doctoring; advertisements of essences, fac-similes of labels, engravings, etc. etc. Claret, port, sherry, champagne, whisky, brandy, gin, rum, etc., all out of one barrel, and made at less than 25 cents a quart. Wine that never saw grape juice; cider that never saw apples; beer factories in place of breweries, fine cream ale without barley or brewing; whisky from arsenic; millions of gallons of liquo; that pays no revenue tax. The farmer's corn and barley "all in your eye." A wholesale liquor store in a ten-foot square cellar; more French wine sold in New York City than is produced in the whole of France. By mail, 10c each; $1 per doz. By Express, $6 per 100.

W. C. T. U. ORGANIZATION AND WORK.

A book of general information on how to organize and run successfully a Woman's Christian Temperance Union. This book should be widely distributed among W. C. T. U. presidents, pastor's wives and other representative women. By mail, 10c each; $1 per doz. By express, $6 per 100.

HOME PROTECTION.

A lawyer's view of it. By J. C. Wells, attorney-at-law. The question of female suffrage for the protection of home ably discussed from a lawyer's standpoint. A book for the times. By mail, 10c each; $1 per doz. By express, $6 per 100.

BAND OF HOPE RECITERS.

172 pages. 164 choice recitations of poetry and prose, containing some of the choicest bits of temperance material for the platform ever uttered, accompanied by an article on elocution. By mail, 10c each; $1 per doz. By express, $6 per 100

GENERAL TEMPERANCE SONG BOOK.

"Temperance Songs," a Book for Adult Societies.—Eighty-three choice pieces, both words and music (old and new tune combination) choice selections from standard temperance collections, many choice new pieces. Book carefully edited by David C. Cook. Will prove just what is wanted by every temperance society. Price in strong cardboard covers, by mail, 10c each; $1 per dozen; by express, $5 per 100.

TEMPERANCE ANTHEM BOOK.

Temperance Anthems.—A new idea; nothing else of the kind in existence. Will insure good music by the choir at temperance meetings. Forty-eight pages of choice anthems by ablest writers. By mail, 15c each; $1.50 per doz. By express, $10 per 100.

BAND OF HOPE SONG BOOK.

Band of Hope Songs.—Fifty-seven choice pieces for juvenile temperance gatherings, Bands of Hope, etc. Old, familiar tunes, also choice new words and music. Words far in advance of anything else issued. By mail, 8c each; 75c per doz. By express, $4 per 100.

DANIEL'S BAND.

A temperance concert exercise, with parts suitable for all ages; entirely new. Songs, recitations, dialogues, etc., of a thoroughly aggressive character; sure to carry weight with the rendering of it. By mail, 5c each; 50c per dozen. By express, $2 per 100.

THE COLD WATER ARMY.

For a primary temperance concert exercise. An entirely new exercise, containing songs and recitations, dialogues, etc., suitable for primary scholars. A pleasing and telling concert on temperance. By mail, 5c each; 50c per dozen. By express, $2 per 100.

x-ford Teacher's Bible.

A Bible Concordance, Commentary etc., All in One.

The "Oxford" Teachers' Bible contains, besides the text with the celebrated Oxford references, a Cruden's Concordance with 25,000 references; Oxford Index with 2,345 words, pronouncing dictionary of proper names with meanings; Scripture atlas of twelve maps, correct to latest survey, including alphabetical list of Bible names arranged with figures and letters indicating location on maps; condensed Bible history of Old and New Testament with interval between chronology of Old Testament and chronology of the New; a complete harmony of the Gospels; etymology, geography and topography of Palestine; mountains, lakes and rivers of the Bible, with special tabular summary; birds, reptiles, insects, trees, plants, flowers, minerals, precious stones, etc.; weights, measures, time and money; obsolete and ambiguous words, and words used as symbols; Paul's voyage to Rome; Paul's missionary journey; history of Jewish sects; parables of our Lord; parables of the Old Testament; miracles of our Lord; miracles of the New Testament; prophecies concerning Christ; titles of Christ; special prayers; chart of the family of the Herodes, etc., etc.

SIZES.—Our small size Bible is 4x5½ inches. Our medium size, 4½x6½. Our large size, 5x7¾.

Our small and medium sizes are most popular ones. Large size for those desiring large type Bible.

$1.30. For $1.30, small size genuine Oxford Teacher; complete in every respect; same as the very best; strongly bound in morocco covers, with gilt edges; in large, clear print. Book of 1,408 pages.

Postage, 9cts.

For $2.20 Same style of binding as above described, Teachers' medium size, red edges instead of gilt. Postage, 12c.

For $5.40 Same style of binding, large size, gilt edges. Postage, 20c.

For $1.60 Small size genuine Oxford Teacher, gilt edges, flexible morocco cover, circuit, or protection, leather all around. Postage, 10cts.

For $2.50 The same style of binding, medium size. Postage, 12c.

THE PERSIAN SEAL BINDING

Is very handsome and durable. It is this style of binding which is so much admired by Bible readers. Please notice particularly that these Bibles are kid lined and silk sewed. Many Bibles in this style outwardly are lined with black paper and sewed with thread in place of silk.

$2.30 PERSIAN SEAL. For $2.30 we furnish a small size Oxford, bound in Persian seal, full flexible; can be bent back, doubled or rolled, without injury. Divinity circuit, gilt edges, kid lined, silk sewed, with book-mark and band Postage, 10c.

For $3.30 The same style of binding, medium size. Postage, 12c.

For $5.75 The same style of binding, large size. Postage, 20c.

LEVANT MOROCCO BINDING.

The Persian Seal bindings are the best kept by most Bible dealers, and usually pass for the best teachers' Bibles made; and, to all appearance, they are so. There is, however, a better wearing binding, of which the Persian Seal is a good imitation; this is known as "Levant Morocco." In all respects the Levant morocco Bible corresponds with the Persian Seal description, except as to leather used for cover which, though looking like the Persian Seal, is stronger, and will last a lifetime.

Prices on genuine Levant Morocco bindings:

For $4.50—Small size. Postage, 10c.
For $5.50—Medium size. Postage, 12c.
For $8.00—Large size. Postage, 20cts.

Handsome Gift Bibles at Low Prices.

For 45c. Embossed morocco cover, gilt edges, gilt title on back. Very neat and durable. This is the handsomest 45c. gift Bible we have ever seen. Postage, 5c.

For 60c. Morocco cover, brass bound and plated, with handsome gilt clasp and gilt edges; two patterns; square and round corners. Exquisite lettering on side; printed in large clear type. Bibles no better are sold as high as $1 and $2. Postage, 6c.

For 70c. Similar size and style of binding to our 60-cent Bible; square corners, brass bound, with clasp and handsome tasseled book-mark; also medallion inserted on side in gold and red.

This was a new importation with the fall of 1882, and a very pretty design. It should be seen to be appreciated. (See cut.) Postage, 6c.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

—Chief Justice Coleridge of England was given a banquet at the Leland House, Chicago, last Wednesday evening.

—James G. Blaine has leased his new and magnificent residence in Washington to Mr. L. Z. Leiter of Chicago, for a term of years, who will take possession this fall. Ex-Secretary Blaine and family will probably pass the winter in Washington, however, as he is almost compelled to finish his book here.

—It was discovered last week Monday that relic-hunters or ruffians had defaced Daniel Webster's statue at Marshfield, Mass.

—The Agricultural Department of Kansas places the corn yield at over 206,000,000 bushels—50,000,000 bushels more than last year.

—Grip-cars for public travel were put on the Brooklyn bridge for the first time Sept. 24th, running smoothly, and making the trip across in about eight minutes.

—The old mill in Menard county, Ill., referred to in all biographies of Abrabam Lincoln, was burned Sept. 23, with all its contents. It was originally built in 1829 by William G. Greene, better known as "Sticky" Greene, who afterward took Lincoln into partnership with him under the firm name of Greene & Lincoln. It was at this mill, where the old store was kept, at which Lincoln met the early settlers of the State.

—The steamer Colorado, freight laden to Chicago, burst her boiler near Buffalo Saturday night. Two of the crew were killed and a number severely scalded.

—At Erie Saturday Mr. George Watts placed in the hands of Lawyer Firch a copy of the notorious book, "The Memoirs of George IV.," of which it was supposed all copies extant had been destroyed, and for which, some years since, the British Government offered $1,000 per copy. Mr. Firch will negotiate its return to the English authorities for the present owner.

—Three men attacked an A. T. and Santa Fe passenger train at Coolidge, Kan., Saturday, for the purpose of robbing the express car. Engineer John Hilton, for refusing to stop the train, was shot dead, and the fireman, was severely wounded. The express messengers, however, repulsed the bandits after several shots had been fired, one slightly injuring Messenger Peterson. The attempted robbery causes much excitement, and posses from Topeka, Dodge City, and other points are hunting the band.

—Near Shakopee, Minn., Friday morning, the broken section of a freight train on the Minneapolis and St. Louis road, ran into another division, telescoping some cars, and instantly killing the engineer, fireman, a brakeman, and a cattle driver.

—Three masked men entered the express car of a passenger train between Roann and Laketon, Ind., Thursday, bound the messenger, and took from the safe some $15,000 in currency and coin. The robbers quitted the train at Roann, and the crime was not discovered until Peru was reached, where the messenger was found insensible in his car.

—The boiler of the steamer J. S. Robinson, lying at an Albany dock, exploded early Friday morning, killing three persons instantly, and wounding many others. Crafts lying contiguous to the Robinson were badly damaged. The shock of the explosion resembled an earthquake, and caused consternation in the vicinity. There were many narrow escapes from death.

—While the brothers, Samuel G., William O., and Thomas Rogers, were taking depositions Thursday at Blue Lick, Ky., in their father's will contest, Samuel, who is President of the Farmers' Bank at Carlisle, drew his revolver and shot his two brothers, inflicting mortal wounds. William is a St. Louis lawyer and Thomas is a farmer. The fratricide claims that he thought his brothers were about to fire at him.

—A cargo of 1,000 sheep from Canada was ordered slaughtered at Liverpool Friday, because one sheep showed symptoms of the "scab." A Canadian authority thinks the disease was merely a skin eruption caused by the rough ocean passage.

—A new General of the Jesuit order succeeding Pere Beckx, has been chosen at Rome, but his name is kept secret. The contest is alleged to have been a warm one.

—A fire broke out Monday morning in the rocket factory in Woolwich Arsenal, resulting in the destruction of the structure and frightful explosions. Some of the war rockets, containing explosives traveled a distance of five miles, and many buildings in Woolwich and surrounding towns were wrecked. Two persons were killed.

—At Verna, Spain, Saturday, a barrel of powder exploded in a wineshop, killing fifteen persons and wounding six.

—The Nassau Guardian of Sept. 12, in a report of the recent hurricanes in the West Indies, says: The schooner Victor, from this port to Jamaica was lost, and Charles Welch, a lady from Belize, and three men were drowned. The Monteagle was lost with all on board. The Carleton, from Nassua, with the mails and fourteen passengers for Inagua, was driven by the gale on a reef on the north side of Elenthorn, and became a total wreck, and twelve passengers were drowned. The number of lives lost during the hurricane is very great, fifty-three having been reported up to the present time. The craft of all kinds damaged or sunk (but the crews were saved) number fully one hundred.

POSTAL NOTES.

Some may have the idea that the new postal note ensures safety; but the only security is as heretofore in post-office orders, drafts, registered letters and by express. I prefer postage stamps to postal notes, but the better way is to send by registered letter or post-office money order.

W. I. Phillips,
Treasurer.

NOTES.

We again wish to call the attention of canvassers for the Cynosure to the necessity of their stating in their letters that there is an extra copy due them, when such is the fact.

1st. Unless you do state it, the subscription clerk may not think of it.

2d. When you send in a few names at a time, it is impossible for us to keep the account so as to know when each has his quota of subscribers, for we have not the time.

3d. Some have preferred not to take any commission though sending in full clubs. But we wish it clearly understood that if anyone who wishes it has failed to receive his extra number of the Cynosure or any commission due, we hope that they will write us at once that we may correct the error.

4th. We are doing the business for you, friends and if it is not done satisfactorily we hope you will write us a personal letter.

REMEMBER!!

The largest subscription list reported by January 1st., 1884 earns a Webster Unabridged Dictionary; the next largest an Anti-masonic Library: the third, a copy of "In the Coils;" the fourth, a copy of "Holden with Cords." Let the word go round for a list of 10,000. Let each old subscriber send a new one, and the work will be done before we realize that an effort has been made.

CONSUMPTION CURED.

An old physician, retired from practice, having had placed in his hands by an East India missionary, the formula of a simple vegetable remedy for the speedy and permanent cure of Consumption, Bronchitis, Catarrh, Asthma and all throat and Lung Affections, also a positive and radical cure for Nervous Debility and all Nervous Complaints, after having tested its wonderful curitive powers in thousands of cases, has felt it his duty to make it known to his suffering fellows. Actuated by this motive and a desire to relieve human suffering. I will send free of charge, to all who desire it, this recipe, in German, French or English, with full directions for preparing and using. Sent by mail by addressing with stamp, naming this paper, W. A. Noyes, 149 Power's Block, Rochester, N. Y.

October 1st will be long remembered as the era of two-cent letter postage. It is a very popular one since in one city alone 1,250,000 two-cent stamps, 400,000 two-cent envelopes, and 85,000 four-cent or double rate stamps were sold. There were, of course, many droll mistakes. Some of our foreign-born friends took it that they must no longer pay a five-cent rate on letters to fatherland. Some 500 of these were stopped in New York. Our Postmaster General is already proposing yet further accommodations for the people; and it is said will propose to Congress that the weight of letters be allowed to increase from one-half ounce as now to an ounce. This will be equivalent to the penny postage which has been the desideratum of a small class of philanthropists.

Before this sheet is mailed Iowa and Ohio will have decided some momentous question at the polls. The ratification of the prohibition amendment has been made a party issue in Iowa by the Republicans; but the political managers have anticipated the voice of the majoirty and hope to put saloonists and their friends into the legislature in such numbers as to make the new constitutional provision of no immediate effect. In Ohio there are two amendments proposed. The first leaves it to the legislature to regulate or license the liquor business, the second prohibits the licensing the sale of intoxicants as a beverage. The liquor party have been putting forth the most strenuous exertions for the first, which will give a new lease of life to the liquor ring. Cincinnati and some of the largest cities will vote in this interest; but the country districts will carry the day for prohibition if honest men do their duty. It is a significant item that sporting men are betting that the second amendment will carry.

The semi-annual conference of the Mormon church was held in Salt Lake last week and the speeches of of President John Taylor, Brigham Young, Jr., George Q. Cannon and others are of some interest to the country. Taylor in a tone of fanaticism claimed that God would sustain the Mormons who were his people, his special agents to carry on his work. Others followed in the same strain and the infamous Cannon was among the loudest to blasphemously claim the direction and aid of the Spirit of God. The polygamists who, after the passage of the Edmunds' bill, put away their spiritual and spurious wives, sending them back to their mothers, were denounced with a severity of language well suited to a Mormon priest who maintains the cut-throat, Masonic system of the Endowment House. It is evident that the Mormon leaders have no more thoughts of submission to the law of the nation than they had in the times of Mountain Meadow.

The practical failure of the Edmunds' law to restore Mormondom to a reasonable, lawful and moral style of living, has suggested to some that the fertile valleys of Utah be colonized and renovated as anti-slavery settlers saved Kansas. It is true Utah is much more accessible than was Kansas and fewer and less menacing difficulties bar the way; but it is reported by those unfriendly to the Mormons that almost all the cultivable lands of the Territory have in some way or other got under Mormon control, and this would be a disadvantage not easy to be overcome by Gentile settlers. There is another army which has already planted its banners on the unfriendly soil of Utah that does not depend upon deeds and titles to secure a footing. The teachers and missionaries of the cross are there in such numbers that already men begin to prophesy the doom of Mormonism. The Moravian gives the following summary of the host forming this vanguard of the Christian army: "The Presbyterians lead in the number of toilers and organizations, having a Collegiate Institute and an Academy, 31 other schools with 51 teachers, and nearly 2,000 scholars. The number of Presbyterian churches is 12, of ministers 18, of communicants 310. The Congregationalists are rapidly gaining, with a present force of 28, 7 ministers, 21 teachers, 2 churches with 200 members, 12 towns occupied, 16 schools, and over 700 scholars. In Salt Lake City is an academy with 4 schools of lower grade. The Episcopalians have 7 elergymen, 5 churches, with 395 communieants, 5 schools and about 700 pupils. The Methodists have 10 ministers, 6 churches, 189 members, and an academy and 4 other schools, with 430 scholars. The Roman Catholics have several schools, and the Baptists 1 school and 1 church. In ways above indieated over 50 of the principal towns have been entered with 27 churches having 1,070 members and 44 ministers, 58 schools with 90 teachers and 4,100 scholars, in the main being Mormon born."

The mutual hatred of Franee and Germany have given the world another painful sensation. Alfonso, the young Spanish king, has just been on a friendly visit to Germany. He was kindly received, and as he departed the old Emperor gave him a complimentary commission in one of the Uhlan regiments. The Spainard returned through Paris, as he went. He was met at the railway station by a howling mob, such as made the Bourbons turn pale nearly a hundred years ago. The Spanish escort drew their swords. The strains of the bands were drowned by the outcry, "Down with the Uhlan King!" The popular rage soon spent itself, but in a few minutes it had made work enough for President Grevy and his cabinet. Humble personal apologies have been followed by public and formal state notes; and as in such an affair some one has to be the scape-goat, General Thibaudin, the French Minister of War, has been forced to resign. He is the personification of hostility to Germany, and his appointment was twice a great affront to that nation. Alfonso, whose army was lately in mutiny, is now one of the most popular monarchs in Europe, while the ill-restrained feelings of the French against their old enemy have cost them a severe national humiliation. But, after all, are not international bonds becoming so strong that the Paris mob is unlikely to ever have any revenge more sweet than this?

—The idea of uniting several Christian reforms in one meeting has again proved successful at the Kansas State meeting. The resolution of that body is commended to the attention of other State officers and executive committees. Christianity means reform; and every true reform is in harmony with every other, and all should be mutually helpful. Such united effort will hasten the day when the Christian churches will take up and carry on these efforts without the aid of auxiliary organizations.

THE UNEQUAL YOKE.

BY JOHN A. TODD, EVANGELIST.

"Be ye not unequally yoked together with unbelievers."

If the church was what God wants it to be, it would be a complete organization, a perfect society—not only missionary but a benevolent society, a temperance society, an industrial society; and it would combine all the good that could be devised by outside societies, and be free from their imperfections, because it is Christ's body, God's organization. All other organizations are needless, because God's is perfect. All others are harmful because their very existence is an expression of unbelief in the perfection of the church. A church member's excuse for belonging to them on account of the good that he says is in them, means that he does not think that the church is quite good enough. So that even a good motive in this case is bad, because it is unbelief in Christ.

God blesses organized efforts that are under the control of the church, or wholly for Christ's sake, but he condemns disconnected bodies. There are societies, secret "orders," etc., whose origin is of the world, therefore they do not belong to the church, neither do Christians belong in them. With such, his command is, "Be ye not unequally yoked together." Some of them have a mixture of religious pretension. These are the more to be avoided by the Christian because they are the more deceptive, and the more sinful. The use of the Bible and the exercise of prayer belong only to the church and its missionaries. The use of the Bible for any other purpose than to proclaim Christ, or instruct the believer, would be to "handle the Word of God deceitfully;" to pray for such organizations, would be asking a blessing on the world, a thing that God never grants, only when it repents and bows down to his Son. God condemns every institution that is not founded upon Jesus Christ. "If any man love not the Lord Jesus Christ let him be Anathema Maranatha."

If the church was living up to the Scripture requirement, there would not be so many persons guilty of preferring worldly organizations to it, for then there would be no other institution so nearly resembling it. Satan cannot produce a copy of the "body of Christ." If it were free from members whose unbelief divides their attention with the world, and had only those whose entire energies were devoted to the church, the world would acknowledge it as worthy of honor, all worldly institutions would be forsaken by whatever good there was in them, to fill "the church of God, which he hath purchased with his own blood." The Masons are a body that ignore Christ. In their "Digest of Masonic Law," page 208, they publicly say, "In fact Blue Lodge Masonry has nothing to do with the Bible. It is not founded on the Bible; if it was it would not be Masonry, it would be something else." Masonry has in it a department for receiving Christian (?) members. This is inconsistent with truth, but not inconsistent with the object of the great enemy of the church, in this foundationless institution. ("Other foundation can no man lay than that is laid, which is Jesus Christ.") The fact that there are persons yoked together with this body who also profess to be in the body of Jesus can only be accounted for on the ground of want of spiritual discernment of the Scriptures. The following Scripture shows that Masonry is without God, and it also condemns church members who are Masons: "Whosoever transgresseth and abideth not in the doctrine of Christ hath not God. He that abideth in the doctrine of Christ, he hath both the Father and the Son. If there come any unto you and bring not this doctrine, receive him not into your house, neither bid him God speed; for he that biddeth him God speed is partaker of his evil deeds."

If it would be partaking of the evil deeds of one who believes in the Father and does not believe in the Son, to receive him into the church, surely it would be partaking of the evil deeds of an organization of such doctrine, to go into it and stay. If there are any Christians in it, and the Holy Spirit will penetrate its darkness and find them they may praise him for his gift of repentance. If he will penetrate consciences "seared" by the guilt of sinful covenants, it will be their complete deliverance from such a body. "Be ye not unequally yoked together with unbelievers." It is less sinful and more honorable to confess the sin of the Masonic oaths than to continue in their obedience, under the delusion of supposing that they are sacred. Herod's foolish oath compelled him to choose between repentance of such an oath and the beheading of John the Baptist; and rather than to repent of his oath he chose to go deeper into crime, still more foolishly imagining that he was excused for his sin by his reverence for the oath. Hear God's command and "Have no fellowship with the unfruitful works of darkness, but rather reprove them, for it is a shame even to speak of those things which are done of them in secret." (Eph. 5th.) To every one who is in any way unequally yoked with the world, God says, "Come out from among them and be ye separate." (Read 2 Cor. 6 : 14–18.) "What part hath he that believeth with an infidel?" "What communion hath light with darkness?" "Come out from among them and be ye separate saith the Lord, and touch not the unclean, and I will receive you, and will be a Father unto you and ye shall be my sons and daughters, saith the Lord Almighty."

WEST POINT.

BY GEN'L J. W. PHELPS.

The Academy of West Point, one of the most valuable and patriotic of American institutions, was devised by Gen. Washington and other Revolutionary generals. The organization of the armies that achieved success and maintained the government during the war of the Rebellion, was due to West Point.

But the organization of this armed secret society, the so-called Grand Army of the Republic, is the work of graduates from the Masonic lodge, citizen generals of the war of the Rebellion, who, up to almost the very outbreak of that war, had been Masonic, Democratic, pro-slavery politicians.

In whatever instance graduates of West Point may have yielded to these organizers of Grand Armies, and sustained them in their political plans by personal connivance or co-operation, they have done discredit to their own institution and to themselves; and to that extent have weakened the character and influence of one of the most conservative institutions of the Republic.

If the American people are wise they will place no confidence in the distinguished leaders who have had anything to do with organizing and keeping up "Grand Armies of the Republic." The aim of the "Grand Army" is pensions, privilege, office, and military distinction, while that of West Point is only the privilege of being of real use to the country in the hour of danger. If any of its graduates have represented that institution in any other way than this, they have not remained true to their academic teaching, nor to their duty. The people may, indeed, take a faithful West Pointer from his military post and charge him with a political office; but if he seeks office through the dark and devious channels of "Grand Armies of the Republic," or through any other secret or partisan organization, he keeps demagogues in countenance and does his country an injury instead of a benefit.

West Point was an exceedingly well conceived and well fashioned instrument for thes use of republican government. It is important, therefore, that its true character and use should be well known and understood by all statesmen who have the handling of it, both for the safety of the country and of the instrument itself. That the admistration during the war of the Rebellion did not make an intelligible use of West Point, but injured the instrument by an ignorant use of it, must be evident to all who are capable of forming a correct idea of what that institution really is. The graduates of the institution have been taught by their political controllers the fatal lesson, whether they practice it or not, that they may make use of the advantages which the institution gives them, for serving their own personal aims and interests.

This and other similar facts concerning the incompetence of the war administration of the government during the Rebellion must be recognized, and corrected as far as possible, or the disastrous consequences of the Rebellion will neither be spent nor remedied. He who hides his eyes to these facts, or induces others to do so, from either personal or party considerations, is doing a disservice to the interests of the people. The passage of the Red Sea of blood which the Rebellion threw in the way of the Republic should have been done with greater observance of principle, form and regularity, with more dependence upon God and less upon the lodge in order to insure destruction to its enemies and a hopeful future to itself.

SUICIDE.

BY H. H. HINMAN.

Suicides in Rome.—The Roman correspondent of the Philadelphia Bulletin says: "The frequency of suicides among all classes of society is very remarkable. No day passes without one or more being registered in the newspapers, and there are doubtless many which are never made public at all. This week's list alone includes a bar-maid, a professor of languages, a woman aged sixty in respectable circumstances, a retired army officer, a hotel waiter, an aged man of nearly eighty, and several members of the working classes."

Not only in Rome, but all over Europe and America is this same tendency to self-destruction. It has become a moral epidemic, and it is an important question in social science what is the cause, and what can be done for its prevention? The love of life is perhaps the strongest impulse in our nature. It is a matter of doubt whether any person in the exercise of his reason ever destroyed his life. But there are many things which make life wretched and seemingly unendurable, and lead to self-destruction. They may in part be stated as:

1. Disappointed ambition, the greed of gain, the love of applause, the thirst for earthly, sensual pleasure, when denied, often bring agonizing sorrow from which death is the only seeming relief.

2. Passion hurries men into crime, and self destruction is the only seeming refuge from disgrace.

3. The use of stimulants, alcohol, opium, chloral and tobacco produce intense excitement followed with corresponding reaction and suffering, while at the same time they deaden the moral sensibilities and make self murder possible.

4. The undermining of religious faith. Men's religious education and conviction have an important influence on their life and conduct. In all Christian lands this influence is on the side of virtue, and tends to prolong life. Whatever then impairs this influence will not only promote crime but will assuredly tend to remove the fear of Divine judgment, which men ought to, and do, dread more than death itself. To my mind this epidemic of suicide indicates a great and growing decline in the influence of Christianity over the mass of the people. It is an eclipse of faith, which has resulted partly from the direct influences of infidel teaching, but more from the wonderful increase of knowledge and wealth, the consequent greater demands on the church, and its failure to meet them.

The remedy is obvious. If the religion of our land shall become simply and purely Christian; if it shall be purged from all complicity with false religions, with their false hopes and profane covenants; if it shall become earnest, harmonious in itself, but aggressive toward all that is evil, it may stop the tide of crime, sensuality, unbelief and self-destruction. Now as in the ancient days God calls to his people, "Awake, awake, put on thy strength, O Zion, put on thy beautiful garments O Jerusalem, the holy city; for henceforth there shall (of right) no more come into thee the uncircumcised and unclean." (Isa 52 : 1.)

Washington City.

THE THREE EVILS.

Sabbath breaking, Intemperance, and Lodgeism are the three great evils that now vex the church, and lodgism is the tap-root of the other two. The lodge demon gores the church at every opportunity, and throws its weight wherever a breach can be made. Lodge parades, picnics and brass bands effectually draw multitudes from the house of God and tend to destroy all respect of the Christian Sabbath. So-called temperance lodges beget pride, ritualism and selfishness, thus paralyzing the moral strength of their votaries and turning reform zeal into secret lodge play and public lodge ostentation. The lodge will vote and resolve for prohibition, but persecute a rumseller and lo! he turns out to be a Freemason, Odd-fellow or Knight of Pythias, and slips through the meshes of the law as an eel through the hands of a fisherman. Then the shrewd lodge infidel and the shallow lodge Christian propound the conundrum: "Does prohibition prohibit?" Well did the sainted Colver exclaim, "the secret lodge is Satan's master piece!"

CHRISTIAN WORK.

BY REV. H. A. DAY.

"The field is the world." "The harvest is the end of the world." "We are laborers together with God."

What sublime arrangements for those who wish to work for the good of the world. In all the above Scriptures there is no narrow-mindedness; narrow-mindedness is unscriptural, and hence displeasing to God. "Go work to-day in my vineyard," is the command to every one in every department of earth life. But there are so many openings for Christian work one is almost bewildered with the outlook. It is apparent that a mighty work of holiness ought to be immediately done in the churches. This is a grand work, entirely scriptural, and God will bless the efforts of such as work for this. It is also apparent that a no less important work ought to be done, both in the church and the world, directly on the line of evangelical repentance and the blessed experience of justification before God.

Close observation will show the alarming fact that not one-half of the so-called church to-day is in the enjoyment of that peace spoken of in Romans 5 : 1. God will bless the efforts of all who preach repentance to both the world and the church. Let not the one engaged in either work, withdraw his sympathy and prayers from the other, for it is the same God which worketh all in all.

There is also a work connected with the government to be done; and this important work must be done by Christians; for the simple reason, that God demands it, and no one else will do it. The affairs of the state must not be neglected. Somebody must immediately go forth, to arouse the people, to a sense of their responsibility and privilege, or a glorious republic will fall to rise no more. Thousands of despondent and toiling men have not been to the polls in years. These things ought not so to be. God and Cæsar and our posterity, have claims upon us; let us render to all their dues.

The hour is coming, and now is, when every man who fails to deposit a vote at every election, for the very best interests of good government, as opposed to the wicked methods of to-day, is criminally negligent before God and man. It is time the people heard this burning truth.

There are rampant evils among us to-day, preying upon the very best elements of church and state, which ought not to have existed, and would not, had every man followed his convictions of simple right, and done his duty.

Our fathers founded this government upon the principle that every man is a part of the sovereign power, and it is a noble Christian work for some one to engage in, to go forth and arouse the people with this inspiring theme. Let not the exclusive holiness worker repudiate the work of him who engages to preach the glorious doctrine of justification, and let us hope that neither of these will thrust from their sympathy and prayers the one who is called to work in the interests of political purity and good government, for God hath received him also.

SHORT SERMON.

Text: And as he went, they spread their clothes in the way.

My Brethren: On the eighteenth day of September 1883, the Sovereign Grand Lodge of Odd-fellows had a splendid triumphal procession in honor of their good works, in the streets of Providence, Rhode Island. Some four or five thousand men were in line, with forty bands of music, all blazoning forth to the world the good deeds that are done by Odd-fellows. The houses along the way were decorated; and sensations of joyous glorification thrilled through the bosoms of the admiring crowd. My friends, I have not yet heard whether any of the exultant throng took off their garments and strewed them in the way; but I verily believe they did something more extraordinary than that. I believe that they divested themselves of all that constitutes the Christian and American character, and threw it under the feet of these trumpet-blowing worshipers of strange and foreign gods.

My friends, Odd-fellowship was nursed into shape, not in Nazareth nor in America, but among the boss mechanics of Manchester, England, as a cunning device for subjecting workingmen to boss interests under holy pretensions; just as slaveholders formerly nursed with their special favor negro preachers as a means of reconciling men to slavery under the comforting assurances of Gospel hope, faith, and charity.

My brethren, do you really think that Freemasonry or Odd-fellowship is possessed of such virtues that it is entitled to greater honors than was paid by the early church to our Saviour on his entry into Jerusalem. The good deeds of the Saviour consisted in opening the eyes of the blind; loosing the tongues of the dumb; teaching the lame to walk, and raising the dead to life; whereas, your secret lodges bandage and hoodwink the eyes of men; tie their tongues; hamper their moral freedom of movement, and threaten those who make known the mystic virtues of the lodge with death. How is it possible that American citizens can so stultify themselves as to turn away from the manly teaching of the Puritan fathers, and worship such worse than empty bombast as inflated this Odd-fellow demonstration in Providence? Was it for this that the much boasted founder of Rhode Island ran away from the Puritans of Boston, and set up for himself in the wilderness with a supposed freer and nobler doctrine than theirs? Be astonished all men of sense as ye pause to contemplate this spectacle — the followers of Roger Williams down on their knees, in the dirt, in the mud, worshiping Odd-fellowship!

My friends, if the time has not yet come when you think it necessary to decide between the lodge on one side and the church on the other, between Odd-fellowship on the one hand and the Saviour on the other, when do you think it will come? How long will you go on in the pretended worship of Christ to-day, and in the real worship of the lodge to-morrow? Will you put the bride of Christ on the same level with that dirty drab the Masonic lodge? You may still continue to go to church; you may say your prayers, and perform your worship, as does the Rev. Royal Arch Masonic Methodist who hires a brother Masonic doctor to cover up his deeds by abortion, of which the press is getting well filled in these latter days; but for my own part I shall have but little faith in the efficacy of your prayers or your worships unless they serve to throw your deadliest ballot right at the very heart of Freemasonry. So mote it be.

A SECRET SOCIETY AMONG THE NATIONS OF AFRICA.

Captain A. B. Ellis in "The Land of the Fetish," published the present year by Chapman and Hall (London), speaks of a secret society among the natives of Sherbro, an island south of Sierra Leone, on the west coast of Africa. He says:

"Among the Sherbros there exists a secret society, which consists of various families, bound together by mysterious ceremonies for offensive and defensive purposes, and other reasons which are unknown. If my memory serves me rightly, this society is called the society of Boun, and the families comprising it meet at stated periods to celebrate their union with infamous rites; and annually, at one such meeting, a virgin is put to death, the victim being supplied by each family in rotation. Each member of the society is bound by diabolical oaths to preserve the secrets of their rites, and to slay another member whom he may suspect of revealing them; thus all that is known about the fraternity has been gleaned from the reports of the natives who do not belong to it, and who cannot know much about it; though some do assert that they have been hidden eye-witnesses of the annual human sacrifice. That such a society does exist, and that its members do put a young girl to death every year, is, however, well authenticated; and a French trader residing in the Sherbro on one occasion almost surprised them in the actual commission of the murder. I will give his story in his own words:

'M. A—, my principal, sent me from Sherbro island to some chiefs on the mainland who were large customers of ours, I had six or seven Krooboys with me, and was away a little more than a week. On the last day when I was coming towards the coast, about nightfall, I found myself at about eleven or twelve miles from the sea. There was a good path through the forest, so I determined to go on and get back to the factory that night.

'The night was dark; not a sound was to be heard but the rustling of our feet on the dead leaves. I was very tired, I had been walking nearly all day, and we did not get along very quickly; so that about nine o'clock we were still in the forest, and neither the Krooboys nor myself were sure that we were in the right path—we had passed several forks, and had taken the road that seemed to lead toward the sea, but you know how these paths twist and wind about. Suddenly in the midst of the dead silence, a chorus of howls and screams, the most horrible, rose up in the depths of the forest, and died away in a long, low, melancholy wail. I was startled—not frightened—for I am not more superstitious than most men; but the cries had been so sudden and were so strange that we all stopped still. While we were standing the sound came again—it seemed to be some little distance away in the direction in which we were going. I told the boys to go on and I followed them. Six, seven and eight times this long cry was repeated; and then we heard the noise of the beating of drums. We knew then that it was only some natives observing a custom, and that there must be a village near; so we walked on. Soon the drums stopped, and the night was again as still as the grave.

'Suddenly, without any warning, we turned an acute corner in the path; and I saw before me some few houses and a crowd of people standing together around something in a clearing of the forest—they had with them two or three little lamps. At the same moment that I turned the corner and saw this, I heard a shriek—the shriek of a woman in the agony which is mortal. My Krooboys stopped and muttered to themselves. I ask of them the cause, and they tell me of some secret brotherhood of the people who sacrifice each year a woman. I draw my revolver; I cry to them—Eu avant, Eu avant; and we all run fast to the crowd. Then, out go all the lights; I hear the rustling of many feet; all again is black darkness. We reach the square of the village; there is nobody to be seen. I nearly fall over the corpse of a young girl still warm. I look for the cause of death and find on the left breast a dreadful wound—the heart had been torn out.'"

FOR THE RIGHT.

READ BY JOAQUIN MILLER BEFORE THE NEW YORK PRESS ASSOCIATION.

The builders of cities, of worlds are we,
The unknown scribes and of unknown worth;
For we are the kinsmen of Progress, and he
The one prince we honor the whole wide earth,
Nor gold, nor glory, nor name we claim—
We ask but the right, unfettered to fight;
To name a wrong by its shameless name,
To slay the wrong for the sake of the right!

The sentries of cities, of worlds are we,
Each standing alone on his high watch-tower;
We are looking away to the land, to the sea;
We have only a lamp in the midnight hour.
Then leave us the right to fight or to fall,
As God may will, in the front of the fight,
Unchallenged, unquestioned, for the good of all,
For the truth that lives, for the love of the right!

The givers of glory to nations are we,
The builders of shafts and monuments
To soldiers and daring great men of the sea;
But we are the homeless, strange dwellers in tents,
With never a tablet or high-built stone,
Yet what care we who go down in the fight,
Though we live unnamed, though we die unknown,
If only we live and die for the right?

There are brighter things in this world than gold—
There are nobler things in this world than name;
To silently do with your deeds untold,
To silently die unnoised to fame.
Then forth to fight, unnamed and alone,
Let us lead the world to its destined height,
Enough to know, if but this be known,
We live and we die for the right!

A LUTHERAN WITNESS.

Some of the General Council papers are at last mustering up a little courage to attack Masonry. We gladly give Dr. Passavant's Workman credit for the following: "The evil there is in secret orders. They often combine in the election of public officials and place men of their own number in responsible positions who are venal and incompetent. They frequently shelter criminals from their well-deserved penalty. The writer having himself been a member of one of these orders here speaks for himself. He has seen murderers acquitted through Masonic influence. Many of the members of these fraternities regard the lodge as good an institution as the church. With it they are satisfied and long for nothing more as regards their salvation. The most of them will rather forsake the church than the lodge. It is in this way that these orders exert an anti-Christian and an anti-church influence, and prove agencies for ruining men's souls. Further, they demand a support which must be taken away from wife and child, from the church and the objects of religion. Their oaths of obligation, in the invocation of penalties and in the profanation of God's name, are shockingly blasphemous. Their many meetings require a waste of time which is absolutely sinful, as it belongs to the service of the Master.

"The greatest sin, however, of which they are guilty is their mimicry of prayer. Few of the officers of these orders are men of Christian faith and principle. Most of them are outright infidels. Yet in the lodge, on funeral occasions, and corner-stone layings, these men offer prayer, addressing a God in whom they do not believe. Oh, the blasphemy! And to these mockings of God Christian men, and Christian ministers, too, will respond, Amen.

"The writer, himself for many years a Freemason, has by personal observation discovered enough in secret orders that is shocking to every Christian sentiment and feeling; and he calls upon Christian men in secret orders to consider the above facts in the light of God's truth, and to ask themselves whether it be not their duty to withdraw from all such associations."—Lutheran Witness.

THOSE "OLDEST" MASONS.

The underneath quotation we regard as a "straw," and is an indication that a little motion, and that in the right direction, has sprung up. This "straw," though not very great, indicates the direction that some common-sense minds are moving in:

"Georgia has fifteen thousand Masons. How many of them do not lay claim to being the oldest is not stated, but we presume there are two or three who would scorn to join the great body of oldest Masons, which has done its full part in making this life hardly worth the living."—Boston Transcript.

The Boston Transcript is not by any means an Anti-masonic journal; for this well known periodical did its share of abusing the Christian Association, upon the occasion of its first assembling in the city of Worcester, Massachusetts. But the number of the craft in the State of Georgia, with the general standing of these men, is evidently not a subject of much gratification to the editor of the Transcript. For if the pretensions of Masonry are half way true, Georgia, with this great percentage of Masons in its citizenship, ought to have made that State something far in advance of its fellow States. But such is obviously not the case. The Transcript is evidently disgusted with the working of the Masonic leaven in Georgia. But what an admission! What a charge! that these "Oldest Masons" "have done their full part in making this life hardly worth living." What has been charged against some of these "Oldest Masons," that they of all men are responsible for the deplorable state of things in the South, resulting from the fearful civil war, and their determined purpose "to maintain lodge-fed, aristocratic ideas and distinctions, is here practically admitted. We are glad that it comes to us from such a responsible source.

We are in hopes that the Transcript will speak a little plainer next time; and further hope that it will properly bear with these fellows, who have conception of nothing greater than being "Oldest Masons," and boast about it. It's the fault of their education. But it has this redeem-feature about it: it evidences a sincerity. We cannot conceive of the Transcript, or of intelligent or of well informed persons, taking any stock in Masonry, so as to make boast thereof. But this critic should remember that the bulk of these Georgia men have not been to Boston, and have not Boston ideals nor Boston ways. They have a pride in the gew-gaws of Masonry, and see some fancied greatness in its associations. Their lodge education has been successful in making them believe that they are something more than mere American citizens, in consequence of their being Masons. Why should they not uphold, and also boast in it? And it is unkind to thus thrust at them. All that they are in this direction Boston Masons have helped to make them such, and that by upholding this unchristian and anti-American institution. The difference appears to be this: the Georgia Masons appear to support the institution because they don't know any better; while Boston Masons, as represented by the Transcript, support the institution knowing it to be a lie.—Free Methodist.

A GRAND LODGE AGAINST JESUS CHRIST.

[A letter and editorial in the Interior of Oct. 4, 1883.]

Dr. Blanchard, in his late Interior article on Freemasonry, and the editorial comments on the same, certainly shows that this ancient organization is essentially a religious institution. Call it "organized deism," natural religion, revealed religion, or even Bible religion, but all must concede it to be not a Christian religion. The writer of this was a Master Mason, and according to the Masonic axiom, "once a Mason always a Mason," he is still one but at present demitted and unaffiliated, and with his present religious convictions as to the anti-Christian trend and teaching of Masonry, he can no longer be an active member of this secret order. In spite of the oft reiterated statements of its recognized oracles that Masonry does not interfere with the religious views, opinions and convictions of its members, I say that practically it does interfere. No Christian Mason can stand up in the lodge or at the grave of a deceased brother and offer up a true Masonic prayer without virtually ignoring his Christianity, and denying that Christ is the mediator between God and man.

Should he on such an occasion pray in the name of the Lord Jesus, he might be peremptorily stopped and called to order, in strict accordance with Masonic law. I do not go beyond the record in this statement, as the resolution adopted by the Grand Lodge of Free and Accepted Masons of the State of Illinois in the year 1877, will show. It is as follows:

"The moment that a brother assumes that the Supreme can be approached only through some one name, be that name Brahma, Jesus, or Allah, that moment he enters on theological definition, the very root of sectarianism, which, with its twin political partizanship, Masonry seeks above all things to exclude. Our Grand Lodge, mindful of its obligations to the landmarks, has by a statute prohibited the introduction of either on any Masonic occasion. It is plain then, that a brother cannot use distinctively Christian prayers in the name of Masonry without disregarding our local regulations, nor without doing violence to the catholic spirit that breathes itself through its immemorial laws."

A brother cannot use distinctively Christian prayers!! And can a Christian pray anything else than a Christian prayer and be true to his God and his religion? And if not, can he fellowship with an institution that demands this? In fact, Masonry, as recognized by this law, enjoins prayer and homage to the Supreme Being, and lays down, so to speak, a ritual of worship, and requires its votaries, as Masons, to worship in that way, and that way excludes Christ, and the Christian that understandingly participates in such worship, must of necessity, it seems to me, give the lie to his professions of Christianity, and leave in the mind of every intelligent observer the impression of insincerity in his avowed faith in Christ as the only Saviour. How ministers of Christ and intelligent Christians can affiliate with Freemasonry, is utterly incomprehensible to me. Yet they do it, and I shall not be so uncharitable as to pronounce them all hypocrites, but can only refer them to the searching interrogative of Elijah the prophet, "How long halt ye between two opinions? If the Lord be God, follow him, but if Baal, then follow him." X-M.

The resolution above quoted will be read with general surprise. It was supposed that such a body as the Grand Lodge of Master Masons for the State of Illinois was constituted at least of men of average intelligence, but the resolution shows a degree of stupid ignorance that is almost incredible. The narrow and contemptible bigotry and intolerance which it evinces, is not so surprising after the disclosure of the dense ignorance of that body—because bigotry and ignorance always hunt in couples. The conclavc were ignorant of the fact that Allah and Brahm are among the names by which the Supreme Being is designated in Arabic and Hindu; stupidly supposed that they were messianic or mediatorial appellations, and under this ridiculous idea have forbidden any prayer not offered in the English language, as unmasonic! "The moment a brother," say this Masonic conclave, "employs the name of Allah or Brahm, that momcnt he enters upon theological definition!" Of course if he employs the name God, or Gott, or Deus, or Theos, or Dieu, he does the same thing. We havc secn mauy assaults on the namc of Christ, but never before one that was so utterly the kick of an ass. We do not kuow anything about Masonry personally, but Masons tell us that there are no such immemorial laws, no such intolerant statutes in general Masonry, as this resolution claims. On the contrary, the Masonic regalia that we see upon the streets is emblazoned with Christian emblems. The Grand Lodge of Illinois, therefore, appears to be as ignorant of Masonry as they are of the alphabet of religious ideas. Another exhibition of their dense ignorance is their reference to the "catholic spirit" of their order as an apology for a degree of narrow bigotry, of which any intelligent Christian would be ashamed. The Christian is in sympathy with any soul who sincerely prays to the heavenly Father. He would unite with the red Indian in a sincere prayer to the Great Spirit; with the Moslem in prayer to Allah; with the Jew praying in any language, and by any name, to God. That is catholicity. The forbidding of prayer by any name of God, or in any name, is the meanest possible bigotry and intolerance, and it is doubly contemptible when associated with such pretentious ignorance. The association of the names of God in other languages is a blundering apology for forbidding prayer in the name of Christ. The object is to prescribe and prohibit Christianity. How much of grit, chivalry, self-respect—to say nothing of piety—would a Christian possess who would submit to such an insult to his Lord and Master, and to himself, in assuming that he was capable of denying his Lord? We venture to say that the publication of this resolution will stir up a commotion among Christian Masons.

FROM THE GENERAL AGENT.

East St. Louis, Sept. 29.

I am detained here for a train going North. It's by no means a desirable place for a Christian or a temperance man to pass his time unless he employs it in reformatory work. It appears to be about the hardest place I have struck, but I remember that appearances are sometimes deceptive.

I saw little of the Sparta Convention, bcing present only in the closing business session. The evening gathering in the U. P. church was good and the large audience remained quiet for an hour and a half while I spoke of some of the evils and dangers in the secret lodge system. I met old fricnds at Sparta who treated me with great kindness and bade me a hearty God speed on my departure.

The Topeka Convention was a very harmonious and happy gathering. I have already indicated some of its general features, but I wish now to say that in my judgment the practicability of uniting temperance, government reform and anti-secrecy was more fully demonstrated in Topeka than in the Iowa State Convention. Rev. Coulter of Winchester lead off in a clear, incisive comprehensive speech on government reform and was followed by Bro. Worrell of Olathe, in a somcwhat humorous but searching review of the first three degrees of Freemasonry. The two reforms were thus happily blended in the first evening's exercises, and continued in harmony throughout the entire meeeting. There was no "set speech" on temperance, but frequent allusions werc made to this evil and the efforts made to suppress it.

Bros. Gault, Milligan and other representative government reform men were ready as minute men to improve evcry moment, and Bro. Feemster with a host of backers was ready for any emergency in his department. Everything moved smoothly among the brethren, and if there was a personal or unkind allusion used in the whole convention I failed to hear it or to hear of it. The cause starts out on the new year with great enlargement and unwonted prospects of success. Bro. Feemster was rctained as State Agent, and we may expect to hear of vigorous work and grand achievements in Kansas the coming year.

J. P. Stoddard.

THE ILLINOIS STATE CONVENTION.

The Statc meeting at Tonica last year voted to meet at Sparta this season at the time provided by the Executive Committee. Sparta is situated in the southwestern part of the State, fifty-four miles southeast of St. Louis. Though somewhat remote, there are within a circle of twenty miles several congregations of Reformed and United Presbyterians by whom Christian reform principles are generally and faithfully maintained. This part of the State has been several times visited by lecturers and agents of the National Association, the labors of brethrcn Browne, C. A Blanchard, Stoddard aud Ferguson being well remembered. Within a few years a lodge of Freemasons and another of Odd-fellows have been established, and several who have abandoned the fellowship of the testifying churches in which they were brought up make the bitterest and most active lodge members. Thus evcr the "bcst thing spoiled corrupts to worst." The Masonic lodge has flourishcd also because of the assistance of Rev. W. H. Scott, pastor of the Methodist church of Sparta, who as late Grand Master of the State was a hero in lodge circles, and always assiduous to promote its interests, obtruding his Masonry at unseemly times and places in such a way as to disgust many who were otherwise indifferent. It was currently reported that this habit was also unpleasing to his conference and was manifested in the appointment given him. Mr. Scott is represented as an intelligent man, who, if he should serve Christ with an undivided love, would be a power for good in any community. The position of the United Presbyterian church was also a drawback to the convention, the pastor, Rev. J. W. McNary, though opposed to sccretism and strongly condemning it privately, yet holds to the theory that it is sufficient to preach Christ, and the power of his love will expel all unholy affections. The church, it is believed, has fallen in with this view and does not require a renunciation of the lodge on the part of its members who enter into fellowship, but that thcy refrain from activity as lodge members, and in any question of difference arising, they shall vote with the church and not with their secret order. It is painful to mention these facts, but to kuow them may be useful in other churches subject to the same temptations. To ignore the fact that lodge fcllowship is a sin against God, which must be confessed and put away, as the word cnjoins us to deal with all sin, is to open the door to many troubles that disturb the peace and take away the power of the Christian church. Other local attractions, as the county fair and a soldiers' reunion, were also hindrances to the best local effect of the convention. These difficulties were considerable, but did not prevent a meeting that deserves to be long remembered in the history of this reform; and there were on the other hand many cheering circumstances. Notice of the convention was given in many pulpits of the neighborhood, and some of the pastors preached against the lodge on the Sabbath preceding.

The opening session of Wednesday evening was held in Bro. Faris's church (Reformed Presbyterian) with a good attendance and good speaking. In the absence of the president Rev. N. E. Gardner, Bro. Faris, who was first vice president, was called to the chair, and the meeting was conducted in a general way for prayer and remarks. Brief addresses were made by Revs. D. S. Faris, W. J. Gillespie and T. M. Proudfit of Sparta, Rev. J. H. Gibson of Coultcrville, and the editors of the Cynosure.

The business sessions of Thursday and Friday were held in the same place; and was, in brief, as follows:

Reports of the treasurer showcd $9.61 in his hands, of the exccutive committee that little had been done during the ycar.

The following are the names of officcrs elected for the year:

President, Rev. J. C. Elliott of Swanwick, Perry county, Ill.

Vice-presidents: Prof. L. N. Stratton, Pres. J. B. McMichael, Rev. W. H. Chandler, Rev. Joseph Travis, Rev. W. J. Gillespie, Rev. D. G. Thompson, Rev. W. W. Blanchard, Rev. W. C. Smith, Peter Howe and T. W. Baird.

Secretary, Henry L. Kellogg.

Treasurer, W. I. Phillips.

Executive Committee: T. B. Arnold, Thomas Hodge, A. H. Hiatt, W. I. Phillips, A. G. Laird, Mrs. E. A. Cook, Mrs. L. N. Stratton.

The questions which drew out the most animated discussions were thosc of church and lodge fellowship, prayer meetings for refoim, the State work and the relation of the lodge to the State.

"The disfellowshipping of the lodge by the Christian church—what are its limitations, and how shall all the churches be brought to this position and to maintain it?" This question was opened in a very able speech by Rev. D. G. Thompson of Oakdale, Washington county. He argued clearly from the Scriptures that the churches of Jesus Christ had only the alternative of disobeying the plain commands of Scripturc if their doors were opened to adherents of secret lodges. He was followed by Revs. Elliott, Faris and Proudfit, brethren Finley, Kellogg and others who urged that the only safe course was to deal with this evil as Christ did—cast it out, the strange plants shall be rooted up. Compromises bring dishonor upon Christ and spiritual leanness to the church. The following resolution was drawn up to express the result of the discussion and the means recommended by the convention to make their views of some effect:

Resolved, That the Executive Committee be empowered to take measures, by agent or memorial, to bring before the different church bodies meeting in the State the vital importance of a complete separation of their membership from affiliation with the secret lodges, and urge that such separation and disfellowship of the lodge be made a reality in all the churches.

The topic of prayer meetings for the promotion of the reform was also a subject that developed a general interest. The discussion was participated in by Rev. R. E. Wilkin of Tilden, brethren Patton, Finley, and several others. and the convention resolved at its close:

That we recommend to brethren in all testifying churches to make the triumph of the truth as it is in Jesus Christ against the secret lodges a subject of frequent prayer and conference, and that pastors lead their congregations in public prayer to God for reformation in this matter; and also that brethren in churches not testifying on this subject meet statedly with others of like mind for united prayer to God for his blessing upon the reform and those who maintain its principles.

The work in the State during the coming year was also discussed and the matter referred to a good committee to recommend whether a State agent should be engaged and a fund raised to sustain him, or whether the needed work could be done morc economically and effectively by colporteurs. The experience of past years was referred to and a young brother, James K. Hunter, who has had some experience in the canvassing business, expressed his willingness to begin the work of colporteur. It was—

Resolved, 1. That Mr. J. K. Hunter be appointed as colporteur for two months or longer.

2. That a committee be appointed to act with the State Executive Committee in supplying literature for the colporteur and otherwise aiding him in his work.

3. That it shall be the duty of the colporteur to sell books, distribute tracts, solicit subscriptions for the Christian Cynosure, collcct funds and do such other like work as he may be able; and that he shall report each month and shall receive for his services $25 per month and expenses, or at that rate for the time employed.

The committee appointed wcre: Rcv. D. S. Faris, S. W. McKelvey, Rev. W. J. Smiley,

On Friday afternoon Pres. J. Blanchard conducted for three-fourths of an hour an exceedingly interesting Bible reading. A discussion of the topic, the relation of the lodge to the state was led in an able speceeh by Secretary J. P. Stoddard, who answered also mauy questions put to him by the convention.

R. H. Sinclair was elected Assistant Secretary. The enrollment committee reported ninety-one names on the roll from six counties of the State.

The United Prcsbyterian church was hired for the evening meetings after the first, it being thc largest in the place. Thursday evening President Blanchard spoke on the evidences of God's favor upon the efforts already made to overthrow lodgery. "Every plant which my Heavenly Father hath not planted shall be rooted up." Matt. 15: 13. The Friday evening address was by the General Secretary, J. P. Stoddard. The first evening the audience though not large, was fair and very attentive; special effort being made to draw out the people on Friday, that evening found a well-filled church: the impression upon the minds of all was lasting, and the convention closed with encouragement for friends in the immediate locality, and with the general hope that the measures adopted would prove to be of infinite advantage to the reform.

H. L. K.

THE KANSAS CONVENTION.

The meeting of the Kansas State Christian Association in the Senate chamber of the State Capitol at Topeka September 24th to 26th, was probably the most important meeting yet held in the State. The Wesleyan State conference had just adjourned and most of the members remained.

The convention was called to order at 3 P. M., Monday, the 24th, by Rev. B. F. Worrell, vice-president from Olathe, but shortly Rev J. Collins of Americus, the president arrived.

The following were elected officers for the ensuing year:

President, Rev. B. F. Worrell, Olathe.
Secretary, Rev. W. W. McMillan, Olathe.
Treasurer, Rev. Chapin, Delphos.
First Vice-president, R. Loggan, Clifton.
Second Vice-president. H. Curtis, Olathe.
Third Vice-president, Rev. McKirahan, Topeka.

In the evening very able addresses were made by Rev. D. H. Coulter of Winchester, Kansas, on the "Recognition of God in Civil Government;" and was followed by Rev. B. F. Worrell on "Secret Societies and their Secrets." Both these addresses are reported as very able, and were well received.

On Tuesday forenoon reports were made of the progress of the reform by the N. C. A. General Agent and Rev. Paul S. Feemster, State Agent. In the afternoon the convention listened to an address by Rev. J. P. Stoddard on "The Covenant that makes the Mason;" and in the evening S. E. Starry of Clarenee, Iowa, worked and explained the first degree in Masonry.

During the last day the following resolutions were adopted:

The committee to prepare work for the coming year would recommend:—

First—That each congregation or Sabbath-school in sympathy with the Christian Association be urged to send one or more delegates to the State conventions.

Second—That they appoint a financial committee to secure expense of delegates and an annual contribution to the funds of the State Association.

Third—That one State agent at least be kept in the field to visit and stir up the friends of the cause, and raise funds, as well as to urge the movement upon the consideration of the Christian public.

Fourth—That the ministers and Christian workers enlisted in this movement be urgently requested to devote at least one full week each year to the work of anti-secrecy in his own vicinity, and that the ministers be urged to preach frequently on this subject.

Fifth—That qualified local agents be appointed to labor at $50 per month and authorized to receive funds for this Association.

Sixth—That we recommend that all the friends and agents of this Association be directed to urge the claims of the Christian Cynosure upon the friends of this movement and enlarge its circulation, and that we give the endorsement of this Association to the Olathe Free Press, and that we labor and pray for its enlargement, circulation and influence.

Resolved, That we approve the purchase of a building suitable for the headquarters of reform in Washington, D. C.

Resolved, That we recommend the formation of a joint stock company to start and control a paper at our national capital to advocate the principles set forth in the platform of the American party.

WHEREAS, The movements of national reform, prohibition and anti-secrecy are identical in their aims to suppress infidelity, intemperance and secret associations, and to secure a recognition of Christ in civil governments and of his law as supreme over the consciences of men, therefore

Resolved, That there should be hearty co-operation of workers in these movements by uniting as far as possible in meetings and conventions.

Resolved, That we, as members of this convention and ministers of the different churches we represent, assist our agent by inviting him to our fields of labor and secure him funds for his support.

Resolved, That said funds be raised by subscription to be paid quarterly and directly to the agent.

Resolved, That the agent report report quarterly and publish in the Olathe Free Press.

The great success attending the working of the third degree by Bro. Starry in the evening has already been described.

—In speaking of the recent arrest by the police, in Syracuse, N. Y., of some members of the Salvation Army, while parading the streets, on their way to their place of meeting, the American Wesleyan, of the same city says: "While we do not deem such street parades as the best possible method of promoting the cause of Christ, we are anxious to know whether or not, we live in a land of equal rights. Street parades of all conceivable classes and descriptions are allowed, with all kinds of noisy accompaniments, even to an instrument blown by steam. Freemasons, Catholics, beer garden and beer guzzling associations, and every show from Barnum to Buffalo Bill, can have free use of the streets to advertise their performances; but when a few professed followers of the Nazarine propose to march the streets and sing in honor of his power to save, the police are very suddenly and overwhelmingly impressed with their responsibility in securing the peace and order of the city. Such administration is a disgrace to the name of justice. Five hundred saloons can ply their soul and body destroying vocations on the Lord's Day, filling the ears of the chief of police with the unhallowed click of their pool balls, and his equanimity is not in the least disturbed, and no sense of responsibility for the peace and order of the city seems to haunt his Sabbath meditations.

CORRESPONDENCE.

THE AMERICAN BOARD OF FOREIGN MISSIONS.

This venerable body has just concluded its seventy-fourth annual session. Convened in Detroit Oct. 2d it adjourned on the 5th to meet in Columbus, O., next year. The first impression of a visitor to this assembly gives one the impression that it is in the control of men of extraordinary dignity, intellectual force and spiritual power; men profoundly impressed with the vastness and sacredness of the work in which they are engaged; and they soon bring the audience into profound sympathy with themselves in these convictions. The Treasurer's report gives the receipts of the current year at $591,000 in round numbers; a gain of 18 per cent. over last year. In the eyes of a beholder it is the dawn of day all over the world. In all pagan lands well nigh, hearts and homes are open and waiting.

A brighter future was never before this society since the great awakening at the Sandwich Islands. Unusual revivals in number and extent have attended upon the labors of the missionaries. The success of the past furnishes ample occasion for enlarged effort, encouraging hope and joyous expectation. There is a manifestation of the Divine Spirit in foreign lands as never before.

The men who led the devotional exercises were evidently largely imbued with the same Holy Spirit. It was said, that upon that assembly were concentrated prayers from all around the world. There were present a large number of men of renown, of extraordinary talent and culture. The proceedings were of a high order from first to last and produeed a profound impression upon the vast audiences in constant attendance. Could the papers read, and the addresses delivered by missionaries and others, and the prayers offered be placed in a volume it would be more thrilling than fiction.

It was shown that if all the members of the Congregational churches would each give as much as each person in a missionary church of ten members in Colorado has given the past year, the receipts would amount to $2,000,000 per annum.

C. C. FOOTE.

A VOICE FROM CENTRAL ALABAMA.

PARTRIDGE, Ala., Sept. 19, 1883.

EDITOR CYNOSURE: We have the devil exhibited in two mighty forms in this country. In one form he comes under the cloak of a whisky shop; in another he comes with beekoning hand crying, Come into our fold: we are the oath-bound company that will take you to heaven by climbing up the Masonic stairway. God pity those who enter such a fold. Not a great while since I heard a Missionary Baptist proclaim in the pulpit that the better the Mason the better the Christian, and a few minutes later I was in conversation with a worldly man who said this hood-winked and cable-towed system was as good a church as he wished to belong to.

There is a brother Missionary Baptist in this vicinity, who is, when with the Masons, a brother; yet when with the profanes and cowans, as they would call them, he is not a Mason. Now what sort of a man is this? He who should stand on Zion's walls and preach Christ to a dying world? I ask, will God bless the works of such a man? Nay, Christ saith, "In secret have I said nothing." May God speed the day when all of those Hiramites may see the mote in their own eye and rid these places from off the face of the earth.

Then we have this monster, RUM, right here in Partridge. Yes, right here at our door a fellow has been trying to establish one of the devil's whisky dens, (and he is one of those Hiramites, too), and there were four members of the Missionary Baptist church that signed his recommendation. One was a minister of the Gospel, another was the church clerk, and another was an old deacon. Thus they certified that this Hiramite was a suitable man to sell whisky in their community.

While conversing with two of those brethren they said we had as well deprive a man of his farming privileges as to deprive him of the privilege to sell whisky—the poisonous hell-broth that it is. Nay, they said we could do as well without a United States currency as we could without the liquor, that ensnares the millions into Satan's clutches.

God lent us a helping hand and we did incorporate Partridge Cross-roads, and shut off saloons for three miles around. God speed the day when this ally of Satan may be driven from the United States—yes, from off the globe.

WHAT IS THE MEANING?

CHICAGO, Oct. 2, 1883.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—What ails the "Presbyterian" sheet published in Chicago? I noticed in 22d of September issue of Chicago Journal (that henchman of secretists), the extract, that the Presbyterian paper says; "If a man lives up to his Masonic obligations he will be a good man." Is the paper advocating infidelity or Christianity; or is it going over with good old Aaron to idolatry? Is its mission to encourage the men of the Northwest to be entrapped into bowing down and vowing to have their throats cut and closing it up with blasphemy, to vow under horrid death penalties to secrete murder and treason, etc.

Also, recently an account was given of a reverend (save the mark), crawling in his Masonic slime into a colored people's church in Chicago and prating learnedly about Masonry; from which we may infer that the gambling fund of the Masonic bastiles at Washington, Philadelphia, Boston and New York are running low, that he is peddling to them Masonry to fasten it like a leech on them to draw monthly dues to the Masonic exchecquer to the detriment of their church and to aid in a conspiracy against Christianity. Souls of the Cynosure, as you look along the line of denominations and view God's heritage despoiled by "good Masons" or fiends in human shape, plying and corrupting with idolatry the church and warring against the living God and his Anointed, I know it pains your hearts; but, it is God's good pleasure to give you the kingdom.

O.

NOTE.

The Journal article above mentioned gives a brief review of the contents of the Interior of September 20th, which contained the article on church fellowship by the editor of the Cynosure and a reply by the editor of the Interior. From that reply the Journal only quoted, "that Masonry teaches and Masons practice, if they are true to their professions, a high and, in general, pure moral system."

In another part of the same editorial the main proposition on which is founded condemnation of the lodge is conceded in these plain terms: "That Masonry teaches that salvation is attained by morality will not, we suppose, be denied. If it be not a religious system, a type of religion, we would be at a loss to assign it a place in the classification of human organizations. It certainly has all the traits, and proposes all the benefits of a system of religion." The Interior is receiving more light on the lodge question as will be seen on the fourth page where the action of the Grand Lodge of Illinois is made the subject of some remarks that will make Masonic ears tingle.

GLORIOUS NEWS FROM SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA.

POMONA, Cal., Sept. 22, 1883.

EDITOR CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE:—Your paper has been coming to me for nearly a year. I don't know who sent it, whether by some friend or by you. I enjoy reading it; have been benefited by reading it, but feel too poor to continue taking it providing I must pay for it. I am a holiness preacher, and strike at secret orders whenever God gives me a message. I was one of two that presented resolutions to the Annual Holiness Association of Southern California and Arizona, excluding all or any from the body who belong to any secret order. We had strong opposition by three or four preachers and two laymen; and the Lord gave me a burning message and helped me powerfully to deliver it. We had a glorious victory. One minister who opposed at first sat and wept, but voted neither way; and another preacher's wife said she could not decide and did not vote, but in her testimony in the afternoon said she had got light and a glorious victory. We had a most wonderful manifestation of the power of God. Many sinners were converted and believers sanctified, a hundred or more; could not keep account—did not pretend to because the work went on all hours of the day and during the night. All glory to God. If you have any anti-secreey tracts that you feel able to give away I will distribute freely.

There are many books I would like to have; it is knowledge I want to use to the glory of God, but I am poor. If you have any to give away I would get all out of them I could and use it to the best of the ability God gives me to his glory.

In conclusion, "And the very God of peace sanctify you wholly, and I pray God your whole spirit and soul and body be preserved blameless unto the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ. Faithful is he that calleth you who also will do it." 1 Thess. 5: 23, 24. Yours saved to the uttermost; all on the altar, and the altar sanctifies the gift.

THE LEGACY OF FAITH.

One of our pastors said to Rev. E. D. Bailey, at our conference in Sherborn, "We would like to have you come and labor with us in our union meetings and in getting up a revival, but it would'nt do to say anything against secret societies; if you should you would knock us higher'n a kite." He was an Odd-fellow. Odd enough they look, building their Babels and balloons with the multitude. When we look at Noah, obedient to God, toiling and planning and preaching righteousness day by day, year after year, amidst the scoffs, the taunts and jeers of an ungodly world,—"And Noah walked with God." The faith that kept Noah through all these years is the legacy left by Christ to every one of his followers to the end of time. Dr. Scott says, "God has a remnant in the worst of times; and they who would please him must dare to be singular." Surely this was written for our instruction. Dear brethren, let us profit by it for soon we shall meet beyond the river. Yours in the love of the Gospel of Christ.

INCREASE LEADBETTER.

AN APPEAL FROM THE BAPTISTS OF OREGON.

Weston, Umatilla Co., Oregon, Sept. 5, 1883.

Rev. J. L. Barlow, Missionary Baptist and Anti-masonic State Lecturer of Connecticut:

My Very Dear Brother:—Having been a careful reader of the Christian Cynosure for years, and having tried the best I could to keep posted with regard to the "reform movement," and especially among our churches, I write you to know more about how our Missionary Baptists have succeeded in your locality in battling against organized secrecy; for surely the whole system is "anti-Christ" from Alpha to Omega, and it is high time that our people (Missionary Baptists) out here should know just how to counteract this tidal wave which is sweeping over our beloved country and which is sapping the very life from those who stand indentified with us and are trying to work for Christ.

Organized secrecy has such a hold among us on this "North Pacific coast," that it requires the faith of Meshach, Shadrach and Abednego to oppose it; for so many of our own ministers stand connected with this Baal worship as well as the laity—which causes the latter, generally those who are not Masons—to keep silent, although they may not favor it. We are few who are decided in the premises against it, and in the midst of the organized powers of darkness, we are almost powerless in battling against this great "Image of the Beast." We cannot succeed, as we could, were we organized. We are not forgetful of Gidcon and his three hundred men who routed the one hundred and thirty-five thousand Midianites; but we want the counsel of others who have had experience, that we may act judiciously in all of our attacks on this foe, for the glorious cause of Christ can sustain irreparable injury, you know, by those who are inefficient and unexperienced in their generalship.

To my mind, we need men who can speak from experience in regard to these matters of such vital importance, men who are willing to make any sacrifice necessary in order to succeed,—yes, men who will be earnest and untiring in their efforts, honest in their convictions; men who are willing to come out here and plant themselves in our midst to live and die; those who are assured that they have a full and undoubting belief in what they propose handing out to the people; whose souls are filled with the Holy Spirit, and in whom a love for this special work predominates. This alone with humble boldness will enable him to put forth at all times his best and most successful efforts; in short, we want men whose everyday deportment will harmonize with their teachings, "Steadfast, immovable, and always abounding in the work of the Lord." (1 Cor. 15:58).

Can you send us such men? or if this cannot be accomplished now, please give us such counsel as in your judgment will enable us to work to the very best advantage possible with the material already at our own command; for we are very desirous of benefiting by the experience of others who have passed through the battle and conquered the enemy.

Then again, allow me to inquire of you as to whether you have at your command any second-hand "Anti-secret literature," which we might secure at a reduced price in order that we might have a small library with which to start? I want to secure, if I can, by winter, the ten dollar "Anti-masonic Library" as advertised, but am anxious to avail myself of all the helps possible. Any information that you will give me, remember will be gratefully received, and I hope and pray will redound to the honor and glory of the Redeemer's kingdom here below.

And lastly, are there periodicals published by our beloved denomination in your State or adjacent States which will speak out against this growing evil? If there are, will you please favor me with the name of the publisher and post-office address of the same. We, as Baptists, as a general rule, are bold in exposing sins of minor importance, but are as silent as the grave upon this one of the sins of the present age which is practiced among our dear people.

May the God of heaven ever give you boldness my brother in speaking all the truth as it is in Christ Jesus, and in prosecuting this "reform movement" until its influence may be felt in the churches of the Missionary Baptists throughout these United States.

Yours as a laborer for Jesus.

W. H. Pruett.

Pastor of the First Missionary Baptist Church of Weston, Oregon.

MASONIC ELOQUENCE.

Masonic worship and the literature associated therewith are of a very peculiar character. This fact is exemplified in a remarkable degree by Freemason Butler's recent address to the Democratic Masonic convention that nominated him for Governor of Massachusetts, which address, as usual with Gen'l Butler, was applauded from beginning to end, "as if a god had spoke." One of his principal bursts of eloquence occurred where he expressed his horror at the practice in Massachusetts of selling human bodies for making shoes out of leather made from their skins. That burst was as follows:

"I may be my misfortune," said the General, "or yours to outlive your wife, your children, your relatives, and there will be nobody on whom we can depend, and you may have to go to the almshouse, and, having no friend to reclaim your body within twenty-four hours, to watch your death, you may be taken away for the purpose of dissection, it may be. Be it so, but after you are dissected and all the good to science has been gotten out of your remains, for God's sake and humanity's sake and Christ's sake, let those remains be decently buried and not skinned and tanned for shoe leather! (Great applause.)"

This burst of eloquence will remind those who have seen the third degree of Masonry worked (the General has taken 33 degrees) of that scene where the General was down on one knee among his fellow Masons, in a lodge, at night, beside a simulated corpse, on which he had helped to inflict a simulated murder, under horrid oaths of secrecy, with his eyes and right hand raised to heaven, exclaiming—"Oh Lord God, is there no help for the widow's son."

In which of these two instances of pathetic, stirring eloquence was the General the most sincere?

PEBBLES FOR THE SLING.

SEED SOWING IN MAINE.

Mr. M. gave a tract to Mr. S. of Gardiner. Mr. W., an M. E. minister of Delaware, came to Gardiner on an ice vessel for a rest or vacation. Mr. S. gave him the Anti-masonic tract. It astonished him so that he took it to Mr. L. who preaches at the M. E. church in Gardiner and is a Mason of several degrees. Mr. W. asked Mr. L., the Mason, if the tract stated the truth that Masonry had nothing to do with Christ? He said it was true, and when asked the reason, said it would spoil the universality of the order. But he saw nothing inconsistent with the Christian religion. Mr. W. wished to know more of the hidden mystery, and so traced the tract to its headquarters. Mr. M. obtained others and bought a seven-degree book and "Odd-fellowship Illustrated," and in great haste started for his vessel, then waiting for the tide. What will the harvest be?

PRAYER THE KEY-NOTE.

The right key-note of this reform was struck in an article in the Cynosure of Sept. 20th, entitled, "Prayer against the Lodge," and again in Cynosure of Sept. 27th, "Shall we Conquer the Lodge by Prayer?" The most disheartening sign there has been about this reform was, that too much confidence seemed to be placed in the outward, or man's work, and not in the spiritual, or on God's help. The evil against which we wage war is gigantic, honeycombing society in every part, therefore it is strongly entrenched, and how dare we go to this warfare in our own strength? If we do, we shall certainly fail, and the evil shall be greater than now. Who is sufficient for these things? If we lack wisdom let us ask God and it shall be given us. "We have no might to go against this great company that is arrayed against us," but if we trust in God's help the battle will be his, not ours, and victory is certain to follow.

A SUGGESTION FOR WRITERS TO THE CYNOSURE.

In a late number of the Cynosure a writer speaks of a man lacking only long ears to be a certain animal. I want to say in regard to this, and to all such language that I deem it unchristian and beneath the dignity of the Christian to use it. It is used by our enemies, and things being as they are, we may expect it from some of them at least; but let us leave vulgarity and blackguardism to our enemies—enemies of the truth as it is in Jesus. But let everyone claiming to stand on the elevated plane of Christianity spurn to descend to their use as base and sinful.

GOOD TEMPLAR DOCUMENTS WANTED.

The urgent necessity is this: We have information indirectly from Wm. P. Hastings, who has for years been at the head of Freedman's Normal Institute at Maryville, Tennessee, who says, "I believe that the Good Templars' organization is one of the best, if not the very best means of teaching them [the Freedmen] how to transact public business properly."

I trust it is generally known that the society of Friends has always discarded secret societies, and Freemasons were not allowed membership whilst accepting Masonry. But so many in our society have become alienated from the principles of Friends, that even Masonry in some cases has crept into its enclosure; but one thing is sure, no one can really be a Friend who is a Freemason, or who has been one and has not condemned it. Wm. P. Hastings is an acknowledged minister in the society of Friends; and is supported in his position, we learn, by New England Friends; who, I trust, are ignorant of the nature of the business in which he is engaged. We are informed (as he was a Mason) that he took out a demit from the Masonic lodge "for the sake of weak brethren," some time since. Now I do desire that there could be more general information in regard to this order, as it is now so lauded in the temperance cause.

BIBLE LESSONS.

LESSON III.—October 21—Asking for a king. 1 Sam. 8: 1-10.
Golden Text.—It is better to trust in the Lord than to put confidence in princes.—Ps. 118:9.

"Made his sons judges." The inference is that they were simply to support their father in the administration of justice, and that Samuel had no intention of laying down his office, still less of making the supreme office of judge hereditary in the family. The inference is supported by the fact that they were stationed at Beer-sheba. Keil.

"Walked not in his ways." This fact or judgment alone is given, and Samuel is not, like Eli, charged with the blame of his sons' misconduct.—Lange. There is no charm in any ordinance whatever in the succession of sons to father, or of pupil to teacher, to prevent such results as these.—Maurice. The rule is, that if we train up our children in the way they should go, they will not depart from it; but there will be exceptions, for each child has a will and a choice of his own. Sometimes children refuse to be trained.

"Elders of Israel." The elders of Israel formed the senate or executive council of the congregation or national assembly, (1) in war (chap. 4: 3, (2) in great political matters,—as on the present occasion,—(3) in matters of general importance to the nation (Judg. 21:16). The institution lasted through the monarchy (1 Kings. 20: 7), and was revived after the captivity (Ezra 10: 14). In New Testament times "the elders" formed one of the constituent elements of the Sanhedrim.—Cambridge Bible.

"Thou art old." True, Samuel was old, but he had grown old in their service; was the more wise and experienced for his age, and therefore the fitter to rule. And it was very unkind, ungrateful, nay, unjust, to cast him off when he was old. If old people be upbraided for their infirmities, and laid aside for them, let them not think it strange.—Henry.

"Like all the nations." The Eastern mind is so essentially and pervadingly regal, that to be without a sovereign is scarcely an intelligible state of things to an Oriental; and they must have had occasion to feel that the absence of a king gave them an appearance of inferiority in the eyes of their neighbors, incapable of understanding or appreciating the special and glorious privileges of their position. The want of a royal head must often have been cast in their teeth by their neighbors as a kind of stigma. Even good men, able to appreciate the advantages of existing institutions, would eventually become weary of a peculiarity which the nations would obtusely persist in regarding as discreditable. This principle does not want such confirmation as historical illustration might supply. —Kitto.

"Prayed." A characteristic act (comp. chap. 15: 11). He does not let his own personal feelings decide, but endeavors to learn what is the will of God in the matter. We do not know what we ought to think about this thing and that, and we want to be told what we should think about it. We want to have our displeasure deepened if it is right, and taken away if it is wrong; or if, as most often happens, it is partly right and partly wrong, that the good may be separated from the evil, the first reinforced with God's own might, the other utterly cast out. In such a state of mind I apprehend Samuel prayed unto the Lord.—Maurice.

"Not rejected thee, but.... me." These words are the key to the whole history of the Hebrew monarchy.—Smith. In the person of Samuel they rejected the Lord and his rule.—Keil. What was the sin of the people? That they were expected in time to have a king is evident from Gen. 17: 6, 16; Numb. 24: 17; Deut. 17: 14–20. Their sin was not in the mere attempt to have a king. (1) They wanted such a king as the heathen had, a despot, living in royal splendor, which was forbidden (ver. 5, last paragraph). (2) That their motives were carnal and proud and rebellious is evident from the open murmurs of many against God's choice (chap. 10: 27), and the apathy towards him of the nation at large, as seen in the fact that they suffered him to return to his plough after his appointment (chap. 11: 5). (3) They distrusted God's willingness or his ability to deliver them from Ammon (chap. 12: 12). (4) They felt that their condition, under God, was not so favorable as that of other nations (ver. 5), attributing their misfortunes to their theocratic form of government, and not to their sins. (5) In looking to a king they looked away from God, and desired to avoid the necessity of always consulting him (ver. 7). (6) They were determined to have a king, whether it pleased God and his prophet or not (ver. 19). In their hearts they did not consult God about the matter, but took it into their own hands; they had an outward form of submission to him; but, in fact, they were rebelliously intent to have their own desire, without regard to his.—Johnson. "It consisted," as Bishop Wordsworth remarks, "in the unthankfulness and discontent of the people, dissatisfied with their present condition when 'God was their king.'" They ought to have deemed it a high privilege to be unlike other nations, in that they had been separated from all other people, and chosen from out of other nations to be a peculiar treasure to God above all people, a holy nation, a kingdom of priests (Exod. 19: 5, 6), a special people unto the Lord their God, above all people that are upon the face of the earth (Deut. 7: 6). They thought lightly of this prerogative; and, like a national Esau, they profanely bartered their birthright for what they deemed a temporal benefit."—Watson.

"Manner." i. e., right or prerogative which the king would claim. (See vers. 11–17.) A modern missionary describes the palace of an Eastern monarch in the present day in the following terms: "There is an immense multitude, amounting, it is said, to about 2,000 persons, employed in and around the palace. In fact, we saw many professions and trades going on in it—soldiers, horsebreakers, carpenters, blacksmiths, scribes, cooks, attendants both male and female, many of them pressed into the service unwillingly, yet by a mandate they durst not disobey. There was in the air of this mingled assemblage something which forcibly brought to my recollection the description of a royal household in the East, as given by Samuel."—Jowett's Christian Researches, (quoted by Jamieson).

"Told." As faithfully as when he bore the unwelcome message to Eli (chap. 3:18). The childlike trait of obedience he retained in his old age. The greatness of Samuel's character is shown in nothing more strikingly than that, after finding the change sanctioned by God, he not only waived further opposition, but led the new movement, with calm wisdom, to a successful issue.—Geike.

BAND OF HOPE BIBLE LESSON.

QUARTERLY REVIEW.

GOLDEN TEXT FOR THE QUARTER.

1. Remember the Sabbath Day to keep it holy.
2. So run that we may obtain.
3. Out of the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh.
4. And ye are Christ's; and Christ is God's.
5. Take up the stumbling block out of the way of my people.
6. It is a fearful thing to fall into the hands of the living God.
7. Buy the truth and sell it not.
8. Thou shalt not take the name of the Lord thy God in vain, for the Lord will not hold him guiltless that taketh his name in vain.
9. O, my soul, come not thou into their secret; unto their assembly, mine honor, be not thou united.
10. Six days thou shalt work, but on the seventh day thou shalt rest; in earring time and in harvest thou shalt rest.
11. Woe unto them that call evil good, and good evil; that put darkness for light and light for darkness; that put bitter for sweet, and sweet for bitter.
12. Take heed that ye despise not one of these little ones.
13. Put ye on the Lord Jesus Christ.

GOLDEN TEXT.—Be ye therefore perfect even as your Father which is in heaven is perfect.

CENTRAL TTUTH.—God wants us to be like himself.

1. Both our bodies and souls need the rest of the Sabbath.
2. To win the prize in the heavenly race we must be temperate in all things.
3. The idle words we speak may do a great deal of harm.
4. Our bodies are God's temples, and it is a great sin to defile them with any bad habit.
5. When we make it harder for another to do right we put a stumbling block in his way.
6. Desecration of the Sabbath brings sure punishment—though it may come in different forms.
7. No vice brings so much misery on so many as the vice of drunkenness.
8. Profanity usually goes with other sins, for it is in itself the sign of a coarse and brutal nature.
9. Secrecy is a cover for crime. When we are doing right we are willing to have our actions known.
10. Sabbath rest is what all have a right to—not only laboring people but even the beasts of burden.
11. Intemperance is a vice that deadens every natural affection and so blunts the moral sense that the mind cannot seem to discern between right and wrong.
12. A profane man hurts his neighbor as well as himself.
13. When we put on the Lord Jesus Christ we cast off whatever is displeasing to him.

LESSON HYMN.

Jesus, Lord, I come to thee,
Thou hast said I may;
Tell me what my life should be,
Take my sins away.

Jesus, Lord, I learn of thee
In thy Word divine;
Every promise there I see,
May I call it mine.

Jesus, Lord, I long for thee,
Long thy peace to know;
Grant those purer joys to me
Earth can ne'er bestow.

Jesus, Lord, I trust in thee,
Trust thy tender love;
There's a happy home for me
With the saints above.

Jesus, I would come to thee,
Thou hast said I may;
Tell me what my life should be,
Take my sins away.

VISION OF JOSEPH HOAG.

[Republished by Request.]

Joseph Hoag of Dutchess county, New York, a minister in the Society of Friends and member of Starksboro Monthly Meeting in Vermont, was born on the 22d day of the 4th month, 1762, and departed this life on the 21st day of the 11th month 1846.

The following remarkable vision was published in his journal:

"In the year 1803, probably in the 8th or ninth month, I was one day alone in the fields, and observed that the sun shone clear, but a mist eclipsed the brightness of its shining. As I reflected upon the singularity of the event, my mind was struck into a silence the most solemn I ever remember to have witnessed; for it seemed as if all my faculties were laid low, and unusually brought into deep silence. I said to myself, 'What can all this mean? I do not recollect ever before to have been sensible of such feelings.' And I heard a voice from heaven say, 'This that thou secst, which dims the brightness of the sun, is a sign of the present and coming times. I took the forefathers of this country from a land of oppression; I planted them here among the people of the forest. I sustained them, and while they were humble I blessed them and fed them, and they became a numerous people; but they have now become proud and lifted up, and have forgotten me who nourished and protected them in the wilderness, and are running into every abomination and evil practice of which the old countries are guilty; and I have taken quietude from the land and suffered a dividing spirit to come among them. Lift up thine eyes and behold.'

"And I saw them dividing in great heat. This division began in the church upon points of doctrine. It commenced in the Presbyterian Society and went through the various religious denominations, and in its progress and close the effect was nearly the same; those who dissented went off with high heads and taunting language, and those who kept to their organized sentiments appeared exercised and sorrowful. And when this dividing spirit entered the Society of Friends it raged in as high a degree as any I had before discovered, and as before, those who separated went with lofty looks and taunting, censuring language; those who kept to their ancient principles retired by themselves.

"It next appeared in the lodges of Freemasons, and it broke out in appearance like a volcano, inasmuch as it set the country in an uproar for a length of time. Then it entered politics throughout the United States, and did not stop until it produced a civil war, and an abundance of human blood was shed in the course of the combat. The Southern States lost their power, and slavery was annihilated from their borders.

"Then a monarchial power arose, took the government of the States, established a national religion, and made all societies tributary to support its expenses. I saw them take property from Friends to a large amount. I was amazed at beholding all this, and heard a voice proclaim: 'This power shall not always stand, but with this power I will chastize my church until they return to the faithfulness of their forefathers. Thou seest what is coming on thy native land for their iniquity and the blood of Africa, the remembrance of which has come up before me. This vision is yet for many days.'

"I had no idea of writing it down for many years until it became such a burden that for my own relief I have written it."

JOSEPH HOAG.

"HOLDEN WITH CORDS."

This story recently appeared as a serial in the Christian Cynosure, and is now fittingly put into a neat book of nearly 400 pages. It is a hard hit at Freemasonry. In an incidental way the story tells much about the manner of conducting lodges, and much about the spirit and methods of Masonry. The story covers the period of the abduction and murdering of William Morgan. The strategic position from which the author writes puts a charm in the book, while it gives a good opportunity to show the workings of the order. We wish all the people would read it.—Religious Telescope.

THE CHURCHES VS. LODGERY.

The following denominations are committed by vote of their legislative assemblies or by constitution to a separation from secret lodge worship:

Adventists (Seventh-day.)

Baptists—Primitive, Seventh-day and Scandinavian.

Brethren (Dunkers or German Baptists.)

Christian Reformed Church.

Church of God (Northern Indiana Eldership.)

Congregational—The State Associations of Illinois and Iowa have adopted resolutions against the lodge.

Disciples (in part.)

Friends.

Lutherans—Norwegian, Danish, Swedish and Synodical Conferences.

Mennonites.

Methodists—Free and Wesleyan.

Methodist Protestant (Minnesota Conference.)

Moravians.

Plymouth Brethren.

Presbyterian—Associate, Reformed and United.

Reformed Church (Holland Branch.)

United Brethren in Christ.

Individual churches in some of these denominations should be excepted, in part of them even a considerable portion.

The following local churches have, as a pledge to disfellowship and oppose lodge worship, given their names to the following list as

The Christian Cynosure.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, OCTOBER 11, 1883.

EDITORIAL LETTERS.

St. Louis, Oct. 1.

Dear Cynosure:—I preached yesterday (Sabbath) morning in the Church of the Pilgrims here (Dr. Goodell's). It seats 1,500 or more people and would be called well filled. The subject was our national duty to recognize Christ and the religion of the Bible as a breakwater against Asiatic paganism and Mormon polygamy. Dr. Goodell, who is very popular with his church and congregation, gave me a very handsome introduction to his people, and endorsed the sentiments of the discourse.

At night I preached to the First United Presbyterian church (Dr. Wilson's) on "The Relation of the Secret Lodge System to the Kingdom of Jesus Christ." Leave was asked, by a friend, to preach there, and Dr. Wilson sent reply that I was "welcome to preach in his pulpit at any time, and on any subject" which I chose. The topic was sent as above, and he notified his morning congregation, and announced the subject. At the close of the sermon, he extended hearty thanks, as did others, and hoped to see me there again. Dr. Wilson enforces discipline according to Paul and the rules of his church, and his session have lately excluded a prominent merchant here for adhering to the Masonic lodge after loving warning and remonstrance. His church is a "light of the world" on the dark lodge system. It is a large and noble building.

There are here several of Wheaton College graduates, who give me much comfort by their love and attentions. If any readers of the Cynosure need any legal business done in St. Louis, and done with marked ability and integrity, let them write to D. D. Fisher, Esq., of the firm of Fisher & Rowell. Mr. Fisher is a mature and successful lawyer, and is fit to be trusted. Mrs. Fisher (Carrie McKee) and Mrs. Wizlezeness (Maud Bereman) who will be remembered by the Wheaton Faculty and Alumni, are now here in the beauty of Christian womanhood, and "the hearts of their husbands do safely trust in them."

There is published here a handsome weekly print, started near four years ago, "Devoted to Prohibition and other live issues;" and, as if wonders would not cease, the name of this paper is the National American. It is the organ an of "American" party here, said already to number 5,000 members. B. Gratz Brown and ex-Lieut. Gov. Johnson are patrons of this paper. I hope to see these gentlemen to-day (this is written before light) and give results.

Monday Evening.—I have to-day seen ex-Gov. B. Gratz Brown, ex-Lieut. Gov. Chas. P. Johnson, and Benjamin Walter, Esq., editor of the National American, besides Messrs. Fisher and Wizlezeness, with whom I have visited. Not one of all these professional gentlemen ever joined a Masonic lodge. They all heard with deep apparent interest of the work and purposes of the National Christian Association; and, with the two pastors, Goodell and Wilson, they treated the subject with the utmost urbanity and cordiality. When asked for something to read on the subject, I gave what copies of ex-Senator Pomeroy's speech I had, and have promised to communicate further with some of them. They had all seen Thurlow Weed's letter, and some of them had read the discussion in the Interior. I have not heard an unfriendly remark concerning the last night's sermon; though it was as plainly and pointedly urged as I was capable against the lodge.

The leading prohibitionists of Missouri are said to be Demoerats, and ex-Gov. Brown expressed a hope that that party will go for prohibition in this State.

B.

A NOTE OF VICTORY.

The Kansas and Illinois State meetings have given us a key-note of success in their recommendations to pastors, churches and isolated brethren. The former urges that ministers and Christian workers "devote at least one full week each year to the work of anti-secrecy in his own vicinity, and that ministers be urged to preach frequently on this subject." The convention asked boldly, but with the realization of the importanee of the work. Let this work be carried out with the spirit which inspires it and a great many more people will want to emigrate to Kansas in a few years.

The Illinois convention at the close of an earnest discussion of the topic, resolved, at the suggestion of the acting president, Rev. D. S. Faris, to request all testifying churches to hold frequent meetings for prayer and conference against the lodge, and that brethren who love the reform but are in churches that do not agree with them, and cannot meet in any reform prayer meeting held by churches that do—let these brethren get together as they can at stated times, once a month more or less, two, three or half-a-dozen together, and plead the special promise made that the prayer of two or three agreeing Christians shall be heard. There is a mighty power in that promise which we have not been pleading with a tithe of the earnestness which it warrants. Glorious things are in store for God's people. The truth must triumph in the hearts of the trembling members of the secret orders, and if we are faithful multitudes will soon be leaving those dark recesses forever. A number of letters have been received approving this movement. Let all write their views and suggestions. And every one whose heart God stirs up let him start such a meeting, and report it for the encouragement of others. The Chicago Association is to have one beginning this week.

The Topeka Convention has the warm thanks of the Cynosure for the resolution in behalf of this paper coupled with the Olathe Free Press. Now, brethren in Kansas, you have this year a splendid crop, one worthy of a prohibition State. What shall prevent you from getting up a good strong Kansas club for the Cynosure of Five Hnndred names right alongside another of a thousand or more for the Free Press. We cannot compete in every thing with Bro. Worrell, who served an apprenticeship in a printing office in Chicago under the eye of our revered friend, Dr. J. B. Walker of Wheaton, so the list may be two to one—yes if Kansas will give the Cynosure a 500 list we will agree that the Free Press should have 5,000—nay more, may go to every house in the State. It deserves to, at least, and it will be next to a prohibition amendment when it is done.

The Congregational National Council will meet this week, the indignant opposition which it met in this city having been turned rather against Quint than against the Council itself. The Western delegates will go there with a determination to get a vote of censure upon the Grand Chaplain. That will well be an undertaking which will arouse enemies whose teeth they have never yet felt. A Western college president commends the Advance for attacking Quint who "has made the whole denomination appear ridiculous in the eyes of the world." This is hardly half the truth. The denomination dishonored itself and its Master when it elected and re-elected to high office a man who was known to be consorting with devil-worship in the lodge. A prominent New England pastor claims that Quint is calling the Council to Concord to gain the force of its influence in his favor politically, as he is ambitious to reach the United States Senate. Would that the honest and godly men and women in the Congregational churches could see that they themselves are to blame for this shameful business, and that concession, flattery and offices poured out at the feet of the lodge return to them at the last in obloquy, contention and disgrace.

—Geo. W. Clark, who is helping sing out the evil of secretism as he did that of slavery has just attended the anti-slavery anniversary in New York, where his reform songs aroused much of the old-time enthusiasm.

—Rev. O. M. Van Swearingen, author of the excellent exposition of Odd-fellowship, "The Stone Ezel," has removed to Highmore, Dakota, where he will find a number of kindred reformer spirits from Wheaton and Tonica in this State.

—A brother takes exception to a line in a recent note on Gen. Grant's dislike of Sabbath travel, which spoke of the day "we have set apart." The words were chosen with too little care, and do not, literally, interpreted express the uniform sentiment of this paper that "God requires and man needs a Sabbath."

—Brethren Hiatt and Nutting, now in Oberlin Seminary, have left their studies for a week to speak for the Prohibitory Amendment. Bro. Hiatt has done yeoman service in that cause years ago in Illinois. There is much excitement in northern Ohio as the election approaches.

—Pres. C. A. Blanchard has received an invitation from Pittsburgh to hold a debate on Freemasonry in that city. He has responded, accepting the challenge and agreeing to hold a four day's debate during next vacation. If the lodge champion is in earnest and is not suppressed by order of some Grand Master there will be a debate worth going far to hear.

—The Cynosure has within a few days had the pleasure of greeting Mrs. Henry Avery of College Springs, Iowa; Rev. C. D. Trumbull of Morning Sun, Iowa; Donald Kirkpatrick, Esq., of Syracuse, who received the Anti masonic ballot for Vice President in the election of 1876; and Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Bartlett of El Paso, Ill. Bro. Bartlett is a seceder of 1827, and is just recovering from an injury that has for some time confined him at home with severe lameness.

—The removal of the Michigan American to Parma last month should have been noticed earlier. This sprightly monthly was for the first year conducted by Bro. H. A. Day as a private enterprise, Bro. W. H. Ross sharing, we believe, in the financial responsibility. The Michigan Association having now taken the paper in charge, it is issued under a committee: H. A. Day, W. H. Ross, and C. C. Foote. Bro. Day, as State agent, has still the editorial control, and he designs to make it increasingly popular throughout the State. May his brightest hopes be realized. When the Cynosure reaches its 10,000 list we hope the Michigan American may have as many.

—The Rescue, Good Templar organ of San Francisco, publishes a prize essay on the subject: "How best to promote the cause of temperance through subordinate lodge work." The writer, Elder James Webb, takes for a text:

> "Wait for the wagon
> And we'll all take a ride."

The value of what follows to the temperance cause may be imagined.

—The brief report of the Kansas Convention which appears in another column was compiled from the press reports, which gave little but a skeleton account. The resolutions read as if the Kansas brethren were determined to push things during the year, and may their success surpass their highest expectations. The support of a State agent and a State organ will test their faith and zeal, but the grand results promised if this can be done warrant the attempt. Bro. Worrell in the Olathe Free Press and Bro. Feemster in the field deserve the prayer and encouragement of every true follower of Christ in the State.

—Mr. Dwight Needham, who first successfully introduced the common red clover of our fields to the people as one of the best as well as the simplest of remedies for diseases which come from impure blood, is a consistent advocate of health. If the blood is once purified, he is utterly opposed to contaminating it with liquor and tobacco. The striking and learned article on "Tobacco Doctors" in the September 20th Cynosure he has had electrotyped and is now circulating by thousands in tract form.

—A card from Elder J. F. Browne says that he is removing to Berea, Ky., to remain during the present school year, while Miss L. A. Mains of Michigan takes his place in the school at Cabin Creek, which began Oct. 1. Neither the Camp Nelson or Germantown churches have yet any pastor provided this year.

—The New Hampshire State convention at Canterbury Center, Oct. 23d and 24th, will attract large and deserved attention in that State, because of the exceptional excellence of the arrangement for speakers. Bro. Kimball, who has seen trying times in his effort to gain a foothold for reform among those granite hills, is rejoicing in the promise of a noble gathering. He gives some of the reasons thus: "Our prospect for a glorious meeting was never before so good. The man for whom we have been praying three years the Lord has now raised up. Bro. Atkins is a wealthy manufacturer, brave as a lion, and an eloquent evangelist. Like Moody he has refused compensation for Gospel work. He has consented to speak and preach at our meeting. A seceding Mason, Odd-fellow, and K. of P., he writes: 'I am more and more convinced of the evil of secret societies.'"

—New England is moving for a national organ for the American party, and Bro. Bailey, N. E. Secretary, has already opened his books for shares to any who may wish to subscribe to the proposed $25,000 stock. The movement is backed by Worcester friends who have consulted somewhat before maturing their plans. They have, perhaps from prudential reasons, not yet very widely advertised their purpose, so we are obliged to steal this news from the New England American. Truly the truth is marching on—two papers in New England, one in Michigan, one in Indiana, one in Iowa, two in Missouri, and one in Kansas, to help with the Cynosure in the greatest of modern reforms—such news would have been too good to be true ten years ago; it is glorious now.

—The question was raised in the Topeka papers, how the Anti-masons were able to secure the use of the State house for the State convention. The Commonwealth says that a law was once passed to give the use of the building to the Grand Lodges of Masons and Odd-fellows, but the same privileges were refused to the Grand Army of the Republic and the United States courts! Such legislation is unworthy the State that has given the nation a Brown, a Pomeroy, and a St. John, and has taken so brave a stand for prohibition. For legitimate meetings of the people the public buildings should as a rule be open, but the lodge is contrary to good government and good laws, whether of God or man.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

LIQUOR LICENSE AND HOUSES OF PROSTITUTION IN THIS DISTRICT.

The Inspector of Licenses for this District publishes in the National Republican of Sept. 27th a long article to explain the apparent discrepancy between the number of Internal Revenue and District licenses, a part of which is subjoined.

In order to correctly understand the matter it should be remembered that here, as elsewhere, the seller of intoxicating drinks must take out an Internal Revenue license at a uniform rate of $25 to all retailers and $100 to all wholesale dealers. Such license, however, does not make the traffic legal without a further license from the District, but here the money in both instances goes into the United States treasury.

It appears that up to date the number of these Internal Revenue licenses was 1198, of which 31 were to wholesale dealers and 136 to apothecaries. It also appears that the District licenses are for wholesale dealers 491, retailers 571; or one liquor seller to each 150 persons, more than one to every thirty voters. This would seem to be a pretty bad showing, but it leaves a discrepancy to be accounted for by the Inspector's article which concludes as follows:

But there is another class, and to these I refer with some delicacy, who have not as yet been brought within the toils of the District law regulating liquor licenses, but who do not escape the searching laws which the government has adopted in this regard. I refer to the houses of assignation and prostitution in the District (about forty in number), every one of which is compelled to pay, and does pay, a $25 government license, under which they can sell by the bottle or otherwise to the extent of five gallons. This completely obliterates the difference developed in the number of such licenses issued by the government and that which have been issued under the District system, leaving the advantage decidedly in our favor when considered from the standpoint so unfairly presented by the article in the Republican to which I have called your attention.

I have the honor to be, with great respect, your obedient servant, CHAS. S. JONES.
Inspector of Licenses D. C., and Member of the Liquor License Board.

I remark:

1. To the everlasting shame of the authorities of this District there are, we are informed, about forty houses of prostitution and assignation. These places are apparently well known to the authorities and conducted by persons of some pecuniary ability, else they could not pay their revenue license.

2. United States officers, knowing the character of these persons and places, sell them permits to deal in intoxicating liquors and receive at their hands for such license $1,000 a year. To her whose "house is the way to hell, going down to the chambers of death," they consent that there may be added the not less terrible lure of him who putteth the bottle to his neighbor's lips and "causeth him to be drunken." I do not wonder that "it is with some delicacy that it is referred to." Tell it not in Hong Kong; publish it not in the streets of Ashantee, lest the heathen scoff at our civilization.

3. The District authorities well know, that liquors are sold in these places in violation of law. They have not granted them license. They could not do so, and doubtless it has not been asked for, but they PERMIT them to sell and to carry on their two-fold abomination. They do this in face of the law, and in violation of their solemn oath to see it executed. Two hundred men, whose sole business it is to bring these human fiends to justice, become practical partners in their crime.

CIVIL SERVICE REFORM.

The following from the Evening Star of Sept. 24th, gives some intimation of the practical workings of the civil service law here under the immediate eye of government officials, and where it ought, if anywhere, to be a success:

"Since the new civil service rules went into operation Senators and members of Congress have not ceased to seek patronage in the departments. Heads of departments and appointment clerks are not besieged so much as they formerly were, but the chiefs of bureaus, who have the appointment of large numbers of laborers and others below the nine-hundred-dollar clerkship grade are subjected to a pressure."

Just across the Potomac the law is openly defied and political assessments are levied and collected as in days of yore. Nor is there any reason to think that the Mahone machine is run with any less regard to individual rights than the old Bourbon arrangement. It is quite probable that, like Esop's fox, the people might find it more tolerable than a hungrier swarm. But I think it is quite evident that the law is to be, and is, a failure, and that the high hopes of honest people are to be disappointed in the result.

The object of the law was that government officers might be servants of the government and not be subject to any other party or power, but if they are selected from those who are already sworn to "help, aid and assist" those of their "brethren" who may call on them, and to "espouse their cause so far as to extricate them from any difficulty," it will be impossible to prevent favors being demanded and granted by government officers and those political and other friends with whom they are in fellowship.

True civil service reform must strike at the root of the evil. It must, first of all, demand of every officer of this government that he shall renounce all allegiance to every other government, whether open or secret, and regard United States law as paramount to any human covenant. So long as a system of favoritism is interwoven with every fiber of our society it will be impossible to suppress it in the government service.

We wait for a wise statesman who shall dare to propose that membership in any oath-bound secret association shall be regarded as a bar to the civil service.

AMERICAN POLITICS.

NOMINATIONS FOR 1884.

For President,
JONATHAN BLANCHARD,
OF ILLINOIS.

For Vice President,
JOHN A. CONANT,
OF CONNECTICUT.

PLATFORM.

We hold: 1. That ours is a Christian and not a heathen nation, and that the God of the Christian Scriptures is the author of civil government.

2. That God requires and man needs a Sabbath.

3. That the prohibition of the importation, manufacture and sale of intoxicating drinks as a beverage is the true policy on the temperance question.

4. That the charters of all secret lodges granted by our Federal and State Legislatures should be withdrawn, and their oaths prohibited by law.

5. That the civil equality secured to all American citizens by articles 13th, 14th and 15th of our amended Constitution should be preserved inviolate.

6. That arbitration of differences with nations is the most direct and sure method of securing and perpetuating a permanent peace.

7. That to cultivate the intellect without improving the morals of men, is to make mere adepts and experts; therefore, the Bible should be associated with books of science and literature in all our educational institutions.

8. That land and other monopolies should be discouraged.

9. That the government should furnish the people with an ample and sound currency.

10. That maintenance of the public credit, protection to all loyal citizens, and justice to Indians are essential to the honor and safety of our nation.

11. And, finally, we demand for the American people the abolition of electoral colleges, and a direct vote for President and Vice-president of the United States.

DIALOGUE BETWEEN TWO CITIZENS.

1st Citizen. Is there any doubt that General Butler is one of the highest Masons of the United States?

2d Citizen. I, myself, have no doubt of it. He passes as a Grand Sovereign Inspector General of the thirty-third degree. His title is a very grand one.

1st Cit. Is he not, therefore, the best possible candidate which the lodge can bring forward for the Presidency?

2d Cit. Considering the power of the lodge in politics, I think that he is the most available candidate that the Masons can offer; unless perhaps, Gen'l Logan, or Gen'l Albert Pike might be preferred by the majority of lodgemen out of Massachusetts.

1st Cit. Is there any truth in Freemason Butler's being a very rich man, and of having made the bulk of his fortune out of the "poor man's government?"

2d Cit. Few doubt that fact, I believe. His whole career goes to show that he has always put himself first, the lodge second, and the "poor man's government" last.

1st Cit. But cannot the man who makes a fortune out of the "poor man's government" by "back-pay grabs," trading schemes and otherwise, be a real, true friend of poor men?

2d Cit. I must confess that I cannot see how a man can plunder the "poor man's government" and still be a friend to poor men.

1st Cit. Did Freemason Butler ever swear to take the life of any man for speaking the truth?

2d Cit. As he is a very high Mason, he has doubtless practiced some pretty tall swearing in that direction, in opposition to the laws of the "poor man's government." I know of his having hung a poor man in New Orleans.

1st Cit. Who was he? Jeff. Davis? Jeff. Thompson? erre Soule, or other rich rebel? Was he a high Mason?

2d Cit. No, I think probably not; but a poor drunken fe low of humble position, who made himself prominent by trampling on what patriots regarded as sacred; something which the General himself, is prone to do, even though he is not drunk.

1st Cit. Did not that poor fellow by trampling on the United States flag give "aid and comfort" to the rebellion?

2d Cit. Yes, doubtless; but not quite so much as his friend Pierre Soule, and many other of his political associates in New Orleans. He never hurt the country as much as Gen'l Butler has done.

1st Cit. Then Freemason Butler really did discriminate against the poor man, in favor of the rich and powerful?

2d Cit. So it seems.

1st Cit. And you think that General Butler has no good chance to get the Democratic nomination for the Presidency in 1884?

2d Cit. I believe that the lodge is all powerful in politics; that it has run the Republican party for the last twenty-five years; that it is now preparing to leap off from the Republican raft to the Democratic one, and that whatever Democrat the lodge nominates will be likely to succeed. The lodge wants a change.

1st Cit. You will admit that the General has been very bold in his efforts to save poor women from the degradation of having their skins tanned and made into shoes for the use of the rich men of Massachusetts?

2d Cit. Yes, the General is bold; and a faint heart never won a fat office; but the degradation which has been inflicted upon poor women by tanning their skins, is nothing at all in comparison with the degradation which he has helped to inflict upon young American men by their initiation into the Masonic lodge.

1st Cit. I perceive, my friend, that you are much opposed to the Masonic lodge.

2d Cit. That I am, sir! and I will never knowingly vote for a Mason for any office whatever. Political parties may run the devil himself for office, if they please; but no Freemason shall ever have my vote; for his principles and his practices are as foreign to the institutions of the United States, as the devil is to decent society.

1st Cit. But if you vote for an Anti-mason, your vote will virtually count for Gen'l Butler.

2d Cit. That would be a great evil, it is true; but the greatest evil that I know of, is for an American citizen to stoop so low as to vote for a Freemason. As Luther could not stop his work of reform merely because the Turk was thundering away at the door of Eastern Europe, so the true American patriot of the present day cannot be diverted from the Anti-masonic reform by the schemes and movements of the Masonic lodge. The Anti-mason cannot be either the dupe or the slave of the lodge in whatever political guise it may appear, or in whatever political party it may assume the ascendency. With the true patriot at the present day there are but two parties; one of these parties is the Masonic lodge, and the other is that party which Washington himself headed by his later letters in which he virtually renounced the lodge, and warned the people of the United States against such associations as their greatest and most formidable danger.

EXEUNT.

The executive board of Ohio brewers and liquor dealers recommends that, owing to the threatening aspect of the prohibition movement, the trade purchase no more grain until the result of the election is known.

Cleveland, Ohio, is excited. The Irish Catholics have captured the city government. Already they have taken possession of nearly all the public offices, and the process is going on. Mayor Farley is doing his utmost to fill all the places under his control with men of his race and faith. So emboldened have the Irish Catholics of the city become that the other day in the Eighth Ward they hoisted a flag having for its colors red, white and green. The American Democrats of the city are beginning to feel that the Irish Catholic element of their party is going a little too far, and that it is time to apply a check. —Witness.

THE ASSOCIATION FOR THE ADVANCEMENT OF WOMEN will hold their eleventh congress in this city Oct. 17, 18, and 19, at Hershey Hall, Chicago.

The following topics will be discussed: "Women and Land," Mrs. Jeannie C. Carr, California; "Duty of the White Women of the North to Black Women of the South," Mrs. Jennie Marsh Parker, New York; "Labor and Capital," Mrs. Augusta Cooper Bristol, New Jersey; "The Women of Utah," Mrs. Jeannie A. THE AUTUMNAL RAIN.

All summer long the panting earth
  Watched seaward with imploring eyes,
If haply o'er her burning dearth
  God's little signal cloud might rise;
But long her prophets prayed in vain,
And the deaf heavens withheld the rain.

All summer at the portal bells
  Pale neighbors stood with empty urns,
As one by one the village wells
  Refused their wonted sweet returns;
And men grown kind with common pain,
Shared their last cup and hoped for rain.

All summer strolled the lolling flocks
  Through pastures parched with ceaseless sun—
No Moses 'mid the desert rocks
  To smite and bid the waters run—
Then bleating up the farm-yard lane,
Asked their sad masters for the rain.

All summer long the thirsty corn,
  Despairing of the day of sheaves,
By dewless night and cloudless morn
  Held up its supplicating leaves;
And branchy wold and swarded plain
Besought of God the boon of rain.

At length the prayer was heard. Impressed
  To the Almighty's bounteous hour,—
Rose north and south, and east and west,
  The winds—the angels of his power,
And mustering from the misty main,
Came with them all the clouds of rain.

A lull. Then like a calm high priest,
  The bells upon his flowing sleeves
And trailing robe, and rustling vest
  Making sweet music through the leaves,
I heard at solemn midnight plain
Walk forth the great autumnal rain.

'Tis morn: and trembling in the sun,—
  Alive with thanks each steaming sod,
The earth, her summer mourning done,
  Looks with wet eyelids up to God,
Who giveth when his poor complain,
The early—and the latter rain.

A CONVERTED COREAN NOBLEMAN.

I have seen many remarkable events in the history of missions here in Japan, but I know of nothing which surpasses in interest the following facts:

Three years ago an embassy from Corea visited Japan. During their stay in this country three of the number called upon a Mr. Tsuda to obtain information concerning agriculture and political economy. Mr. Tsuda was a Christian, and told them about Christianity. They were pleased to hear that the teachings of Christ were not bad, as they had supposed, for they had given their oath that they would not take back the Scriptures to Corea. But on their return they told a nobleman named "Isuchan" (in Japanese Rijutei) what they had heard and seen.

This nobleman was a personal friend of the King of Corea, and during the revolt in July last, saved the life of the Queen and kept her concealed in the interior until the overthrow of the usurper Tai-un-kun. The King was much pleased with the conduct of Rijutei, and offered him any reward that he might choose. Rijutei declined the proffered honors, and asked instead that he might go to Japan and study the progress and civilization of that country. His request was granted, and he reached here about ten months ago.

He at once found Mr. Tsuda, and began the study of the Scriptures. As a Chinese scholar he was equal to the best in Japan, and thus the Word of God was open to him at once. By the use of Chinese characters he could also converse with the educated Japanese.

Not long after this he had a very remarkable dream, in which two men appeared bearing between them a basket of books. He asked what these books were, and was told they were the most valuable of all books for Corea. He then said, "What are they called?" The reply was, "These are Bibles."

This singular dream seemed to him a revelation from heaven, and he prosecuted his studies with greater diligence and zeal. He soon became an earnest Christian, and was baptized on the 28th of April, by Rev. Mr. Yasukawa, a pastor of one of the Presbyterian churches in Tokio.

Although he has been in this country but a short time, he speaks the language quite fluently, and has preached on two occasions with great acceptance. His deep piety and great earnestness impress all who have met him. When one of his Corean friends asked him what was in the Bible which interested him so much, he replied, "It is all interesting." His friend then added, "Can you tell me what it is that makes you so full of joy? You were never so before." "I cannot describe this peace," said he, "as it is only known to those who believe."

For a Corean to become a Christian is at the peril of his life. Only eighteen years ago an uncle of Rijutei was put to death in the most cruel manner because he became a Catholic, and his property was all confiscated. He says if he should return now his life would be in danger every hour. He has given up the study of everything else but the Word of God. He is also teaching his countrymen, and says that many of them already accept the truth of Christianity. A friend of his, who is the teacher of Corean language in the Tokio University, has already applied for baptism, and is willing to die, if need be, for the name of Christ.

Rijutei is now engaged in preparing a China-Corean version of the Scriptures. He has completed the Gospels and the book of Acts, and is now at work upon the Epistle to the Romans. When this work is completed he proposes to translate the whole into the Corean language. The American Bible Society is assisting him in the work, and it is expected will publish his version at once.

An officer of the Japanese government recently called upon him and stated that an official newspaper was about to be started in Tokio, and they wished to secure his services to edit the Corean department. He replied, "I am otherwise employed, and cannot do as you wish." The officer then insisted that he should give the matter further consideration, as it would be greatly to his and their advantage. He then said very positively, "I am engaged in more important work, and no inducement which you can offer is sufficient to turn me away."

This man pleads most earnestly for American missionaries and teachers. He says now is the time to move. As the country opens, the Catholics will rush in and deceive the people by mere outward forms which are of no real benefit. Great changes are going on, and the way will soon be open for the free spread of the Gospel. Here is a Macedonian cry that is not a vision, but a reality.

Note.—The above is taken from the Illustrated Christian Weekly. In a subsequent communication to the same journal, dated June 29th, Mr. Loomis says of Rijutei: "Yesterday he brought to me the completed New Testament, which he has now prepared in the style used by the scholars in Corea. He opened a Sunday school last Sunday for Coreans, and is teaching the Shorter Catechism. He has decided to become a preacher." And in a postscript, dated July 5th, he adds: "There are now four baptized Coreans and eight more inquirers. This is all the work of this one man, aided by the Spirit of God."

This important event is an answer to the prayers of Japanese Christians. For a few years past they have repeatedly offered most earnest supplications to God in behalf of Corea, and have been more than once on the point of sending a missionary from their own number to that country.

Some of the words of this Corean nobleman are worthy of preservation. One of his friends asked him why he studied the Bible so much. His reply was: "The Bible is not a book containing one important truth or fact of history only, but it is full of interest and help to all who study it with care."

His brother, who had heard in Corea that he was out of money and for that reason could not return home, came to Japan, bringing 1,000 yen to enable him to go back. Rijutei said to him, "I do not want the money, and you can take it back. I cannot consent to return as you wish, as I have a very important work to do here. I have found something that is better for me and our people than railroads, or telegraphs or steamboats."—Christian Intelligencer.

MISSIONARY FACTS AND PRINCIPLES.

1. The heathen are conscious of sin. Their religious works contain affecting confessions of sin and yearnings for deliverance.

2. The heathen feel the need of some satisfaction to be made for their sins. They nave devised many penances, asceticisms, and self tortures. These fail to break the bondage. They do not give the conscience peace.

3. The heathen need a Divine Deliverer; one who can make the satisfaction and insure the peace.

4. There is a command in the New Testament to go and disciple all the heathen nations in the name of this Deliverer.

5. This command emanates from the supreme authority. It is from the lips of Christ himself.

6. This command is addressed to all Christians, in every age, until every human being is converted. He who said, "Go, preach to every creature," added, "Lo, I am with you alway, even unto the end of the world." The command and the promise reach unto the end.

7. The missionary spirit is the spirit of Christ. The soul, or the church, that does not possess it, is dead.

8. If we love the person of Christ, we shall desire that his glory shall fill all lands.

9. If we love the truth of Christ, we shall be intent upon its proclamation, till every false religion is vanquished by it.

10. We are not Jews, but Gentiles. Our lineage is heathen. The missionary enterprise rescued us from paganism. Gratitude for our own emancipation and love for our brethren, the heathen of all countries, should move us with a mighty impulse to engage in the missionary work.

11. Success is certain. The Lord has promised it. The apostles illustrated it. Those twelve men were missionaries. In this time Rome, with her military force, ruled the bodies of men; and Greece, with her philosophy, ruled their spirits. Both arose in enmity to the cross. The little band of apostles did not fear or falter. They conquered both.

12. We ourselves are the offspring of the missionary enterprise. To turn against it is like a man's turning against his own mother.

13. Duty, love, success: these are three magic words. Let us grasp the ideas they suggest, and pray and work for all men, at home and abroad, until the church absorbs the whole world, and rises up into the millennial glory.—H. M. Scudder, D. D.

SEVERE REBUKE.

John Locke, the English philosopher, was a favorite with many of the great noblemen of his age. They liked his robust sense and ready wit, and enjoyed even the sharp reproofs in which he occasionally indulged. On one occasion he had been invited to meet a select party at Lord Ashley's. When he came they were playing at cards, and continued absorbed in the game for two or three hours.

For some time Locke looked on, and then began to write diligently in a blank book taken from his pocket. At length they asked him what he was writing. He answered, "My lords, I am improving myself the best I can in your company; for having impatiently waited this honor of being present at such a meeting of the wise men and great wits of the age, I thought I could not do better than to write down your conversation, and here I have in substance all that has passed this hour or two."

The noble lords were so ashamed at the written record of their frivolous talk, that they at once stopped card-playing.—Sel.

HOME HINTS.

Stammering.—A gentleman who stammered from childhood almost up to manhood gives a very simple remedy for the misfortune: "Go into a room where you will be quiet and alone, get a book that will interest but not excite you, and sit down and read two hours aloud to yourself, keeping your teeth together. Do the same thing every two or three days, or once a week if very tiresome, always taking care to read slowly and distinctly, moving the lips but not the teeth. Then, when conversing with others, try to speak as slowly and distinctly as possible, and make up your mind that you will not stammer. Well, I tried this remedy, not having much faith in it, I must confess, but willing to do anything to cure myself of such an annoying difficulty. I read for two hours aloud with my teeth together. The first result was to make my tongue and jaws ache, that is, while I was reading, and the next to make me feel as though something had loosened my talking apparatus, for I could speak with less difficulty immediately. The change was so great that every one who knew me remarked it. I repeated the remedy every five or six days for a month, and then at longer intervals until cured."

The Hygiene of the Face and Eyes.—It is a mistake to believe that a good complexion depends upon the use of such and such cosmetics. It really depends upon digestion, which itself depends upon our mode of life. Persons who rise early and go to bed regularly at ten, who take plenty of air and exercise, eat with moderation at regular hours, having their meals at intervals long enough for digestion of one to be thoroughly accomplished before they begin the next—these persons are sure to digest well, and in consequence have clear, healthy complexions, which will require no other cosmetics but plenty of soft water and good toilet soap.

The hygiene of the eyes is very simple. For them, as well as for the complexion, good digestion is equally necessary; more so, for no cosmetic could attenuate the yellow tinge which biliousness imparts to them; and if some mysterious pencils can supply the insufficient shadow of rare eyelashes, good health alone can give them that brightness which is their principal beauty.

Never read in bed or in a reclining attitude; it provokes a tension of the optic nerve very fatiguing to the eye-sight.

Bathe your eyes daily in salt water; not salt enough, though, to cause a smarting sensation. Nothing is more strengthening, and we have known several persons who, after using this simple tonic for a few weeks, have put aside spectacles they had used for years, and did not resume them, continuing of course the oft-repeated daily use of salt water. Never force your eyesight to read or work in insufficient or too broad light. Reading with the sun upon one's book is mortally injurious to the eyes. —Rural New Yorker.

CHILDREN'S CORNER.

DO YOU THINK TO PRAY?

Ere you left your room this morning
Did you think to pray?
In the name of Christ, our Saviour,
Did you sue for loving favor
As a shield to-day!

When you met with great temptations
Did you think to pray?
By his dying love and merit
Did you claim his Holy Spirit
As your guide and stay?

When your heart was filled with anger
Did you think to pray?
Did you plead for grace, my brother,
That you might forgive another
Who had crossed your way?

When sore trials came upon you
Did you think to pray?
When your soul was bowed with sorrow,
Balm of Gilead did you borrow
At the gates of day?

"COME UNTO ME."

What kind, sweet words for your pillow to-night! Jesus says them to you.

"How am I to know?"

Well, they are for every one that is weary and heavy-laden. Do you not know what it is to be weary and tired sometimes? Perhaps you know what it is to feel almost tired of trying to be good—weary with wishing you could be better. So, you see, it is to you that he says "Come!"

And if you have not yet come, you are heavy-laden, too, even if even if you do not feel it; because the burden of sin is heavy enough to sink you down into hell unless Jesus takes it from you. So it is to you that he says "Come!"

And lest you should think he says it to grown-up people only, he said, "Suffer the little children to come unto me." Are you a little child? Then it is to you that he says "Come!"

"If he were here, and if I could see him, I should like to come."

He is here, as really and truly as you are. Suppose your mother and you were in a dark room together, and she said, "Come to me!" you would not stop to say, "I am coming, mother;" but you would soon feel your way across the room, and be safe by her side. Not seeing her seeing her would not make any difference.

Jesus calls you now. Will you not say, "I am coming, Lord Jesus!" and ask him to stretch out his hand and help you to come, and draw you quite close to himself?

Yes, to himself—the blessed, beloved Lord Jesus, who loved you and gave himself for you, who has waited so patiently for you, who calls you because he wants you to come and be his own little lamb, and be taken up in his arms and blessed. Will you keep him waiting any longer? Will you not "come?"—Frances Ridley Havergal,

THE FIRST FRUIT.

A little girl named Bessie was given the grapes of a large vine in her father's yard. She was anxious they should ripen. At length the time came when they were fit to eat.

"Now we shall have a feast," said her brother John, as he pulled some one morning.

"Yes; but they are the first ripe fruit."

"Well?" said her brother.

"Mamma says we ought to give the first of all the money we make to God, and that we always feel happier in spending the rest. I wish to give the first of my grapes to God."

"But how can you give grapes to God?" asked John. "Even if you could do such a thing, he would not care for them."

"But I have found a way," said Bessie. "Jesus says, 'Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me;' and I am going to take my grapes over to Mrs. Brown, and give them to little sick Mary, who never sees grapes, because her mother is too poor to buy them."

So Bessie filled her basket with "first-fruit," and took it over to the sick child.

"I have brought you some ripe fruit," said she to Mrs. Brown.

"Heaven bless you, my dear child, for your loving gift! Here, Mary! see what a beautiful basket Bessie has brought you."

The sick child clasped her hands, overcome with joy; and she could hardly express her thanks.

Bessie returned home with her heart full of joy. This was a far more lasting pleasure than feasting upon them herself. She could truthfully say, "It is more blessed to give than to receive."—Sunday-School Gem.

HISTORY OF PETROLEUM.

Perhaps never in the world's history has there occurred a case in which an article known from time immemorial, and counted as being of too small value to have any influence whatever, has all at once become one of the forces which sway the commerce, and almost the destinies of nations, to an extent so wonderful as is actually true in regard to petroleum. Forty years ago the word petroleum had no existence in current language. It is a compound term meaning simply rock oil; it was in the dictionaries, but it was not known to people in general. And yet the article at that time was on sale in the large cities, and occasionally in smaller places. But it was in very small quantities, and was disposed of by the ounce. Those who are old enough to remember as far back as 1840 can possibly recall a very bad-smelling medicine to which they were perhaps subjected. It was called Seneca Oil, and was "dreadful good for the rheumatiz," being fortunately in most instances, used externally, though not always. It was understood to be brought from the "Seneca Nation" in the southwestern part of the State of New York; hence its name. Seneca Oil was simply crude petroleum, and it is on the instant recognized that it came from the immediate vicinity, the very border of the region which has within these later years revolutionized the world with its great oil wells.

But in going back to Seneca oil do we touch the early days of petroleum? Not at all; and we shall never touch them. No glimmering light shines back so far. When the fires fell on the Cities of the Plain in the circuit of the Jordan, at the north end of the Dead Sea, the combustible material which insured the destruction of Sodom and Gomorrah was crude petroleum, the "slime pits of the Vale of Siddim." Later still petroleum, in its viscid form served to make watertight the cradle of the baby Moses. But both these instances are relatively of modern date; for perfectly untold ages before that time petroleum had served to aid in preserving the Egyptian dead from decomposition, for the very oldest of all the mummies yet brought to light reveal its presence. And how early in the experience of the human race its remarkable properties were brought into play we can only conjecture, for nothing remains to tell us.

Petroleum therefore has two histories, and they may be said to be as distinct from each other as though they were of two separate articles. The old reaches back, so we have seen, to the days of shadow and fable; the new begins Aug. 6th, 1859, only twenty-four years ago! And it begins at Titusville, on Oil Creek, a branch of the Alleghany River, in Crawford county, Pennsylvania. To such narrow limits in both time and space are we able to concentrate our attention, and yet we are looking at that which has become one of the mighty factors in modern civilization.

Now once more we will see what we can do in the work of bringing our ideas to a focus, and this time we will look at the subject geographically. Petroleum is found in various parts of the world, in fact, almost in every country, to some extent. There are however certain points of concentration, and they are not many. The island of Zante, the mainland opposite in Hungary; Gallicia, and Moldavia; then again, away off on the Irawaddy, but most of all—on the Eastern Continent—the shores of the Caspian, especially near Baku; all of these produce petroleum, and the springs of Baku yield more than all the others combined. But we may fairly set all of them—the entire Eastern Continent—aside as being of no great moment. It is no mere figure of speech, it is not rank boasting, to say that petroleum, so far as the markets of the world are concerned, is an American product. Our regular daily and monthly yield so far surpasses all others that they cannot be counted as rivals in the trade and its results.

The springs of Baku yield about 500,000 barrels annually; we turn out that amount in the spree of a very few weeks at any time. The records of 1879, not to speak of anything later, give the exports only from the ports of Philadelphia, Baltimore and New York at 8,500,000 barrels. Surely we may call petroleum, in all its bearings, an American product.

And does it come from all parts of America? Perhaps few persons are aware how very much restricted really is the region which yields such incredible results. The fact is that the "oil centre," that from which petroleum has been produced in paying quantities, can all be comprised within a space of thirty-nine and a half square miles. It is wonderful. We will look to it again.—Scientific American.

The shortest letter on record is that of Senator Sumner to Secretary Stanton when President Johnson was trying to oust the latter from his cabinet. It was, "Stick." That one word contains a whole philosophy of life for those who are wise enough to read it aright. "Stick and hang, young man," says Josh Billings in some of his aphorisms. "Don't forget that it is the last six inches that wins the race." But that is what the young man almost always does forget. He wants to show well in the front when the race has only begun, and if he cannot succeed in doing this, he is likely to conclude that he is on the wrong track, and can run better on another. He changes; still he is outstripped as at the first, and again he pulls up. He keeps on changing all his life, and retires without honors. Others with less speed but more "bottom" keep right on in the race, and if they do not win, they generally come in "a good second."

"I KNOW A THING OR TWO."

"My dear boy," said a father to his only son, "you are in bad company. The lads with whom you associate indulge in bad habits. They drink, smoke, swear, play cards, and visit theatres. They are not safe company for you. I beg you to quit their society."

"You needn't be afraid of me, father," replied the boy, laughing. "I guess I know a thing or two. I know how far to go and when to stop."

The lad left his father's house, twirling his cane in his fingers and laughing at the old man's notions.

A few years later and that lad, grown to manhood, stood at the bar of court, before a jury which had just brought in a verdict of guilty against him for some crime in which he had been concerned. Before he was sentenced he addressed the court, and said among other things: "My downward course began in disobedience to my parents. I thought I knew as much of the world as my father did, and I spurned his advice; but as soon as I turned my back on my home, temptations came upon me like a drove of hyenas, and hurried me to ruin."

Mark that confession, ye boys who are beginning be be wiser than your parents! Mark it, and learn that disobedience is the first step on the road to ruin. Don't take it.

TEMPERANCE.

THE COMING CONFLICT.

"The next Waterloo" is what Bishop Warren calls the irrepressible conflict between the temperance sentiment and the liquor traffic in this country. Which party shall ultimately meet everlasting defeat in that great battle, no one who studies history, or watches the tread of things, or has faith in God can for a moment doubt. The signs of coming hand-to-hand conflict are rife. Year after year the pressure which forces men into a declaration concerning their attitude on this question grows heavier. The subject has become the great perplexity of the politicians, and often the stone which grinds them to powder. Forces are crystalizing. The day of debate is merging into the day of organization. We are glad. Let the question get upon the platform whereon the other great questions of state policy are discussed, and the day of triumph cannot be far distant. For the temperance question a fair and free opportunity is all that, in most communities, it now needs. In Iowa it has climbed up there, and the result will be the triumph of the cause. To sneer it down, to ignore its claims, to pass over with the condemnation of silence its movements so far as it is possible, is the policy of the politicians and their henchmen of the secular press. To exalt minor issues, to resurrect dead ones, to crack the party whip and raise the cry of "turn-coat" are methods with which we are all familiar. The sneering epithet of "Assistant Democrat" has made many a thinking temperance Republican turn pale, as he has tremblingly avowed his determination to vote no more for the whisky-soaked candidates. And many such an one has been wheeled into old party lines again. But not long can the conflict be delayed now. The tide is rising On every hand the signs are multiplying. Put your ear to the ground and the rumble of the wheels of the mighty revolution may be heard. And the Lord God of Hosts sends forth his commands to all his people,—and they cannot in this war be neutral. Temperanec men, be up and doing, lest the curse of neutrality come upon you. "Curse ye Meroz because she came not up to help of the Lord against the mighty."—Sel.

LONDON DOCKS.

In our tour we saw several parties who had provided themselves with what are terned in complimentary language, "Wine-tasting orders," but judging from the extraordinary avidity with which several individuals poured down the extraordinary beverage, it would be more proper to term them "Drinking orders." Being total abstinent in our principles, we did not avail ourselves of these orders, and rejoiced at the termination of our tour that we did not, for some of those who had imbibed pretty freely, on again reaching the surface of the busy world, were so much intoxicated that they did not know where they were, and had to be taken home by their friends.

From the vaults we proceeded to the great tobacco warehouse, an immense structure, covering five acres of ground, with accommodations under its roof for twenty-five thousand hogsheads of the "weed." You need not inquire the way, for an atmosphere of the narcotic surrounds the building; as we walk along its passages, huge hogsheads are noticed, piled far above you on either side. I never before conceived of the enormous consumption of tobacco, but here one may form a slight idea, for there is more tobacco under this roof than anywhere else on the globe. Vast rooms in the edifice are devoted to the storage of cigars. In one corner of this enclosure is a kiln where the unclaimed and damaged tobacco is burned. The chimney, which is constantly vomiting forth tobacco smoke, is called by the workmen "the Queen's Pipe." Her Majesty certainly consumes a great quantity of tobacco, for in one corner I saw about seven tons of iron and nails, which were raked from the ashes after the scrap tobacco is consumed. In the dockyard hundreds of men were rolling merchandise of every description to and from the different vessels, whose masts rise on every side. I peeped into the drug warehouse, but the atmosphere was so laden with medical vapors that I quickly turned away, and again sought the streets. If any person wishes to form an idea of the trade of London, let him visit the docks.—Ev. Messenger.

THE CHURCHES.

—The Rev. Mr. Earl, Evangelist, has been invited to hold a series of meetings at the Chicago Avenue Church, in this city. Until these meetings commence, says the church bulletin, President Blanchard will preach Sunday mornings and evenings.

—Mr. Moody and family, Mr. Sankey and family, Major Whittle and Mr. and Mrs. McGranahan, left America for Europe Oct. 2nd, by the steamship Alaska. The entire party are expected to return by the 4th of July next year.

—Rev. Leander T. Chamberlain, D. D., has accepted the call to the Classon Avenue Presbyterian church, Brooklyn (formerly Dr. Duryea's). Dr. Chamberlain has been for some time pastor of the Broadway Congregational church of Norwich, Conn., and was for years pastor of the New England Congregational church in Chicago. He was greatly blessed in spirit during Mr. Moody's meetings in this city in 1876, and rendered great assistance in those powerful meetings.

—The property now belonging to Princeton Theological Seminary has grown largely in the last quarter of a century. Its trustees report the investments made for its financial support now amount to $1,015,695.95. The real estate and buildings are estimated at $374,000. Total, $1,389,695.95. The income of the institution last year was $60,634.63.

—The concession of Dr. Ellis of Boston, a leading Unitarian divine, that the Scriptures, fairly interpreted, yield the orthodox doctrines, is repeated and made distinct by the admission of Rev. H. W. Pierson, in the Unitarian Review, that "orthodoxy keeps much closer to the thought and expression of Paul than Unitarianism does."

—A class of Freedmen, almost forgotten in the efforts to reach the multitude of emancipated slaves, is composed of the slaves formerly held by the Indians in the Indian Territory. Among these people the Presbyterian Freedmen's Board is opening a few missions, two in the Choctaw tribe and one among the Creeks.

—The subjects for the International Sunday-school lessons have been chosen for 1884. For the first six months the lessons will be in the Acts and the Epistles Three months will then be spent with "David and the Pslams." The last three months will be spent with "Solomon and the Books of Wisdom," the selections being from Kings, Proverbs and Ecclesiastes.

—The North Ohio United Brethren conference met Sept. 5, at Hicksville, Ohio, Bishop Glossbrenner in the chair. The Telescope says the Bishop's character "was not passed," and gives the reason, "because of alleged official discrepancy." This is a rebuke for neglect of duty in respect to lodge members in the church which cannot be lightly received by the church authorities.

—A considerable revival interest is reported among the United Brethren churches in Tennessee. At Greenville, especially, many conversions are reported.

—The Rev. George F. Pentecost, pastor of the Tompkins Avenue Congregational church, will take charge of the Teachers' Meetings held at four o'clock in the First Reformed church, Brooklyn, beginning October 29. These meetings grow more popular each year.

—Rev. Dr. Moffat, the well-known South African missionary whose daughter Dr. Livingstone married, who died recently, was out in his garden trimming shrubs twenty-four hours before he died. The immediate cause of death is supposed to have been the breaking of a blood-vessel. Nine hours before his departure he sent for his friend Mr. Maxted, and at once began repeating favorite hymns and texts of Scripture. He asked for texts to show that Christians would know each other in heaven. He remembered his beloved departed wife and spoke of her last happy moments with tears of joy. She had lived with him for fifty years, and, as many of our readers know, was a most devoted helper with him in the Lord's service. Her prayerfulness and great wisdom and ability to counsel him were conspicuous traits in her character. Since her death his daughter, Miss Moffat, has been constantly at his side, and has nobly and lovingly watched over him.

—In an article in the Wesleyan, Rev. John Boyes of Grimsby, England, says of Christian giving in that country: "The funds of the various denominations have during the past year felt the pressure of the bad times, and this has called attention to a more economical method of working. Notwithstanding this, the Methodist Free churches have inaugurated a commemorative fund to extend over five years of payment, and which it is hoped will reach the sum of £30,000. This year is called the silver wedding of the Wesleyan association, and the Wesleyan reformers, who twenty-five years ago became one denomination, and took the name of Methodist Free churches. The fund is to be apportioned amongst the several funds of the body according to their needs, so that the work may be pursued with more freedom and enterprise. Nearly half the amount was promised before the sittings terminated. The history of Christendom shows that whenever there has been the awakening of generous feeling in the hearts of God's people, there have been corresponding spiritual blessings poured upon them by the Most High."

—Rev. J. W. Logue has been pastor of the United Presbyterian church at Northfield, O., for forty years. He has resigned and will cease his labors Oct. 7th. At the same time occurs the fiftieth anniversary of the Northfield congregation. Arrangements are being perfected to observe memorial services, in connection with these very interesting occurrences. The services will be held in the Northfield church, on Wednesday, October 10, 1883.

—The Kentucky Conference of the Methodist Episcopal church at its annual session last week at Cynthiana, endorsed the action of the Louisville New Albany and Chicago Railroad in withdrawing Sabbath trains. It also adopted resolutions opposing trains on the Sabbath to camp meetings, and all traffic on camp grounds on that day not absolutely necessary. The Conference appointed a committee to attend each camp meeting and report, with the understanding that if Sabbath desecration does not cease the church will prohibit the holding of camp meetings.

—The thirty-ninth session of the Illinois United Brethren conference met near Macomb, McDonough county, Sept. 6th. Among their resolutions was the following upon the secret orders:

"WHEREAS, The evil of oath-bound secret societies is seen more plainly as time rolls on, and their antagonism to republicanism in undermining the foundations of liberty and disturbing the unity of the church; therefore,

"Resolved' 1. That we disapprove of those in our church who disregard our law on that question.

"2. That we labor more diligently to inform our people on the evils of secret societies.

"3. That it is the sense of this conference that members of the church who belong to secret societies and sever their connection with the same by ceasing to attend and not paying dues, that we extend to them great mercy, as recommended by the Board of Bishops."

—There is a hopeful revival of interest among the United Brethren conferences respecting the innovations of the lodge, which have for years caused much trial to the sincere people of God in that communion. The North Michigan Conference resolved to preserve the integrity of the churches on this point as on all others. The Anglaize Conference also stands firm as the following from its published records will show:

"That we unqualifiedly protest against any change of our constitution on the secrecy question, and that we will be true to the usages of the church upon this question, nor will we repudiate or nullify the present law by which our principles are sought to be enforced; and moreover, we do here and now pledge ourselves to be true to the people among whom we labor in word and doctrine, and to seek the enlightenment of all who place themselves under our ministry, and if possible, by the help of God to lead them from the lodge to the Lord Jesus Christ, that they may be saved; and failing to do this, we will maintain the honor of the church by holding its light to the world."

—In addition to the previous conference reports on secretism, it is a pleasure to add the following from the Free Methodist Conference of Minnesota and Northern Iowa:

Resolved, That we will "Have no fellowship with these unfruitful works of darkness, but rather reprove them;" and further, that we will let our light shine as opportunity may afford, to "always reveal and never conceal" the great things God has done for us, following the Master who declared, "In secret have I said nothing," and again, "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature."

Resolved, That we will direct our efforts to enlighten those "who are in search of more light," and give them a helping hand, and will wage an aggressive warfare against those orders that bind and enslave their victims with their cable-tows and horrid oaths and all others that are stepping stones to such institutions.

—The remarkable interest taken in Christian missions by the average Scotchman was singularly shown recently at Aberdeen. The proprietor of the Devanha House at that place, who is an officer of the Free Church, erected a canopy, with seats for 1,200 persons, and called a missionary convention. The canopy was found large enough for the morning session, but in the afternoon large numbers were compelled to find seats on the lawn outside, and in the evening the greater part of the lawn was covered with an audience numbering about 5,000. "Think," says the Foreign Missionary, "of the proprietor of some Saratoga hotel erecting such a tent on his lawn for a foreign missionary meeting; and what is perhaps stranger still, think of such an audience of Americans—1,200 in the morning, a larger number in the afternoon, and 5,000 in the evening, turning out to hear speeches on foreign missions!"—The Presbyterian.

THE AMERICAN BOARD AND THE ARMENIAN CHURCHES.

The American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions met last week in Detroit. In anticipation of the report of this meeting which the readers of the Cynosure may expect from a friend living in that city, it will be of great interest to many of our readers to know that the Board on Wednesday heard the reports of the special committees sent during the year to Turkey to inquire into the difficulties that have arisen between the missionaries and the native Armenian churches. The action of the Board printed herewith shows that the agitation of this question has led to the withdrawal of a short-sighted and suicidal policy for one that is just and Christian, under which the churches may expect, if faithfully carried out, that the evangelization of this interesting and devout people may be carried forward with energy and success:

Resolved, In accordance with the suggestion of the visiting deputation, that as a preparation for the withdrawal in due time, of its missionaries from among the Armenians, the board favor the admission of representatives of the native churches in Turkey in conferences concerning the practical work of evangelization, education, and publication, including estimates for necessary expense, reserving, however, to the mission, as the responsible agent of the board in the field, final action respecting the distribution of the funds drawn from the treasury of the board, subject of course, to the approval of the prudential committee.

Resolved, That there is pressing need for large-hearted and even generous co-operation with our native brethren everywhere, its particular form and method being shaped by circumstances in each locality, but such as may assure them of our Christian love and fit them most speedily to assume the entire support and management of the evangelization of their respective fields.

Resolved, That, for complete, abiding deliverance from these present troubles we are shut up to a large outpouring of the spirit of God upon our missions in Turkey, and we hail the present work of grace in central Turkey as the beginning of a divine deliverance.

THE

A NEATLY PRINTED SIXTEEN PAGE WEEKLY JOURNAL, UNSECTARIAN AND OPPOSED TO SECRET SOCIETIES.

THE POLE STAR OF REFORM.

EVERY Christian, every Prohibitionist and every Patriot should read it for the following among other reasons:

1. Because it meets the wants of the general public by giving in brief the latest reliable information on all questions of Reform, having the special object of exposing and opposing organized secrecy. Besides able editorial, contributed and selected articles upon this topic, which is of more than national importance, it has interesting sketches of progress and incidents from the reform lecturers in all parts of the country, reform news and notes, letters from the Old World, etc., etc. It is the especial organ of this movement in America—a movement which is sustained by the utterances of some of the ablest statesmen and divines whom the country has produced. Every person interested in either the family, government, or religion—the most sacred interests of humanity—is directly affected by secret societies, and needs to keep posted in this movement.

2. Because it is uncompromising on ALL questions of the day. On temperance, tobacco, Sabbath desecration, Mormonism, the Southern and Indian questions, civil-service reform, monopolies, the rights of labor, and every other question, its only aim is to be RIGHT, and advocate the TRUTH. It is hence FEARLESS and OUTSPOKEN.

2. Because it emphasizes the fact that political action should be directed by conscience enlightened by the WORD and SPIRIT of God and that Christ must be acknowledged KING of NATIONS, and presents a platform epitomizing the science of civil governments based on the supreme authority of the DIVINE WORD.

4. Because, in addition to these features, it contains a choice selection of wholesome reading for the family, from oldest to youngest, with religious and secular news, market reports, etc.

It is now owned and published by the

IN BRIEF.

—In the Interior Department, according to the recently published register there are 204 colored people on the pay-roll. Of this number twenty are copyists, of whom two get $1,800 a year salary. One is an assistant chief of a division in the Pension Office. One is a principal examiner in the same office. A number have $1,200 and $1,400 clerkships. The majority, however, are messengers. The total number of employes of all degrees in the Interior Department is 3,091, so that the 204 colored employes bear to the whole force just about the ratio that the colored population of the country sustains to the white.

—A Belgian and a Frenchman having recently succeeded in accomplishing the feat of crossing the English channel in a balloon, so often before unsuccessfully attempted, one of the participants gives the following account of his voyage: "Not only the land lay below us like a map, but the bottom of the sea was clearly seen in all directions; every channel and shoal was easily marked, and formed a fibrous net-work. By the aid of instantaneous photography and the balloon, our knowledge of the sea could be greatly increased; charts of greater exactness than any existing could be made of the bottom of the sea, at least of shoals shallow enough to offer danger to sailing crafts."

—A party on the Rocky Mountain division of the Northern Pacific Railroad a few days ago had a thrilling adventure which they would not care to repeat. They were on an open car which was standing still on an exceedingly steep grade. Suddenly one of the gentlemen saw that a train of cars was dashing down upon them at frightful speed. It consisted of an engine weighing 80,000 pounds and eight cars heavily laden with iron. There was no time to get the party off the car, and to remain still was almost certain death.

With great presence of mind one of the gentlemen loosened the brake of the car, which at once began to run down the hill. It was now a race for life, and the ladies of the party were almost wild with fright. Soon the freight train caught up with the car, but the velocity of both being almost the same little damage was done, and at last all reached the bottom of the decline in safety.

—A short time ago a little boy went with his father to see a colt. He patted the colt's head and made quite a fuss over it, until the stableman told him to be careful that the colt did not turn round and kick him. When young Hopeful went home his mother asked him what he thought of the colt. "I like him pretty well," was the reply. "He's very tame in front; but he's awful wild behind."

HOLDEN WITH CORDS,

OR THE POWER OF THE SECRET EMPIRE. A faithful representation in story of the evil influence of Freemasonry, by E. E. FLAGG, author of "Little People," "A Sunny Life," etc. This is a thrillingly interesting story, accurately true to life because mainly a narration of historical facts. 384 pages. In cloth, $1; per doz., $9. Paper, 50c; per doz., $4.

NOTICES OF THE PRESS.

"There is no important history extant but has connected with it numerous other histories of which it was the initial point, or the dominating influence. The abduction and murder of Morgan set ten thousand secret springs in motion, as the surrender of the charters of so many lodges at that time, and the severing of their connection with the order of some forty thousand of its members indicated. This story is one of these histories, and is a collection of facts woven into a story. It cannot fail to be read with interest."—Free Methodist, Chicago.

"The story is intensely interesting and the author has succeeded in weaving into it a great deal of information in regard to this mysterious order, which is certainly startling if true, and he gives what seems to be undoubted evidence to prove his assertions. The book is one which should be read by both Masons and Antimasons."—Wayne Co. Herald.

"In an incidental way the story tells much about the manner of conducting lodges and much about the spirit and methods of Masonry. The story covers the period of the abduction and murdering of William Morgan. The strategic position from which the author writes put a charm in the book, while it gives a good opportunity to show the workings of the order. We wish all the people would read it."—Telescope.

"Our Anti-secret society friends are certainly entitled to great credit for their persistence in their efforts to expose and root out secretism. The object of the writer of this story is to present in its true light the crafty, unscrupulous and exceedingly hurtful influence of Masonry, the parent of all the orders."—Reformed Presbyterian and Covenanter.

"It is one of the most fascinating narratives we ever read and teaches its lesson in a manner not soon to be forgotten. It is evidently written for the heart and its words go to the heart. It is singularly free from wild denunciation. Those who are interested in the secret society question would do well to form the acquaintance of this interesting work."—Lutheran Standard, Columbus, O.

"The republication of the Reform Story which run through the columns of the Cynosure for nearly a year is at last completed, and the book so anxiously expected by thousands of our readers has come from the press of Ezra A. Cook. The book is finely bound and fairly introduces the reader to the treasures within. The publisher has made occasional selections from Masonic works to verify the statements of the text; these make a helpful addition for some who can afford no more complete an armory of this kind."—Christian Cynosure.

"The exciting scenes of the fall of 1826, at Batavia, N. Y., when Wm. Morgan was murdered by Masonry, are woven into the story so as to give the truth of History a setting of attractiveness. The forty chapters of the volume are soon compassed by the eager render who begins the volume. This volume ought to be read and will be sought as its merits become known."—United Brethren in Christ.

History of the Abduction and Murder OF CAPT. WM. MORGAN. As prepared by seven committees of citizens, appointed to ascertain the fate of Morgan. This book contains indisputable, legal evidence that Freemasons abducted and murdered Wm. Morgan, for no other offense than the revelation of Masonry. It contains the sworn testimony of over twenty persons, including Morgan's wife; and no candid person, after reading this book, can doubt that many of the most respectable Freemasons in the Empire State were concerned in this crime. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

Judge Whitney's Defense before the GRAND LODGE OF ILLINOIS. Judge Daniel H Whitney was Master of the lodge when S. L Keith, a member of his lodge, murdered Ellen Slade. Judge Whitney, by attempting to bring Keith to justice, brought on himself the vengeance of the lodge, but he boldly replied to the charges against him, and afterwards renounced Masonry. 15 cents each; per dozen, $1.25

Ex-President John Quincy Adams' LETTERS on the Nature of Masonic Oaths, Obligations and Penalties. Thirty most interesting, able and convincing letters on the above general subject, written by this renowned statesman to different public men of the United States during the years 1831 to 1833. With Mr. Adams' address to the people of Massachusetts upon political aspects of lodgery; an Appendix giving obligations of Masonry, and an able introduction. This is one of the most telling anti-secrecy works extant, aside from the Expositions. Price, cloth, $1.00; per dozen, $9.00. Paper, 35 cents; per dozen, $3.50.

Oaths and Penalties of Freemasonry, as proved in court in the New Berlin Trial. Also the letter of Hon. Richard Rush to the anti-Masonic committee of York County, Pa., May 4th, 1831. The New Berlin trials began in the attempt of Freemasons to prevent public initiations by seceding Masons. These trials were held at New Berlin, Chenango Co., N. Y., April 13 and 14th, 1831, and General Augustus C. Welsh, sheriff of the county, and other adhering Freemasons, swore to the truthful revelation of the oaths and penalties. 10 cents each; per dozen, $1.00.

Oaths and Penalties of the 33 Degrees OF FREEMASONRY. To get these thirty-three degrees of Masonic bondage, the candidate takes half-a-million horrible oaths. 15 cents each; per dozen, $1.00.

Prest. H. H. George on Secret Societies. A powerful address, showing clearly the duty of Christian churches to disfellowship secret societies. 10 cents each; per dozen, 75 cents.

The Mystic Tie, or Freemasonry a LEAGUE WITH THE DEVIL. This is an account of the church trial of Peter Cook and wife, of Elkhart, Indiana, for refusing to support a reverend Freemason; and their very able defense presented by Mrs. Lucia C. Cook, in which she clearly shows that Freemasonry is antagonistic to the Christian religion. 15 cents each; per dozen, $1.25.

Odd-fellowship Judged by Its Own Utterances; Its Doctrine and Practice Examined in the Light of God's Word. By Rev. J. H. Brockman. THE PUREST IS THE BEST.

In the selection of SUNDAY-SCHOOL PAPERS, the most important point to be considered is the moral tone of the subject matter. If this is of a questionable character, the papers should be shunned, no matter how large, how attractive, or how low the price. Such papers are

COSTLY AT ANY PRICE.

The country is being flooded with S. S. literature that is largely composed of what may be properly termed "RELIGIOUS FICTION," the tendency of which is to create a distaste for sound reading and foster an appetite for fiction of a more deleterious character.

The engravings of these papers are equally objectionable. In many cases a lady or girl dressed in the height of fashion is made the HEROINE OF A STORY, thus putting the highest sanction to extravagance and pride. With such instructors in our Sunday-schools we cannot expect the children to grow up with a love for sound literature and with correct ideas of Christian propriety. With a view of supplying S. S. papers, of a pure and elevating character, the publishers are issuing

FOUR MONTHLY PAPERS.

They are FREE FROM FICTION, and the cuts are chosen with great care. While they are thus carefully edited, they are not lacking in attractiveness. They are well printed on beautiful tinted paper. The children are delighted with them. The very low price at which this line of S. S. papers is issued, places them within the reach of even schools of limited means

FARM NOTES.

POULTRY MANAGEMENT.

The following notes on poultry management are written for the farmer, not for the fancier; are the results of personal experience and of a study of the most eminent writers on the subject. Poultry on the average farm is not made profitable, and to bring about a change in this is the object of these notes. In the language of the patent medicine venders, "Give it a trial."

The poultry house: Before getting your poultry see you have a proper house to keep them in. This need be neither expensive nor troublesome to construct. It may be made of almost any material, old lumber, stone, brick, or anything, in fact that can be persuaded to stick together. One of the most convenient and practical poultry houses I ever saw was made with a few posts driven into the ground in double rows, the intervening space being filled in with hay. Banked up high with manure in winter, this made a capital place for a regular supply of fresh eggs. The roof was of precisely the same materials, and the only objection I could raise to it was that the hay made a capital place for lice and parasites to gather in, but the proprietor assured me that a thorough fumigation once or twice a year and the substitution of new hay every second year kept hens entirely free from same.

The poultry house should be not only rain-proof, but also wind-proof. If fowls are kept in a constant draught they are apt to become roupy and sickly; certainly they are not so profitable as when properly housed. Do not overcrowd your houses; give each fowl at least six or eight square feet of house room. If you think this expensive when constructing your house, you will find it true economy when you have got your flock in order, and should success tempt you to add a few hens now, and a few more another time, results will speedily convince you that plenty of room is essential.

Ventilation should be provided for; let there be a chance for the air to escape near the roof. This can be done by leaving a narrow opening, here and there, under the eaves, or making a common slat ventilator in the roof. Close, unventilated rooms are healthy for neither human beings nor any other living things.

Light is a great essential in the poultry house. Put in at least one six-pane sash, and if you put in two or three more so much the better. It lets the sunlight in, and medical men say that good light is almost as needful for health as pure air. Fowls certainly thrive better in well lighted and ventilated houses than they do where these requisites are lacking.

Remember that in cold winter weather they are in the house most all the time, and if they have to grope around in the dark all the time how can you expect them to keep you supplied with eggs? In the summer it is a different thing; hardy breeds will roost in the trees, live out of doors all the time, and keep in perfect condition and health; but winter with its twenty degrees below zero is another tale.

The cleaner the house is kept the better; don't let the manure accumulate till you have three or four wagon-loads to take out, but spend ten minutes now and then say once or twice a week, according to the number of fowls you keep, in cleaning it out. This will keep your house free from smell. Whitewash your walls once or twice a year; same with the perches and nest boxes; and in the spring of the year give the place a thorough fumigation.

The best way to do this is to get an old iron pot of some kind, or an old tin dish, put some burning charcoal or live coals in, and throw a few cents worth of sulphur on. With windows, ventilators, and doors closed, this will kill any chicken lice that may infest the house, and give you a clean place to start your spring chickens in. A little powdered sulphur strewn in the nests will greatly conduce to the banishment of these little pests, and pests they certainly are, for I fully believe that they destroy more dollars' worth of chickens than cholera and all other diseases put together.

The floor of the house should be of earth, care being taken that it is sufficiently high to prevent dampness or water gathering on it. Such a floor is healthier than a board floor, as the latter is likely to get saturated with moisture from the droppings.

Heavy fowls should not be allowed to oost high; crooked breast bones results from heavy fowls perching on high roosts. Two feet is quite high enough. Place them all the same height and there will be no fighting for the highest place.

Arrange the nests as the construction of the house permits. Hens love to lay in out-of-the-way corners, and it is well to humor them in this to some extent. I saw in a poultry journal (Poultry World) a short time ago a very practical suggestion in this respect, advocating the use of old nail kegs for nests. "They should be placed on the side, are big enough for ten pound hens, and, best of all, fowls cannot sit on the edge and leave their droppings in the clean straw with which you supply their nests."

In a corner of the house place a box anywhere from two to four feet square, and about a foot high: throw dry earth, sand, coal ashes, or something similar into it, and your fowls will soon find out that it is just the place to wallow in. They will, by the use of it, keep themselves free from lice and the dust box will save you lots of little chicks in the course of a season.

Just a few more words, and the fowl house is finished. When winter comes, bank it up with manure as thick and high as you like; a little warmth produces a great many winter eggs, and "winter is the time that determines whether your poultry will pay well or not." I generally put up a tight fence, six feet high, round my poultry house, placing it two feet from the house, and fill in with manure. In the spring I pull it down and use the manure in the garden. The cost is simply the work and the lumber, which latter will of course last for several winters. RAMMEN

Smith's Tonic Syrup

FEVER and AGUE

Or CHILLS and FEVER.

AND ALL MALARIAL DISEASES.

The proprietor of this celebrated medicine justly claims for it a superiority over all remedies ever offered to the public for the SAFE, CERTAIN, SPEEDY and PERMANENT cure of Ague and Fever, or Chills and Fever, whether of short or long standing. He refers to the entire Western and Southern country to bear him testimony to the truth of the assertion that in no case whatever will it fail to cure if the directions are strictly followed and carried out. In a great many cases a single dose has been sufficient for a cure, and whole families have been cured by a single bottle, with a perfect restoration of the general health. It is, however, prudent, and in every case more certain to cure, if its use is continued in smaller doses for a week or two after the disease has been checked, more especially in difficult and long-standing cases. Usually this medicine will not require any aid to keep the bowels in good order. Should the patient, however, require a cathartic medicine, after having taken three or four doses of the Tonic, a single dose of BULL'S VEGETABLE FAMILY PILLS will be sufficient.

The genuine SMITH'S TONIC SYRUP must have DR. JOHN BULL'S private stamp on each bottle. DR. JOHN BULL only has the right to manufaoture and sell the original JOHN J. SMITH'S TONIC SYRUP, of Louisville, Ky. Examine well the label on each bottle. If my private stamp is not on each bottle do not purchase, or you will be deceived.

The Facts Stated.

HON. THURLOW WEED ON THE MORGAN ABDUCTION.

This is a sixteen page pamphlet comprising a letter written by Mr. Weed, and read at the unveiling of the monument erected to the memory of Capt. William Morgan. The frontispiece is an engraving of the monument. It is a history of the unlawful seizure and confinement of Morgan in the Canandaigua jail, his subsequent conveyance by Freemasons to Fort Niagara, and drowning in Lake Ontario. He not only subscribes his NAME to the letter, but ATTACHES HIS AFFIDAVIT to it.

In closing his letter he writes: I now look back through an interval of fifty-six years with a conscious sense of having been governed through the "Anti-Masonic excitement" by a sincere desire, first, to vindicate the violated laws of my country, and next, to arrest the great power and dangerous influences of "secret societies."

The pamphlet is well worth perusing, and is doubtless the last historical article which this great journalist and politician wrote. [Chicago, National Christian Association.] Single copy, 5 cents.

NIGHTS IN A BAR-ROOM

T. S Arthur's great temperance book, complete and illustrated. By mail, 5c each; 50c per doz. By express, $3.50 per 100.

THE LIQUOR TRAFFIC THE GREAT SOURCE OF CRIME.

Leaves from the diary of an old lawyer.—By Hon. A. B Richmond, author of "Court and Prison," etc. A book of intense interest, rivaling the famous "Diary of a Physician," and, in its truthful, terrible pictures of the power and crime of intemperance, excelling the well-known "Ten Nights in a Barroom." The temperance issue of the present time is Shall prohibition be partial or entire? Shall the branches of the death-bearing tree be pruned and trimmed, or shall the tree itself be cut down and its stump be torn up by the roots? The answer of "Leaves from the Diary" is, "Cut down the tree, tear up the roots, leave not a shoot or shred behind." It is certainly a very strong and eloquent volume. Complete edition on fine, heavy paper, with colored lithograph of Sewall's stomach plates. By mail, 30c each; $3 per doz. By express, $20 per 100. Abridged edition, by mail, 15c; $1.25 per doz. By express, $9 per 100.

THE LIQUOR TRAFFIC AND THE SOBER CITIZEN.

An able and telling work, by Rev. J. H. Sherman which brings out the effects of the liquor traffic in a new light. The following are some of the commendations of the first edition

"The author drives the nails of conviction through and clinches them."—N. Y. Christian Advocate.

"Speakers and workers in the temperance field will find valuable aid in this pamphlet. It is crowded with convincing facts."—Zion's Herald

"One of the ablest reviews of the drink curse ever issued from the press."—The Morning and Day of Reform.

"The arguments are put in telling form."—Judge Pittman.

New revised and enlarged edition. By mail, 10c each, $1 per doz. By express, $6 per 100.

DRINKS FROM DRUGS.

A startling exposure of the liquor traffic, by El. Johnson. A book that cannot fail to arouse the American people to the gigantic swindle now being perpetrated. The writer was offered $10,000 by a leading brewer to keep still. Liquor not only doctored, but made entirely from drugs. Extracts from a whole library of secret books, giving receipts for making and doctoring; advertisements of essences, fac similes of labels, engravings, etc. etc. Claret, port, sherry, champagne, whisky, brandy, gin, rum, etc., all out of one barrel, and made at less than 25 cents a quart. Wine that never saw grape juice; cider that never saw apples; beer factories in place of breweries, fine cream ale without barley or brewing; whisky from arsenic; millions of gallons of liquor that pays no revenue tax. The farmer's corn and barley "all in your eye." A wholesale liquor store in a ten-foot square cellar; more French wine sold in New York City than is produced in the whole of France. By mail, 10c each; $1 per doz. By Express, $6 per 100.

W. C. T. U. ORGANIZATION AND WORK.

A book of general information on how to organize and run successfully a Woman's Christian Temperance Union. This book should be widely distributed among W. C. T. U. presidents, pastor's wives and other representative women. By mail, 10c each; $1 per doz. By express, $6 per 100.

HOME PROTECTION.

A lawyer's view of it. By J. C. Wells, attorney-at-law. The question of female suffrage for the protection of home ably discussed from a lawyer's standpoint. A book for the times. By mail, 10c each; $1 per doz. By express, $6 per 100.

BAND OF HOPE RECITERS.

172 pages. 164 choice recitations of poetry and prose, containing some of the choicest bits of temperance material for the platform ever uttered, accompanied by an article on elocution. By mail, 10c each; $1 per doz. By express, $6 per 100.

GENERAL TEMPERANCE SONG BOOK.

"Temperance Songs," a Book for Adult Societies.—Eighty-three choice pieces, both words and music (old and new tune combination) choice selections from standard temperance collections, many choice new pieces. Book carefully edited by David C. Cook. Will prove just what is wanted by every temperance society. Price in strong cardboard covers, by mail, 10c each; $1 per dozen; by express, $5 per 100.

TEMPERANCE ANTHEM BOOK.

Temperance Anthems.—A new idea; nothing else of the kind in existence. Will insure good music by the choir at temperance meetings. Forty-eight pages of choice anthems by ablest writers. By mail, 15c each; $1.50 per doz. By express, $10 per 100.

BAND OF HOPE SONG BOOK.

Band of Hope Songs.—Fifty-seven choice pieces for juvenile temperance gatherings, Bands of Hope, etc. Old, familiar tunes, also choice new words and music. Words far in advance of anything else issued. By mail, 8c each; 75c per doz. By express, $4 per 100.

DANIEL'S BAND.

A temperance concert exercise, with parts suitable for all ages; entirely new. Songs, recitations, dialogues, etc., of a thoroughly aggressive character; sure to carry weight with the rendering of it. By mail, 5c each; 50c per dozen, By express, $2 per 100.

THE COLD WATER ARMY.

For a primary temperance concert exercise. An entirely new exercise, containing songs and recitations, dialogues, etc., suitable for primary scholars. A pleasing and telling concert on temperance. By mail, 5c each; 50c per dozen. By express, $2 per 100.

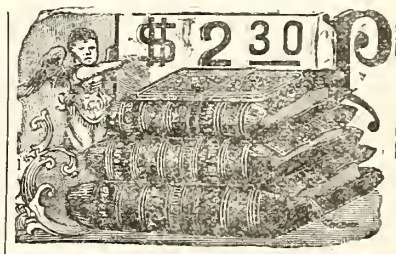
X-ford Teacher's Bible.

A Bible Concordance, Commentary etc., All in One.

The "Oxford" Teachers' Bible contains, besides the text with the celebrated Oxford references, a Cruden's Concordance with 25,000 references; Oxford Index with 2,345 words, pronouncing dictionary of proper names with meanings; Scripture atlas of twelve maps, correct to latest survey, including alphabetical list of Bible names arranged with figures and letters indicating location on maps; condensed Bible history of Old and New Testament with interval between chronology of Old Testament and chronology of the New; a complete harmony of the Gospels; etymology, geography and topography of Palestine; mountains, lakes and rivers of the Bible, with special tabular summary; birds, reptiles, insects, trees, plants, flowers, minerals, precious stones, etc.; weights, measures, time and money; obsolete and ambiguous words, and words used as symbols; Paul's voyage to Rome; Paul's missionary journey; history of Jewish sects; parables of our Lord; parables of the Old Testament; miracles of our Lord; miracles of the New Testament; prophecies concerning Christ; titles of Christ; special prayers; chart of the family of the Herods, etc., etc.



SIZES.—Our small size Bible is 4x5½ inches. Our medium size, 4½x6½. Our large size, 5x7¾.

Our small and medium sizes are most popular ones. Large size for those desiring large type Bible.

For $1.30, small size genuine Oxford Teacher; complete in every respect; same as the very best; strongly bound in morocco covers, with gilt edges; in large clear print. Book of 1,408 pages.

Postage, 9cts.

For $2.30 we furnish a small size Oxford, bound in Persian seal, full flexible; can be bent back, doubled or rolled, without injury. Divinity circuit, gilt edges, kid lined, silk sewed, with book-mark and band Postage, 10c.

For $2.20 Same style of binding as above described. Teachers' medium size, red edges instead of gilt. Postage, 12c.

For $3.30 The same style of binding, medium size. Postage, 12c.

For $5.40 Same style of binding, large size, gilt edges. Postage, 20c.

For $5.75 The same style of binding, large size. Postage, 20c.

For $1.60 Small size genuine Oxford Teacher, gilt edges, flexible morocco cover, circuit, or protection, leather all around. Postage, 10cts.

For $2.50 The same style of binding, medium size. Postage, 12c.

THE PERSIAN SEAL BINDING

Is very handsome and durable. It is this style of binding which is so much admired by Bible readers. Please notice particularly that these Bibles are kid lined and silk sewed. Many Bibles in this style outwardly are lined with black paper and sewed with thread in place of silk.

LEVANT MOROCCO BINDING.

The Persian Seal bindings are the best kept by most Bible dealers, and usually pass for the best teachers' Bibles made; and, to all appearance, they are so. There is, however, a better wearing binding, of which the Persian Seal is a good imitation; this is known as "Levant Morocco." In all respects the Levant morocco Bible corresponds with the Persian Seal description, except as to leather used for cover which, though looking like the Persian Seal, is stronger, and will last a lifetime.

Prices on genuine Levant Morocco bindings:

For $4.50—Small size. Postage, 10c.
For $5.50—Medium size. Postage, 12c.
For $8.00—Large size. Postage, 20cts.

Handsome Gift Bibles at Low Prices.

For 45c. Embossed morocco cover, gilt edges, gilt title on back. Very neat and durable. This is the handsomest 45c. gift Bible we have ever seen. Postage, 5c.

For 60c. Morocco cover, brass bound and plated, with handsome gilt clasp and gilt edges; two patterns; square and round corners. Exquisite lettering on side; printed in large clear type. Bibles no better are sold as high as $1 and $2. Postage, 6c.

For 70c. Similar size and style of binding to our 60-cent Bible; square corners, brass bound, with clasp and hands, tasseled book-mark; also medallion inserted on side in gold and red.

This was a new importation with the fall of 1882, and a very pretty design. It should be seen to be appreciated. (See cut.) Postage, 6c.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

—The National debt was reduced $14,707,279 during September.

—Great efforts have been put forth to secure the reinstatement of Paul Vandervoort in the Railway Mail Service. Postmaster General Gresham would probably have decided the matter last week had it not been for his prostration by illness.

—The Director of the Mint is preparing a statement to show the profits arising from the coinage of the standard silver dollar for the five fiscal years ending June 30, 1883, The amount thus made is very large, being in gross for the five years since July 1, 1878, the enormous sum of $17,342,113.02. Nearly all this profit has gone direct into the Treasury, for after subtracting the wastage, cost of coinage, transportation, and other expenses, there is left a net profit in standard dollars and subsidiary coin over the bullion value at the respective dates of purchase of over $16,800,000.

—Surgeon General Hamilton, of the Marine Hospital Service, Washington, has received a letter from Surgeon Main, of Brownsville, Texas, in which serious apprehensions are expressed concerning the importation of yellow fever into the United States from Mexico. Especially is the scourge to dreaded on the Pacific coast, says Dr. Main, for it is extending northward along the Gulf of California, and nearly all the seacoast cities of Mexico are afflicted to an alarming extent. Owing to improper sanitary regulations and a lack of nurses and physicians, the victims in many cases are dying from neglect, and the survivors are fleeing in every direction to get away from the pest.

—Fire broke out in Hahnemann Hospital, Chicago, Friday evening, and a wing of the building was destroyed. Nothing but the bravery and coolness of the house surgeons prevented a horror. As it was not a mishap happened to any of the patients. Loss about $10,000.

—The Exposition Building at Pittsburg Pa., with all its valuable exhibits, machinery, etc., was destroyed by fire early Wednesday morning. The loss is cstimated at $1,000,000, four-fifths of which falls upon exhibitors. There are rumors that the flames originated in the explosion of benzine with which a balloon was being dressed. The locomotive Arabian, the first ever used in the United States was burned.

—A cigar-stump carelessly thrown down caused a fire Thursday in the volunteer steamer house of the Troy (N. Y.) firemen, which destroyed all the uniforms. In putting out the flames two firemen fell from ladders, both being mortally wounded.

—At Philadelphia Friday morning a Reading train struck a Union Line street car, at a crossing, demolishing the vehicle, causing the death of three persons, and wounding more or less seriously, ten others.

—Chong Nom was refused naturalization papers by Judge Yerkes at Philadelphia Friday. The court brings his decision on the act restricting Chinese immigration, the fourteenth section of which decrees that no court shall admit Chinese to citizenship. On this decision Judge Arnold revoked papers which he had granted to another Chinaman.

—The New York Anti-slavery society celebrated Tuesday the fiftieth anniversary of the beginning of the work for the freeing of the negroes. Elizur Wright, the oldest abolitionist living, occupied the chair in the afternoon, and George W. Clarke, the reform singer, who sung anti-slavery ballads thirty years ago, though now over three-score years and ten, again made his voice heard. There were poems and brief addresses, Mr. Clarence Winthrop Bowen relating the stories of the lives of Arthur and Lewis Tappan.

—The Illinois State Board of Equalization completed its labors Tuesday. Regarding railroads, the report shows 9,509 miles of all kinds of track in the State, the assessed value of which is $44,809,105; and the assessed value of all railroad property is placed at $59,162,102, an increase over last year's assessment of $2,403,000.

—After an address by Alexander Sullivan, Thursday Evening, in New York City, the New York State Convention of the Ancient Order of Hibernians voted that it was the sense of the gathering that every division in the State should become a branch of the Irish National League.

—After this week all roads running between Boston and Montreal, with one exception, will adopt the seventy-fifth meridian time, which is sixteen minutes slower than Boston time. It is believed that this standard will be adopted on all railways east of Buffalo and in Canada before Nov. I.

—In Natchitoches Parish, La., Wednesday night, a quarrel arose among negroes in a saloon, when dirks and revolvers were drawn and freely used. At the end of the melee six men were found to be dead and four mortally wounded.

—General Roger A. Pryor sailed from New York Wednesday for London to defend O'Donnell, who killed informer Carey.

—A whaler which arrived at Dundee, Scotland, Thursday, brings word that natives of Saunders Island saw a party of five men at Etab, a fishing station off the Greenland coast, early in the year, who belonged to an expedition located further north. The captain of the whaler believes this party was sent out by Lieutenant Greeley to meet the ill-fated Proteus.

—The Bishop of Clonfert, Ireland, in a speech Tuesday at Loughrea, denounced state-aided immigration, believing that millions of Catholics have already been lost to the church in America.

—As the cage was being hoisted in the Nelson coal-pit at Leigh, England, Tuesday, the rope broke, precipitating the cage to the bottom of the shaft, killing six miners.

BUSINESS.

FOLLY.

It's all folly to pay $50 or a $100 for seven degrees in Freemasonry. in the Lodge and Chapter when you can send a dollar to the National Christian Association, 221 W. Madison street, Chicago, and get the whole thing by return mail, without being hoodwinked and haltered or having to "put up refreshments" after tedious "initiations."

POSTAL NOTES.

Some may have the idea that the new postal note ensures safety; but the only security is as heretofore in post-office orders, drafts, registered letters and by express. I prefer postage stamps to postal notes, but the better way is to send by rcgistered letter or post-office money order.

WHAT EMINENT ST. LOUIS PHYSICIANS SAY:

Preventive of Maleria.—Colden's Liquid Beef Tonic is a very agreeable article of diet, and particularly useful when tonics are required, being tolerated when other forms of animal food are rejected. In Diphtheria, Ague, Malaria, Typhoid Fevers, and every depressing disease, its use will be attended with great advantage. We have prescribed it with exeellent suecess. J. H. Leslie, M. D.; G. P. Copp, M. D. S. B. Parsons, M. D.; R. A. Vaughan, M. D.; Drs. S. L. and J. C. Niedelet; Wm. Porter, M. D.; and many others. WHAT TOM MOORE SAID.

"Wrinkles are democratie and flatter nobody." The same may be said of all blemishes of the skin, whether caused by sickness, age or aceident. "Glenn's Sulphur Soap" will at least retard the time when wrinkles make their appearance, by keeping the skin of a velvet softness, improving its clastieity, and preserving its healthful appearance. It gives a pearly aspect to the skin, which cannot be distinguished from the natural hue of a pure blonde complexion. Beware of counterfeits. See that "C. N. Crittenton, Proprietor," is printed on cach packet, without which none is genuine. Sold by druggists and fancy goods dealers.

The International Arbitration League with headquarters at Washington, has issued a request to every "priest, preacher and rabbi in the United States" to discourse during November on the text "Peace on earth, good will to men." The singular form of this request will be observed, for it is couched in such terms as to include the Protestant and Roman Catholic churches, the Jewish synagogues, the Mormon temples, and even the Chinese pagodas on the Pacific coast. The words selected are robbed of their force and glory if separated from the Saviour of men of whom they were spoken; yet it is evident the Arbitration League wishes to avoid him and occupy a neutral and Masonic ground. The suspicions aroused by its circulars has much confirmation in a private letter from Washington, in which several of the leading men in this society are said to be Freemasons or infidels or both. It must certainly be fatal to such a cause if the sentiments of such men prevail in the counsels of so vastly important a movement.

The result of the elections in Iowa and Ohio is slowly developing into a temporary check to the temperance political movement. In the former State the constitutional amendment was adopted two years ago by nearly 30,000 majority. The issue was not so clearly made last week, but the Republican party having adopted the amendment as part of its platform, and the Democrats having as decidedly adopted the saloon, the party vote shows the apparent strength of the prohibition sentiment. The Republican majority is but 12,000 or 14,000 over all. This shows that Weaver's Greenback campaign had some effect and that many Anti-masons were unwilling to sustain a tool of Albert Pike for governor. The legislature is Republican on joint ballot. In Ohio the Democratic ticket is elected by 6,000 to 8,000 votes, and the second (prohibition) amendment failed of success by over 45,000 votes. But 354,668 ballots were cast for this amendment and the politicians will not venture to ridicule such a vote. Let Ohio temperance men take heart. They have strength enough to be independent of party tricks and combinations. Let them hold it, and keep those 354,000 ballots together so that they be hurled in a mass against the ramparts of the drink power. They will soon be breached before such blows.

The proposition to change the standard of railway time, and so of all time, throughout the United States has in it something of the boldness of railway enterprise, and exhibits the importance of the railway system to business interests of every character. The companies have experienced so much inconvenience and loss and are daily risking so much because of the varying standards that the plan to divide the whole country into four great time districts will soon be universally adopted. Throughout each district the time will be just one hour slower than in the district preceding. The Eastern district, comprising the whole country east of Buffalo, including Boston, New York, Philadelphia, Washington, etc., will be governed by the time at the seventy-fifth meridian, four minutes slower than New York time. The Central district, extending from Buffalo to the Missouri River will be run by the time at the nineteenth meridian, nine minutes slower than Chicago time. The two sections farther West will be run by the 105th and the 120th meridian times respectively. On the whole, at the leading points, there will be little difference between the standard and the local time. Thus when it is noon at New York standard time, it will be 12:04 local time; in Chicago, at the same moment, it will be 11:00 standard time, and 11:09 local time; at Denver it will be 10:00 standard, and exactly the same local time; at San Francisco it will be 9:00 standard time and 8:50 local time. The arrangement will be of immense service to the railway management and the traveling public, and as railway time is the standard through large portions of the country all kinds of business will soon be accommodated to the new arrangement.

The death of Queen Ranavalona II. of Madagascar was whispered about last winter just after the obnoxious invasion of the island by the French. She was crowned in 1868, and her accession marked an era in the history of the island. Her mother has been called the "Bloody Mary" of the Malagasy race. Under her cruel persecutions of the Christians thousands perished. But with the change in the monarchy all was changed. The state idols were burned, and the new Queen addressed her subjects with language and sentiments borrowed from the Bible. It was said and feared that the first shot fired by the French at Tamatave would cause a revolution in the capital of Madagascar, and would probably sweep away all traces of Christianity, as well as lead to the massacre of the missionaries. Since the war broke out, however, the attendance at places of worship in the capital has increased, and numerous weekly prayer-meetings are held. A niece of the late Queen, a young woman educated in the Quaker and London Missionary schools, succeeds to the throne; and the prime minister, an earnest Christian man, as well as the most capable statesman of the country, continues in power. It is a custom of the country that this officer shall be the husband of the Queen; he is therefore married to the new Queen, as he was to her predecessor.

Since the death of the veteran George Trask of Fitchburg, Massachusetts, the foe of tobacco in all weathers and seasons, the reform against this filthy kind of intemperance has wanted a leader who, like him, was not ashamed to be called a hobby-rider, for he knew his horse was sound in wind and limb. But way up in New Hampshire toward the White Mountains at Melvin Village, another prophet of reform has arisen, and has begun the publication of a small quarterly. This brother, C. H. Shepherd, receives the endorsement of Senator H. W. Blair of New Hampshire, the temperance champion of Congress, of John B. Gough, and of Barnum, the showman, who writes him a cheering note: "I always sent Rev. Geo. Trask $— per year at Fitchburg and am willing to do the same by you if you will keep up firing at the dreadful evil of using tobacco. You should talk more about the fearful results of the tobacco evil. There is no need of drawing on imaginations and making distorted views of our Infinite Father in his dealings with men, when we have so many undisputed proofs of the certainty of punishment following in this world the infraction of natural laws. If a man gets drunk and squanders his money no repentance, good as it is, will stop his headache or restore his squandered substance to his starving wife and children." The enterprise deserves encouragement for its end, and it is hoped also for the judicious means employed to reach it. The country needs a great revival against tobacco, that shall penetrate every hamlet, clearing the stuff out of groceries and country stores, out of the railway trains, off the streets, out of the mouths of church members and out of the dewy fields whose fertility it exhausts and in whose soil it seems to leave a taint of poison.

EASTER.

"The ancient pagans had their temples, altars, images, sacrifices and sacerdotal orders. They were accustomed to a great number of pompous and magnificient ceremonies in their religious worship." (Moshiem, vol. 1, p. 66.) They had also, as we have seen, certain great festivals which were celebrated with great magnificence. But "the simplicity that is in Christ," perhaps the most remarkable feature in the Christian worship, rendered all such things (except houses for that worship) wholly superfluous, and, as appointments, or ordinances for Christian worship, blasphemous and profane. Yet this crowning glory of the Christian worship—its simplicity—was regarded and treated, by both Jews and pagans, with unmitigated scorn and contempt. (Mosh., vol. 1, pp. 30 and 66.) To remove, in some measure, this prejudice, and to render their religion and their worship more attractive to their unbelieving neighbors, the early Christians began to increase the number of their rites and ceremonies, and as Mosheim informs us, even in the first century, (and before the very eyes of the apostles) festivals and other pagan observances began to be introduced. (See 1 Cor. chapters 8 and 10.)

Thus it appears that the real object or motive of the Christians, in adopting the festival, was widely different from that which they professed. "The honor of Christ," their professed object, was but a flimsy excuse for a weak, mercenary, criminal concession to pagan vanity, pagan arrogance and pagan hate. It betrayed, on the part of the Christians, a shameful lack of that firmness, consistency and devotion to the cause of the Master, which it was both their duty and their privilege to maintain.

No doubt it was in allusion to this fact that Paul wrote (2 Thess. 2: 7) "The mystery of iniquity doth already work." In that century the Christians began to celebrate the anniversary of Christ's resurrection. By what name this festival was first called by them, history does not inform us. In succeeding ages the Latins called it "Pascha." (Mosh., vol. 1, p. 68.) Later, it received its present name, "Easter." The Asiatic and Western Christians differed somewhat in their views of the proper time for its celebration. This caused "sharp and vehement contentions," which were not terminated till A. D. 325, when a decree of the Council of Nice "rendered the time of the celebration of Easter the same through all the churches." (Mosh., vol. 1, pp. 45, 66, 67.)

But this "termination" seems not to have been accepted in Britain. According to Gieseler (vol. 1, p. 54,) "the first decisive attempt to enforce the new calendar was made there about the end of the sixth century, and that attempt was met with vigorous resistance. The difference in point of time betwixt the Christian Pascha, as observed in Britain by the native Christians, and the pagan Easter, as enforced by Rome, was a whole month; and it was only by violence and bloodshed, at last, that the festival of the Anglo-Saxon, or Chaldean goddess, came to supercede that which had been held in honor of Christ." (Hislop, p. 173–4.)

Such, in brief was the origin and the early development of Easter, as a so-called "Christian" observance.

ITS TRUE CHARACTER AND RELATIONSHIP.

When Christ came, the Jews, unmindful of the Divine prohibition, as also of the lessons of experience, had already adopted some of the rites and ceremonies of the pagan worship, and had incorporated them, "as ornaments," into their service in the temple, among "the rites which they had received by Divine appointment." (Moshiem, vol. 1, p. 23.) In the light of the Divine statute, "Thou shalt not add thereto" (Deut. 12: 32), it is easy to see that this conduct of the Jews was not only inexcusable, but that it merited the severest reprehension.

How then could the Christian church, innocently, adopt and celebrate, as a Christian ordinance, any rite or observanee which God had forbidden, or which even he has not appointed? Does the Word of God give law for the Jew, and, for the same thing, license for the Christian? Are the thunders of Divine denunciation against every form and feature of paganism intended for the Jew only? Do they fall inert and powerless and meaningless, at the feet of the Christian church? May she do, with impunity, what the Jew was so peremptorily forbidden to do, and which, when done, brought down upon him such great and terrible judgments?

But what has the church done? Let us see.

1. Her celebration of the ordinance we are now considering, though not originally idolatrous, was unauthorized. It had no warrant, expressed or implied, in Divine law. It was therefore, an unlawful "addition" to Divine appointment.

2. To celebrate that ordinance, the church has chosen and adopted a festival, a rite, or observance abounding in the pagan mythology, but unknown in the ritual of Christ! An observance, of which the Master says most directly and emphatically, "Touch not the unclean thing." A significant repetition of that more ancient interdict, "Neither shall ye walk in their ordinances!" Lev. 18:3.

3. By the example, and, as is believed, "the express appointment of the inspired apostles," the first day of the week, now called the "Christian Sabbath," has from the first been observed by the Christian church in commemoration of the resurrection of Christ. As he has appointed no other ordinance for that purpose, so he has permitted none. By positive statute (Deut. 12:32) he has forbidden it. Such a professed attempt to honor him by celebrating an ordinance which he has forbidden, and that too, a pagan ordinance, was more than "touching the unclean thing;" it was literally "walking" in those heathen "ordinances," so solemnly and explicitly forbidden in Divine law. It was therefore, nothing more nor less than actual rebellion against Divine authority and command!

HISTORY AND PRESENT "STATUS" OF EASTER.

1. Its name. The ancient pagans worshiped with entire unanimity one great "goddess of sensual love." In Babylon and Phœnicia she was called Astarte; in Nineveh, Ishtar; in Egypt, Isis; in Greece, Aphrodite; in Rome, Venus. In both Greece and Rome she was also called Ceres. She had other names in those nations, as Rhea, Ops, Cybele, etc. She was worshiped as "the mother of the gods," and as such, was the original of, not the Virgin Mary, but the Mary of the Roman church, the Astarte of Babylon. She was, also, the "Diana of the Ephesians." Our English and Saxon ancestors (See Hislop, p. 167; Layard's Nineveh and Babylon, p. 629,) seem to have derived their name of this goddess from the Ninevites, for "that name," says Hislop, "as pronounced by the people of Nineveh, was evidently identical with that now in use [Easter] in this country." The English called her Eostre; the Saxons, Easter. This last name the Roman church has adopted and applied it to the "Pascha" of the early Christians.

2. Her character. In her lifetime she was "the very incarnation of lust and all uncleanness." Hence, after her death and deification, all "the nations" regarded her as "the patronness of lewdness, obscenity and adultery." Hence, too, her worshippers literally "rioted in licentiousness" and every kindred abomination. (See all ancient history.) April was the most agreeable month in the year to Venus; hence called "Mensis Veneris," the month of Venus. (Adam's Rom. Antiq., p. 238.) Her chief festivals were celebrated in that month, and were called, from her Greek name, "Aphrodisia." Our pagan ancestors also celebrated a yearly festival in her honor, in April, whence this month was called Eostre monath, "Easter month." (Webster on Easter.)

3. Offerings. The custom of celebrating Easter with a great profusion of flowers is another and sure mark of its pagan, Aphrodisian origin, character and relationship. According to the pagan mythology, "Venus was fond of flowers," and "wherever she went flowers sprang up." (Appleton's Cyclopedia on "Venus." "From Tacitus (Historia, lib. 2, cap. 3, vol. 3, p. 106,) we learn that no blood was allowed to be offered on the altars of Paphian Venus." In India this same goddess is called "Lakshmi," and "in her festivals," says Coleman, (Hindoo Mythology, p. 61,) "no sanguinary sacrifices are offered." (Hislop, p. 255, 7.) "The offerings usually presented were incense and garlands of flowers." At her festivals, her temples, altars, and images were lavishly decorated with them. (Appleton.)

Just so with Easter, in the Roman church, to-day. On that festival her churches, altars, etc., exhibit the same dazzling display of flowers. Says Hislop (p. 304,) the perpetuation "to this hour," (of the crowning of the Babylonian god) "by the well-known figure in the sphere, called Ariadnæa corona, or "Ariadne's crown," is, beyond question, the real source of the popish rite of crowning the image of the Virgin." (See Manlius, lib. v., v. 21, p. 164.) To the shame of our common Protestantism, we have more than imitated that church (and the ancient pagans, as well,) in the celebration of this festival. In many Protestant churches garlands and wreaths are scattered around in every way conceivable and inconceivable. Flowers in pots and vases adorn the pulpits, tables, niches—flowers are twined around pillars, hung in graceful festoons—and all in a manner at once fantastic and bewildering. Everywhere, in fact, where they can be put, are flowers. In this way the Christian church, which should be at all times an example of "the simplicity that is in Christ," becomes a theatre of pagan ostentation and display.

What a spectacle for the Christian to contemplate, when, on the morning of "Easter Sunday," he enters "the house of God," and finds it all ablaze with these emblems, nay, these relics of the ancient paganism. If he is at all acquainted with ancient pagan history he cannot fail to see that the scene before him is but a repetition of the old Greeco-Roman Aphrodisia—Venus, "the goddess of sensual love," "the very incarnation of lust and all uncleanness," worshiped as "the patronness of lewdness, obscenity and adultery," now, for the time, in full possession, and holding high carnival in the Christian church. Not until light and darkness can be assimilated, not till Christ and Belial are in "concord," can such a scene be in harmony with the quiet "simplicity," the solemn reverence which becomes the house, the day and the worship of the only true God. Not till then can it cease to be in utter violation of that Divine precept —"Learn not the way of the heathen" (Jer. 10: 2). It is a profanation. It is akin to the sin of Manasseh and other kings, who "set up a graven image" and altars for idol worship in the temple of Jehovah.

4. The Easter Egg. This was another element in the worship of this same goddess, and was regarded by those ancient nations as "one of the symbols of Astarte or Easter." (Bryant's Mythology, vol. 3, p. 62; Hislop, p. 175–6.) Thus it appears that Easter is, by birth, by name, and by the manner of its celebration, a pagan, and that, too, despite the sanctimonious glamour with which the present professed object of its celebration has invested it.

ORIGIN OF ITS SAXON NAME.

The instructions of Gregory the Great to St. Austin, his missionary in Britain in the sixth century, may shed some light on the incorporation of the Pascha with the ancient Aphrodisia, and possibly upon the adoption of its present Saxon name.

Says Gregory, "Whereas, it is a custom among the Saxons to slay abundance of oxen and sacrifice them to the devil, you must not abolish that custom, but appoint a new festival to be kept, either on the consecration of the churches or the birth-day of the saints, whose relics are deposited therein, and on these days the Saxons may be allowed to make arbors around their temples, changed into churches, to kill their oxen, and to feast as they did while they were pagans; only they shall offer their thanks and praises, not to the devil, but to God!" (Dowling's Hist. Romanism, p. 130). "Appoint a new festival!" No doubt this "moulding Christianity and paganism" into one religion, by Austin, with the newly fledged "Christians," furnished the occasion either then or afterward, for the adoption of their pagan Easter.

It was not necessary, nor is it now, to maintain the identity of the festival to show that all its grosser features should be retained. The retention of its pagan, Assyrio-Saxon name, its eggs and flowers, its festivals and carousals, are sufficient evidence of its pagan origin and relationship; while, as with all Romish festivals, its connection in the Roman church with "the sacrifice of the Mass," gives ample attestation that there, its paganism is recognized, acknowledged, and appropriated!

The occurrence of "Easter" among the Saxons, in the month of April in honor of "the great mother of the gods," and about the time of the year when our Lord was crucified, and so too, about the time when the Christians were accustomed to celebrate his resurrection, was, no doubt seized upon as a convenient pretext or opportunity for adopting and celebrating it by its pagan name, as the Christian Pascha! Concession and compromise were the order of the times, the principal means by which the church gained over —not converted—the pagans, to the Christian profession.

Such an adoption of a "new festival," such an accommodating Christianity would naturally commend itself to the heathen, who would not hesitate to adopt any new religion which would tolerate and encourage their life-long cherished "abominations." But however this may have been, the fact that their nominal conversion was begun by incorporating some of their paganisms with the Christian worship and Christian order, gives at least, an air of plausibility to the presumption, while the certainty of the pagan origin, character and associations of Easter and all other Romish festivals, places it with them, outside the pale of Christian ordinances and Christian fellowship.

Plausible indeed, in its pretentions, specious, and even captivating in appearance, yet, like all other Romanisms, Easter is at best a counterfeit, an imposture, and so must take its place among that long catalogue of "sorceries" with which "Great Babylon" has so long (and so effectually) "deceived the nations."

SHORT SERMON.

Text: At a more convenient season I will call for thee.

My Brethren: Fifty years ago the Whigs and Democrats said to Anti-masonry—Not now; we have a battle to fight out on other grounds, on the tariff, on slavery, etc.; at a more convenient season we will call for thee.

Well, time passed on, and finally, the nation's affairs having got into a worse fix than ever before, a mixture of Whigs, Democrats, Free-soilers, etc., came together and said to Anti-slavery—Not now; we have a battle to fight against slavery; we cannot possibly attend to you now. Indeed, we have found a great use of Freemasonry for opposing Knights of the Golden Circle; at a more convenient season we will call for thee.

And now, my brethren, a mongrel mixture of Federals, Whigs, Republicans, Democrats, Freemasons, etc., say to Anti-masonry—Not now; for we have a great battle to fight against the corner-saloon, which is enticing sovereign Americans into the ways of death. Let us first fight out this terrible battle, and then there may possibly come a more convenient season when we will call for thee.

My friends, be not deceived with these numerous shifts and turns of the adversary. It is the way that the devil and his minions always do. If fifty years ago our fathers had insisted on maintaining the Anti-masonic issue made against corruption and fraud, the nation would probably have avoided the war of the rebellion. At all events, our national affairs could not possibly be worse off than they are now.

My friends, now, this very day, hour, and minute, is the time for opposing the Masonic lodge. There is no other evil in the land so great as that. Eschew all minor issues and direct your whole fire upon the lodge. Never cease to pour in your ballots upon that stronghold of piracy, until every "statesman" of these modern days shall pray that the hills may fall upon him to cover his shame.

So Mote it be!

DOING THE WILL OF GOD.

BY ELDER A. SIMS.

There are many professors of religion who are perfectly willing to obey God, so long as they are not required to deny self. But when God tells them not to be conformed to this world, to take up their cross, and expect reproach and shame; when he tells them that their adorning must be in modest apparel, and not in plaiting the hair, putting on of gold and costly apparel (1 Tim. 2: 9, 10; 1 Peter 3: 3); when he tells them not to avenge themselves, to bless their enemies, to do them good, and pray for them; when he tells them to "be holy in all manner of conversation, to come out and be separate from all unbelievers and works of darkness; to reprove sin wherever they see it; to cease from indulging all depraved appetites and sinful propensities, such as snuffing, smoking, chewing tobacco, and taking intoxicating liquors as a beverage; and renounce all principles, maxims, policies, fashions, and practices which are not strictly Scriptural, they shrink back and are unwilling to follow God so closely as that. But these duties are as much a part of God's will, as that we should refrain from stealing. Whether we like them or not, we are solemnly bound to obey them. With regard to the character God's children must have, can anything be more plainly taught in the Bible, than that they should be pure, perfected in love, redeemed from all inbred sin, completely saved from all unholy tempers—anger, pride, and resentment? Is there, in short, a duty which is more strongly inculcated upon the Christian than to be holy? There is not. From Genesis to Revelation the voice of inspiration says, "Be ye holy." Now, as it is emphatically stated, "This is the will of God, even your sanctification" (1 Thess. 4: 3). And as Christ has shown that only those who do his will can enter heaven, therefore, if we desire an entrance into glory, we must have this character; we must be sanctified, and keep sanctified. Unless we are living out this command, "or groaning so to be," we are in a state of disobedience, and without excuse. It will avail us nothing to say these commands are exceedingly difficult to be observed, for at the back of every divine command comes these words, "My grace is sufficient for thee." If we could not discover that there had ever been a single person who had blamelessly kept the will of God, still our obligation would be just as binding. But is it true that no one has ever been able to do the whole will of God? We emphatically answer, No! We find it recorded of Zacharias and Elizabeth in Luke 1: 6: "And they were both righteous before God, walking in all the commandments and ordinances of the Lord, blameless." Glory to Jesus. Mark you, too, they lived before the dispensation of the Holy Ghost. How strangely inconsistent are those who pray, "Thy will be done on earth as it is in heaven;" and then plead that will is too hard to be observed in every particular. For how is the will of God done in heaven? Why cheerfully, readily, fully, constantly. When we make use of that petition, we in fact ask that we may do his will in the same manner—blamelessly. To pray for it, and not to believe it, is nothing short of mockery. The very fact, that God says do this or that, is proof sufficient that he will give us power to obey those commauds, if we are only willing to make the attempt. The man with the withered hand, who was commanded by Jesus to stretch it forth, might have said, "Well, Lord, I can't stretch it out; there is no strength in it. If thou wilt first make it whole I will then obey thee." But without stopping to make excuses, he took Christ at his word, and with the attempt to obey came the power to perform, and his hand was made whole. Just so will it be with us. If we are but willing to do what God requires of us, we shall find it gloriously possible to perform. Right here is an important point; it is because of an inward unwillingness to obey God in everything that men make the excuse, the path is too difficult.

When you find a person perfectly willing to obey God in everything—so williug that he does not heed the consequences, you will not hear that soul complaining of the difficulty of obeying God. Rather you will hear him say, "O how I love thy precepts!" "I delight to do thy will, O God." Reader, have you this Bible religion? Are you doing, doing, DOING God's will?

"Not every one that saith unto me, Lord, Lord, shall enter the kingdom of heaven, but he that doeth the will of my Father which is in heaven" (Matt. 7: 21).

FREEMASONRY PROHIBITED IN AUSTRIA.

The organ of the French Freemasons, the Chaine de l' Union, lately published an article giving a historical sketch of the progress of Freemasonry in different parts of the world. While expressing its satisfactiou at the toleration the sect experiences from most of the governments of the globe, it complains bitterly that the progress of the order is much hampered by governmental action in the Austrian empire. Indeed we are right in attributing the comparative social security which that empire enjoys to the political foresight of its rulers. This security is not jeopardized by the events taking place in Croatia, the agitation being directed neither against the Empire nor the Imperial house, and having for its object simply a rearrangement of the federal bond. The federal union of the different States is from its very nature opposed to the diffusion of secret societies. The diversity of institutions that gives free play to every conflicting euergy under the rule of the Hapsburgs, keeps in check the anti-social despotism of Masonry. The Austrian brotherhood, as well as the German, has always been conspicuous for its disloyalty to the Empire; and its complicity with the French Revolutiou in the last century opened the eyes of her statesmen to the grave dangers with which its existence menaced the State. It was easy for them to understand the danger, for the Empire had already been prepared for a revolution by Joseph II."

"We know," says the Masonic review, "that Masonry enjoyed absolute liberty in Austria and Hungary under the Emperors Joseph and Leopold II. It was not until 1794 that obscurantism issued the tyrannic edicts against the order that compelled it to suspend its labors.

"It seems certain that the ordinances that struck the Masouic family in Austria were inspired by the fear and hatred of the French Revolution. It was known at Vienna that the Masons of France were in communication with those of Germany. On the other hand, it is evident that the conspiracy hatched by the clerical party in 1795, at the head of which were two Ultramontane notabilities, Hebenstreit and Prandster, supplied the Emperor Francis with a pretext for crushing the secret societies, and principally Masonry, which he confounded in the same reprobation with the conventicles of the enemies of social and political order."

Thus this influential organ of the sect acknowledges that the principal aim of Masonry is to conspire against governments. These instructive disclosures of the Chaine d l' Union continue as follows:

"There are proofs of the connivance of the police with the chiefs of the clerical factiou. The enemies of Masonry gave proofs of the blackest and most persevering perfidy. Dr. Lewis is very plain on this point.

"Dr. Goldenberg thinks, nevertheless, that, independent of all pressure on the part of the clericals, Austrian Masonry must have suffered a fatal blow from the declaration of the Rights of Man by the French Legislature.

"The French sympathies of the Masons of the Empire were a sufficient motive for the most violent persecution in the eyes of the Austrian monarch.

"Although after 1794 there were no Freemasons in Austria, or at least the lodges showed no signs of activity, it happened that during the seven months the French lived in that country in 1799, the brethren of Vienna suddenly resumed their labors. The Grand National Lodge was restored, and established relations of the warmest fraternity with the Orient of Paris.

"Nevertheless the events of 1813 dragged in their train the ruin of the Masonic order ouce more in Austria. The Papacy set the persecution going. Pius VII. fulminated his anathema against 'Masonic atheism.' and the 'most Catholic Emperor of Austria' hastened to execute the decrees of the Pope.

"Long was the sleep of Masonry on the banks of the Danube. In 1848 Dr. Lewis succeeded in restoring Masonic life in Vienna. A lodge was founded, thanks to the co-operation of Baron Doblhof, a man of enlightened mind, who saw in the Masons generally workmen whose assistance would favor progress in a high degree. Unhappily the violent reaction, that took place after the troubles of the month of October, was fatal to the order. The lodges had to suspend their functions once more.

"In 1867 a new attempt at restoration was made, but without success. It was resumed the following year, under the Giskra miuistry, which affected a pseudo-liberalism. Giskra invoked specious reasons of political necessity for finally giving the cold shoulder to Masonry.

"An attempt was next made to found a Masonic lodge at Vienna, called the Humanitas-Verein, which was to group the scattered members of the family together, waiting for the day when the order would be allowed to resume its symbolic functious. A short time after the Austrian Government was solicited for permission to found the Lodge of the Future. This demand was rejected, and renewed without more success a little later. The Government has constantly refused to modify in favor of the Masons article 18 of the law on Associations, which enacts that meetings must always be accessible to a commissioner of the Government."

We see then from these lugubrious confessions that a governmeut can always defend itself against the intrigues of Freemasonry. This policy of preservation does honor to Austria. It explains also the hatred which Austria inspires in the whole European press.

The press is generally, on the contiuent of Europe, in the hands of the Masons, and we see that Austria is on her guard against them. Her struggle is a painful one, no doubt, because she is not supported by other governments; but she knows the perils to which social order is exposed by secret societies, and shows her superiority to other governments, who are ignorant of the peril, or make themselves its accomplices by weakness or perversity. To this course, perhaps, we may also attribute the superiority of her diplomacy, which takes this element of secret societies into accouut, an element of the existence of which other diplomacies seem hardly to have any idea. Austria remains faithful to her policy. The Chaine d l' Union is an involuntary witness to the fact. We believe that contemporary events will strengthen Austria in this energetic defense, if they do not excite other great powers to watch more strictly over social security in their own territories and protect their populations against the occult influences and revolutionary action of Masonry.—The Catholic Review.

THE SATANIC ORDERS.

"Modern society," says the thoughtful and generally sensible editor of the Boston Journal, "has volcanic fires under its feet which may flame up anywhere, at almost any time." "Very grave and difficult," echoes the sagacious Independent "the question is which the two Germanic empires, and France, Spain and Italy have to deal with. Russia trembles and is almost powerless in the clutches of Nihilism. Germany knows that Socialism is no mere specter, that will vanish when boldly pursued. Italy has plenty of inflammable material, that only needs the spark of occasion to burst into a destructive flame; and one has only to recall the terrible days of the reign of the Commune in Paris, to imagine what would be the state of France if the Satanic spirits of Socialism should again be in the ascendant."

It is well known that Nihilism, Socialism, Communism, Red Republicanism, the Anarchists' League, Internationalism, the Whisky Oligarchy, etc., are all of the same piece, and their one purpose is the destruction of government, law, society, the family, and religion. "Hell itself could not produce a crew with more infernal aims."

Such is the condition of many of the chief states of Europe. Nihilism claims 2,000,000 members in Russia. Better that the Old World sink in some awful convulsion of the globe than to yield to these Satanic forms of evil. But can we not see in them the slime of the abyss, the emergence upon earth of the ubiquitous unclean spirits, the demons that work miracles, whose mission is to rally and organize the evil among men "to the war of the great day of God Almighty?" Rev. 16. "No peace to the wicked," is the announcement. The nations reject Christ—to them is therefore given the cup of war. Our own country has in it these evil elements. They may any moment burst into uncontrollable energy. Witness: the riot of 1878. The earth sadly needs "one King Jesus." It will soon have him.—Bible Banner.

AN AGE OF "JINERS."

Fifty years ago Carlyle exclaimed that the age was mechanical, that individual effort amounted to litte. If this was pereeived fifty years ago, the vast organization of the forces of a complex civilization since that time makes it far more true now. Looking about us we see at once that the tendency is more and more to carry on everything through committees, associations and all the machinery of combination. A man cannot even be sober on his own account; he must have around him the machinery of a temperance society. He cannot work upon his own judgment as to his own wants and interests; he must take his orders from his association or "brotherhood," and drop his work or resume it as his executive committee may command. All this is a sign of the sinking or suppression of individuality and the development of Carlyle's mechanical age.

Satire takes up the subject and illustrates it by proposing associations for suppression of certain peculiarities which run into folly. Blanchard Jerrold demands an "Association for Suppression of White Hats," an "Anti-Flower-in-the-Button-Hole League," an Association for Restriction of Glove Fastenings to one Button," and the "Local Option Snuff Confederation." No doubt reasons could be given for the existence of all these societies. White hats are extravagant; so are flowers; more than one button is wasteful, and snuff-taking is nasty. For all these societies Mr. Jerrold thinks the moralist might easily find a raison d'etre, and for each and all be able to obtain powerful committees, patrons, presidents, auditors and treasurers. Possibly there are busybodies enough who might think it practicable to hasten reforms in this mechanical way, for, as Mr. Jerrold says, "there are vain, self-seeking, narrow-minded and mischievous persons who submit the length of their neighbors' wishes to a majority of their fellow parishoners, provided they got a prominent place in the conduct of the transaction." There is no doubt that a crank opinion will be more readily followed if it finds expression through an organized body, with committees, officers, uniforms and ceremonies. Every notion, therefore, tends to organize itself into a "society." It is an age of "jiners;" and probably the rage hasn't reached its climax.—Portland Oregonian.

—A misdemeanor was lately committed in this county, [Elkhart, Ind.,] damaging the property and endangering the lives of others. The injured parties asked that reparation should be made by the aggressor, but only received derision. The aggressor being boastful and defiant, the injured parties brought suit to recover damages. The aggressor seemed to feel all secure, and called for a jury trial. The counsel for the injured parties maintained before the court, that no Freemason, or known secretist could be allowed to set on the case, as juryman, when immediately the trespassing party began to make propositions to settle, feeling that if their defense was to be shut out of court, there was no use in going to trial. It appeared unmistakably plain that they relied on the benefits derived from the aid guaranteed by secret society relations for to screen them from justice. They settled the matter. Secret societies are not only the moving cause of much wrong, but they are the cause of many vexatious law-suits.—The Rescue.

CONNECTICUT TO OREGON.

ELDER BARLOW'S REPLY.

Willimantic, Conn., Oct. 11, 1883.

Rev. Wm. H. Pruett, pastor of the First Missionary Baptist church of Weston, Oregon:

My Good Christian Brother:—Your open letter reached me last evening, and was read with a profound interest. Your appeal touched me deeply, as it is poverty calling on the very wealth of poverty, for benefactions. It is the Occident, with its paucity of men and means, to carry on our "great reform," reaching out its hands to the equally non-affluent Orient for help. It is the sun-setting looking to the sun-rising for light. You have reached too far, brother. The light now emanates from the "Middle Land," with Chicago for its center. Look there away, Bro. Pruett; look there away.

One thing, however, I can give you, my brother. Oh, I am a millionaire in that—that is sympathy. You are out on the Pacific slope hemmed in by the powers of oath-bound secrecy, endeavoring to win souls to Christ, with all these Christless forces against you; and you want help. Here on the stormy Atlantic I am surrounded with a darkness as dense as your own. So I feel your appeal all through me, and if not weighted down with years and other burdens would gladly come to your relief. But stay—can't you come to mine?

I appreciate all you say of Gideon and his three hundred, but—but—taking for granted that I am Gideon here, and you are Gideon there, where, O where, are the three hundred as yet? But I do not despair; neither despair you. We have God; let us test him as did Gideon. The three hundred are waiting till the preliminaries are out of the way. Work on, brother; work and wait. The enemy is strong—strong as Pharaoh was when the voice of the Lord, through Moses, said to him: "Let my people go." You remember his refusal. He did not know, poor fool, any bigger king than himself; but as the surging waters of the Red Sea engulphed him and his chariots, I suspect there came in at the portals of his soul the refrain of that triumphant song soon to be sung by all redeemed ones—"Alleluia, for the Lord God Omnipotent reigneth."

You ask me, how the Missionary Baptists have succeeded in my locality in battling against organized secrecy. I have, in sorrow, to answer: So far as I know we have not in all Connecticut a single Baptist pastor on whom I can call for open help or sympathy in fighting this great battle. There are some known to me, who express to me a sympathy in feeling. They hate Masonry and all its spawn, but are not prepared to make common cause with me for its overthrow. As a denomination, we are silent on the subject. We are in a terribly backslidden state on this question, where once our testimony rang out like the blasts of a silver trumpet. For two years and a half the little church which owns me as a pastor—no stronger if as strong as your own—has held up our standard, the only one, so far as I know, in the State. We hope to keep it up.

We have, it is true, a State Association—not denominational—and I am its lecturer; but I have no calls for labor, and the failing health of my wife forbids my leaving home to work up calls for the present. Can't you come over and help us? We are, however, by no means in a despairing state. Blows are being struck, and the "Old Handmaid" likes them not.

You ask for men, men of the right stamp. We haven't any here to spare. God has the material somewhere. It is ours to look them out and train them for the work. Those who are to succeed must be picked men and trained men. Unskilled men will be impaled on the Masonic bayonets.

I do not know that I can help you as to any second-hand Anti-masonic literature. Our friends at Chicago can help you at less cost than we at this distance. The only Baptist paper I know of which is willing to publish on Masonry is the Watch Tower, published at 40 Fulton St., New York City. It is the cheapest Baptist paper I know of in the East—only $1.50 per year; to ministers, $1.00. It is a spicy and a fair sheet. I commend it to our friends in your region.

I judge that yours is a young church. I hope as yet your membership is free from organized secrecy. If so keep it so; incorporate in your covenant non-fellowship with any secret society, and live up to it. Once admit it to the church, and it will stay to make you trouble.

Allow me to say, If you intend to lecture against Masonry abroad, or to your own people, you need Masonic literature instead of the other. I recommend for your use Mackey's Lexicon and his Ritualist, Webb's Monitor with Rob't Morris' notes. These will do to begin with, and you can add to them as you feel able. Bro. Kellogg of Chicago will, I think, be glad to look up these books for you—second-hand, if possible. Reciprocating all your prayers and kind wishes, and reminding you that the "fearful and unbelieving" are numbered among the lost, and that "Christ strengthening us we can do all things," I am, my dear brother, fraternally yours,

J. L. Barlow,

Pastor of the First Berean Baptist church of Willimantic, Conn.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

The Secret Empire—An Order of Red Men in West Virginia distill illicit whisky, rob mails, commit murders and break jails.

The following articles from the Baltimore American of Oct. 4th and 5th inst. are of startling interest and are fully confirmed by an editorial of the 5th.

Wheeling, October 3.—For several years that portion of West Virginia in Barbour county has been terrorized by a series of bold robberies. The violations of law were so frequent and successful that people seemed paralyzed. Recently suspicion pointed to an organization known as Red Men, which had wigwams in various mountainous countries of the State. This organization claimed it was organized to put down lawlessness in counties where the arm of the law was weak. At its head were many men prominent in their own community, and whose honesty and integrity were unquestioned. One of these men was Marion Howse, a whisky gauger in the employ of the United States, and also circuit judge. Another was Noah Kittle, a prominent farmer. Albert Price, deputy United States marshal, was also a high dignitary in the order, which had its headquarters at Philippi, a village of two hundred inhabitants, in the Alleghany mountains, on Tygart's river. The place was isolated, and offered a fine field of operations for the band. No doubt, many who belonged to it were honest in their intention to suppress crime. Originally the ringleaders used the organization to protect and foster illicit distilling. The hills were full of small stills, and the efforts of the government to break up the business proved abortive. At last they were broken up, and the organization turned to mail-robbing. Routes running from country towns through lonely places were selected. No violence was offered carriers. Then followed a series of bold robberies that paralyzed the people. No clue could be obtained. Government detectives were at fault. The Red Men made a great cry, but the robberies went on. One year ago a mail on the Calhoun route, in Barbour county, was robbed of $2,000. Last August, at the foot of Laurel mountain, the mail from Bealington to Philippi was robbed in daylight. It so happened that a great number of registered letters were in the pouch, and it became certain that the robbers had some means of knowing that the mails contained valuables. Finally, two members of the band were arrested and jailed at Philippi. The next night the Red Men forced the jail and released them. At the preliminary trial Howse, the leader of the band, presided as judge, and discharged them. But a day of reckoning had come, and arrests followed. One of the arrested men, Noah Kittle, for years a highly respected citizen of Barbour county, confessed the whole thing, as named above, to officials of the United States Court, now in session at Clarksburg, giving the names of other parties interested, one of whom is under arrest, and who also confessed, and was at once sentenced to ten years.

October 4.—The excitement in the vicinity of Philippi and Clarksburg over the exposure of the "Red Men" continues. Kittles, the man who confessed, this morning pleaded guilty on an "omnibus" charge, and was sentenced to nine years and four months. He took his sentence coolly. Albert Price went up for ten years. Price was a prominent lawyer and Sunday-school teacher. As the result of Kittles' confession, officers have arrested Jacob T. Hoffman, ex-county treasurer, and he is in custody at Clarksburg. Other arrests will follow, it is said, to the number of at least one hundred. The company to which Kittles' belonged was known as "Company C, Regents Tribe of Crows," but the private work was the same in all branches. Nom-de-plumes were used. Two passwords were used. The first was "K O;" response, "Light." Second, "Where are you going?" answer, Centennial." The grip was made by grasping the hand in the usual manner, with the thumb pressed between the knuckles and the joints of the second and third fingers of the right hand. Other signs and grips were in use to such an extent that a book of them was kept. Article 9 of the constitution says: "All transactions of lodges shall be kept secret, and any violation of this shall be punished with death, with the concurrence of the lodge." Article 10 says: "Any one divulging the name of any party belonging to the society, either directly or indirectly, intentionally, shall receive the above punishment." Article 13 says: "Any loss that any member may sustain unavoidably under the orders of lodge, all other members shall share equally with him." The roll of Company C was: "Spotted Tail," president; "Red Cloud," vice-president; "Captain Jack," secretary; "Everytime," captain; "Wis Kat," first lieutenant; "Steadfast," second lieutenant; "Copperhead," first sergeant; "Spurangle," "Unmovable," "Go Devil," "Slim Jaws," "Pop Eye," "Hackletown," "Berkshire," "John Bull," "Cherokee."

They establish the facts: 1. That the Ancient Order of Red Men, which is a legitimate child of Freemasonry, has in West Virginia fallen into the hands of men who have been so indiscreet as to bring the order under reproach, and through the treachery of a "purgered villain" there is likely to be serious injury not only to this "ancient and honorable order," but to the multitudes of kindred societies which are being worked in a quieter way.

I notice, first, that the leaders of this organization were highly respectable men, county, State and National officers. They had organized lodges all over the State and were doubtless regarded as a highly respectable body against which none might bring a railing accusation.

2. The professed object of the order was truly praiseworthy. They wished to enforce law, and strengthen its hands where it was weak. Its officers were solemnly sworn to execute the Constitution and laws of the United States and of the State of West Virginia. No other secret order has furnished an ampler pledge of good faith and fair dealing.

3. We see that they were able to carry on their work of iniquity for years, and even a partial exposure and arrest of the conspirators did not loosen their grasp on the property of others nor disconcert their plans of robbery and murder.

4. We see this order borrowed its oaths and penalties from Freemasonry and that its sign of recognition was the pass grip of a Master Mason, which renders it highly probable that the leaders were and are members of the Masonic order.

5. The members of this order regarded their lodge oaths as paramount to any civil oath and did not hesitate at any crime whereby they might protect the members of their order.

6. We get a clearer view of what is implied in the "oath to always conceal" in the outcry of innocence which these men made to cover their tracks. We can understand what is meant by the oath to "obey all due signs and summonses," to "keep a worthy brother Master Mason's secret inviolate," to "aid and assist" "brother Master Masons" "as far as their necessities require." This "Red Men" lodge has given an interpretation to all these lodge oaths that no one is so stupid as to misunderstand. What this order of Red Men has been to West Virginia Freemasonry is capable of being (and to some extent is) to the United States. Like a vast octopus it reaches its enormous tentacles through every department of society and paralyzes all efforts for its removal.

WISCONSIN.

The annual convention of the Wisconsin Christian Association will be held in Menomonie, Dunn county, Nov. 6th to 8th. This convention will be under the management of Rev. Isaac Bancroft, State Agent, and J. P. Stoddard, General Agent of the N. C. A. After the opening address by J. P. Stoddard at 7:30 P. M. of Wednesday, the 6th, announcements will be made for the following days and evenings, which will include addresses, discussions, and, if desirable, working of degrees. President C. A. Blanchard is expected to be present and fill a prominent place on the programme. Come in the name and in the Spirit of the Master.

NEW YORK STATE CONVENTION.

The thirteenth annual meeting of the New York State Association Opposed to Secret Societies, will be held in the city of Syracuse, Oct. 25 and 26, 1883, commencing at 7 o'clock P. M. of the 25th. Secret Societies, Divine Recognition in Government, the Sanctity of the Sabbath, Woman's Suffrage and Constitutional Prohibition, are among the topics to be discussed. Hon. S. C. Pomeroy, Presidents J. Blanchard and C. A. Blanchard, Prof. L. N. Stratton, and Rev. J. P. Stoddard, Sec'y of the National Christian Association, are among the speakers who have been engaged.

Friends of these reforms are requested to extend this notice by having it announced on the Sabbath, at public meetings and securing its publication in their local papers.

If your congregation is in sympathy with these reforms please secure a delegate representation; if not, come yourself and persuade others to come with you. Don't forget to pray without ceasing for the Lord's blessing and in everything give thanks.

F. W. Capwell, Pres.
Isaac Hyatt, Sec'y.

THE KANSAS STATE CONVENTION.

REPORT OF THE SECRETARY.

[The brief report of this important meeting given last week was a mere compend from the local press reports, and therefore omitted the many interesting particulars given below by Bro. McMillan. The resolutions and list of officers, having appeared in full are omitted from this report.—Ed.]

The Kansas State Christian Association convened in the Senate Chamber, Topeka, Kans., Sept. 24, 1883, at 3 P. M. Rev. B. F. Worrell, vice-president, took the chair and opened the Convention with prayer.

The minutes of last meeting were read and approved. The president, Rev. J. Collins, appeared and took the chair. Rev. J. C. Bernhard was appointed assistant clerk.

The following committees were appointed, viz.: on nominations, chairman, H. Curtis; on enrollment, chairman, Rev. Cooper; on business, chairman, Campbell; on finance, chairman, H. Curtis; on entertainment, chairman, Cooper; on programme, chairman, Rev. P. S. Feemster.

All persons present in hearty sympathy with the object of this association were granted all the privileges of the convention.

The enrolling committee reported 37 names, this num- was afterward increased to 50 or 60.

The President, Secretary, Treasurer, H. Curtis, and the State Agent were constituted an executive committee.

The time and place of next meeting was left with the executive committee.

After recess the convention spent a season in devotional exercises led by Rev. H. S. Limbocker. The president, Rev. B. F. Worrell, took the chair, and the convention listened to an address by Rev. D. H. Coulter of Winchester, on the subject "Recognition of God in Civil Government," in which the speaker, comparing our national constitution with the requirements of the Divine law showed clearly the deficiency of the former and the evils resulting from its defects.

Next the convention heard an address by Rev. B. F. Worrell on the subject "Secret Societies and their Secrets," in which the speaker held up to view something of the inside appearance and ceremonies of Masonry, and showed that after all the secrets amounted to little or nothing.

TUESDAY.

On the second day the convention assembled at 9 A. M. and after devotional service, led by Rev. Alexander, including prayer, reading the Word, remarks and singing, the president took the chair.

The General Agent, Rev. J. P. Stoddard, made a report, full of interest and encouragement, giving information as to the purchase of property in Washington city for the use of the N. C. A.; the progress of the work of anti-secrecy in the East and throughout the whole country; answering many questions put by the audience, showing the government, designs, and inside workings of Masonry.

The State Agent, Rev. P. S. Feemster, also presented an interesting and encouraging report of work done for the Association since the Emporia Convention last December.

Rev. M. A. Gault next gave a cheering detail of work done in Iowa.

A committee, R. Loggan, chairman, was appointed to prepare work for the ensuing year and arrange for the necessary finances.

In the afternoon the convention listened to a powerful and convincing lecture by Rev. J. P. Stoddard on the Masonic Covenant, in which the speaker considered the effects of the covenant which makes a man a Mason and the demand to surrender private judgment; many questions asked were promptly answered by the speaker.

Rev. R. F. Markham was invited and gave his experience, setting forth in his stirring speech the attempt made by the lodge to rob a man of the right of private judgment.

H. Curtis and Rev. R. Loggan were appointed to attend the next National Convention of the N. C. A. at Washington city. The convention pledged itself for $50.00 to defray the expenses of said delegation.

Tuesday evening Rev. J. S. T. Milligan was called to the stand and discoursed: 1st. As to the oneness of the Christian's God and the god of Masonry; and 2d. As to the religion of Masonry.

Rev. L. Wing followed, setting forth the effects of Masonry and its workings in the domestic circle. Rev. J. P. Stoddard next set forth something of the initiatory rites of the first degree, showing in part, how a man is made a Mason. The audience though large waited with patience and marked attention, preserving the best of order till the speaker closed.

WEDNESDAY.

After an hour spent in devotional exercises, Rev. R. Loggan took the chair. Revs. Cooper and Gault and Mr. A. J. Miller were appointed a committee on resolutions.

The committee to prepare work for the ensuing year reported six items which were severally adopted. [This report has been printed.—ED.]

Recommendations looking toward the consolidation of the Olathe Free Press, Iowa American and American Freeman were presented, considered and laid on the table for the present.

[In the afternoon the resolutions reported last week were discussed and adopted.]

In the evening vice-president Loggan called to order.

A standing vote expressing our thanks to the authorities for allowing us to use this Senate Chamber for our meetings, to the friends who have kindly entertained delegates, and to the press for their kindness in publishing our proceedings, was passed.

Mr. S. E. Starry, who had been delayed by a wreck on the railroad till this third day appeared on the stage and worked and explained the third degree in Masonry, with a coolness and self-possession which showed thorough preparation for his work, and a consciousness that he was right. After the exhibition was ended, Mr. Morris of Topeka, who said he became a Mason about forty years ago, rose and remarked that he had witnessed many an initiation but this young man was the "brightest Mason" he had ever seen and his work was well and correctly done.

The Senate Chamber including the gallery was filled with young and old of every color –many, no doubt, of the lodge were present, some of whom when the arrows of truth were shot forth showed, by their writhing, that they were hit and badly hurt; they forgot one chief jewel of Masonry; they became desperately mad; some called out, "Hang him" (Starry), "Put him out," "Ride him on a rail," "Perjured scoundrel," "Dangerous villian," and such like violent expressions.

Many left amid the confusion and the convention adjourned sine die.

THE EDITOR'S VISIT TO BIRMINGHAM, IOWA.

On Oct. 5th about 9 A. M. the Rev. Dr. Blanchard landed in Birmingham and found the ever hospitable doors of Dr. Norris' mansion open to his reception. After a season of refreshment he was ready for duty as a watchman on the walls of Zion. The United Presbyterian church was cordially placed at the service of the veteran champion of truth, and on Sabbath morning he preached on National Reform, handling the subject in his usual felicitous manner. In the evening there was a union meeting, and as the Free Methodist church is small, and admittance to the Presbyterian church was hedged with difficulties and to the Methodist Episcopal impossible, he preached again in the U. P. church to a large and appreciative audience on the relation of the secret lodge to the kingdom of Christ.

Though to the people here, it was an old story, yet they were held in rapt attention for an hour as the preacher showed that the lodge is opposed to the constitution, the laws, the kingdom itself, and to the King. We do not need much light on these subjects, but a needed work was done by stirring up our pure minds by way of remembrance. There are always some whose zeal needs to be stirred up, some who are beginning to think deeply about the matter, but Birmingham stands as a bulwark against the wiles and the attacks of the Secret Empire. There will always be here a solid phalanx of staunch men, who can neither be hood-winked nor cable-towed by the subjects of lodge despotism. There are no secret societies in Birmingham. There can be none. There is a room over the post-office that has on it the familiar sign, "I. O. O. F.," but the little children, even, can tell you what goes on inside. The weekly paper, miscalled the Enterprise, advertises a meeting of the F. & A. M., and once in a while they catch a lunatic or a rascal and pretend to reveal to him some special secrets, but it is a farce to them all, for not one thing is told him which he has not heard before; and the very initiation through which they put him, he has seen worked in public. O the verdancy of verdant minds, to pay $20 for that which he can have without cost!

Dr. Blanchard proposes to devote his time, as God shall give him strength, to preaching and lecturing among the people wherever he may be sent for. If any need a man of culture, refinement, courage, and ability, one who will not dull the edge of his logic, nor weaken the power of his eloquence by coarseness, yea, rather, who sets off what he says with a beautiful Christian courtesy, if any desire to behold one who exemplifies the Scripture, "The hoary head is a crown of glory if it be found in the way of righteousness," let them send for the veteran warrior. He has still strength and vigor for many days of service. He seems to have renewed his youth like the eagle's.

FARMING AND REFORM.

Editor Christian Cynosure,

DEAR BROTHER:—I have been very negligent for the past few months in reform work. I know I have not done enough, or what the cause of reform demands of its votaries, but apologies will not atone. However, I have not been silent in my denunciations of lodgery. I have for the last year been opposing secrecy from the standpoint of a farmer. I have had several splendid opportunities to let my light shine, and throw some light on the God-dishonoring system of secrecy. Masons are having their way for it here, and are considerably enraged when they learn that I know something about their mystic fraternity. They often threaten to "take care of me," which sometimes alarms my friends, but we meet it with "A barking dog seldom bites." Trust God and fear not.

I am arranging secular affairs so as to be able to devote about all of my time to reform work. But I more especially write now to urge, if possible, the friends of our cause to attend the State Convention. To me it appears that the coming meeting will be of great importance to the work all over the State. One item to be attended to is the publication of the Indiana American, which was not abandoned but suspended for a time, for reasons which have not been made known. We hope to see a large attendance. Bro. Cook has assured us that ample arrangements will be made for the entertainment of all who come.

Dear friends, let us make another effort, rally once more, and push the battle to the gate. Victory is sure, for God has put a veto on the works of darkness and the Secret Empire must come to nought. Let us be sure we are on the Lord's side, and then stand firm. I am your fellow laborer in the kingdom of God. J. W. LOWMAN.

CORRESPONDENCE.

VICTORY BY PRAYER.

ARLINGTON HEIGHTS, Mass.,
Oct. 2, 1883.

The question of "Septuagenarian" in last week's paper leads me to recall some expericnces in prayers and the wonderful answers to the same in the line of the N. C. A. work. I became deeply exercised as I saw the abominations of secretism and its interference with the gospel in the churches and ministers, societies, etc. In the midst of great difficulty I was fulfilling my ministry received of God and man. My soul was deeply exercised and with great tenderness and full utterance the honest tears flowed down my cheeks, and flow again at the remembrance. I was at a ministers' meeting in Boston and prayed among other things, that God would bring the hidden works of darkness and secrecy to their merited contempt and destruction. I prayed this again and also at Dr. C.'s meeting.

My soul was deeply exercised everywhere. I had occasion to go to Boston to preach and was to make a call upon dear friends; but before I could start an extract cut from a paper was sent to me telling of the coming meeting of the N. C. A. in Boston. It was a memorable one. I was there and did what I could. If anything could be more adapted to bring the whole thing into contempt I do not know what it could be. And since then from time to time I have said "Glory to God. Praise the Lord," a hundred times for his answer.

But I am not content with this. There is nothing to be content about, with the lodge in power everywhere. It is only in contempt by the favored few who are enlightened of God. The ruling power in New England, especially in the church, is shown out in Butler, Quint, & Co. I therefore still wait upon God that he will fulfill the other part of the prayer and bring the secret empire to destruction by the entrance and reign of his light, love and glory. And let all who love our Lord Jesus Christ unite with me in this. O for the awakening of conscience in truth, and unwillingness to take undue advantage! In the love of man to man, in the love of all to our adorable God and Father. IOTA.

"OREGON TRIBULATIONS" NOT SO BAD.

PORTLAND, Oreg.

A note in the Cynosure of Aug. 2nd will, I fear, make a very wrong impression upon the reader, hence the writer I hope, will excuse this addition. There was a time when the prospects were far from flattering, but time has shown there was much needless fear. With but little rain in May, and none (or almost none,) after, yet many fields have yielded from thirty to forty bushels of wheat per acre and some more.

A kind Creator who made all things "good" has adapted our soil to the climate, and we expect but little rain in the summer. The almost unprecedented drouth of the past season has wonderfully demonstrated the difference between good and poor farming, so that many a man with poor crops has been destined to look upon his neighbor's abundance.

Of one county it is said in the Oregonian no report received fell below twenty bushels per acre. On the whole we are not likely to starve, while it is estimated that there will be 250,000 tons surplus to ship from Portland.

THOS. C. HAINES.

DAILY PRAYER-MEETINGS NEEDED.

Custer City, Pa., Oct. 2, 1883.

Dear Cynosure:—Right heartily do I endorse the idea of "A Septuagenarian" for a daily prayer meeting, for power against secrecy and all evils. At some strong points let the brethren meet daily at a certain hour and all in sympathy with our movement remember the hour of prayer and lift up our hearts with one accord, at whatever place we may be. In the name and by the power of our God we shall conquer, "Not by might nor by power, but by my Spirit, saith the Lord." Brethren, let us not get puffed up as we grow stronger, but let us keep humble, feeling we can do all things God helping us; not of ourselves. Let not our zeal carry us away and see things through magnifying glasses, and in our heat report as facts, mountains instead of molehills, but have our zeal tempered with discretion. Let us live the matter all over again before committing it to the printer. Let us "be wise as serpents and harmless as doves," that our cause be not harmed anywhere. Let us be resolute at all times standing by the right if the heavens fall. I don't mean tone down. I don't mean compromise. I mean TRUTH not IMAGINATION. A misstatement, unintentional or otherwise, recoils on our cause at the present time with double force (I might say quadruple force). Our enemies are watching for such, and every one is used to the fullest extent to wound and weaken us. I have on my mind now the statement in 16th August number from Bro. Shaw, headed, "False to their trust," making certain charges against the Y. M. C. A. of Ionia, Mich; and the reply thereto from the Seeretary of the Ass'n, which is almost a flat denial of Bro. Shaw's assertion. I do not take sides in the controversy, not knowing either party, or who throws the lance, neither do I charge (or hint at) Bro. Shaw with untruth; but call attention to the dilemma. Somebody is wrong. Let us be careful, brethren, remember our cause is just.

"Truth struck to the earth shall rise again,
The eternal years of God are hers;
But error, wounded, writhes in pain,
And dies among its worshippers."

Our cause is truth; let us be truthful. J. C. Young.

MOODY DEFENDED.

Chicago, Oct. 5.

The Rev. Mr. Utter, Unitarian minister in this city, told his hearers lately, as reported, that Mr. Moody taught a "do-nothing gospel!"

Such an utterance indicates great obliviousness to world-wide facts, for certainly "Mr. Moody's gospel" is one of the greatest religious activities of the day and is associated with many of the most active and useful labors of Christians for the welfare of soeiety, and of the world.

But Mr. Utter goes utterly beyond the bounds of Christian pulpit liberty, when he repudiates the language of the Bible itself in these words: "This 'Stand still and see the salvation of the Lord' was not what the age needed nor a commodity adapted to the wants of Chieago!" Such language might be expected from Robert Ingersoll, or any other scoffer or sceptic, but any professing Christian should blush to use it.

The words are from 2 Chron. 20: 17, and are part of the message of Jehaziel the prophet following the words, "Thus saith the Lord." Obedience having been rendered by the king and people, it was attended by a great victory over their enemies. And so will it ever be when men in Chicago or anywhere else obey the words of the King in v. 20: "Believe in the Lord your God, so shall ye be established." (Victorious over evil).

But there were false guides then as now who led men astray, and the "high places" were not taken away, nor the idolatrous usages abolished. The strange alliance of the worshippers of the true God with idolaters was then as inconsistent as it is now in Blue Lodge Masonry in Chicago or anywhere else. But penalties were ever incurred thereby, to the spiritual life and ever will be until the one Lord shall alone rule in the hearts of his people over the whole earth. Christians can trust in their righteous God to do lovingly and justly with the well-disposed heathen who have only had the light of Nature to guide them, and they feel as kindly towards "Socrates and Plato" and "Emerson and Darwin and Tyndall" as Mr. Utter or Mr. Ingersoll can do: but no man professing to believe in the Scriptures as given by inspiration of God can honorably teach from them that they give the offer of heaven to those, who, having heard of salvation by Christ, deliberately reject him and his righteousness, and prefer to trust in themselves and their own righteousness, when they and we must all appear before his judgment seat. G. B.

—A London religious paper, speaking of outbreaks in different parts of Europe, says: "The growth of anarchy and rebellion against all governmental authority is fearfully rapid, and it is impossible to tell where it may next break out. At home, as well as abroad, the forces of Socialism, Communism, and Fenianism are at work, undermining all the foundations of civil order, social concord, and sacred belief. To exaggerate the gravity of fact is difficult, to ignore it as a striking and significant feature of the times is impossible."

Bible Lessons.

LESSON IV.— October 28.—Saul chosen King.—1 Samuel 10: 17-27.

Golden Text.—And all the people shouted and said, God save the king.—1 Sam. 10:24.

"Samuel called the people together." Samuel convoked the national assembly or "congregation of Israel," which had made the request for a king through its representative elders (8:4). This body was eomposed of all Israelites of 20 years old and upwards (Num. 1:3) who had not forfeited their privileges, together with foreigners admitted upon eertain eonditions. Its politieal functions were necessarily limited by the nature of the theocracy, and consisted rather in accepting the declared will of Jehovah than in originating measures of its own.—Cambridge Bible.

"Rejected your God." These are the words in which their conduct was characterized in chapter 8:7. The real nature of their course was held up squarely before them. The theocratic element accounts for many things in Hebrew institutions and Old Testament history. For instance, it explains the severity with which idolatry was punished. It was not only a sin, but a treason. Amalek was not more truly the king of Moab, Pharoah was not more exclusively king of Egypt, than Jehovah was king of Israel. And the Israelite who bowed the knee to Bel or Moloch, who adored the golden calf or Apis, he not only committed a gross and disgraceful sin, but a capital offence, and for revolting against his Liege, his Lord, and Sovereign, he was liable to be cut off from among his people. And though there were good reasons, over and above, why such outrages as the golden calf should be visited by signal retribution, it must not be forgotten as an important element that the thousands who were cut down on that occasion were mutineers against their captain,—rebels caught red-handed in revolt against their king.—Dr. Hamilton. Some legislators have placed their people under a monarchy, others under an oligarchy, and others have resolved them into a republic. But our legislators took no account of these modes of government, but instituted what we may call a Theocracy,—ascribing all power and authority to God, and persuading them to have regard to him as the author of all their privileges. He taught them that it was impossible to escape God's observation in any of their outward actions, or even in any of their inward thoughts; and his legislation had this advantage over other legislations, that whereas they made religion a part of virtue, Moses made all virtues a part of religion.—Josephus.

"Tribe of Benjamin." The nomination took place by divine instruction, but may be admired on the plainest principles of human policy. It was expedient that the king should be chosen from the southern tribes as more immediately exposed to the most dangerous and implacable enemy. A prince of Asher or Napthali might have neglected the interests of Judah and Benjamin. An election from the great rival tribes of Ephraim or Judah might excite mutual jealousy, or a dread of domineering influences among the weaker clans.—Milman.

"Could not be found." None will be the loser at last by humility and modesty. Honor, like the shadow, follows those that flee from it, but flees from those who pursue it.—Henry. It is good to be conscious of our unworthiness and insufficiency for the services to which we are called, and to avoid ostentation, and whatever may excite opposition and envy. But we should be careful not to run into the opposite extreme by refusing the employments to which the Lord calls us, through meanness of spirit and unbelief. Indeed, high stations are heavy burdens, when the duties of them are conscientiously attended on; and the comfort of them is small.—Scott.

"He stood among the people." Saul could not have been much less than seven feet high. Great stress is laid upon this, because this distinguished stature, with the impression of bodily prowess which it conveyed, helped much to recommend him to the choice of the people. When in battle much less depended upon military skill than upon the bobily prowess of the chief in single combats, it was natural enough that the people should take pride in the gigantic proportions of their leader, as calculated to strike terror into the enemy and confidence into his followers.—Kitto.

"Children of Belial." Certain worthless fellows. Our translators have wrongly treated this word Belial as a proper name in the historical books, though the correctiom is given in the margin. It means worthlessness: and, according to the usual Hebrew idiom, a son or daughter of worthlessness signifies a worthless man or woman, and with a positively bad sense, a lawless, ungodly, wicked person. If "naughty," by which the word is rendered in Prov. 6:12, had retained its archaic sense, it would be a fair equivolent. Belial is used by Paul (2 Cor. 6:15), as the name of Satan, the personification of all lawlessness and worthlessness.—Cambridge Bible.

BAND OF HOPE BIBLE LESSON.

THE SABBATH KEPT BY JEWS RETURNED FROM CAPTIVITY.

31. And if the people of the land bring ware or any victuals on the Sabbath day to sell, that we would not buy it of them on the Sabbath, or on the holy day. Neh. 10: 31.

15. In those days saw I in Judah some treading wine presses on the Sabbath, and bringing in sheaves, and lading asses; as also wine, grapes, and figs, and all manner of burdens which they brought into Jerusalem on the Sabbath day; and I testified against them in the day wherein they sold victuals.

16. There dwelt men of Tyre also therein, which brought fish, and all manner of ware, and sold on the Sabbath unto the children of Judah, and in Jerusalem.

17. Then I contended with the nobles of Judah, and said unto them, What evil thing is this that ye do, and profane the Sabbath day?

18. Did not your fathers thus, and did not our God bring all this evil upon us, and upon this city? Yet ye bring more wrath upon Israel by profaning the Sabbath.

19. And it came to pass that when the gates of Jerusalem began to be dark before the Sabbath, I commanded that the gates should be shut, and charged that they should not be opened till after the Sabbath; and some of my servants set I at the gates, that there should no burden be brought in on the Sabbath day.

20. So the merchants and sellers of all kinds of ware lodged without Jerusalem once or twice.

21. Then I testified against them, and said unto them, Why lodge ye about the wall? if ye do so again I will lay hands on you. From that time forth came they no more on the Sabbath.

22. And I commanded the Levites that they should cleanse themselves, and that they should come and keep the gates, to sanctify the Sabba th day. Remember me, O my God, concerning this also, and spare me according to the greatness of thy mercy. Neh. 13:15–22.

Golden Text.—Everyone that keepeth the Sabbath from polluting it, and taketh hold of my covenant; even them will I bring to my holy mountain and make them joyful in my house of prayer. Is. 56:6 l. c. 7 f. c.

Central Truth.—The Sabbath is a right in which all should be protected.

1. A part of the covenant which the returned Jews made with each other was to keep the Sabbath. The pledge or promise which every boy or girl makes on entering the Band of Hope may be called a covenant.

2. For seventy years there had been no temple service, no public reading of God's Word, no observance of the great yearly feast, of which indeed they seem to have almost lost the memory (see ch. 8:14–16). Where there are no churches and no regular religious services the Sabbath soon grows to be like any other day.

3. It is our duty to testify against all prevailing sin even if we stand alone.

4. These merchants were partly foreigners, and partly a mixed race of foreigners and Jews.

5. It is always right to contend for the truth. No great wrong or evil was ever put down without agitation.

6. When our rulers break the Sabbath, their example causes more violation of the day.

7. Sabbath breaking was one of the great national sins which caused the Jews to be carried captive.

8. Sabbath breaking has increased greatly in our own country during the last twenty-five years.

9. This is due to various causes, but the chief one is that men want to make money fast, and they think they can make more in seven days than in six.

10. We need to have the sanctity of the Sabbath protected by law, but laws are of little use unless they are enforced. This is the great trouble with our prohibitory laws. They are not enforced as they should be against all offenders.

11. We cannot receive the full blessing of the Sabbath unless we prepare for it.

PRACTICAL TRUTHS.

If we neglect God's house we shall be likely to forget his day.

It is our duty both to testify against evil and contend with it.

Sabbath breaking will bring down God's judgments.

God will surely remember us for good if we keep the Sabbath holy.

LESSON TALK.

In a remote part of the State of Maine there lived several years ago a number of families who were descended from the Acadians, so cruelly driven from Nova Scotia by the English. They spoke only French, and thus had little or no intercourse with any living outside their own community. They had no one to preach to them in their own tongue, or administer the ordinances of religion. The children grew up in the grossest ignorance. They never went to school. No sweetly sounding church bell summoned them to God's house. Sundays and week-days soon grew to be alike. Nobody thought that there were heathen right at their very door, till one day a dreadful murder committed in this isolated community roused people to look into their condition; and they found that the principle cause of their lapsing into such barbarism was their loss of Sabbath privileges. A state of things some what similar can be seen in some localities at the far West where there is no church within many miles. The Sabbath is forgotten or turned into a day for drinking, gambling, and other vicious amusements. Says Henry:—"The due observation of the Sabbath will have an influence on all the other parts of duty. It is like the banks of a river which make it run deep. It is like the hem or selvage of a cloth to keep it from ravelling." People who are strict Sabbath keepers we shall find are good citizens and good neighbors. Thus we see that it is a very short-sighted policy for employers to make their men work on Sundays. It drives away conscientious workmen, and puts in their place a class who have no more regard for their employer's interests than they have for God's eommands. Such men are the ones who join strikes and make a great deal of the trouble between labor and capital.

LESSON HYMM.

"Safely through another week,
God has brought us on our way."

—Dr. W. P. Mackay, preaching one day to some British soldiers, put the question, "If Queen Victoria were to issue the proclamation, and placing it in the hands of her army and navy should say, 'Go into all the world and proclaim it to every creature,' how long do you think it would take to do it?" One of these men, aecustomed to obeying orders without questioning or delay, and at the peril of their lives, replied (he was a grave and intelligent officer). "I think we could manage it in about eighteen months." And who can doubt it? Or what shall hinder the church in this day of almost miraculous facilities, from taking its King's proclamation to every creature in very nearly, if not quite, the same time?

FARM NOTES.

The prevalence of good times and abundant harvests ought to teach the farmer to husband his resources, rather than to waste, as is generally the case. Because pleuty abounds is no reason why waste should occur. Many farmers having large crops of corn adopt a plan of feeding which is not only very costly but one which really seems criminal. Corn is fed to pigs who trample it into the mud. Cattle are given rations of four times the amount necessary, and in fact the wholesale waste permeates and attaches itself to every feature of the farm. Tight floors should be the invariable practice in feeding-stables, especially in hog-pens.

Considering the comparative standing of the different breeds of cattle as stall-feeders, Prof. Brown of Ontario Agricultural College says: "I know of no class of cattle so well qualified to fill up all our wants in the stall as the Shorthorn aud his grades. In impressive power, early maturity, weight, and fattening disposition, they stand unrivaled. Next to these stand the Aberdeen Poll and his grades with their better quality of flesh and equal maturity, but hardly equal in weight. The Herefords come third with their equal impressive power and reliability as breeders, but not equal in early maturing nor weight; and, as a stall-feeder, the Galloway must take a fourth place, except in permanency of character and quality of flesh, in which respect he bows to no one.

Car-loads.—Taking 26,000 pounds as a fair average load, an ordinary freight-car will hold: of corn, 450 bushels; barley, 400 bushels; oats, 800 bushels; rye, 400 bushels; wheat, 425 bushels; bran, 1,000 bushels; flaxseed, 360 bushels; apples, 360 bushels; potatoes, 480 bushels; flour, 90 barrels; flour, 200 sacks; cattle, 18 head; hogs, 50 head; sheep, 80 head; hard wood, 6 cords; soft wood, 7 cords; solid boards, 6,000 feet; shingles, 40,000; hard lumber, 20,000 feet; green lumber, 15,000 feet; joist, scantling, and large lumber, 4,000 feet.—Bangor (Me.) Whig.

Winter Protection of Grape Vines.—The grape is a tender plant in almost every sense, and must be treated accordingly. We know how it is affected by great changes of temperature, extreme heat and humidity, severe pinching back and overbearing in summer. In winter it is still worse; millions of vines are annually lost and more hurt, for the want of a little attention in protecting them. It is only necessary to lay them on the ground at the beginning of winter, and weight them with something to keep them down. The object is to avoid, not so much the cold, as the draft of the wind, which, when the vines are frozen, dries them, and thus they perish, the smaller vines first as they are soonest dried. Near the ground this is avoided, though where there is no obstruction at all to the wind, and the wind is an open one leaving the vines exposed, harm will sometimes result.—Country Gentleman.

Feed Quick.—When fattening an animal for beef let the process be as quick as possible. Any stint in feeding will make the meat tough and dry. Stall-fed animals will fatten more readily than others, and young animals require richer food than older ones. In winter fattening depends much upon the warmth of the stable. The warmer the cattle are kept, of course the less food they require.

Oregon Harvests.—A small field of oats at Wilderville is reported to have produced this year 111 bushels of oats per acre by weight. The Portland Oregonian says: "In nearly all localities throughout the northwest the yield of wheat is far better than was expected. It is a common opinion that the dense smoke, shutting off or tempering the rays of the sun, has been highly beneficial to the wheat fields. The yield in nearly all places yet heard from is from one-fourth to one-half greater than the promise of six weeks ago. It would be pleasant to show our visitors our superb mountains and other scenery, but a good wheat crop, on the whole, is better. The mountains will still be here when they come again."

The Corvallis Gazette reports: The harvest is now about over with, and our people can form some idea of the result. The yield of grain in most portions of this county, has been far beyond the most sanguine anticipations of farmers, many fields yielding from twenty-five to thirty bushels per acre, where the prospect for a light yield was the rule but a few weeks before the grain was cut. We learn that in many instances wheat that grew without a drop of rain on it, between the time of sowing and ripening, has produced as high as thirty and thirty-five bushels to the acre; and that a poor crop and a light yield has been the exception and not the rule. With a fair price for their surplus grain, our farmer friends will be in excellent circumstances to commence the new year. The freeze out of last winter was not an unmitigated evil, as it pulverized the soil and made it more capable of resisting the drought of this unprecedently dry summer."

HOLDEN WITH CORDS.

From "The Free Methodist."

"Holden with Cords, or the Power of the Secret Empire." Price, postpaid, handsomely bound in cloth, $1.00; paper covers, 50 cents.

There is no important history extant but has connected with it numerous other histories of which was the initial point or the dominating influence. The abduction and murder of Morgan set ten thousand secret springs in motiou as the surrender of the charters of so many lodges at that time, and the severing of their connection with the order of some forty thousand of its members indicated. The story is one of these histories, and is a collection of facts woven into a story. It cannot fail to be read with interest. Address National Christian Association, 221 West Madison St.. Chicago.

CATARRH CURED.

A Clergyman, after suffering a number of years from that dreadful disease Catarrh, and after trying every known remedy without success, at last found a prescription which completely cured and saved him from death. Any sufferer from this dreadful disease sending a self-addressed stamped envelope to Dr. J. A. Lawrence, Brooklyn, N. Y., will receive the recipe free of charge.

The Christian Cynosure.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, OCTOBER 18, 1883.

EDITORIAL CORRESPONDENCE.

BIRMINGHAM, Iowa, Oct. 6th, 1883.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—My "sketches of travel" were brought up to Monday last, when I visited three interesting personages, ex-Gov. B. Gratz Brown, ex-Lieut-Gov. Charles P. Johnson, and Benj. Walter, editor of the National American, all of St. Louis. Monday night I started for Messrs. Needles and Butler of the American Freeman, Albany, Mo. The night on the cars was nearly sleepless, yet I went out six miles and preached to a revival meeting on Tuesday evening.

Mr. Needles has a full section of beautiful and productive land, with a large blooded stock. He has given his home "quarter," with good buildings, orchards, etc,, to his wife, who well deserves the munificent gift. They have buried their little daughter, but God sends bright-eyed grandchildren to fill the void. They have also three nice boys at home, and I think some of them will yet go to college. They will all make excellent and capable men if they all become Christians and pray, as Paul did, "with the Spirit," and with their natural "understandings also." If "the Holy Spirit" is dropped from religion men become formalists; if the "understanding" is dropped out of their prayers they become fanatics. The meeting in Bro. Needles' church seemed to combine both "the Spirit and the understanding" also, and was a rare and blessed meeting. Holy, consistent living and persevering labor will, I trust, bring that whole interesting neighborhood into the fold of Christ.

THE WASHINGTON MOVEMENT

lies heavily on Mr. Needles' heart, and he pours out practical and useful suggestions respecting it. He thinks the Washington convention should be held as late as January, or, at least, not till Congress meets. His faithful and capable boys can manage his large stock and let their father and mother both attend that convention, and they will doubtless do so. For the Washington paper, he suggests a stock company with a thousand shares of $100 each, making a capital of $100,000. Start a paper expecting to sink from ten to forty thousand dollars in starting it; let the stockholders buy and own the Washington property, and as soon as 500 subscribers are obtained start the paper, but press steadily on till the 1,000 subscribers are obtained in the United States and Canada. Call in twenty per cent of the hundred dollar shares subscribed, and issue the first number, say 100,000 copies, and sow them discreetly, but broadcast. Put in men who can be trusted, and drop any who prove frauds or failures. Then call in ten per cent on the shares as needed, and with God's blessing on prudent management he thinks not above one-fourth or one-half, at most, of the stock will be needed to be paid in before the paper will furnish oil for its own wheels. This plan may be a little sanguine, but it may be done. The price of the paper must be low.

BLANCHARD AND COLLEGE SPRINGS.

Leaving Albany I went up to Blanchard on the Iowa State line, hoping to spend a night with our Bro. Gault, but he was away.

At College Springs Mr. and Mrs. Deacon Adams, with Prof. Dodd and wife got up a little reception in honor of their old college president. Rev. Mr. Avery, president of the Iowa State Christian Association, Rev. William Johnston, pastor of the largest church here, Rev. Mr. Leuty, Prof. Dodd and myself, "with the women," partook of a neat and sumptuous dinner, and discussed the Washington movement. All at College Springs expressed themselves in favor of a paper at Washington after Mr. Needles' general plan.

OCTOBER 8TH.—I yesterday preached morning and night in the United Presbyterian church here. At night the house was crowded, and some stood in the lobby and at the windows. They are not a monied people, but they took up, unasked, a fair collection for the N. C. A. The three doctors Norris are now well, although the father has been sick. Many called to see me who were Presbyterians, and one Methodist. They are all, to a man, for a Washington paper. An officer in the Presbyterian (General Assembly) church applied for their building at night, and though his brother officers hesitated, they attended the evening discourse with their families, and seemed well pleased.

OCTOBER 9TH; ELECTION DAY.—At Cedar Rapids Mr. N. Bourne, in a long conversation, said he had no hostility at all against a Washington paper; but they were not satisfied with the Iowa American and wanted a local paper; not a religious paper with politics in it, but a paper conducted religiously which everybody would like, and the counties about him would use. He said also that some dissatisfaction existed with the Chicago management. I requested him to come to the Chicago office and fully inform himself as to facts and funds and give the Iowa friends the benefit of his thorough examination. Mr. Bourne's business takes him often to Chicago, and, though he modestly declined assuming any authority over the N. C. A., I understood him to consent to come and see and sift things to the bottom as requested, for the good of the general cause, as well as his own personal satisfaction. We shall expect him soon to do so.

B.

THE INTERIOR AND MASONRY.

The opening of the Interior to the discussion of the secret lodge marks and makes an era in the history of American reforms. Discussion is fatal to every stupendous wrong. Gen. Henderson, late U. S. Senator from Missouri, (not himself a prohibitionist) said in St. Louis, just before leaving for Europe, where he now is:

"The brewers and distillers will overthrow their own cause, as did the slave-holders. They looked on abolitionism as a bull upon a red rag, and, blinded by their own fury, plunged into the arena of discussion and fell. Neither the slavery or the liquor question could endure discussion. Slavery fell by discussion, and the liquor system is falling."

Precisely the same is true of the secret lodge. It cannot, will not endure or survive discussion. Freemasons are bewitched by lodge-sorceries. They are walking somnambulists, and the shock of discussion will restore them to consciousness and open their eyes.

The Interior is said to reach over twenty thousand families, and its editor, W. C. Gray, is no ordinary man. He, of course, must show some tremor in facing a secret sworn conspiracy against God and goodness which extends around our globe. But he is the descendant of the Grays who knelt in Gray Friars churchyard and signed their "Solemn League and Covenant," some of them opening veins in their arms and writing their names with their blood. That League and Covenant was against salvation by ceremonies, instead of by the blood of Christ; and Freemasonry promises salvation by ceremonies, and is a rival of Christianity and a substitute for the atonement of Christ. But the Interior will not truckle, though it may generalize and flinch at the bold assertions of "good men" in Masonry who do not regard stating untruths as lying, but keeping oaths to conceal.

One of England's great captains was ordered to storm a breach. While his servant was putting on his armor the general's legs trembled. He looked down at his knees and said: "Legs, if you knew where I am going to take you the next half hour you would shake worse than you do now." Mr. Gray may feel a slight tremor, but he is backed by a wealthy and public-spirited publisher, who began the Presbyterian Northwestern Theological Seminary with a gift of one hundred and fifty thousand dollars.

We close, therefore, as we began—the opening of the Interior to a frank, manly and Christian discussion of the secret lodge system, marks and makes an era in American history.

MISS E. E. FLAGG writes beautifully on faith-healing, as, indeed, on everything she touches. Turn to and read her "Week-day Sermon," in a late Cynosure, Oct. 4. I used to long unutterably to understand James 5:15: "The prayer of faith shall save the sick; and the Lord shall raise him up." God has, I think, by his Spirit explained that text to me. I will try to explain it, or rather give that explanation to our readers; but it will take a full editorial to do it.

B.

UNITED BRETHREN IN CHRIST.—The Telescope has admitted a full discussion between ex-Bishop Wright and Secretary Flickingen on sending pro-secrecy men (called "anti-law") out as missionaries. The North Ohio Conference (Sept. 5th) refused to pass their bishop's character "for alleged official delinquency" (conniving at Masonry in the church!) The Illinois Conference, Sept. 6th, passed the following:

SECRET SOCIETIES.

WHEREAS, The evil of oath-bound secret societies is seen more plainly as time rolls on, and their antagonism to republicism is undermining the foundations of liberty and disturbing the unity of the church; therefore,

Resolved, That we disapprove of those in our church who disregard our law on that question.

Resolved, That we labor more diligently to inform the people on the evils of secret societies.

Resolved, That it is the sense of this conference that members of the church who belong to secret societies and sever their connection with the same by ceasing to attend and not paying dues, that we extend to them great mercy, as recommended by the Board of Bishops.

A little more such action will place the United Brethren church on the summit of the moral sublime where it stood fifty years ago.

CREGIER AND QUINT.

The demand of Western Congregationalists, that a man who is a self-seeking, ambitious Freemason and politician shall be removed from the official relation in which he stands toward their churches, ought to be taken up by the citizens of Chicago against the civil engineer who is at the head of the department of public works, if such a charge as this from the Chicago Daily News is true:

"The city abandons its suit against the officers of the schooner and tugboats that were instrumental in knocking over the abutment of the Adams street viaduct. The case is abandoned because it is evident the wall was unsafe if it could be toppled over by so slight a blow as that given it by the passing schooner. In other words, the city's culpability is so great in having such an unsafe abutment that it cannot recover for its destruction. This is valuable as showing what an efficient engineering corps the city has. The pile of stone upon which this viaduct rested was rebuilt a little while ago, and pronounced safe by the 'engineers,' who are supposed to know their business. It topples over the first time a strain is given it, and the weakness of the thing is so plainly shown that the city cannot recover for its destruction. It would be well to fence the other viaduct abutments, for some drunken man might stagger against one of them and it would go over."

Mr. Cregier may not be devoting so much time to Freemasonry now as he was twelve years ago at the time of the great fire, when he was Grand Master of Illinois Masons. At the time of the fire, as we were informed by a prominent Mason, he was away off in the interior of the State, dedicating a lodge, or attending to some other lodge work. Had he been at his post of duty at the water works, that important establishment, so absolutely necessary to the safety of the city, might not have been destroyed, for it was well fitted with appliances for extinguishing fire. Another daily reports that a vessel captain employed a private engineer to examine another bridge abutment and it was found in an equally unsafe condition. Chicago can be managed just as safely and with as great economy no doubt if there is less Masonry in the qualification of its public men.

—The letter from Bro. Pruett of last week addressed to Elder Barlow, is of more than ordinary significance. The writer is moderator of the Mt. Pleasant Missionary Baptist Association of Eastern Oregon, and doubtless speaks for a number of his brethren. Through them a strong movement may yet begin in the extreme northwest to save the churches from the lodge poison. Read Elder Barlow's sympathetic reply on the fourth page. If these brethren living in isolated and remote districts would begin frequent reform prayer meetings, they would soon find glowing tokens of deliverance from the lodge oppressor.

—Bro. Hinman was last week preaching and lecturing every night in country churches round about Chambersburg, Pa. We shall soon hear good reports from that very interesting region.

—During one of the late meetings of the Elgin Association, Bro. Alexander Thomson of Bartlett, Ill., a member of the N. C. A. Board, was asked to make a brief address on the Sabbath-school interests. He used most of the time allotted in showing the dangers presented by the secret societies to the Sabbath-school work. He was heartily commended by one of the leading pastors in the Association, who affirmed his own belief that the lodge power must be overthrown with other monopolies and national evils, or our liberties would be destroyed.

—Rev. John Boyes, A. M., who has for several years with great kindness contributed to the pleasure and profit of the readers of the Cynosure has lately removed from Louth to Grimbey, England. Both these places are on the east coast. The city of Grimbey is near the mouth and on the right bank of the river Humber, and has a spacious and commodious system of docks, but is best known for its immense fishing trade. Bro. Boyes has been for several months severely taxed with extra labors, which called him away from home much of the time. In his new location he is promised more leisure which he hopes to improve oftener for the benefit of the readers of the Cynosure. The privilege of reading such candid and intelligent views of English affairs they will appreciate as one not widely enjoyed among the American papers.

—An editorial notice of the Knight Templar affair in San Francisco in the Oregonian of Portland, Oregon, bristles with good sense in its judgment of this immense and expensive offering laid upon lodge altars: "The conclave of Knights Templar at San Francisco is a thing of the past. Viewed in the popular way, it was a grand affair. There was a great deal of brass band music, much speech making, much champagne drinking, a grand procession, a great display of cocked hats, gold braid and brass buttons, and no end of bluster, noise and expense. But, really, what does all this amount to? After all, is there not much of boyish folly about it? The Knights Templar of this day have absolutely nothing in common with the Knights Templar of history, of whom, in theory, they are the successors. How absurd it is, if one considers the matter soberly, to see men who never drew a sword except on a gala occasion, who do not pretend to the military spirit, much less to military skill, parading in awkward order under the plumes and the banners of the Kuights Templar. It is a miserable farce, and every man of them knows it in his heart."

THE WASHINGTON ENTERPRISE.

At a meeting of the N. C. A. Board of Directors, Oct. 13th, 1883, Bro. E. D. Bailey was appointed to co-operate with the General Agent in the Washington work, the New England friends, it is understood, consenting. He will proceed to organize and raise funds with a view to early and efficient work. By the somewhat miscellaneous labors of the past a constituency has been developed which makes organization possible. The Board do not contemplate any abatement of effort to further the work in New England or other parts of the field, nor any interference with plans already announced.

Brother Hinman will push on with his work in the South, especially among the Freedmen. Pres. and Mrs. J. Blanchard will spend such time at the capital as the interests of the general cause seem to require, and our readers may expect stirring reports of signal victories at the seat of government. It is believed that this plan will meet the approval of friends in all parts of the country, and secure the hearty co-operation of the East and the West, the North and the South in a general effort to pay off the remaining indebtedness on the Washington purchase and establish a depository and start a paper under the management of a joint stock company to advocate the principles of the American party, from the standpoint of a truly Christian statesmanship. By this plan the wis dom and experience of aged reformers combined with the vigor and ambition of younger men will give ample scope for the qualifications and genius of each, while combining the whole for "a strong pull altogether."

Since entering this special work two years ago, Bro. Bailey has won many friends to our reform who will follow him with their prayers and support as he enters upon his enlarged field, and the work in N. E., with which he has been identified, will go on under their supervision. There seems to have been a marked Providence in the preparation of Bro. Bailey, fitting him for this work. His experience as professor in Wheaton College, his acquaintance with the needs and trials of pastors, learned by his own pastoral relations, his labors as a successful evangelist among churches at the West and his more recent acquaintance with New England habits, tastes and m odes of thought, combined with a happy faculty of maki ng and retaining friends, a ready utterance and pleasing address, all indicate a fitness for the position, and will give friends confidence and courage to heartily co-operate in carrying out the great enterprise at Washington. Added to his own resources Bro. Bailey will be in a position to secure assistance from men who are experienced in state affairs, as well as suggestions and counsel from able pastors in Washington and neighboring cities.

Success in this promising. and at the same time difficult field depends in part upon Bro. Bailey's own energy and ability, in part upon the co-operation and support of friends of the cause, but mainly and most of all upon the favor and blessing of God.

The Master's help will not be denied. His "Lo, I am with you always," holds good to-day and in this case. Will friends meet their responsibilites of prayer and counsel, and in offerings, and thus giving Bro. Bailey an opportunity to prove himself capable and worthy to have come to this position. Let us all and ever keep in mind that without that help which cometh from above the wisest plans will fail, and ablest men be utterly confounded.

NEW HAMPSHIRE ANNUAL MEETING.

The Seventh Annual Meeting of the New Hampshire Christian Association will meet at Canterbury Center, Oct. 23–24, to commence Tuesday at 2 o'clock P. M. Friends coming by rail will stop at Canterbury Depot on the Boston, Concord and Montreal R. R. Please notify A. H. Brown, Canterbury, N. H., on what train you will come and he will meet you with team. All who propose to attend the convention will please notify Bro. Brown by postal, that he may make suitable preparation for entertainment. Prof. E. D. Bailey of Worcester, and S. H. Atkins of Milton Mills, N. H., who has been a Freemason, Odd-fellow and Knight of Pythias, will address the convention. Other able speakers including Rev. D. McFall of Boston, and Elder Geo. C. Bowles of Sugar Hill, N. H., a seceding Mason, have been invited to speak. Rev. J. P. Stoddard, General Agent of the N. C. A. is hereby cordially invited to be with us. N. E. friends, we welcome you to our Sabbatic annual meeting. We believe the Lord has a great blessing in store for us. May the Holy Spirit fill the hearts of all who come.

AMERICAN POLITICS.

NOMINATIONS FOR 1884.

For President,

JONATHAN BLANCHARD,
OF ILLINOIS.

For Vice President,

JOHN A. CONANT,
OF CONNECTICUT.

PLATFORM.

We hold: 1. That ours is a Christian and not a heathen nation, and that the God of the Christian Scriptures is the author of civil government.

2. That God requires and man needs a Sabbath.

3. That the prohibition of the importation, manufacture and sale of intoxicating drinks as a beverage is the true policy on the temperance question.

4. That the charters of all secret lodges granted by our Federal and State Legislatures should be withdrawn, and their oaths prohibited by law.

5. That the civil equality secured to all American citizens by articles 13th, 14th and 15th of our amended Constitution should be preserved inviolate.

6. That arbitration of differences with nations is the most direct and sure method of securing and perpetuating a permanent peace.

7. That to cultivate the intellect without improving the morals of men, is to make mere adepts and experts; therefore, the Bible should be associated with books of science and literature in all our educational institutions.

8. That land and other monopolies should be discouraged.

9. That the government should furnish the people with an ample and sound currency.

10. That maintenance of the public credit, protection to all loyal citizens, and justice to Indians are essential to the honor and safety of our nation.

11. And, finally, we demand for the American people the abolition of electoral colleges, and a direct vote for President and Vice-president of the United States.

Note.—The names of candidates above are retained as nominated by the National Convention of the American party. J. Blanchard has, however, resigned, subject to the approval of the next meeting of that body. The name of Hon. S. C. Pomeroy is urged to be put at the head of the ticket, and the American Freeman (Mr. Needles' paper) has already put Mr. Pomeroy's name at the head of the ticket, and his distinguished Senatorial record, and unswerving fidelity to our principles will doubtless nominate him by acclamation.

The managers of Butler's campaign in Massachusetts have issued a "ballot" which is a resemblance to the human skin when tanned, and is headed, "Regular Republican Ticket." For candidates, it bears the names of prominent defenders of Tewksbury.

"You all did see how on the Lupercal I thrice presented him a kingly crown, and he did thrice refuse." This is what Shakespeare makes Antony say of Julius Cæsar, and he describes the infamous Richard the Third as having imitated the Roman conqueror; nevertheless, both accepted. Is the same dumb show to be gone through with by officious persons in offering a nomination to General Sherman, and his refusal of it? Of course anybody can ask anybody else he chooses to accept a nomination for President, but it will take a great many persons to secure it, and no one should let his name be a football if he can help it. A more unfit nominee it would be hard to make than the General. Not only has he no record as a Statesman, but his record as Commander-in-Chief has been unfortunate. Never was the morale of the officers and men of the army lower or so low as during his administration; never were desertions so numerous among enlisted men; and never were drunkenness and fraud so common among the officers. This is not an unnatural result of a reign of favoritsm and profanity.—N. Y. Witness.

Secrecy is useless and dangerous. It is never needed except as a covering to wrong. Many things are private that are not secret and privacy is to be sharply distinguished from secrecy, especially oath-bound secrecy. To private associations there are no objections, and they are all-sufficient. The benefits of secret societies do not compensate for their waste of time and extortion of money. They charge heavy initiation fees and exact yearly payments and fines. They take adult men only, sound in mind and limb, and then parade their benevolence to the disparagement of that of the Christian church to which they bear the relation of the mistletoe to the oak, draining its strength, life and resources. The church takes all that offer, young and old, women and children, halt, blind, sick, without fee for entrance or current taxation. Let the church charge as Odd-fellowship charges and its monies and revenues would surpass those of any secret association! The church's benevolences are out and out, and not a "quid pro quo." As a bond of brotherhood no association in the world equals that of the Christian church.—Methodist Watchman, Bombay, India.

TAKE ADVANTAGE OF THIS OFFER!

Trial subscriptions to the Cynosure from now to the 1st of January, 1884, will be sent for twenty-five cents.

Subscriptions new and old, from November 1st to January 1st 1885, only TWO DOLLARS. Take advantage of this offer, for it will be open only for letters received at this office before November 15th. This gives such subscribers the Cynosure for TWO MONTHS FREE!

If the Cynosure had TEN THOUSAND subscribers the yearly price could be reduced to a uniform rate of $1.50. Work and pray for this.

LITERARY.

The American Newspaper Catalogue has been issued for several years by Edwin Alden & Bro. of Cincinnati, who have by wide correspondence compiled a large volume which will be a very valuable acquisition in thousands of libraries and offices. Their arrangement of the work gives readily all needed information about the place of publication, name of paper, number of pages, length of the advertising columns, frequency of issue, class or denomination, when established, and circulation.

The number of newspapers and magazines published in the United States and the Canadas as thus catalogued is 13,273, (an increase over the number last year of 1,115): Total in the United States, 12,607; in the Canadas, 666. Published as follows: dailies, 1,237; tri-weeklies, 70; semi-weeklies, 162; Sundays, 129; weeklies, 10,053; bi-weeklies, 22; semi-monthlies, 240; monthlies, 1,349; bi-monthlies, 11. These statistics show a general increase in publications throughout the whole country, especially among weeklies. There has been an increase in publications in all the States, Territories, and Provinces, with the exception of Oregon, Indian, and Wyoming Territories, British Columdia, New Brunswick, Northwest Territory, Prince Edward Island, and Newfoundland, where the number remains the same, although the changes have been numerous. We note that a number of our reform papers are not mentioned in the catalogue, as the Christian Witness, New England, Michigan and Illinois Americans, Olathe Free Press, the Rescue and Richmond Star. These papers should not be overlooked.

The Century for October opens with one of the best portraits of Longfellow ever published. "Out-door industries in California" is an attractive sketch very richly illustrated. Full as much may be said for "In the Footsteps of Thackery" and "Old New York and its Houses." The article to which many readers will turn with greatest interest is Prof. Geo. P. Fisher's "Martin Luther, after Four Hundred Years," and none who read "Through Waterspout and Typhoon" will forget the thrilling narrative of ocean danger and escape. A short article on snipe-shooting is enriched with a beautiful and characteristic picture by Beard.

Dio Lewis's Monthly for October is the best of its three numbers. "Our Rich Men," by Dio Lewis, ought to help many persons who fancy that happiness and money are synonymous. "Our Young Women," by Rev. Dr. Howard Crosby, is a brave discussion of an enormous but fashionable evil. Other articles are "Idol Worship in India," "Sandwich Island Sketches," by Dr. C. L. Tisdale, the first of a series of instructive and interesting sketches of the Little Kingdom, "Crossing the Mediterranean," "The Shakers," "Weight of the Human Brain," "A true Story of Lake George," "A True Ghost Story," by a Boston lawyer, "Open the Cage Door, Treatment of Prisoners, and Treatment of the Insane," all by Dio Lewis, "House-Drainage," "A Fine Complexion," "Our Brains and Nerves," "The Check-Rein," by Hon. Geo. T. Angell. The Hygienic Department is full of variety, and "Diphtheria," by Dio Lewis is a clear discussion of the causes, prevention and treatment of this dreaded malady. The magazine is printed in very attractive form and will be a valued helper in many homes which will be made happier and healthier from its perusal.

As an historian, Mr. Blaine is exciting great expectations. His favorite author is Macauley, and in the production of a popular history he bids fair to rival his own ideal. His memory is phenomenal, and certainly no man is better fitted to write of "From Lincoln to Garfield" than James G. Blaine. In all those eventful years he was a member of Congress, and much of the time the parliamentary leader of the Republican party. He can make a most valuable contribution to historical literature. It is reported that he was offered $100,000 for the work, but finally agreed upon $75,000 cash and 15 cents royalty on each volume sold. The work is to be issued in two volumes. He will probably realize as much on the royalty as on the cash in advance. He can well afford to retire from politics.—Inter Ocean.

The November number of the North American Review will contain a contribution from Dr. Norvin Green, president of the Western Union Telegraph Company, in opposition to the proposed government management of the telegraph; also, an article on John Brown, by the Rev. David N. Utter, which is calculated the Review publishers think to seriously affect the popular estimate of the hero of Ossawatomie. The Cynosure also received an article some weeks ago from Mr. Utter, who is a prominent Unitarian preacher of Chicago, in reply to articles by Rev. C. C. Foote. We apprehend that the memory of the old hero and martyr to an unselfish love of human kind will survive many such attacks. Unitarianism generally makes its deities from such men in lieu of Jesus Christ, who in theory they too generally discard.

INDIAN SUMMER.

Just after the death of the flowers,
And before they are buried in snow,
There comes a festive season,
When nature is all aglow—
Aglow with a mystical splendor
That rivals the brightness of Spring—
Aglow with a beauty more tender
Than aught which fair Summer could bring.

Some spirit akin to the rainbow,
Then borrows its magical dyes,
And mantles the far spreading landscape
In hues that bewilder the eyes.
The sun from his cloud-pillowed chamber
Smiles soft on a vision so gay,
And dreams that his favorite children,
The flowers, have not yet passed away.

There's a luminous mist on the mountains,
A light, azure haze in the air,
As if angels, while heavenward soaring,
Had left their bright robes floating there;
The breeze is soft, so caressing,
It seems a mute token of love,
And floats to the heart like a blessing
From some happy spirit above.

These days, so serene and so charming,
Awaken a dreamy delight—
A tremulous, tearful enjoyment,
Like soft strains of music at night;
We know they are fading and fleeting,
That quickly, too quickly they'll end,
And we watch them with yearning affection,
As at parting we watch a dear friend.

Oh! beautiful Indian Summer!
Thou favorite child of the year,
Thou darling whom nature enriches
With gifts and adornments so dear!
How fain would we woo thee to linger
On mountain and meadow awhile,
For our hearts, like the sweet haunts of nature,
Rejoice and grow young in thy smile.

Not alone to the sad fields of Autumn
Dost thou a lost brightness restore,
But thou bringest a world-weary spirit
Sweet dreams of its childhood once more;
Thy lovliness fills us with memories
Of all that was brightest and best—
Thy peace and serenity offer
A foretaste of heavenly rest. —Sel.

WHY NOT?

A veteran African missionary opened his heart and said, "Why should we be expected to make all the sacrifices for the evangelization of Africa? If we give our lives on the field, why should not others give the gains of their lives at home for the same end?" The point was well taken. Why not? Two men stand before the Lord as disciples—to each alike comes the summons, "Preach my gospel to every creature." The vows of loyalty are upon each alike. The perishing world lies spread out before the vision of both, and the Macedonian cry rings in their ears. One of them hears a call to go forth and throw his life into the breach, giving up thereby the hope of emolument and worldly advantage. His life and the possible fruits of life were put into the evangelization of the dark continent. The other heard a call to stay at home and enter the field of enterprise, but he is not hence absolved from putting his life and the fruits of life into the advancement of the kingdom. Why should he accumulate property, enjoy the luxuries of life, and put his children beyond the reach of want, having educated them liberally, and the other forego all these things—servants of the same master, and answerable for obedience to the same command? Reader, make yourself this other one, and say, Why?

By proxy nine hundred and ninety-nine in a thousand preach the Gospel to the heathen and non-Christian world, if they preach it at all. It is that one life, freely given, that enables them to say, in any sense, "Lord, we have obeyed thy last and great command." The offset to that life is the money they give to take him to his destination, support him there, and supply him with the implements of his spiritual work. That life gives value to the gift. The lazy dollars in their pockets can do nothing. They have no heart, no tongue. Put them into the treasury of the Lord, and lo! a Duff sets Calcutta aflame, a Livingstone is traversing the jungles of Africa, a Coan is baptizing his thousands in the Sandwich Islands, a Schauffler is telling the story of Christ crucified as one with the gift of more tongues than had the Apostles.

The fact is colossal works demand colossal outlay. The available gifts of the multitude need to be supplemented by great givers anointed to this very end, and seeing in such enterprises a field more worthy than those into which the average millionaire puts his superfluous wealth. It is said that Livingstone and his father "agreed the time would come when rich men and great men would think it an honor to support whole stations of missionaries instead of spending their money on hounds and horses." That day ought to be upon us. They are legion who could rise up and say, this one, "I put one, two, a dozen into the field in my name;" another, "I build a gospel ship;" another, "I equip an African expedition;" another, "I endow a college in the heart of Japan, China, South Africa." How many women of wealth might, rather than live as they do, say to the missionary societies, "Send forth all you wisely can of consecrated women, and let me pay their outfit and their support." This idea of putting substitutes into the field, of turning a fortune, made or making, into some one of these great channels to make the wilderness bloom, is but beginning to arrest the attention of here and there one. Oh, that it might seize the hearts of too many of the Lord's stewards who forget that they have no call, as of the Master, to rival the rich men and women of the world in their vain, foolish, and wicked prodigality, or worse avarice, but that there is a call to fill up what is behind of the sufferings of Christ, and to hasten the day when he shall see the travail of his soul and be satisfied! Why not?—Christian Weekly.

HISTORICAL ACCURACY OF SCRIPTURE.

We read in Dan. 5:30, that when Darius took Babylon, Belshazzar, the king of it, was in the city, and in "that night was Belshazzar, king of the Chaldeans, slain." Herodotus, the Greek historian, gives an account of the matter, which, until of late years, seemed totally irreconcilable with Daniel's narrative. He informs us that the king of Babylon, whose name was Labynetus, was absent when the city was taken; that he sought shelter in Barsippa; that Cyrus attacked him there, took him, stripped him of his regal dignity, but allowed him to retire and to spend the rest of his life in case in Caramansa. The two statements appear to be contradictory, and that the credit of historic veracity must be denied either to Daniel or to Herodotus. Thus stood the matter when Sir Henry Rawlinson, the celebrated Oriental scholar, discovered in his eastern reseaches, one of those cylinders, on which historic records used to be written in the cuneiform character by the ancients. Having deciphered the writing on this relic of antiquity, it was discovered that at the time of the capture of Babylon, referred to by Daniel and Herodotus, there were two kings presiding over the empire, a father and his son, and thus we can understand that Herodotus speaks of the father, who escaped, while Daniel speaks of the son, who was slain. This unsuspected fact not only reconciles the prophet and the historian, but explains an otherwise inexplicable expression in Daniel, where it was promised to the prophet by Belshazzar that, if he could explain the writing on the wall, he would make him the third ruler in the kingdom. (Dan. 5:16.) Now, why not the second ruler, as Joseph in similar circumstances had been made in Egypt? The cylinder answers the question; there were two kings in Babylon, and therefore the place next to the throne could be only the third rulership in the kingdom. A very short time before the discovery which so triumphantly reconciles the seeming contradiction which cast a shade of suspicion on Daniel's accuracy, Mr. F. W. Newman had written these words in Kitto's Cyclopedia: "No hypothesis will reconcile this account with the other; an instructive lesson this, teaching us to give the sacred writers credit for accuracy, even though we may be unable to explain facts which seem to impeach it."—Church Herald.

He who carries with him the boundless spirit of charity to man, often does good when he knows not of it. An influence goes forth from him which soothes the distressed, encourages the drooping, stimulates afresh the lover of virtue, and begets its own image and likeness in all beholders.

The Rev. E. Edwards of England, long ago said, "It may please God to leave a minister a long time ignorant of his success, in order to wring pride out of his soul." The thought is a humbling one. Perhaps it deserves much more attention than it receives on the part of many ministers whose labors are not manifestly successful. The Rev. John Milne of Scotland, wrote one night in his diary these words: "I see also that few can bear to be instruments in conversion, there is such tendency to become proud and lifted up." Again he wrote: "The seventy return saying, Even the devils are subject unto us. They were sent to heal, but even in efforts beyond their commission, succeeded. There was exaltation, yet peril in this. Nothing is more perilous for a man than his discovery that spiritual powers wait upon his back. Therefore they are warned. There is a safer and truer joy; without self-satisfaction and self-elation."

HOME HINTS.

To Clean Marble.—Mix one quarter of a pound of soft soap with the same of pounded whiting, one ounce of soda, and a piece of stone blue the size of a walnut. Boil these together for fifteen minutes, and then, while hot, rub it over the marble with a piece of flannel, and leave it on for twenty-four hours; then wash it off with clean water, and polish the marble with a piece of coarse flannel, or, what is better, a piece of an old hat.

Pickled Cucumbers.—To pickle small cucumbers, pack them in a jar or tub, pour a weak brine on them, and let it stand three days. Then pour off the brine and rinse the pickles thoroughly; put them back in the jar, and pour over them boiling hot vinegar enough to cover them; then let them stand twenty-four hours. Reboil the vinegar, and pour on as before, repeating the process again on the third day. Then throw away the pickle, and add fresh vinegar enough to cover every cucumber, adding a lump of alum the size of a marble to each gallon of vinegar, together with one-half pound of sugar, and spices to suit the taste. Bring to a boil—not in brass—skimming thoroughly, and pouring over the pickles while hot. Let them stand well covered. Peppers, either green or ripe, improve these pickles.

Mixed Pickles.—An excellent recipe for mixed pickles is one peck of green tomatoes, half a peck of onions, one pint of grated horse-radish, half a pound of white mustard seed, one pound of ground mustard, half a pound of unground black pepper, three or four green peppers, one ounce each of cinnamon, cloves and turmeric, and two or three heads of cauliflower; tie the pepper, cinnamon and cloves in a thin muslin bag, place in a tin or earthenware dish, cover with vinegar, and boil until tender; can while hot in glass fruit jars. These are fully as good as the ones sold by grocers, and much cheaper.

Preserving Yeast.—The following has been recommended in the Chemical Review: "The thick portion of the yeast is filled into a champagne bottle, and on top of it is poured about 2½ cm. of olive oil. The bottle is then closed by tying a bladder over its top, and in order to protect it from explosion a pin is put through the bladder. So the yeast will keep well for a long time if kept in a cold place. Yeast, if mixed with about one-eighth of pure glycerine, also keeps well for some time, if kept in a cool place."

Cure for Chapped Hands.—Melt one-fourth of a pound of mutton tallow (which has already been "tried out" and cleansed), add one-half ounce of gum camphor and the same of glycerine. Let it boil a moment or two, stirring it all the time. When cool it is ready for use. Before going to bed wash the hands thoroughly and rub in the ointment. If you have them, draw on a pair of old kid gloves with the ends of the fingers cut off.

How Much Should we Eat?—How, asks Dr. Nicholls in the Food Reform Magazine, are we to get at the proper quantity of food? Animals living in a state of nature do not overeat themselves. They stop eating when they have got enough. There are no prize cattle on the prairies. It is the stalled ox, and the pig in his pen, deprived of exercise, that can be fattened into a diseased obesity. Horses escape this process because men do not to any great extent knowingly devour them. The hunter and racer are not overfed. All animals expected to do their work are carefully fed as to quality and quantity. If human beings were fed as wisely, they would be as healthy. There are some good rules for feeding as to quantity. When our food is simple and natural in kind and quality and mode of preparation, there is little danger of eating too much. There is little danger, for example, of eating too many grapes, apples, pears, or bananas. Salt, sugar, spices, and luxurious cookery tempt to excess. With men, as with animals, a natural diet is self-limiting, and we are disposed to stop when we have got enough. The more artificial the food, the more elaborate and luxurious the feast, the more the liability to overload the stomach, overtask the digestive power, and overweigh the forces of life. Simplicity of food is a condition of health, and promotes longevity. The quantity of food which enables a man to do his daily work without loss of weight is precisely what he requires. He supplies the daily waste—no more and no less. This quantity may vary a little with each individual, but every one can easily ascertain his own measure of requirement by reducing the quantity of daily food until he finds a balance of force and weight. It is my opinion that the average quantity of water-free aliment required, say by business and literary men, is twelve ounces. Men of great muscular activity may require sixteen to twenty ounces. I have found myself in very good condition for sedentary work or eight or ten ounces. When anyone is in good condition for his work and keeps his normal weight, he has food enough. Dr. Nicholls' advice is, find this quantity by experiment, and then habitually keep to it.

The tie that unites Christians is the tenderest and truest. Never were any hearts so united as are Christian hearts with one another, and with the faithful in Jesus Christ, of every age and clime.

CHILDREN'S CORNER.

A LITTLE LESSON.

Some youthful housekeepers one day
Were getting supper in a way
That was delightful, really.
The grass a velvet carpet made
Beneath the glowing maples' shade,
No room so charming nearly.

Then Flossy brought a napkin red;
"'Twill make a lovely cloth," she said.
But when she came to try it,
Alas! 'twas not quite large enough
To hide the table, slightly rough,
'Twas useless to deny it.

Then rueful looks of blank dismay
Began to chase the smiles away,
So meagre did they find it.
Till out spoke sunny little Nell,
"We'll leave it so, 'tis just as well,
And play we do not mind it."

The joyous smiles returned once more,
Too soon the dainty feast was o'er,
And shadows gathered quickly;
A star shone silvery in the west,
Warning each merry little guest
To seek the homefold quickly.

The lesson is as plain as day;
A cloud may rise above your way,
The sunshine is behind it.
When things go wrong and others frown
Just put all vain repining down
And play you do not mind it.

OPEN YOUR BIBLES.

FOUNDATION. Read Matt. 7:21–29.

For other foundation can no man lay than that is laid, which is Jesus Christ. 1 Cor. 3:11.

1. The foundation the first part of a building. John 6:28, 29.

2. It must be laid. Ezra 3:10–13; Isa.28:16.

3. Expense and toil incurred in laying it. 1 Kings 5:17; 7:10; Isa. 53:5, 11; 2 Tim. 2:19.

4. The building rests on the foundation. Matt. 16:18; Col. 2:6, 7.

5. The labor of building useless unless the foundation be firm. Matt. 7 24–27.

6. This foundation precious. 1 Pet. 2:4–6.—Notes for Bible Study.

THE CONTENTED HERD BOY.

In a flowery dell a herd boy kept his sheep; and because his heart was joyous he sang so loudly that the surrounding hills echoed back his song. One morning the king, who was out on a hunting expedition, spoke to him and said: "Why are you so happy, dear little one?"

"Why shall I not be," he answered; "our king is not richer than I."

"Indeed!" said the king, "tell me of your great possessions."

The lad answered: "The sun in the bright blue sky shines as brightly upon me as upon the king. The flowers on the mountain and the grass in the valley grow and bloom to gladden my sight as well as his. I would not take a hundred thousand thalers for my hands; my eyes are of more value than all the precious stones in the world; I have food and clothing, too. Am I not, therefore, as rich as the king?"

"You are right," said the king with a laugh; "but your greatest treasure is a contented heart; keep it so, and you will always be happy."—From the German.

FOUR HINTS FOR HOME STUDY.

Observe; inquire; attend; retain.

1. Observe. They that study only out of books do all their studying at second-hand. The art of observing is the supreme art, and one of the ripest fruits of the higher education. At Vassar the pupils use the telescope; at Wellesley each pupil in biology has a microscope for her own studies. Both are furnished in the senior class; i. e., the consummation of learning is teaching the use of the eye. The greatest scientists are those who make original observations. It is noted as an excellence of Macaulay as an historian that he visited personally every place that he undertook to describe. Study the trees, the birds, the flowers, the hills, the rocks. Study your companions, their character, their temperament, their brain structure, and the outcome of all this in their actual habits and experience—though this is a dangerously fascinating study, and to be pursued with caution. Education in the use of the eye should be begun in infancy and carried on down to old age. It is an old nurse's whim that babies should not be walked with. The first duty of the father is to take the baby to walk every day and give him a chance to use his eyes on all in his little world that is strange and fresh; i. e., on everything. This is the father's prerogative, and he should be permitted—if need be he should be gently encouraged— to exercise it.

2. Add to the habit of observation that of inquiry. A great deal of fun is poked at the Yankees for their habit of asking questions; but they get on in the world wonderfully, partly by that very habit of theirs. An inquiring mind is a receptive mind. The stone and the sponge are dropped into the same water; one comes up full, the other as it went in, What you learn depends on what youare more than where you are. He is a wise pupil who makes all life his school, and all humanity his teachers, For everyone knows something better than you do; if you have the art to make every man you meet a teacher, you will learn very fast. And this requires no great art, only a little tact; for no occupation is more delightful than that of teaching one who wishes to learn; if you really wish to learn and are willing to be an ignorant man's pupil he will be proud to be your teacher. In going to Boston on the Fall River steamer I take my little boys to the fireroom. The swarthy firemen read their curiosity in their wistful faces, call them down and give them a lecture on the furnaces, and I learn more about the heat of a steamboat from an intelligent fireman than I could learn in a day's study in a library.

3. To retain is as important as to acquire; we acquire what we learn, we retain what we remember. It is said that the sun paints its pictures everywhere. If our walls could only keep some of the paintings which the sun has put there, what a rare picture-gallery the parlor would become; what scenes of spring verdure, of autumnal glory, and of winter's purity, what sacred portraits and family scenes would hang upon our walls. If we could only remember all that we have learned none of us would need to be ignorant. Some special historic instances have demonstrated what power of retention can be developed by the mind. Crossing the Irish Channel in rough weather Lord Macaulay amused himself by seeing how much of "Paradise Lost" he could repeat from memory; he repeated half of it. On another occasion he wrote out from memory a complete list of the senior wranglers at Cambridge, with their dates and colleges, for a hundred years back, and the list covered the four pages of a sheet of foolscap; At fifty-eight years of age we find him committing to memory "All that I like best in Catullus," and preparing to enter the House of Lords by enabling himself to repeat from memory the entire roll of the House, i. e., the whole list of England's peerage. These are extraordinary feats of memory, but they are valuable illustrations of what the memory can be made to do for man by adaquate education; and though extraordinary they are not unparalleled. Fanny Kemble Butler learns the part of Beatrice in Shakespeare's "Much Ado About Nothing" in an hour's time. John Hall, after he has written his sermon, reads it over once or twice, and then delivers it with little if any variation from the text. President Seelye, of Amherst College, two weeks after the term opens can call every one of the three hundred students by name when he meets them on the street. Joseph Cook is not so much more learned than many less effective orators; but when he speaks all that he has learned stands within his reach. His mind is like the District Telegraph Company; at will he calls upon memory and it furnishes him any fact or fancy he has ever read.

4. The secret of retention is attention. It requires the sensitive paper to retain the picture for future use. Some minds are highly sensitized; they keep all they ever receive; others are like the wall; they keep nothing. Therefore, to develop the memory, develop the habit of attention. The boy who half listens to his errand forgets it before he gets to the store. The husband who puts his wife's letter in his pocket for the post-office while he is reading the morning paper brings it back again at night. In both cases the mind did not really receive, therefore it did not retain the impression. For this reason memory is of so many different types. Some men remember words, others ideas, others forms, others color, because they have attended respectively to words, ideas, forms, and color. As I read to my children at night one always wants to sit by my side and point to the page. If I come to a new word I see her lips in motion: she is spelling it out, studying its construction. When it comes time for her to go to school she graduates from the spelling class without even entering it. She has, it is said, the instinct of a good speller. She has in reality formed the habit from earliest years of attending to the form and structure of words. Very much of novel reading and perhaps even more of newspaper reading is mentally enervating, because it is reading without attention. It is reading with the eyes but not with the mind. The main use of recitation and examination in school is that it compels attention. The student out of school should always go to recitation and occasionally to examination. Spend the ten minutes of undressing at night in living over the events of the day, recalling them, and fastening them in your memory. Never read a book or an article without afterward examining yourself on its contents, and marking yourself mentally for your recitation. "I read hard or not at all," says F. W. Robertson; "never skimming; never turning aside to merely interesting books." "Reading without purpose," says Bulwer Lytton, "is sauntering, not taking exercise. . . . A cottage flower gives honey to the bee, a king's garden none to the butterfly." "Read," says Lord Bacon, "not to contradict and confute, nor to believe and take for granted, nor to find talk and discourse, but to weigh and consider." It is by weighing and considering that we fasten in the mind. If we do not fasten the stitch when the work is done it is all liable to ravel out.—Christian Union.

A chubby brown sparrow flew up from the ground in Boston Common carrying in its beak a soda biscuit. He flew but a few fect away before he dropped the biscuit, when another sparrow seized it and carried it a few feet further, and so one after another carried it along until the last sparrow dropped it plump on a horse-car track. Then away they all flew as if their object had been accomplished. Pretty soon along came a car, and, passing over the cracker, ground it into crumbs. Then down swooped the whole flock of feathered philosophers and made a good breakfast.—Boston Post.

TEMPERANCE.

PHILOSOPHERS ON INTEMPERANCE.

Not long before his death the venerable Thurlow Weed had an article in the New York Tribune entitled "Wine a Cure for Intemperance." He assumed that in wine countries there is no intemperance, which is very far from being true, and his proposition was to provide for abundant and cheap wine in this country. He said that every plan hitherto tried for the cure of that dreadful vice and crime had failed, and there seemed to be no possible plan remaining to be tried but to provide the people with wine so abundant and so cheap that it would be within the reach and means of all.

He was particularly emphatic in condemning prohibition as a lamentable failure wherever it had been tried, even in Maine, the place of its birth. In a reply which the Tribune was kind enough to print, I requested Mr. Weed, as a particular favor, to mention even one place where prohibition had been tried and failed, as I knew of none. He replied to my article, but did not mention any locality where prohibition had failed to reduce the volume of the liquor traffic and to diminish the evils coming from it. Mr. Weed proposed that the government should "acquire" some territory adapted to the cultivation of grapes, and that wine-growing should be entered upon on a scale so vast as to provide our present population of fifty millions and our future numbers of a hundred millions or two hundred millions, with abundant wine and very cheap. The execution of that plan he was sure would banish intemperance from our country.

Another eminent philosopher of New York suggests that intemperance comes entirely from the low drinking shops where the common people obtain their tipple, and, like Mr. Weed, he has a plan which he is confident would result in driving intemperance from the land. It is that wine and beer are to be freely sold by all who will, to all comers, and that shops for the sale of "fiery liquors" are not to be allowed in greater numbers than one to every five hundred of the people. It is a part of his plan to tax the fiery liquors so heavily that the price of them would be so great as to be within the reach of rich people only, who never contract habits of intemperance, as everybody knows! It places for the sale of such liquors should be within the reach only of gentlemen, both lay and clerical, and their sons, he was sure no harm could come from them.

There is still another eminent philosopher, also of the State of New York, who has a different plan for the cure of intemperance, perfectly sure of success, as he thinks, if it could be properly tried on a scale of sufficient magnitude. It is that the government should construct inebriate asylums numerous enough and on a scale large enough to receive and properly accommodate all the drunkards of the country, where they should be retained for whatever time might be necessary to wean them entirely from the alcohol habit.

This eminent philosopher and practical business man seems to comprehend that this scheme would involve an enormous expense to the country, but that is of small account, as we are very rich and very benevolent. He understands that it would not be wise to incur such a vast expenditure for the care only of the present crop of drunkards, and so his plan contemplates the regular production of a constant supply of them, so that through all coming time his vast asylums may have no lack of guests. Our philosopher seems to comprehend that it would be demanding too much of the sober, hard-working, prudent, saving part of our people to tax them enormously and continuously for the comfortable support in idleness and ease of the vast army of low, and base, and vile, and dissolute people who swarm in the slums and gutters of all our great towns and cities. He proposes, therefore, that grog shops shall be established by law in sufficient numbers to supply the demand for "drink," and that these shall be taxed to such an extent as to furnish money enough to pay all the running expenses of the asylums.

Our philosopher did not go into any estimate of the necessary outlay that his scheme would involve; he foresaw, perhaps, that such a display of figures would frighten out statesmen from the adoption of it, but for all that it will be interesting for us, who would have to pay the bills, to look into the matter a little further than he seemed willing to open it to us.

There are 600,000 drunkards in this country and more, five hundred of whom in one asylum would be a number large enough. That would require twelve hundred asylums, the cost of which, with the land and surroundings, would be at least $400,000 each, absorbing $480,000,000. These establishments would require not less than 50,000 officials and servants and employes of all sorts, who at $200 each annually in wages would require $10,000,000. The keep of these 600,000 would involve an annual outlay of $60,000,000 at $100 each—the very lowest figure.

Now, our philosopher proposed this scheme soberly and in perfectly good faith, as a cure for the terrible sin, shame and crime of drunkenness in this country. It is founded, as he says, upon the fact that every plan hitherto adopted has been unsuccessful, and that the temperance cause, so called, has been and is a conspicuous failure. That all over the world where the temperanec men and women are working for the prohibition and suppression of the liquor traffic, the cause of all the mischief, they are so foolish as not to see that the extinguishment of the grog shops is impossible, and that prohibition everywhere and always has been and is a lamentable failure!

We are waiting and looking curiously now for the proposal of some other scheme by some other philosopher.—Hon. Neal Dow in the American Reformer.

THE CHURCHES.

—The late Rock River Conference, United Brethren, voted a strong approval of ex-Bishop Wright's paper, the Richmond Star, and gave an emphatic testimony against the secret orders.

—Rev. E. B. Graham of Omaha, author of "In the Coils" was chosen moderator of the United Presbyterian Synod of Iowa which lately met at Albia.

—The meetings conducted for a few days by Miss F. E. Townsley at Wheaton were concluded on the evening of the 5th inst. with a blessed season. Miss Townsley spoke of her own experience in finding Christ in so clear and convincing a manner that many were moved to tears. There were a number of conversions during the meetings. Miss Townsley returned to her home at Hastings, Nebraska, and will work during the winter among the churches of that State.

—Bro. Edward Mathews of Michigan, has been re-appointed chairman of Spring Arbor and Monroe districts in the Free Methodist church. His energies will be ever ready to be employed in promoting Christian reform.

—The evangelists, Moody and Sankey, successfully began a series of meetings in the Royal Theatre of Limerick, Ireland, Oct. 10. The building was crowded to its utmost capacity. The services included singing by Sankey and two addresses by Moody. The audience appeared spell-bound under Moody's preaching.

—The National Congregational Council met in fifth triennial session Thursday last at Concord, N. H. The Rev. Dr. Little, of Chicago, was elected Moderator, and Governor Hale made the welcoming address. The next meeting will be held in Chicago.

—Pres. C. A. Blanchard preached on Sabbath evening in Farwell Hall, Chicago, in the regular service held on that evening by the Y. M. C. A. The attendanee on the Saturday noon meetings has become so large that the managers are debating the subject of a larger hall.

—The reports at the American Board meeting last week showed receipts during the year of $590,996; expended for carrying on the direct work of missions, $557,245; cost of agencies, $9,007; cost of publications, $3,323; cost of administration, $20,961; leaving a balance in the treasury at the close of the year of $1,222. The appraised value of the securities pertaining to the Otis fund still remaining on hand is $318,406. The general permanent fund amounts to $163,047; permanent fund for the support of officers, $59,608.

—Just before sailing for Europe, Mr. D. L. Moody and his trustees, with some invited guests, dedicated the buildings connected with his Mount Hermon Boys' School in Northfield, Mass. The buildings cost $29,000.

—The Christian Observer of Louisville, Ky., is happy over the completion of the seventieth year of its existence. It began its career at the suggestion of the late Dr. Archibald Alexander of Philadelphia, under the name of the Religious Remembrancer.

—The German Theological Seminary at Crete, Neb., under Congregational control, is meeting with fair success. They have now $10,000 bearing 10 per cent. interest, and have just closed their year with $130 in the treasury after all expenses are paid. During the past year they have had a class of thirty young men, and next year expect to have a class of thirty-five. Every effort will be made to push the work and enlarge the influence of the Seminary.

—The London Record says: "The announcement of the murder of Mr. Schroder, a German missionary in Zululand, has unhappily been confirmed by the Rev. Mr. Weber, the superintendent of German Missions in this country. Mr. Horman, another German missionary living near Oham, who so recently defeated Cetewayo, is also reported to have been murdered. Since these missionaries were in no way partisans, their sad fate affords a significant commentary upon the state of the country."

—It is proposed to build a memorial church, probably to be located at Madura, in honor of Bartholomew Ziegenbalg, the first Protestant missionary in India. He reached Tanquebar in 1706, and completed the translation of the New Testament into Tamil in 1711. In 1714 he had gained three hundred converts, and he died Feb. 23, 1719, at the age of thirty-six.

—The Bishop of Liverpool, Dr. Ryle, shocked and angered the High Church and ritualistic part of the Establishment recently by reproving one of its incumbents and afterwards preaching in a Presbyterian church in Scotland.

—The 21st and 22d days of the present month have been appointed as days of prayer both in this country and in Europe for a blessing upon the Sabbath-schools. This allotment appeals with power to the heart of every Christian, and will no doubt receive universal approbation and appropriate action.

—The Count Campello, the prominent priest who left the Roman Church over a year since, has not justified the hopes that were entertained of him by Protestants. He is now treading in the footsteps of Pere Hyacinthe. He claims to be an Old Catholic.

—In the Turkish Empire there are the following missionary agencies: thirty central stations, five colleges for giving ordinary education, and others for theological purposes; 121 churches, 400 preaching stations, 900 pastors, teachers, and other Christian workers; 60, 000 regular attendants at their places of worship, of whom 10,000 are communicants.

—Persistent attacks upon Christianity in a Moslem paper in Constantinople, at once false and bitter, following week after week, have had, it is said, the effect to mightily increase the sale of the Scriptures. In a few weeks the sale has equalled that of one-half the last seven months.

—A correspondent of the Interior writes from Canton, China, that the decline in idolatrous worship is so evident as to be observed by non-Christians as well as by Christians. The decrease of worshippers at the prominent temples is marked. These temples are leased to companies who receive the proceeds of worship, paying sometimes six or seven thousand dollars yearly rent. Now the leases go begging, so great has been the decline of income. The wide-spread preaching of the gospel is affirmed to be the cause of the change.

—The Cumberland Presbyterians are about to establish a school for the education of their ministry among the Choctaws and Chickasaws of the Indian Territory. They call for $40,000 to start it. Already seven licentiates and six candidates, all full-blooded Choctaws, are under the care of the local Presbytery, and will enter the school.

—The Shah of Persia has granted permission for the Presbyterians to erect a chapel for the use of the Protestant community in Teheran on the following conditions, viz.: that Musselman children shall not be admitted to the chapel, and that no other Mohammedan, of whatever age, be allowed to attend service or receive religious instruction there.

—The Paine memorial, a building in Boston, for some years past known by that name, in honor of Thomas Paine, is now named Appleton Chapel, and is opened for Christian worship.

—The Italian Government seems to be deeply moved by the kind treatment extended to Lieut. Bove and his command by the Patagonians, who are under the instruction and influence of Christian missionaries. The Lieutenant, who belongs to the Italian navy and was conducting an Antarctic expedition, lost his ship at Terra-del-Fuego, and expected violence from the people, who have earned the reputation of being especially ferocious savages; but to his surprise, he was treated with abounding kindness. The secret of the great change of character was found to be in the presence and successful work of a Christian mission.

—At a meeting of the Executive Committee of the U. S. Evangelical Alliance, held Tuesday, October 22, 1883, it was unanimously resolved,

"1. That the Evangelical Alliance in the United States commend to the people of this country to unite in the celebration of the fourth centennial of Martin Luther's birth-day, on the 10th of November next, by giving thanks to God for the blessings of the Reformation, especially for the free circulation of the Word of God, and for religious liberty.

"2. That ministers of the Gospel throughout the United States be respectfully recommended to commemorate the event by a sermon on the Reformation.

"3. That a committee be appointed, with power, to make arrangements for a Luther celebration in this city, and to issue an address on the subject to the people of the United States."

The following gentlemen were then appointed as this committee: Ex-officio, Hon. John Jay, President U. S. Evangelical Alliance; Rev. S. Irenæus Prime, D.D., Rev. Philip Schaff, D.D., Corresponding Secretaries; Revs. W. W. Atterbury, C. D. W. Bridgman, D.D., Arthur Brooks, C. F. Deems, D.D., John Hall, D.D., J. M. King, D.D., B. N. Martin, D.D., E. S. Porter, D.D., Roderick Terry, D.D., G. M. Wenner, Messrs. Franklin Allen, William E. Dodge, Gen. Clinton B. Fisk, Messrs. A. S. Hatch, Messrs. Kountze, R. R. McBurney, Jeremiah Milbank, Hon. Georgo G. Reynolds, Messrs. S. B. Schieffelin, and Cornelius Vanderbilt.

STURDY COUNSEL.

Rev. W. W. Knipple, a faithful and fearless minister of the United Brethren church, receives a liberal space in the Telescope, for a review of Bishop Weaver's "Outlook" published August 22nd. The brief extracts below help us to see with what feelings the undermining of secretism is regarded by some of the best men in that denomination:

"The bishop suggests that those who believe that our present law is not what it ought to be formulate a law, etc. I suggest that they first show up the consistency, if there be any, in conscientious opposition to secret societies and conscientious opposition to a prohibitory law against them."

"I am really sorry the bishop did not as clearly define his attitude to the church-law as he did to secret societies. "Why did he not?" A little light thrown into that corner by him might materially assist the brains of the church in formulating another law. I am pretty certain that there are thousands of poor hearts in this church that are aching for a distinct expression from the bishops respecting their opinion of our present law. And why do they not give it? I am persuaded that should our bishops personally and definitely declare themselves favorable to our present law it would materially paralyze the arm of opposition to law, and might prove a panacea for this whole trouble. For the last fifteen years they, [the anti-law party], have encouraged secretists to join the church on the presumption that the "next General Conference would wipe out that law." And since they find they can not wipe it out so easily as they supposed, they have adopted the "ripe-pear" theory—that is, pay no attention to the law but stuff the church with secretists until the enforcement of that law is rendered impossible, and then the law will drop out of its own accord. It is that class of men, and those in authority, who wink at their evil deeds, and then sanctimoniously wash their hands in innocence, and say all these things were done according to law, who are being denounced in bitter terms as outlaws. Some of us are becoming tired of this one-sided censure for all the trouble in the church. If I do not mistake the import of the outlook, it smacks loudly of this kind of censure. When the bishops in presiding over conferences can and do specifically question the traveling preachers on every other duty, but never a word of inquiry as to ridding their charges of seeretists, when they know such to exist, it is high time the church was raising its voice against such conduct. Though the discipline makes it the duty of the bishops to see to it that all the laws of the church are faithfully executed, I have never known one of them to ask a question respecting the existence of secrecy in the church, unless so required by special action of the conference. While some of them would make no one evil a specialty, they seem to make it a specialty to let this one alone.

The "liberals" have forced this subject upon us as a specialty, and some of us mean to meet it as such.

THE

A NEATLY PRINTED SIXTEEN PAGE WEEKLY JOURNAL, UNSECTARIAN AND OPPOSED TO SECRET SOCIETIES.

THE POLE STAR OF REFORM.

EVERY Christian, every Prohibitionist and every Patriot should read it for the following among other reasons:

1. Because it meets the wants of the general public by giving in brief the latest reliable information on all questions of Reform, having the special object of exposing and opposing organized secrecy. Besides able editorial, contributed and selected articles upon this topic, which is of more than national importance, it has interesting sketches of progress and incidents from the reform lecturers in all parts of the country, reform news and notes, letters from the Old World, etc., etc. It is the especial organ of this movement in America—a movement which is sustained by the utterances of some of the ablest statesmen and divines whom the country has produced. Every person interested in either the family, government, or religion—the most sacred interests of humanity—is directly affected by secret societies, and needs to keep posted in this movement.

2. Because it is uncompromising on ALL questions of the day. On temperance, tobacco, Sabbath desecration, Mormonism, the Southern and Indian questions, civil-service reform, monopolies, the rights of labor, and every other question, its only aim is to be RIGHT, and advocate the TRUTH. It is hence FEARLESS and OUTSPOKEN.

2. Because it emphasizes the fact that political action should be directed by conscience enlightened by the WORD and SPIRIT of God and that Christ must be acknowledged KING of NATIONS, and presents a platform epitomizing the science of civil governments based on the supreme authority of the DIVINE WORD.

4. Because, in addition to these features, it contains a choice selection of wholesome reading for the family, from oldest to youngest, with religious and secular news, market reports, etc.

It is now owned and published by the

Judge Whitney's Defense before the GRAND LODGE OF ILLINOIS. Judge Daniel H. Whitney was Master of the lodge when S. L. Keith, a member of his lodge, murdered Ellen Slade. Judge Whitney, by attempting to bring Keith to justice, brought on himself the vengeance of the lodge, but he boldly replied to the charges against him, and afterwards renounced Masonry. 15 cents each; per dozen. $1.25

Ex-President John Quincy Adams' LETTERS on the Nature of Masonic Oaths, Obligations and Penalties. Thirty most interesting, able and convincing letters on the above general subject, written by this renowned statesman to different public men of the United States during the years 1831 to 1833. With Mr. Adams' address to the people of Massachusetts upon political aspects of lodgery; an Appendix giving obligations of Masonry, and an able Introduction. This is one of the most telling anti-secrecy works extant, aside from the Expositions. Price, cloth, $1.00; per dozen, $9.00. Paper. 32 cents; per dozen, $3.50.

History of the Abduction and Murder OF CAPT. WM. MORGAN. As prepared by seven committees of citizens, appointed to ascertain the fate of Morgan. This book contains indisputable, legal evidence that Freemasons abducted and murdered Wm. Morgan, for no other offense than the revelation of Masonry. It contains the sworn testimony of over twenty persons, including Morgan's wife; and no candid person, after reading this book, can doubt that many of the most respectable Freemasons in the Empire State were concerned in this crime. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

Oaths and Penalties of Freemasonry, as proved in court in the New Berlin Trial. Also the letter of Hon. Richard Rush to the anti-Masonic committee of York County, Pa., May 4th, 1831. The New Berlin trials began in the attempt of Freemasons to prevent public initiations by seceding Masons. These trials were held at New Berlin, Chenango Co., N. Y., April 13 and 14th, 1831, and General Augustus C. Welsh, sheriff of the county, and other adhering Freemasons, swore to the truthful revelation of the oaths and penalties. 10 cents each; per dozen, $1.00.

Oaths and Penalties of the 33 De-GREES OF FREEMASONRY. To get these thirty-three degrees of Masonic bondage, the candidate takes half-a-million horrible oaths. 15 cents each; per dozen, $1.00.

IN THE COILS;

—OR—

THE COMING CONFLICT.

A NEW AND RAPIDLY SELLING BOOK IN OPPOSITION TO FREE-MASONRY.

We desire to call your attention to this useful work, and ask you to help us in its circulation. We want Agents to canvass every community.

By selling this book one can do much good. It is by such literature that we must expect to awaken a popular sentiment against secret societies, and overthrow them. By selling this book one can make money. Liberal terms will be allowed, and any energetic Agent can sell many copies. Masons will buy it from mere curiosity. Anti-Masons will buy it for the facts and arguments presented. Many will buy it to send to their neighbors. Those on the fence will buy it that they may learn the truth on the subject. Those not interested in the discussion, and young people especially, will buy it for the story.

"A book which we trust may have a wide circulation."—National Baptist, (Philadelphia.)

"It is an attack on Freemasonry with a sprinkle of Slavery thrown in to make it go down well."—A. R. Presbyterian, (S. C.)

"So intensely interesting did I find it that it was hard to pause until the last sentence was read. This work places the author high among the writers of the best class of fiction."—W. W. Barr, D. D., in Christian Instructor, (Philadelphia, Pa.)

"A charming work fit to be classed with 'Uncle Tom's Cabin,' it is indeed less a work of fiction. The volume is as valuable as a work of reference as it is agreeable, truthful and useful. Our young folks will not leave the book, if they begin it, till they 'see how it turns out.'"—Cynosure, (Chicago, Ill.)

The book is neatly and plainly printed, handsomely bound, 352 pages, thick paper. A specimen copy sent to any one contemplating accepting an agency for $1.10.

Single copy $1.50; Per Dozen. $15.00.

☞ IMPORTANT NOTICE.—This Special Limited Offer is positively not good on and after the limited time has expired, and to secure the Special Price the following NOTICE must accompany your order:—

Given under my Hand and Seal, this OCTOBER 18TH, 1883.

Daniel F. Beatty.

This notice, if sent by any reader of the CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE, together with only $45.75 or $49.75 CASH by P. O. Money Order, Registered Letter, Check or Bank Draft, mailed within five (5) or thirteen (13) days, as specified, I hereby agree to receive same in full payment for one of my Pipe Organs, New Style, No. 9,990, &c. Money refunded, with interest at 6 per cent. from date of your remittance, if not as represented, after year's use. Signed, DANIEL F. BEATTY.

My sole object is to have it introduced, without delay, so as to sell thousands at the regular price for CHRISTMAS PRESENTS, and to this end I am willing to offer first Organ as an ADVERTISEMENT, at a sacrifice, as every one sold sells others. All I ask in return of you is to show the instrument to your friends, who are sure to order at REGULAR PRICE, $115.00. The instrument speaks for itself, it sings its own praises. IF YOU ARE UNABLE TO ACCEPT THIS OFFER NOW, WRITE ME YOUR REASONS WHY.

☞ Friends of yours may desire an ORGAN. Call their attention to this advertisement. If they are from home mail this offer to them. If you can conveniently help me extend the sale of these POPULAR INSTRUMENTS I shall certainly appreciate your efforts.

☞ You should, if possible, order within Five Days, thus securing the $4 extra. Remember, positively no orders for this handsome Pipe Organ will be executed for less than the regular price, $115, after the limited time, as specified above, has expired; thus, if you order within 5 days it costs $45.75, within 13 days, $49.75; after that date, $115 each.

IRISH HUMOR.

[From Chambers's Journal.]

We have it on record that an Irishman being about to join a company in the Confederate army during the last American war, was questioned by one of the officers: "Well, sir, when you get into battle, will you fight or run?" "An' faith," replied the Hibernian, "I'll be afther doin as the majority of ye does."

On the edge of a small river in the county of Cavan, in Ireland, there is—or used to be—a stone with the following inscription cut upon it, no doubt intended for the information of strangers traveling that way: "N. B.—When this stone is out of sight, it is not safe to ford the river."

But before we laugh at our neighbors, we may remember that even the above is almost if not quite surpassed by the famous post erected a few years since by the surveyors of the Kent roads, in England: "This is the bridle-path to Faversham. If you can't read this, you had better keep the main road." We are also reminded of a debate which took place in the Irish House of Commons in 1795 on the Leather Tax, in which the Chancellor of the Exchequer, Sir John Plunkett, observed with great emphasis, "that in the prosecution of the present war every man ought to give his last guinea to protect the remainder." Mr. Vandaleur said, "However that might be, the tax on leather would be severely felt by the barefooted peasantry of Ireland." To which Sir B. Roche replied that "this could be easily remedied by making the underleathers of wood."

HORSFORD'S ACID PHOSPHATE.

In Seasickness.

Prof. Adolph Ott, New York, says: "I used it for seasickness, during an ocean passage. In most of the cases, the violent symptoms which characterize that disease yielded, and gave way to a healthful action of the functions impaired."

—The Domestic Journal, which has been studying our nation's wealth, says: "The position which the United States holds among the nations of the world is clearly shown by the wonderful fact that one-fifth of the wealth of the seventeeen principal countries of the globe is credited to this Republic, which has only just entered upon the second century of its existence. The wealth of the United States equals the combined valuation of Italy, Spain, Portugal, India, South America, Turkey, Egypt, Sweden, Norway, Canada, Australia, Denmark, and South Africa. It exceeds the wealth of Germany and Russia combined. It is equal to the wealth of Great Britain, Canada and Australia. Agriculture has been the main factor in this marvelous increase of natural wealth.

—They were called the belles of the boarding-house because they were lean and ugly and ill-natured, and yet hopeful of escaping the painful isolation of old maidenhood. They sat on opposite sides of the table and affected a civility toward each other which they did not feel. "Dear me!" observed the elder of the two, one evening at dinner, as a dish of September corn was passed to her, "I can't eat such stuff as that. It's only fit for chickens." "Well, then," amiably added the other, "you've got a good reason not to touch it; for you know you're no chicken."

Weak people should use Samaritan Nervine, the great nerve conqueror.

WHAT EMINENT ST. LOUIS PHYSICIANS SAY:

Preventive of Maleria.—Colden's Liquid Beef Tonic is a very agreeable article of dict, and particularly useful when tonics are required, being tolerated when other forms of animal food are rejected. In Diphtheria, Ague, Malaria, Typhoid Fevers, and every depressing disease, its use will be attended with great advantage. We have prescribed it with excellent success. J. H. Leslie, M. D.; G. P. Copp, M. D. S. B. Parsons, M. D.; R. A. Vaughan, M. D.; Drs. S. L. and J. C. Niedelet; Wm. Porter, M. D.; and many others. (Take no other.) Of druggists.

WHAT TOM MOORE SAID.

"Wrinkles are democratic and flatter nobody." The same may be said of all blemishes of the skin, whether caused by sickness, age or accident. "Glenn's Sulphur Soap" will at least retard the time when wrinkles make their appearance, by keeping the skin of a velvet softness, improving its elasticity, and preserving its healthful appearance. It gives a pearly aspect to the skin, which cannot be distinguished from the natural hue of a pure blonde complexion. Beware of counterfeits. See that "C. N. Crittenton, Proprietor," is printed on each packet, without which none is genuine. Sold by druggists and fancy goods dealers.

DR. JOHN BULL'S

Smith's Tonic Syrup

FEVER and AGUE

Or CHILLS and FEVER.

AND ALL MALARIAL DISEASES.

The proprietor of this celebrated medicine justly olaims for it a superiority over all remedies ever offered to the public for the SAFE, CERTAIN, SPEEDY and PERMANENT cure of Ague and Fever, or Chills and Fever, whether of short or long standing. He refers to the entire Western and Southern country to bear him testimony to the truth of the assertion that in no case whatever will it fail to cure if the directions are strictly followed and carried out. In a great many cases a single dose has been sufficient for a cure, and whole families have been cured by a single bottle, with a perfect restoration of the general health. It is, however, prudent, and in every case more certain to cure, if its use is continued in smaller doses for a week or two after the disease has been checked, more especially in difficult and long-standing cases. Usually this medicine will not require any aid to keep the bowels in good order. Should the patient, however, require a cathartic medicine, after having taken three or four doses of the Tonic, a single dose of BULL'S VEGETABLE FAMILY PILLS will be sufficient.

The genuine SMITH'S TONIC SYRUP must have DR. JOHN BULL'S private stamp on each bottle. DR. JOHN BULL only has the right to manufacture and sell the original JOHN J. SMITH'S TONIC SYRUP, of Louisville, Ky. Examine well the label on each bottle. If my private stamp is not on each bottle do not purchase, or you will be deceived.

NIGHTS IN A BAR-ROOM

T. S. Arthur's great temperance book, complete and illustrated. By mail, 5c each; 50c per doz. By express, $3.50 per 100.

THE LIQUOR TRAFFIC THE GREAT SOURCE OF CRIME.

Leaves from the diary of an old lawyer.—By Hon. A. B. Richmond, author of "Court and Prison," etc. A book of intense interest, rivaling the famous "Diary of a Physician," and, in its truthful, terrible pictures of the power and crime of intemperance, excelling the well-known "Ten Nights in a Bar-room." The temperance issue of the present time is Shall prohibition be partial or entire? Shall the branches of the death-bearing tree be pruned and trimmed, or shall the tree itself be cut down and its stump be torn up by the roots? The answer of "Leaves from the Diary" is, "Cut down the tree, tear up the roots, leave not a shoot or shred behind." It is certainly a very strong and eloquent volume. Complete edition on fine, heavy paper, with colored lithograph of Sewall's stomach plates. By mail, 30c each, $3 per doz. By express, $20 per 100. Abridged edition, by mail, 15c; $1.25 per doz. By express, $9 per 100.

THE LIQUOR TRAFFIC AND THE SOBER CITIZEN.

An able and telling work, by Rev. J. H. Sherman, which brings out the effects of the liquor traffic in a new light. The following are some of the commendations of the first edition

"The author drives t' nails of conviction through and clinches them."—N. Y. Christian Advocate.

"Speakers and workers in the temperance field will find valuable aid in this pamphlet. It is crowded with convincing facts."—Zion's Herald

"One of the ablest reviews of the drink curse ever issued from the press."—The Morning and Day of Reform.

"The arguments are put in telling form."—Judge Pittman.

New revised and enlarged edition. By mail, 10c each, $1 per doz. By express, $6 per 100.

DRINKS FROM DRUGS.

A startling exposure of the liquor traffic, by El. Johnson. A book that cannot fail to arouse the American people to the gigantic swindle now being perpetrated. The writer was offered $10,000 by a leading brewer to keep still. Liquor not only doctored, but made entirely from drugs. Extracts from a whole library of secret books, giving receipts for making and doctoring; advertisements of essences, fac similes of labels, engravings, etc., etc. Claret, port, sherry, champagne, whisky, brandy, gin, rum, etc., all out of one barrel, and made at less than 25 cents a quart. Wine that never saw grape juice; cider that never saw apples; beer factories in place of breweries, fine cream ale without barley or brewing; whisky from arsenic; millions of gallons of liquor that pays no revenue tax. The farmer's corn and barley "all in your eye." A wholesale liquor store in a ten-foot square cellar; more French wine sold in New York City than is produced in the whole of France. By mail, 10c each; $1 per doz. By Express, $6 per 100.

W. C. T. U. ORGANIZATION AND WORK.

A book of general information on how to organize and run successfully a Woman's Christian Temperance Union. This book should be widely distributed among W. C. T. U. presidents, pastor's wives and other representative women. By mail, 10c each; $1 per doz. By express, $6 per 100.

HOME PROTECTION.

A lawyer's view of it. By J. C. Wells, attorney-at-law. The question of female suffrage for the protection of home ably discussed from a lawyer's standpoint. A book for the times. By mail, 10c each; $1 per doz. By express, $6 per 100

BAND OF HOPE RECITERS.

172 pages. 164 choice recitations of poetry and prose, containing some of the choicest bits of temperance material for the platform ever uttered, accompanied by an article on elocution. By mail, 10c each, $1 per doz. By express, $6 per 100

GENERAL TEMPERANCE SONG BOOK.

"Temperance Songs," a Book for Adult Societies.—Eighty-three choice pieces, both words and music (old and new tune combination) choice selections from standard temperance collections; many choice new pieces. Book carefully edited by David C. Cook. Will prove just what is wanted by every temperance society. Price in strong cardboard covers, by mail, 10c each; $1 per dozen; by express, $5 per 100.

TEMPERANCE ANTHEM BOOK.

Temperance Anthems.—A new idea; nothing else of the kind in existence. Will insure good music by the choir at temperance meetings. Forty-eight pages of choice anthems by ablest writers. By mail, 15c each; $1.50 per doz. By express, $10 per 100.

BAND OF HOPE SONG BOOK.

Band of Hope Songs.—Fifty-seven choice pieces for juvenile temperance gatherings, Bands of Hope, etc. Old, familiar tunes, also choice new words and music. Words far in advance of anything else issued. By mail, 8c each; 75c per doz. By express, $4 per 100.

DANIEL'S BAND.

A temperance concert exercise, with parts suitable for all ages; entirely new. Songs, recitations, dialogues, etc., of a thoroughly aggressive character; sure to carry weight with the rendering of it. By mail, 5c each; 50c per dozen, By express, $2 per 100.

THE COLD WATER ARMY.

For a primary temperance concert exercise. An entirely new exercise, containing songs and recitations, dialogues, etc., suitable for primary scholars. A pleasing and telling concert on temperance. By mail, 5c each; 50c per dozen. By express, $2 per 100.

THE PERSIAN SEAL BINDING

Is very handsome and durable. It is this style of binding which is so much admired by Bible readers. Please notice particularly that these Bibles are kid lined and silk sewed. Many Bibles in this style outwardly are lined with black paper and sewed with thread in place of silk.

$2.30 PERSIAN Seal.

For $2.30 we furnish a small size Oxford, bound in Persian seal, full flexible; can be bent back, doubled or rolled, without injury. Divinity circuit, gilt edges, kid lined, silk sewed, with book-mark and band. Postage, 10c.

For $3.30 The same style of binding, medium size. Postage, 12c.

For $5.75 The same style of binding, large size. Postage, 20c.

LEVANT MOROCCO BINDING.

The Persian Seal bindings are the best kept by most Bible dealers, and usually pass for the best teachers' Bibles made; and, to all appearance, they are so. There is, however, a better wearing binding, of which the Persian Seal is a good imitation; this is known as "Levant Morocco." In all respects the Levant morocco Bible corresponds with the Persian Seal description, except as to leather used for cover which, though looking like the Persian Seal, is stronger, and will last a lifetime.

Prices on genuine Levant Morocco bindings:

For $4.50—Small size. Postage, 10c.
For $5.50—Medium size. Postage, 12c.
For $8.00—Large size. Postage, 20cts.

Handsome Gift Bibles at Low Prices.

For 45c. Embossed morocco cover, gilt edges, gilt title on back. Very neat and durable. This is the handsomest 45c. gift Bible we have ever seen.

Postage, 5c.

For 60c. Morocco cover, brass bound and plated, with handsome gilt clasp and gilt edges; two patterns; square and round corners. Exquisite lettering on side; printed in large clear type. Bibles no better are sold as high as $1 and $2. Postage, 6c.

For 70c. Similar size and style of binding to our 60-cent Bible; square corners, brass bound, with clasp and handsome tasseled book-mark; also medallion inserted on side in gold and red.

This was a new importation with the fall of 1882, and a very pretty design. It should be seen to be appreciated. (See cut.) Postage, 6c.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

—The National Agricultural Department reports state the corn average has fallen six points since the 1st of September, which then reached 84, and place the yield at about 1,600,000,000 bushels. The wheat yield is averaged at two and one-half bushels per acre less than last year, and the total crop may reach 420,000,000 bushels. Oats, barley, and potatoes are above the average yields.

—A Washington dispatch states that Major General Hancock will succeed Lieutenant General Sheridan in the Division of Missouri; Major General Pope will succeed General Hancock in command of the Division of the East, and Major General Schofield will remain in command of the Division of the Pacific.

—Surgeon General Charles H. Crane, of the United States army, died at Washington, Wednesday morning.

—Secretary Folger has decided to accept the terms of compromise offered by A. C. Hesing in settlement of the judgment against Hesing held by the government. The amount involved was $80,000. The amount offered in compromise is $2,700. In accepting the offer the Secretary acted in accordance with the recommendation of Mr. Jewett, of Chicago, who was the special United States attorney in the case, and Kenneth Raynor, Solicitor of the Treasury.

—The City Health Inspector of Chicago, reports that he found at the Union Stock Yards on Thursday nine head of cattle infected with cancer. and had them slain. Friday he found seven additional cases. The part of the animal most commonly the seat of cancer is the tongue, but some of them he found to have large sores on their sides and necks. The cattle affected came from various parts of the country.

—The divorce business in the courts of Chicago on the 6th inst. was probably the largest that was ever transacted in one day in the history of Cook County. Judge Gardner's docket contained forty-three cases, Judge Tuley's twenty-one, and Judge Moran's two, making sixty-six cases; and nearly all of them were heard. For four hours the stream of applicants poured in, told their stories and filed out again.

—The Pittsburgh (Pa.) despatch says: The National Association of Window-Glass Workers, now engaged in a strike against a reduction of wages, have formed a combination with $1,000,000 capital for the purpose of entering into the manufacture of glass in opposition to their late employers. A party of fourteen window-glass blowers left for Belgium believing that they can make as much there as here.

—An excursion of about 500 members of the Oregon Pioneers' Association, a representative body of men from that State, arrived in Chicago. Many of the party will visit old-time friends in this and neighboring States, while about 150 will go on to New York.

—Last week Monday night a cyclone struck Arcadia, Wis., destroying property valued at $15,000, and injuring many persons, none fatally. During the prevalence of the storm the electricity was so powerful that lamps or candles would not burn, and a sulphuric odor pervaded the atmosphere.

—A locomotive on the Boston and Lowell road, from which the engineer and fireman had jumped, (without shutting off the steam) upon colliding with a freight train, ran of itself into the Lowell (Mass.) depot Monday, dashing down a cellar beneath the express office, and killing Mary Nuter.

—Advices from Mobile state that the physicians at Pensacola find it inconvenient to report yellow fever cases to the health authorities, and that there have been a dozen cases at Pensacola in the past two weeks. For this reason, Mobile has again declared quarantine against Pensacola.

—Six children of John Stouffer, of Ligonier, Pa., were poisoned Wednesday by eating weeds, two fatally.

—This has been the worst season for white fishing for seven years, and hundreds of families, dependent on this lake industry, are left in poor circumstances for the winter. Fancy prices are now being offered for this fish by New York dealers.

—The earthquake in San Francisco, Tuesday night, shook buildings severely and cracked metallic roofs. Half-dressed persons rushed from residences and hotels, and many walked the streets all night as a precautionary measure. Other shocks occurred Wednesday morning along the coast.

—Henry M. Stanley, the African explorer, writes to a Boston friend of fresh explorations and new discoveries in the Congo region. In the equatorial districts he finds the population very dense, which, if it were uniform, would give about 49,000,000 people in the equatorial basin of Africa. He says the natives are born traders, that their products would repay transportation, and that tribes between whom he made peace elected him father and mother of their country.

—John F. Samuels, half brother of Frank James, attempted to kill a hack-driver at Kansas City Thursday night because he wanted his pay, and was arrested. In Samuel's pockets were found letters, alleged to have been written by Frank James from the Gallatin jail, in which the notorious bandit expresses the hope that he will soon be free, and intimating to Samuels that he will again "take to the saddle," and adopt the outlaw's mode of existence.

—Near Moorhead, Minn., Wednesday night the upper floor of a granary holding 400 bushels of oats collapsed, burying fourteen men, members of a thrashing crew, who slept beneath. Six were crowded through the side of the structure by the pressure, but before the others could be rescued five of them were suffocated.

—Haytian rebels pillaged and burned stores and houses in Port-au-Prince, a few days ago, killing all who resisted. Two generals were among the slain. The rioters were finally driven out.

—Eleven trading schooners with armed men recently drove off the American guardship Leon at the island of Tjulenij, one of the Aleutian groups, and took possession. There were some Japanese among the invaders.

—Anarchists poured a bucket of petroleum over a policeman at Lyons, France, and set him on fire. The man was terribly burned. The mob afterward attempted to fire the stables of the municipality.

—The assurances and explanations of President Grevy being deemed sufficient, Spain has notified its foreign Embassadors that the Alfonso incident is at an end.

—The anniversary of the discovery of America was celebrated at Madrid Friday evening at the Opera, representatives of the American Republics being present. A statue of Columbus was unveiled at the close of the festivities.

—The New Orleans National Bank has brought suit against the Postmaster General for $100,000 damages, alleged to have been sustained by reason of his recent order directing that money orders addressed to the bank, but intended for a lottery company, shall not be delivered. The plaintiff considers that the order was intended to charge the bank with fraudulent practices and illegal action, and has seriously damaged its business.

The revival of Lutheran memories with the celebration of the 400th anniversary of the birth of the great German reformer revives also the hostile spirit of the Catholic press, to whom Luther is ever a moral monster. The Catholic Review designates him as the "dissolute father of Protestantism." But no Protestant familiar with Luther's life will ever cease to render thanksgiving for a man whose work of dissolution acted so effectually upon the bonds of superstition and priestcraft which were then cast about the souls of men by the power of the papacy.

The decision of the United States Supreme Court last week, declaring the "Civil Rights" law unconstitutional, is one of the most important and sensational that has for some time issued from that sedate body, and the fact that Judge Harlan alone dissented makes it the more to be noted. The Civil Rights bill was originally drafted by Prof. Langston at the suggestion of Charles Sumner, who carried it through Congress. It was based on the thirteenth and fourteenth Amendments to the Constitution. The argument of the Court is that these Amendments: 1, abolish slavery; and 2, confer citizenship and civil rights, and prohibit States from abridging the privileges of citizens as such. They do not confer social privileges, which, it is argued, it is the purpose of the Civil Rights bill of 1875 to do. Judge Harlan in giving his objection, very properly hesitates to oppose the opinions of his eight colleagues, but believes that the condemned bill embodied what the people of the country "wished to accomplish, what they tried to accomplish, and what they believed they had accomplished by this legislation." No doubt he is correct, though the majority of the Court interpret the letter of the law. But whether social differences and prejudices can be abolished by act of Congres in a question that no one will pretend to answer in the affirmative. This is a work better left to the transforming power of Christian love. A most noble example of the working of this spirit was shown in the National Woman's Congress meeting in Chicago last week, where the speaker who was most warmly applauded was Frances Harper, a colored woman, whose eloquent and moving appeal for colored women was one of the best portions of a noble meeting.

The great meeting of Catholic bishops in New York city whose objects and debates were kept profoundly secret, has published a part of its deliberations as a pastoral letter. This letter is of great length and devotes a large space to the secret orders, which begins: "Another most important question which has occupied our serious consideration during this Provincial Council has been the nature and evils of secret societies. Guided by the example of sovereign pontiffs, as well as by our experience of past years, which have impressed upon our minds so many sad lessons, we earnestly beseech you to regard secret societies as societies with which you cannot be connected or which you cannot, in any way, abet or encourage." The New York Witness remarks upon this portion of the address that it is "sound and sensible, if the word 'Christian' be substituted for the word 'Catholic.' It cannot be too severe on such societies as set up a mockery of religion in the shape of a Christless ritual and thereby lull souls into a spurious sense of security which can only, if continued through life, terminate in hell."

Mr. Talbot, editor of the Railway Age, of this city, has just returned from a trip of two months through the Northwestern Territories and the British possessions. Mr. Talbot was also secretary and manager of the great Exposition of railway appliances here last spring, and made his journey in his private car donated by the exhibitors in that wonderful display. He brings back word from the new Pacific railway, now pushing westward from Manitoba, that it is probably being built more rapidly than was ever before known in the history of railway construction, and at the same time the work is done in the very best manner so that high rates of speed may be safely maintained over the whole line. The reason for this superiority he gives thus: "The great secret of the rapid progress made lies in the fact that the government absolutely prevents the introduction of intoxicating liquors into the Northwestern Territory, as well as the carrying on of the nefarious business of gambling. It may seem strange that the 300 men who constitute the mounted police of the Northwest Territory are able to actually prevent these two great evils from entering its lines, but such is the fact, and not only do they do this, but they keep under perfect restraint more than 20,000 Indians and the entire population. To the fact that the army of men employed in building this railway have been unable to indulge the taste for liquor, or the desire to gamble away their earnings, I attribute the possibility of the rapid railway building which has attracted the attention of railway men and contractors everywhere to this road. It has been possible to rely implicitly upon the best services of every man put upon the pay-roll, there being no temptation or opportunity which could result in loss of time or impairment of energy."

—Among the callers at the Cynosure office last week were Rev. J. A. Richards of Kansas, on his way to the Wesleyan General Conference, Elder Miles Grant of Boston, and Captain William Wilson of Menomonie, Wis. Captain Wilson is deeply interested in the success of the State convention to be held Nov. 6th to 8th at his home, and Elder Grant most heartily endorses the work in which the N. C. A. is engaged.

THE PRESENT CONTEST IN MASSACHUSTTS.

BY GEN'L J. W. PHELPS.

The chief interest to us Anti-masons in the presen political contest in Massachusetts consists in the part which is being played in it by the Masonic lodge. The history of the conflict from this point of view is chiefly as follows: The lodge is naturally a political agency which pertains to the Democracy. But from about the year 1852 the present Republican party stole the lodge from the Democracy through the plausible trick of Knownothingism. The desperate efforts, therefore, which are now being made in Massachusetts under Sovercign Grand Inspector General Butler of the thirty-third degree is to recover back the possession of the lodge to its former and rightful owners, the Democraey. This it is which renders the strife so intense, and which gives Gen'l Butler his dashing, brilliant buoyancy of confidence in ultimate success; for no one knows better the power of the lodge for sustaining unprincipled political leaders than he, himself. He knows too, what a weakening, corruptive effect it has had upon the Republican party which has unfortunately resorted to its use. The General judges rightly that the disgrace which the Republicans charge him with having brought upon the State of Massachusetts is due to the fact that the Republican party which lays express claims to respectability has been dealing in Masonic tricks so long as to have become wholly drugged and stupefied by them. He knows too, that the people are not aware of this fact; that they have been taught to believe that Freemasonry is far better than Puritanism, and that he, himself, therefore is safe in making use of Freemasonry however disgraceful it may be. However bad the General himself may be, he knows that any people who have given themselves over to the practices of the Masonic lodge are not respectable, and that their own batteries can be easily turned against them.

As Kansas and Nebraska were the battle-ground of 1856 against the slave-power for the unity of the nation, and in which the lodge was wrested from the Democracy to serve the Republican party, so now Massachusetts is the battle-ground of the national election of 1884, on which the Democracy aims at recovering the lodge for its own use and purpose. Sovereign Grand Inspector General Butler is leading the advance column in this attack upon the Republican strong-hold; and if he wins the day in Massachusetts, the Democracy may well hope to come in possession again, and forever, of its favorite political force, the Masonic lodge.

As a proof of the demoralizing effect which Freemasonry has had upon the character of Massachusetts since the resort that has been made to the lodge by its respectable people, we may refer to one single instance in recent literature. Any one who knows much of the character of John Quincy Adams, knows, 1st, that he was a perfect representative of American character; and 2d, that to write his biography without giving his Anti-masonic history a large proportion of pages would be very much like writing the biography of Luther without alluding to the Reformation. And yet a Massachusetts man has done this thing. If, therefore, a Massachusetts writer of note can be thus obsequious to the lodge, our reader can judge what condition the State must be in, and how justly founded are the hopes of Freemason Butler for success, both in the State election and in the national election of next year. The use of Freemasonry by the Republican party of Massachusetts has so weakened and demoralized the Puritan energies of the State that General Butler may well conceive the most sanguine anticipations of success. If the Democracy can regain possession of the lodge in Massachusetts, the prospects seem fair for its restoration throughout the entire country.

In view of these facts, our Anti-masonic party has been too long and too slow in comprehending its position and its duties. We ought, for the interests of the Republic, to hold the balance of power at this very moment. Neither of the two parties in the aseendeney can serve the Republic, any more than Mr. Morse could write a true history of John Quincy Adams. The quarrelsome contests of the two parties are of no more value to the country than the strife between two parties at a horse race, or between bulls and bears in Wall Street. The administration of the government under Messrs. Lincoln and Johnson has left the country under the sway of a universal Jacobinical democracy, of which the so-called two parties are but two factions, with neither of which is there any higher principle of action than plunder and power. It is of no possible consequenee to the interests of the Republic which faction wins, Republican or Democratic; the Republic must suffer from the sueeess of either; for the success of either means service rendered to Freemasonry, and any serviee rendered to that is certain to weaken and injure the Republic.

The wounds of the civil war cannot possibly be healed by Freemasonry. It is Freemasonry that has irritated those wounds and poisoned the blood of the body-politie. If those aggravated wounds can be healed at all, under the Republic, it is only by the principles and the appliances of the American party. Our appliances must be an appeal to the American vitalities of the South, and not to the quaek trieks and nostrums prescribed by Masonic politics. So bunglingly has the work been done under the lodge, that a rebreaking of the ill-set limb, and an incised wound upon the old unhealed one, are threatened as necessary measures for adhesion. Nothing short of abundant American vitality of the South can insure the salvation of the Republic.

The Masonic administration of the Republican party conducted the war against the slave-power as if the war was a mere political quarrel between two parties, and not as the result of violation done to the moral laws of the universe as well as to the Constitution of the United States. The slave-power, aided by the lodge, had imposed ignorant European voters upon the Northern States; and by the force of arms the Republican party returned the wrong by imposing ignorant African suffrage upon the South, neither party providing a universal education to go with this universal suffrage; and hence both parties under fatal Masonic counsels inflicted an injury upon the Republic.

A party or faction, acting from Masonic inspiration, cannot furnish an American administration of the Republic of the United States. We might as well come under the college of Jesuits as under the Masonic lodge. Louis XIV. with a Jesuit confessor constantly at his ear was not a less worthy representative of the interests and glory of France than a President of the United States would be of the interests of America if elected or sustained by the Masonic lodge. No American can ever do his country anything but a disservice by voting a Masonic man or a Masonic faction into power.

THE POPE'S LETTER ON THE HOLY ROSARY.

Protestants in this free country are apt to underate the influence of the sentiments which are current, and which are as hostile to their principles as ever were any two opposing armies. The encyclical letter of the Pope issued by "Our most holy Lord Leo XIII." (Yes, these are the words which head the letter, "Our most holy Lord!") may fitly be entitled to some consideration as proving the truth of charges against Rome which we are apt to imagine belong only to past history but which as truly claim full force now as ever they did in the dark ages.

The Pope says, "It has always been the habit of Catholics in danger and in troublous times to fly for refuge to Mary, showing that the Catholic church has always, and with justice, put all her hope and trust in the mother of God," and in his closing paragraph are these words, "We beseech God himself....through her....to grant you, venerable brethren, every heavenly blessing."

The Rosary consists of prayers to Holy Mary. The Rosary was "instituted by St. Dominic to appease the anger of God and implore the intercession of the Blessed Virgin Mary," and the Pope assures his people that St. Dominic had been "in fact guided by Divine inspiration," and gratefully (but comically to Protestants) says, "Thanks to this new method of prayers....piety, faith and union began to return and the projects and devices of heretics to fall to pieces." It had also been the cause of defeating "the vast forces of the Turks in the sixteenth century" near the Gulf of Corinth. For this "Queen of heaven" is a considerable fighter on earth. She is styled "Mighty in war," "Victorious," "Our Lady of Victories," and "Our Sovereign Lady did grant her aid" ....in the naval battle....and the "fleet gained a magnificent victory!" And important successes were thrice gained over the Turks which coincided with feasts of the Blessed Virgin and the conclusion of public devotions of the Rosary!

What can be plainer! The victories were obtained by the use of the Rosary! For "it is clearly evident that this method of prayer is particularly pleasing to the Blessed Virgin." Former Popes had declared it to be "a means of defence," the way to obtain "fresh boons" and "obviate impending dangers." How natural then is the exhortation to "all Christians to give themselves to the recital of the pious devotion of the Rosary publicly or privately....for the whole month of October in this year to the 2d November." And he desires Mass to be said at the altar, or the Blessed Sacrament exposed to the adoration of the faithful, and processions "through towns where practicable." As a reward for sueh pious observances the Pope assures the faithful ones that he grants them "Seven years and seven times forty days of indulgence obtainable each time." And further says he, "We remit all punishment and penalties for sins committed, in the form of a pontificial indulgence," and still further "a plenary indulgence;" and he prays "the Christian nations," to "cling more and more to the practice of the Rosary," so that "the heavenly patroness" being pleased thereby "will easily obtain" strength for the good and repentance for the erring, and that God the avenger of crime may be moved to pity and delıver Christendom, if necessary, by battles on land or sea as by examples given from its dangers: that is, of course, by returning to the Holy Catholic church of Rome, and especially this may be hoped for by repeating the Inspired Rosary!

Verily we need to read occasionally what the Pope says to realize what exists among us. That such rubbish should be presented openly to the world as the teaching of any church professing to believe in the Lord Jesus Christ is a sad commentary on the intelligence of the age. It seems more like the befogged wisdom of the darkness of lodgery or the teachings of its Christ whose Knight Templar swords are their glory and of its pretended secret symbolism, and reminds one of the wisdom of the old lady who knew that the dangerous Goodwin Sands were caused by the erection of Tenderton Steeple.

An interesting point is suggested by reading the Pope's Letter. The past political power of the church is despairingly referred to and its restoration is not regarded as hopeless if the Rosary is faithfully observed!

Political church power has been and is waning in Europe both in Catholic and Protestant countries, but it has been taking root and growing in our own country in a way likely to cause future trouble! There is willful blindness on the part of time-serving politicians, to the favors granted to Romanism; and some Protestants, instead of utterly opposing the wrong principle of state grants to churches, seem only eager to obtain like favors. Whatever may be the difficulty of drawing the line between the secular and religious domain or between the duties of the state and those of the church general, it behooves citizens to watch, and distinguish between them if they would guard our country from dangers akin to those inflicted by the state religions of the Old World.

Thousands among us believe that the church ought to give law to the state, instead of regarding the church of Christ as he placed it—having a government of its own, and forever debarred from assuming civil power or using any other sword than the sword of the Spirit, the Word of God. The visible church has no more right to fight with physical weapons than Peter had to use the sword which Jesus told him to put up. "For my kingdom," said he, "is not of this world else would my servants fight." Her members as citizens may appeal to Cæsar, but as Christians they are to live together as brethren, or abide by the judgment of their own authorities of membership, and the highest penalty the church of Christ can rightfully inflict is simply to withdraw from those who walk disorderly. T. H.

SHORT SERMON.

Text: He came unto his own, and his own received him not.

My Brethren: It is a sad, lonely, and darksome state of existence to be laboring for the good of men while these very men are either despitefully using you, or else are in total ignorance and unconcern of what you are doing for them. The darkness that envelopes one in this condition is worse than midnight darkness. This was the condition of the Saviour of the world. Though he came into the world to enlighten men as to the cause of their wretchedness and misery, and show them the way of truth and happiness, yet the great world, all excepting a few confiding followers prone to back-sliding, either strove to destroy him, or were unconscious of his presence, or the object of his labors. The very indifference of the world endangered his life as much as did the malignity of his enemies; for it enabled his enemies to take advantage of his labors to destroy him, those for whom the labors were done making no effort to defend or sustain him.

And so it is, though in far lesser degree, with the man who seeks to make known to the people the evils that are brought upon them by the Masonic lodge. The members of the lodge are all alert to check and destroy the man who strives to expose their villainy, while the people, accustomed to regard all Masons as very pious, good men, permit and even aid these Masons to villify and destroy whoever opposes them. The Masons fire upon him from their seeret ambuseade, and the unthinking world, taught to regard him as an enemy, laughs to see him fall. The lodge has drawn a dead line, beyond which it suffers no one to go; and so used is the world to regard this line as legitimate that they applaud whenever the daring Anti-mason who approaches it is struck down! Instead of turning with indignation against these miscreants of the lodge, they look up to them with favor, and approve of their villainy, and vote for them!

My friends, at the advent of our Saviour kings, priests, and Pharisees ruled the world, as Freemasons now rule the United States; and so deeply sunk was mankind in slavery, ignorance, helplessness, and sin, that they hardly lifted a hand to help their Saviour against these kings, priests and Pharisees when they nailed him to the cross. Are then the people of the United States no wiser than the slaves of two thousand years ago that they should remain indifferent, or even outrage their friends who are striving to expose the worse than Pharisee villainy of the lodge? Are we Anti-masons the true friends of the people, or are we their enemies? If we are their friends, the people will have a heavy debt to pay for the cold and negligent way in which they have received our efforts. We are either Americans or we are not Americans. If we are Americans, we have come to a people who have not received us. We offer American doctrines; and they are declined. Nay, our missionaries are mobbed and outraged, while the Mason is fawned upon, even as the most abject slave fawns upon his master.

My friends, you are told that you are free, and that the press is free. But do you know that it is almost impossible to get an Anti-masonic article into the average American press? No censorship of the press in Spain or Austria was hardly ever more stringent than is this Masonic censorship here in the United States of America in the years since the war of the Rebellion.

What! say you, is the great Tribune, the great Times, the great Herald, echoing with the roar of traffic in the great city, are these great political newspapers which are filled with such laudatory proceedings of the lodge, are these papers un-American? Are they all in the wrong? Must we believe a few Anti-masons and not them?

My friends, as Christian men, let me ask you, do you regard the conductors of these papers as any better, any wiser guides than the hucksters in the streets, or than any other persons whose object it is to turn a penny?

You must judge righteous judgment. The people of the United States could live and be free without the lodge or the newspapers that uphold it; but they cannot dispense with those moral principles which the lodge destroys. The newspaper that upholds the lodge is no better than the Pharisee, or high priest who upheld King Herod and Pontius Pilate.

My friends, believe me, if you are real Christians and Americans, the politicians who have sustained back-pay grabs, Credit Mobilier swindles, Star Route frauds, river and harbor jobs, fraudulent pensions, Indian war outrages, debased coinage, etc., etc., are not the men that you should vote for under any circumstances. So Mote it be!

CAN CHRISTIANS UPHOLD WAR?

What is the cause of this marvelous migration of mankind from Europe to the United States?

Let us look for a moment at Europe.

It is an armed camp; its entire able-bodied male population is liable to military conscription. Conscientious scruples of the individual against war are of no avail to him; he must leave his workshop, his field or his study, and taking a gun in his hand, war against his fellows, with whom personally he has no quarrel.

In England, of the five thousand two hundred and fifty-nine millions sterling total income to the government during this century, over thirteen-sixteenths of it, or upwards of four thousand four hundred and fourteen millions of it, have been spent on war, war debt and preparation for war!

The cost of European armaments is three billions sterling every year. The public debts of Europe, in consequence of this terrible drain, have increased seventy-five per cent. in fifteen years. Fifteen billions in money and two million lives have been wasted in six wars during this generation.

Here, then, is the cause of this exodus of people, fleeing from the land of their birth to escape military despotism—to save their lives and to find a home where there is some security for property. It is a state of affairs which calls for the interference of all Christian peoples. War is the curse of our civilization!

In our own country, we have seen during this generation enough of war to convince the most indifferent observer of its horrors and sinfulness. There is hardly an American family in the land but has suffered loss and grief from it.

Still, the churches do not raise their voices against it. Christian ministers even go out as "chaplains" to the field, with regiments whose mission it is to kill—slaughter thousands of their fellows!

"Thou shalt not kill."

"Whoso sheddeth man's blood, by man shall his blood be shed."

"The Gospel is the gospel of peace."

"Agree with thine adversary quickly."

"I am for peace, but ye are for war."

"Blessed are the peacemakers, for they shall be called the children of God."

Said Jesus unto Peter: "Put up again thy sword into his place; for all they that take the sword, shall perish with the sword."

"Love your enemies; bless them that curse you; do good to them that hate you."

It is difficult to see from such texts how Christians can uphold war, and engage in it. War is opposed to the genius of liberty; contrary to the teachings of Christ, and antagonistic to the spirit of Christianity. How, then, can Christian churches tolerate and support war?

Says Carlyle, in Sartor Resartus:

"What, speaking in quite unofficial language, is the net purport and upshot of war? To my own knowledge, for example, there dwell and toil in the British village of Dumdrudge, usually, some five hundred souls. From these, by certain 'natural enemies' of the French, there are selected, during the French war, say thirty able-bodied men. Dumdrudge, at her own expense, has suckled and nursed them; she has, not without difficulty and sorrow, fed them up to manhood, and even trained them to crafts; so that one can weave, another build, another hammer; and the weakest can stand under thirty stone avoirdupois. Nevertheless, amid much weeping and swearing, they are selected; all dressed in red; shipped away, at the public charges, some two thousand miles, or say only to the south of Spain, and fed there till wanted. And now to that same spot, in the south of Spain, are thirty similar French artisans, from a French Dumdrudge, in like manner wending; till at length, after infinite effort, the two parties come into actual juxtaposition; and thirty stands fronting thirty, each with a gun in his hand. Straightway the word 'fire' is given, and they blow the souls out of one another; and in place of sixty useful, brisk craftsmen, the world has sixty dead carcasses, which it must bury, and anew shed tears for.

"Had these men any quarrel?

"Busy as the devil is, not the smallest.

"They lived far enough apart; were the entirest strangers; nay, in so wide a universe, there was even, unconsciously, by commerce, some common helpfulness between them. How then? Simpleton! their governors had fallen out, and, instead of shooting one another, had the cunning to make these poor blockheads shoot."

Says Victor Hugo, in Les Miserables:

"It has been calculated that in salvos, royal and military politeness, exchange of courtesy, signals, formalities of roads and citadels, sunrise and sunset saluted every twenty-four hours, and in all parts of the globe, by all the fortresses and vessels of war, opening and closing of gates, etc., the civilized world fires every day one hundred and fifty thousand useless rounds. At six francs the round, this makes 900,000 francs per day. Over thirteen millions pounds sterling a year expended in smoke. During this time poor people are dying of hunger."

Well, then, let us now see what the early Christians thought of war.

"They who defend war," wrote Erasmus, "must defend the dispositions which lead to war; and these dispositions are absolutely forbidden by the Gospel."

Wickliffe wrote that it was wrong to take away a man's life on any account, and that war was "utterly unlawful."

Said the Bishop of Llandoff: "I am persuaded that when the spirit of Christianity shall exert its proper influence, war will cease throughout the Christian world. War has practices and principles peculiar to itself, which but ill quadrate with the rule of moral rectitude, and which are quite abhorrent to the benignity of Christianity."

Dr. Knox said that "morality and religion forbid war, in its motives, conduct and consequences."

"There is not a twentieth part," said Dymond, "as much direct evidence against the lawfulness of suicide as there is against the lawfulness of war."

The churches of to-day are battling against intemperance, dishonesty, laxity in morals, and most of the sins mentioned in the Bible; but what have they to say against this monstrous evil? Do the writings and teachings of the apostles show any congenity with war in any form? Does the New Testament contain by chance a solitary passage approving war? Did not the Prince of Peace prohibit it? During a long time after the death of Christ, his followers believed that the Saviour had discountanced war; and in consequence of this belief the early Christians refused to go to war.

"It is as easy," said a writer of the seventeenth century, "to obscure the sun at midday, as to deny that the primitive Christian renounced all revenge and war. The early Christians applied the precepts which the Saviour had delivered to them to war; and from the authority of these precepts, they refused to bear arms.

Maximilian was brought before the tribunal to be enrolled as a soldier. When asked his name, he said: "I am a Christian, therefore I cannot fight." He died before he would enter the army. Early Christians abandoned the profession of arms at whatever cost. Marcellus was a centurion in the army. While holding the commission he became a Christian; whereupon he then laid down his belt, declaring that "he could no longer serve." "It is not lawful," said he, "for a Christian to bear arms for any earthly consideration." For this conscientious fidelity to his Christianity, he was put to death. At the same time, Cassian gave up his office of notary in the Legion; he, too, was killed for his religious convictions against war.

Martin, of whom so much is said by Sulpicius Severus, was bred to the profession of arms. He, too, abandoned his office in the army as soon as he became a Christian. "I am a Christian," he said to Julian, "and therefore I cannot fight."

Justin Martyr and Tatian speak of soldiers and Christians as distinct characters. Tatian says that "the Christians declined even military commands." Clemens, of Alexandria, calls his Christian contemporaries the "followers of peace," and expressly says that they "used none of the implements of war." Near the end of the second century, Celsus charged the Christians with "refusing to bear arms, even in case of necessity." Tertullian, speaking of the legions of Rome, distinctly informs us that "not a Christian could be found among them." The early authors said, that the refusal of the Christians to bear arms was a "fulfillment of prophecy." Irenæus, who lived about the year 180, affirms that the prophecy of Isaiah, which delared that men should turn their swords into ploughshares and their spears into pruning hooks, "had been fulfilled in his time." "The Christians," he said, "have changed their swords into instruments of peace, and they know not how to fight." Justin Martyr said: "That the prophecy is fulfilled you have good reason to believe, for we, who in times past killed one another, do not now fight with our enemies." Tertullian, later, wrote: "You must confess that the prophecy has been accomplished, as far as the practice of every individual is concerned to whom it is applicable."

Looking back, then, at the example of early Christians, who suffered death rather than engage in war; looking at the plain teachings of Christ on the subject of war; looking at the ghastly, monstrous destruction in our own times; the expense, the bitterness, the horrible cruelties of war, where, I ask, does the Christian church to-day find excuses for its support of war? How can a Christian, much less a minister of the Gospel, enlist in the business of wholesale slaughter? How can a Christian minister put on the epaulets of an army chaplain?

James, the Apostle, testifies that "wars and strifes come from the lusts which war in the members of carnal men;" while Paul tells us that "the weapons of our (Christian) warfare are not carnal, but mighty through God." How long will the churches permit this terrible crime of nations—Christian nations!—to go unrebuked? How long will Christian churches allow their members to go out against their fellows in this bloody manner? How long, ministers of Christ's Gospel, will you countenance—nay, abet—this wicked, monstrous practice of governmental slaughter?—The American Reformer.

Thaddeus Stevens once said: "I believe in a God who presides over the destinies of men. I believe men are sometimes born for certain purposes. I was born to cry down slavery. I have done so for years, and God Almighty permitted me to live to see it abolished."

There is inestimable blessing in a cheerful spirit. When the soul throws its windows wide open, letting in the sun shine, and presenting to all who see it the evidence of its gladness, it is not only happy, but it has an unspeakable power of doing good. To all the other beautitudes may be added. "Blessed are the joy-makers."

THE SERMON.

A DISCOURSE TO SABBATH-SCHOOL TEACHERS AND PUPILS BY REV. C. C. FOOTE.

1 Timothy 4: 16:—Take heed to thyself and unto the doctrine; continue in them, for in doing this thou shalt both save thyself and them that hear thee.

First, to Teachers: Fifty years ago I entered upon Sabbath-school work, both as teacher and superintendent. And never was this work so momentous in my eyes as now. Could I have known then the truths and methods I am about to communicate to you, I deem it not exaggeration to say, the fruits of my labors would have been increased a hundred fold. Within the past few years I have employed these methods, with the happiest results, in many places where I have been called to labor.

In the annual report for 1882 of one of the largest and most successful denominational Sabbath-schools in the United States, it appears that out of 419,000 pupils of all ages less than three per cent were converted during the year. Do not these appalling figures demonstrate the necessity of a "new departure" for the salvation of Sabbath-school scholars?

Let us now inquire first of all what is the CAUSE of this meager success:

1. Placing pupils in the care of unconverted teachers. It is vain to expect that God will use one sinner to convert another.

2. It is not enough for the teacher to be merely a church member. If there is not a visible and manifest personal piety there will be ample reason for fruitless labor.

3. Teachers that have not a burning "passion for souls" have no occasion to wonder that their pupils are not converted. Their mission is to win the children of their charge to him who said, "The zeal of thine house hath consumed me" And if they have not his Spirit that fact is reason enough for their failure.

4. The absence of personal experience of the truths taught, or not being powerfully penetrated by the truth so that the heart's solicitude will be manifest in the very countenance and manners. Children are sure to detect the presence of indifference in their teachers, and to be fatally affected thereby.

5. It is not to be denied that the majority of teachers do not know how to pursue such a course of instruction as may reasonably be expected to secure the salvation of those under their charge. This may be deemed a hard saying, but it is undoubtedly true. What wonder then that Sabbath-schools are so largely a failure? There are many other causes for the sad failures that attend upon so many of the Sabbath-schools of to-day.

Well may the admonition of the text ring in the ears of Sabbath-school teachers, Take heed to thyself!

Second: Let us inquire now, What are the conditions of success?

1. Teachers must be thorough Bible students. This is a possible condition. The interests at stake demand this. Helps are at hand, and God will hold teachers responsible for a failure.

2. Teachers must regard themselves as divinely commissioned for the exalted work of winning their pupils to Christ, and therefore look to him in the full assurance of faith for such qualifications as he alone can give, and as in the nature of the case, he must delight to impart. There is, therefore, no possible excuse for the absence of all needed qualifications.

3. The teacher must be a conscious and constant recipient of the Holy Spirit and "enduement of power." They have the same right and the same need of this indispensable blessing as has the minister of the Gospel, and they can no more succeed in their calling without it than can he. The promise is freely made as an indispensable condition of success. God commands us to be "filled with the Spirit." If we do not obey it is our fault and sin; and a great sin. The Holy Spirit has come into the world to qualify all teachers for their work. The Lord Jesus commissioned his disciples to go forth as teachers of God's method of salvation for lost sinners. He knew the impossibility of success without the enduement of the Spirit, and therefore commanded them to tarry in Jerusalem until the Holy Ghost whom he had promised should come upon them; and they continued in the constant exercise of the prayer of faith till the promise was fulfilled. And Sabbath-school teachers should not rest day or night till they know they are the blessed recipients of this "ascension gift."

4. Teachers must expect success and know what success is; that nothing short of the salvation of their charge is success. This is the design of the Sabbath-school, and anything short of it is a wicked perversion.

5. Teachers should take heed that they do in no wise counteract their efforts by any inconsistency in temper, habits, spirit or manner. In all the intercourse of teacher with the pupils, the ruling desire for their eternal welfare should reveal itself.

6. Teachers should go to their classes from their closets and from their knees. Let all the teachers of the Sabbath-school do this, and the very atmosphere of the school-room will be, as it were, full of the Divine presence and power, so that the most spiritually insensitive will feel that God is there, and thus be awed into a state of spiritual receptivity.

Now, dear teachers, if you appreciate the momentous character of your work, and your fearful responsibility and accountability, you will not dare go to fulfill your mission without first securing the conscious aid and presence of the Spirit. Oh, if you would realize that every pupil you win to Christ will be a gem in your crown brighter than ever shone in an imperial diadem, how would your zeal be fired.

The Sabbath-school period of children is the golden opportunity of life for their salvation. Let that opportunity pass unimproved and the chances are fearfully against them. Comparatively few thereafter are saved. The earlier period is the easier and more likely of success. Fasten your faith upon the promise of the text, and take God at his word. Prove God, and your success is sure.

Third. What then are the "doctrines" or truths appropriate, and that the Holy Spirit will render effectual in the salvation of those that hear? The method of securing the salvation of children should differ but little if any, from the methods used in securing the salvation of adults, except in the simplicity of speech. Sinners, whether old or young, have to be convicted of sin, and led to accept Christ as he is revealed in the Gospel. But do not forget that truths which are effectual when presented by one person may prove an utter failure when presented by another, for lack of personal qualifications.

That I may the better present the truths I would communicate, I will address them directly to the pupils, as if present with them.

"Come, ye children, hearken unto me: I will teach you the fear of the Lord." Psa. 34: 11. How many in this school mean to be Christians before you die? You that do please stand up. Here you are all on your feet. Very well. Now if I will show you that this is the best time you will ever have to become Christians, and will show you how, will you now enter upon the Christian life? All you that will, raise your hands.

Nearly all have raised their hands.

I will now relate what God says in the Bible about you.

He says you belong to a depraved and ruined race, and that you are like the race to which you belong, wicked and ruined; that sin has rendered you unfit for heaven, that foolishness is bound up in your hearts, (Prov. 22), that when you knew God you glorified him not as God, neither were thankful, but became vain in your imaginations, and your foolish hearts were darkened. (Rom. 1.) You have learned from the Bible that God made you, and the world and all things in it; that he cares for all your wants.

You have learned that, notwithstanding God's infinite love and care, the whole race have rebelled against him. You are therefore, in rebellion against God. You have learned also, that God's compassion was so great that he gave his only and dearly beloved Son to die for you, that you might be saved. All this you have learned from the Bible: and yet, up to this time, you that are not Christians, have refused to live to please God, or to thank him or to give him your heart.

2. Now for this astonishing treatment of God you have no possible excuse. For all his love and care you have returned to him ingratitude. He says he has nourished and brought up children and they have rebelled against him, and that means you. (Isaiah 1: 2). And this is your great sin and wickedness, for which God blames you. Can you render any excuse for all these sins? No, indeed!

You treat God thus wickedly, because you choose to; because you want to, that is, because you choose to please and gratify yourselves rather than to please God. And this proves positively that you do not love God; for if you did you would love to please him; and God says those that do not love to please him are his enemies; and Jesus says, "Those that are not with me are against me." And when the Bible says that every imagination of the thoughts of the heart was only evil continually, (Gen. 6.), and when it says that the heart is deceitful above all things and desperately wicked, (Jer. 17.); that "they made their heart as an adamant stone," (Zech. 7.), and that "they consider not in their hearts that God remembers all their wickedness," (Hosea 7.); and that "he knows your manifold transgressions and your mighty sins," he means you every time. And when Jesus says, "out of the hearts of men proceed evil thoughts, murders, covetousness, wickedness, deceit, pride and foolishness" (Mark 7.), he means your hearts; and dreadful as this is, it is only a part of what he says is in your hearts. And when the Bible says, "The carnal mind is enmity against God," (Rom. 8.), it means your hearts are enmity against God. And fearfully great and multiplied as your sins are, the greatest of all is your refusal to become the loving disciples of the dear Lord Jesus who died for you.

4. Now you must know that these terrible sins of which you are guilty, and for which you must perish forever, if you do not renounce them, are not a misfortune, but blameworthy; for which you have no apology or excuse to render to God, because they are voluntary, i. e., you choose to be what you are. If you do not see and feel and acknowledge that this is true of you, you cannot be saved. The Jews denied and covered their sins, and therefore perished in them, as you must do, if you do not confess yours. A proper knowledge of your condition will break your hearts with anguish and flood your eyes with tears; and you will cry out in the greatness of your grief as tens of thousands of children have, "What shall I do to be saved!"

5. You should know that the tendency of your sins is to rob God of your love and service, and to ruin the universe as well. Hence God does and must abhor sinners (Ps. 5 :5); and punish them (1 Cor. 6 :9). He must do this from love to the universe, and as the just desert of sin. Hence, dying as you are, in sin, you must be forever lost. (2 Thess. 1.) Well may Christians weep over you. Well may you weep for yourselves. When Jesus wept over Jerusalem he wept for you.

6. Some of you may think that because you are not worse than others you are not very bad; but God will not judge you by others, but by what he has said of you in the Bible. He knows that you have only to be placed among very wicked people a little while and you would be as bad as the worst. A young tiger appears harmless, but he has the same character and disposition as an old one; so it is not an improved life simply that you must have but a new, a divine life. A bad tree cannot bear good fruit of itself. The good fruit in a bad tree must come from a good tree by grafting. You can therefore do nothing to please God till you give him your hearts. God wants your love, your supreme affection placed on him; and that you submit your will to him and live to please him. This is the new heart because new objects of life and a spirit of obedience are chosen. God says, "My son give me thine heart," and this is the first thing for you to do. Prayer for a new heart without faith, repentance, and submission God will not answer. Faith is such a confidence in God as leads us to trust all we have, soul and body, for both worlds to his disposal; and as leads to love and obedience in all things.

7. You cannot be forgiven for your multiplied sins without repentance, i. e., godly sorrow that you have grieved and wronged God by your sins; and give up all sin and all love of sin in all forms forever; and choose and prefer the opposite of all sin as the end for which you live. There is no repentance without sorrow to God for our sins and forever turning away from sin. Being sorry for fear God will send you to hell is not repentance. Such a mistake would be fatal, for it is only selfish sorrow that "works death;" and yet many make this mistake.

8. Jesus said, "Except ye be converted and become as little children (i. e., babies) ye shall not enter into the kingdom of heaven." (Mat. 18.) A baby loves its mother more than all the world besides; it trusts its mother perfectly, and is happy to be with her, and loves her society more than any other—never hates or wrongs anybody, and is just fit to live in heaven.

Now, to be converted is to become like that little child. God wants you to become his children, and be to him like a little child so he can be your Heavenly Father; and Jesus your best friend, to forgive all your sins, to take away your guilt and the love of sin and to keep you from sin. And this he wants you to do now, for now is God's time, and the only time of which you are sure. The Holy Spirit is now striving with you to induce you to become Christians. And you see that you ought to become Christians now. If you refuse you will grieve him away, and that will greatly aggravate your sin. You promised if I would show you how you would become Christians, and I have made it very plain to you. If you are willing to become Christians you will now give yourselves to the Lord Jesus. For if you want to be Christians you will be, for God wants you to be Christians now.

And now I ask you will you give up all sin, God helping you, and give yourselves to God to be his children and live only to please him; to love him more than all else; to love what he loves and hate what he hates? Will you now take the Lord Jesus to be your Saviour, to love and serve him forever and have him put your name among his children? and this, not to get to heaven, but because you ought to, because it is right? So many of you as will do this please kneel down and offer this prayer:

Heavenly Father, I do now give myself to thee to be thy child forever. Be pleased to receive me, and take away all my sins, and keep me from sin, and make me thine forever, for Jesus' sake. Amen.

Now if you have sincerely done this then you are now God's children, you are Christians; God is your Heavenly Father, Jesus is your Saviour, the Holy Spirit is your sanctifier and teacher, and the Bible is your guide, which you will love and study. You will daily pray to God to keep you, you will love Christians and love to be with them.

"Now unto Him that is able to keep you from falling and to present you faultless before the presence of his glory with exceeding joy, to the only wise God our Saviour, be glory and majesty, dominion and power, both now and ever. Amen."

"And infant voices shall proclaim
Their early blessings on his name."

Dear Teachers:—You can read what I have said to the school in about twenty minutes; but I occupy a full hour in my addresses. You will see therefore that I have given but an outline of what I would say. Our Lord wove into his addresses illustrative stories to render his teaching plain and forcible. You will find this method equally useful.

"He that winneth souls is wise; and they that turn many to righteousness shall shine as the stars forever and ever."

WEST VIRGINIA RED MEN.

The Washington letter last week was to many readers of the Cynosure a revelation of lodgery which they are not likely to forget. But to clinch Bro. Hinman's argument that the possible and even probable developments of secretism were mirrored in the order of Red Men, read the following letter to the Wheeling, W. Va., Intelligencer, which is proof positive that the community outside the lodge have no defense from plundering and fraud simply because there are "good men" in secret societies, any more than honest miners and mine owners had in Pennsylvania because the Mollie Maguires, a sworn body of assassins, were members of the Ancient Order of Hibernians, and confessed and had their pardon from a priest. This letter to the Intelligencer is from Huffman, Barbour county, Oct. 14, and reads thus; mark it well:

Red Men of Barbour.—Sir:—I have been reading a great deal about the so-called Red Men, and the recent trials of Hoffman, Kittle and Price at Clarksburg, and I have also read the opinions of various newspapers in the State in relation to the order. It may be interesting to the public to know where and how the order had its beginning. The Red Men of Barbour county first organized in the Odd-fellows' hall at Belington. Nearly every member of the band was an Odd-fellow in good standing, and for this reason I think the name of the order should be Red Odd-fellows instead of Red Men. Among the membership of the order are some of the best citizens of this country, and in the first years of its existence it claimed to have done some good in disciplining some of the worthless characters of the neighborhood. But the band soon degenerated and was used as a means of inflicting the vengeance of the individual members on innocent persons. But the band is a thing of the past, and I hope this county will soon be the best in the State.

A Republican.

AN OPEN LETTER.

TO REV. WM. H. PRUETT, PASTOR OF THE FIRST MISSIONARY BAPTIST CHURCH OF WESTON, OREGON.

No. 2.

My Dear Brother:—In my letter of last week, for want of time and space I failed to meet all you asked for, neither did I say all that I desired, or all that my sympathy for you and your work impelled me to say. With the permission of the editors of our National organ, I address you again.

Are you aware, my brother, that you have taken up, or are about to take up, a great work; that you are declaring war on a foe who is able, as the worldlings look at matters, to laugh you and your efforts to scorn? Have you counted the cost? Are you prepared to meet the pity of those who ought to be your friends; the hatred and sly underhand opposition of your cable-towed brethren in the pulpits, the high places of our Zion? Are you prepared to stand up when your name is cast out as evil, or when you are treated with that half, or wholly, contemptuous pity voicing itself among your brethren: "Oh! He is a good, well-meaning brother; but a little cracked in the upper story, you know?" Are you, in short, of the stuff martyrs are made of? Can you live, labor, and die, if need be, for a principle of righteousness?

If you cannot answer from the heart these questions affirmatively, then God has not called you as a pioneer in this conflict with the Baalism and treason of the Masonic lodge. This work demands men, men of God, and men who feel that God's call is on them, and his Spirit in them, leading them forth to battle, and in his own good time to victory. Even the pastor of a church who would simply educate his own people in this direction, needs to be all I have suggested above. In order to instruct others, he must himself be instructed. Masonry is a study. The system must be studied thoroughly, and this is not the work of a day. With the books I named last week, "Ronayne's Mah-hah-bone," is indispensable. Whoever would lecture on the subject should be intelligent in the matter; fair and candid, and should be able to speak with authority. If a speaker is lacking here, the Masons will soon know it, and have him "on the hip.

If possible, a pastor who adds this to his ordinary work, should have his people at his back, or he may find a "fire in the rear," should he go abroad to attack the enemy. But if he cannot have this, still he must work out what God has put in him. But in order to success there must be organization—town, county or State—one, and if possible, all. Find men of the right spirit, and enter into combination with them. Unite your voices and your forces. Arm and equip, and then charge the enemy with a will and determination which shall assure him that the fight you have inaugurated means "death or victory!"

Give the people, generally, full, and constantly recurring doses of our Anti-masonic literature. Have them take the Cynosure. Give them our tracts and books, while your lecturers give them Masonry, pure and simple—in all its hideousness.

If any of your brethren in the ministry are like minded with yourself, join with them in raising a fund for a library of Masonic text-books, and let them go around among you, till you are prepared to use them against the craft. If you have any well-disposed laymen in your churches, take them and their pocket-books into fellowship, till you have all the material you need to open and carry on this warfare successfully; and above all, take to yourselves, that sword of All-Prayer, with which "Christian" put "Apollyon" to flight in the "Valley of Humiliation."

If God has called thee to engage in this reform, be of good cheer, my brother! The conflict may be hot; but the victory and the reward are sure. Mayhap I may have somewhat more to say to thee, and thy fellow workers.

Fraternally yours,

J. L. Barlow.

American Politics.

NOMINATIONS FOR 1884.

For President,
JONATHAN BLANCHARD,
OF ILLINOIS.
For Vice President,
JOHN A. CONANT,
OF CONNECTICUT.

PLATFORM.

We hold: 1. That ours is a Christian and not a heathen nation, and that the God of the Christian Scriptures is the author of civil government.

2. That God requires and man needs a Sabbath.

3. That the prohibition of the importation, manufacture and sale of intoxicating drinks as a beverage is the true policy on the temperance question.

4. That the charters of all secret lodges granted by our Federal and State Legislatures should be withdrawn, and their oaths prohibited by law.

5. That the civil equality secured to all American citizens by articles 13th, 14th and 15th of our amended Constitution should be preserved inviolate.

6. That arbitration of differences with nations is the most direct and sure method of securing and perpetuating a permanent peace.

7. That to cultivate the intellect without improving the morals of men, is to make mere adepts and experts; therefore, the Bible should be associated with books of science and literature in all our educational institutions.

8. That land and other monopolies should be discouraged.

9. That the government should furnish the people with an ample and sound currency.

10. That maintenance of the public credit, protection to all loyal citizens, and justice to Indians are essential to the honor and safety of our nation.

11. And, finally, we demand for the American people the abolition of electoral colleges, and a direct vote for President and Vice-president of the United States.

Mr. Fordyce of Jefferson county, Iowa, is elected to the legislature, though Odd-fellows, United Workmen, Order of Red Cross, Knights of Pythias and Masons were invoked by the Fairfield Journal against him, thus:

"Are you a Mason? Can you consistently vote for preacher Fordyce, an anti-secret society man, whose friends call you murderers?"

The Journal is the organ of secret society Republicans, and opposed Fordyce, the regular Republican nominee! It hates Gen. Wilson of the same town, because he is not reliable for the lodge, and hates Fordyce because Dr. Norris desired his election. We therefore rejoice in it.

—Elder D. S. Warner, editor of the Gospel Trumpet, Bucyrus, Ohio, sent to the N. C. A. office for American party tickets for election day, the 9th inst. They could not be furnished, but Bro. Warner's note may help to create a demand for them next time, which will be gladly supplied:

"By the grace of God I expect to spend election day at the polls, preaching the two great moral planks that the providence of God has permitted to enter our politics, i. e., prohibition and anti-secrecy. Any good condensed documents that can be made to tell on the spot for those two principles, please send us a supply. Your brother, for God, for truth and for humanity, with all my soul."

Senator McDonald says of the Ohio election: "One fatal mistake the Republicans are already making is abusing the Prohibitionists. They can't afford to slap the temperance people in the face when they have just cast 300,000 votes for prohibition. Without the temperance Republicans the party would be in a hopeless minority. Besides, these Prohibitionists are by no means discouraged—you can't discourage them."

KANSAS POLITICS.

CONFUSION OF TONGUES IN SABETHA IN BUILDING THE BABYLONISH TOWER OF REPUBLICANISM.

Sabetha, Kans., Oct., 1883.

Saturday the 6th inst., was the time appointed for the caucus to send delegates to the county convention. When they met they found two distinct and antagonistic factions in the Republican party; one, strong prohibitionists, the other, equally strong anti-prohibition; both claiming to be the Republican party. Now how is this difficulty to be settled? Can it be done in the way Solomon settled between the two women which was the mother of the living child? I can conceive of no other way, for the two principles are so antagonistic that they cannot be harmonized: while one is of heaven, the other is of hell, and there is no union between light and darkness, truth and error, sobriety and drunkenness, Christ and the devil.

And now, Mr. Editor, it appears to me that the American party should have compassion on those poor outcasts that are left homeless, those poor Jacobs who have been kicked out by the drunken Esaus.

A great many of these temperance Jacobs would, if properly enlightened, make good Americans. Let us be diligent in instructing them in the principles of the American party and put our temperance plank in our platform right before them, that, "the prohibition of the importation, manufacture and sale of intoxicating drinks as a beverage is the true policy on the temperance question."

Let us also put the fourth plank of our platform before the American people, that "the charters of all secret lodges, granted by our Federal and State legislatures should be withdrawn, and their oaths prohibited by law." It is evident that the granting of such charters is a direct violation of the Constitution, where it prohibits any titles of nobility to be granted." Look at the titles that have grown out of the granting of these charters, from that affixed to God himself, "I am that I am," to "Grand Puissant," "High Priest," "Noble Grand" and along down the line of titles till the English language is exhausted. O how men love to put themselves in the seat of God, to be worshipped above all that is called God!

And now, my dear Christian Republicans, will you, dare you, give your vote, your influence, to a party that has gone away from truth and God? "Woe unto them that have gone in the way of Cain and ran greedily after the error of Balaam for reward, and perished!" What was the way of Cain? He was a secret murderer. What was the error of Balaam? It was to curse God's people for reward. What is the whole secret system? It is precisely the same thing, and murder if you reveal it.

And now both the old political parties elect a vast majority of just such men to fill the highest offices in the government, and the law is fast becoming of none effect. O how true the language of Solomon, "When the wicked bear rule the people mourn." God has told us to choose out righteous rulers, men "fearing God and hating covetousness," and also they that rule over men must be just, ruling in the fear of God. Yesterday, while in conversation with a man of learning, esteemed in the church, a leading singer in the choir, our conversation turned on the Grand Army of the Republic. He remarked that if the soldier was not honored he did not know who was worthy. I replied that God alone was worthy, from the fact that both armies started into the war determined, to not interfere with slavery; but God so overruled that we were compelled to abolish slavery, or die as a Republican government. "Why," said he, "God has nothing to do in national affairs." This man is an Odd-fellow. This is lodge teaching, denying the authority of the Lord Jesus Christ, as ruler of the nations. These secretists are not content to deny his authority in the nation, but in the church also; and they initiate God's watchman free of charge into those secret orders under their blasphemous oaths, under no less penalty than to have their throats cut across, and by so doing, lock up their mouths forever on the subject; no difference how much evil they may afterwards see in the accursed system, they dare not open their mouths against it, hence the good man argument. They have got the good man fast—once a Mason always a Mason—completely sold to obey man rather than God, therefore all their influence is in favor of darkness and dethroning Christ, and that the religion of the lodge is superior to the religion of Christ. John Thompson.

THE OHIO ELECTION.

Mrs. Foster, fresh from the Ohio battle-field, says that she considers the result of the election in Ohio to be a grander showing for prohibitory sentiment and woman's work, than was the victory in Iowa. In Iowa the strongest Republican dailies were outspoken in their advocacy of the measure; the party thus throwing the weight of its influence—though the measure was non-partisan—on the side of the home and against the saloon. In Ohio no great secular paper espoused the cause, but on the contrary all opposed it. In Iowa the vote was taken at a special election, and no personal interests were involved. In Ohio the machinery of both great parties was employed directly and indirectly against the prohibitory amendment.

In Iowa only one measure and that clean and clear prohibition, was before the people; a voter must cast his ballot against the measure if not for it, or if he did not vote at all, he did not thus indirectly count one against it. In Ohio there were two measures—"prohibition" and "legislative control"—the latter a "catch all" for the timid good man, who had hardly the courage of his convictions, and also for the man who cared more for the Republican party and its support of its pet measure—the Scott act—than he did for the welfare of the commonwealth. Large numbers of these latter classes would, under the conditions of the Iowa election, have voted for prohibition. As it was in Ohio, they were counted against it. Also the very printing of the party tickets was intended, and did mislead many prohibition voters, through a cunning arrangement of the three amendments submitted, one entitled "the judiciary amendment," and the other two concerning the liquor traffic. And yet notwithstanding all these entanglements and Satanic combinations, over 300,000 votes are counted for the absolute prohibition of the traffic. It is the Lord's doing and marvelous in our eyes. The women were all day at the polls, or in prayer at the churches, or in their headquarters near each polling place. Scarce an unkind or unseemly comment was made by the rude throng who crowded, or the patient, intelligent citizen who came to cast his vote. Tired and solemn, but strong and triumphant in spirit, the women went to their homes at night having fought the grandest moral struggle ever waged in our time, and as one prominent politician puts it, having given, under God, the heaviest blow to the kingdom of darkness that it has received since the resurrection.—Union Signal.

Next Month's Elections.—The State elections yet to be held this year will take place on Tuesday, Nov. 6. The complete list is as follows:

Connecticut will elect one-half its Senate and its full House of Representatives.

Maryland will elect Governor, Controller, Attorney General, and legislature.

Massachusetts will elect Governor, Lieutenant Governor, Secretary of State, Treasurer, Attorney General, Auditor and legislature.

Minnesota will elect Governor, Lieutenant Governor, Secretary of State, Treasurer, Attorney General, and Railroad Commissioner, and vote upon three proposed amendments to the constitution of the State.

Mississippi will elect its legislature.

Nebraska will elect a Justice of its Supreme Court, and Regents of the State University.

New Jersey will elect Governor, part of its Senate, and its full House of Representatives.

New York will elect Secretary of State, Controller, Treasurer, Attorney General, Engineer and Surveyor, and both branches of the legislature, and vote upon a proposition to abolish contract labor from the State prisons.

Pennsylvania will elect Auditor General and State Treasurer.

Virginia will elect part of its Senate and its full Assembly.

SECRETISM IS "EARTHLY, SENSUAL, DEVILISH."

Maryville, Mo.

To all in Christ,

Beloved:—Some of you may now be in bondage to some secret power. If so, let me at once break the yoke and let you see for yourself the bondage you have been in; for this is a part of my mission (see Isa. 58:6). To be brief, let me select one class only in bondage, Freemasons. I will take but one case among them for illustration—a true husband who has a true wife. God has made them one. Now let me say in kindness, with the power of God resting upon me, that any power that interferes, interrupts, that annoys, or that has any tendency whatever to destroy this complete oneness between husband and wife, cannot be from God, but must be earthly, sensual and devilish. Now brother, if you are true to God, you must see that Masonry will not permit you to tell your wife all you know! Hence, how can she have your mind in full, as you always must have hers, if you truly are one?

Think for one moment. Here comes John home at 11 P. M. Poor Mary has been sitting up all alone these five long hours. As he returns Mary meets him at the door and says, "Dear husband, how glad I am that you have come! What in this world has kept you so long."

"Dear wife, I was at the lodge."

"Now, dear husband, I must know just what you did there this night; for you know that I love to tell you all that is in my heart. You know, John, I would not leave you alone these long, lonely nights. No, husband, there there is no earthly power could possibly hold me thus from your society. It may be when I know what kept you I will see the propriety of being reconciled. But I must know just what was done there to-night."

Now, Bro. John, no use talking. You know your wife's demand is just. Say no more. Take your Bible; turn to Leviticus 5:4, 5. Now, John, here and now I break this earthly, sensual, devilish yoke from your sore neck. Those wicked Masons hid from you the fact that you could not be a true husband to Mary. You see it now. Rejoice that you are free. Tell Mary all you know. Tell her that there are not lodges enough in, or out of, perdition to keep you from her blessed society not even one hour henceforth and forever on earth. Send a note to the lodge that you are free; to erase your name. Now, John, you can love Mary as Christ loves the church. You, Mary, now can reverence your husband. God bless you. Amen.

One word to all the Johns outside of all secret, earthly, sensual and devilish combinations: If you belong to Jesus you cannot belong to them. Remember God's order—if you are out, stay out—if you are in, Come out! The time has fully come when the redeemed are to keep away from the earthly, sensual and the devilish. O let us cling to the arm of our beloved Jesus; he will take us out of the wilderness of sin and schisms, and bring us as a united army, one of whom can chase a thousand and two put ten thousand to flight, while God's whole army being one in Jesus will appear more terrible to the armies of the world, the flesh and the devil, while led on only by the Spirit of God, conquering and to conquer, than all earthly military powers combined, with carnal weapons and banners. As reformers who need not to be reformed, let us arise and shine, for sure his light is shining all around us; for we can see, plainly see, "the abomination of desolation."

Let us begin at home, and see that all things are in order there. When in meeting for worship, let us learn how to behave ourselves in God's house, which is his church. To vote (if at all) as we pray, that our God may be acknowledged by this nation, the Bible fully restored to its proper place, God's holy day kept, and all the secret powers of earth overthrown. Let all the friends and subscribers of the Christian Cynosure renew your subscriptions with at least one new subscriber. Let us see what can be done by Jan. 1, 1884. Yours,

R. Smith.

BAND OF HOPE AND GOOD TEMPLARS.

Portland, Oregon.

Seeing weekly lessons in the Cynosure I surely thought the Band of Hope had no connection with any secret society; but it appears not so here. I am told the Good Templars furnish the badge, also a ritual subjecting them wholly to the order. The "Band" can have representatives if "he knows the secret track." This looks like a "trick of the trade," with its effrontery and insult to American ideas. I once saw a snake swallowing a toad; it seemed to have a wonderful capacity, with no regard for the rights of its victim. But then it was only acting out its own instinctive nature. Suppose the toad would swell to the size of an ox what a wonderful animal the swallower would be. How kind it would be then to furnish wind for the swelling, as well as to do the swallowing. Just so kind is this modern relative of the intruder in Eden. Let it boast, if it will, that the G. W. C. T. of the G. L. (D.) is a Quaker (Rev.) "Tell it not in Gath." How is it in the East? I think there is need of more "light" from the "East." Thos. C. Haines.

Note.—The Band of Hope Bible lessons which have appeared for some months in the Cynosure are from the pen of the gifted author of "Holden with Cords," who willingly makes this contribution to the reform. The lessons, as all have observed who have studied them, are prepared with great skill and are a very valuable contribution to our reform literature. They can be made of inestimable service in household instruction on the Sabbath day. They were begun originally for the use of a Band of Hope connected with the Chicago Christian Association which cares for our reform work in this city. Such Bands of Hope for the instruction of children in temperance and other reforms, can be established by any one. When managed by a Good Templar society it is of more importance as a stepping stone to that order than a means of establishing temperance principles.

BRIEFS.

A brother in Pleasant Ridge, Boone Co., Arkansas, N. W. Plymate, is eager to do some work for the reform. God bless the brave souls in the South and on the frontier who venture all things for the truth's sake.

"It would be a pleasure to me to distribute any Cynosure literature you may send me for such use. Would like a copy of the paper. Things are hot down here. I lecture some."

Our old friend Josiah Shaw, of Eau Claire, Wis., is reminded of a circumstance:

"In reading articles by Gen. Phelps and 'Old Soldier' I am reminded of an incident in our family. Our son who went into the army came back with a hard bullet scratch. Another son, an artist, was away at work, but soon returned home unexpectedly. Taking up a paper to read, he cried out, 'That's too bad.' I asked, 'What is it, Henry?' He said, 'They are taking the Union soldiers to drive the runaway negroes back into slavery. Now I came home to enlist; but if this is the way they do it, they will have me only when I can't help it'—and he went back to his work."

To show how diverse are the views and feelings of those who have observed the curse of lodgery and hope to see it abolished, the following letter is printed from one who advises that we "fight the secret societies and let the old church alone, and modify your regard for the Scriptures. They are a humbug."

"If you would modify your extreme Scripture, Protestant, sectarian nonsense and talk your paper would be more popular. Your hits at popery do no good and are stupid. The Scriptures are not a good guide for any one. I know lots of Scripture people and they are simply whited sepulchers and nothing else. Although brought up a Roman Catholic I am now and have been for thirty years a free-thinker, out and out; but I detest secret societies because I see they are eating up the integrity and manhood of the nation. I see that no man can secure any kind of an office in the United States unless he first gets his nomination at the lodges,—and yet we call this a free country!.....If your paper was conducted on broad, comprehensive and scholarly grounds your subscribers and supporters would be mainly Roman Catholics of the modified class and free-thinkers of every class."

This friend omits to notice the fact that of all those who openly oppose these orders, whose villainous nature he has marked, they are a thousand to one believers in the Scriptures and in Protestantism. Let him put this to their credit, and then search out the reason for their position, and he will have begun to get back to the great and holy God whom he persuades himself he has abandoned.

Bible Lessons.

LESSON V.—November 4.—Samuel's Farewell Address. —1 Sam. 12: 13-25.

Golden Text.—Only fear the Lord and serve him in truth with all your heart; for consider how great things he hath done for you.—1 Sam. 12: 24.

"Samuel." Now about 70 years old, come to assist in the formal inauguration of Saul, and transfer to him the leadership of the nation. He lived for many years after this. This is called Samuel's farwell address, not because it was given near the close of his life, but becausc like Washington's farewell address to the army, it marks the close of one phase of his public career. Samuel here lays down the office of judge, just as Washington laid down his rank of commander-in chief. But as Washington afterwards entered public life as President, and was to the end of his days a man of weight and influence in the councils of the nation, so Samuel continued in public life as priest and prophet of God, taking the first place in matters of national importance. Saul frequently sought his counsel, and from the aged prophet's lips heard his own doom pronounced (1 Sam. 15: 26). David was anointed by him (1 Sam. 16: 13).—Peloubet.

"Wheat harvest." In ordinary seasons, from the cessation of the showers in spring (about the end of April) until their commencement in October or November, rain never falls, and the sky is usually serene.—Robinson. ("Biblical Researches," vol. 1, p. 430). Wheat harvest was between May 15 and June 15. Jerome's testimony (that of an eye-witness), "I have never seen rain in the end of June, or in July, in Judea" ("on Amos," chap. 4), is borne out by modern travelers. "Rain in harvest" served as a figure for what was unseemly and anomalous (Prov. 26: 1).

"Feared." Note the different uses of the word "fear" in the lesson. In verse 14 there is an exhortation to fear; in this verse fear is felt, yet the fear evidently was not of the right kind, for in verse 20, Samuel says, Fear not. The distinction is between the fear of the righteous—awe, reverence, respect for authority—and the fear of the rebellious—terror, dread in view of punishment deserved. The latter fear can be removed by repentance and confession.—Peloubet.

"And turn ye not aside." (2) Single service. It ought to be the great care of every one of us to follow the Lord fully. We must, in a course of obedience to God's will and service to his honor, follow him universally, without dividing; uprightly, without dissembling; cheerfully, without disputing; and constantly, without declining.—Henry.

"It hath pleased the Lord to make you his people." The emphasis lies on his. This the Israelites could only be when they proved themselves to be the people of God by serving Jehovah with all their heart.—Keil. God's free choice of Israel to be his people is dwelt upon at length in Deut. 7: 6–11. In preferring the seed of Jacob to other families, the Lord acted as a sovereign, who is not bound and does not deign to assign his reasons; but having made them his people, the honor of his perfections required that he should not entirely forsake them till the promised seed arose, however severely he corrected them; nor even then, finally and absolutely; and this consideration was suited to excite and encourage their obedience.—Scott.

"In ceasing." His prayer is to be persistent and importunate. Samuel promises more than they asked. (1) They asked it of him as a favor; he promised it as a duty. (2) They asked him to pray for them at this time, and upon this occasion; but he promises to continue his prayers for them, and not to cease as long as he lived. (3) They ask him only to pray for them; but he promises to do more, to teach them also "the good and the right way," the way of duty, the way of pleasure and profit. In this he sets a glorious example for all rulers. —Henry.

"In truth with all your heart." Another truth is given to the character of this service in addition to verses 20, 21. These words exhibit the double character of the service of God, of truth and of innerness, in contrast with the service of outward appearance and works.—Lange.

"Consider." (1) The motive, gratitude.

"How great things he hath done for you." Literally with you. The reference can scarcely be limited to the recent storm as a display of God's greatness, but includes all his gracious dealings with his people. Samuel concludes his speech as he began it (vers. 6, 7), with an appeal to these as the motive for loyal obedience.—Cambridge Bible.

PRACTICAL.

1. Though rulers and governments may change, the obligations resting on all to serve God change not.
2. Two paths lie open before men —obedience to God, leading to prosperity; disobedience, leading to adversity.
3. God has power to assert his authority.
4. The miraculous signs which attest this power may awaken fear for the Supreme Ruler.
5. There is a fear which worketh repentance; there is a fear which hardens and estranges.
6. God's service must be rendered in truth and with all the heart.
7. The penitent servant has divine help in the promise of God.
8. And human help is the sympathy, the intercessory prayers, and the wise teachings of godly men.
9. Prayer for others is not only a privilege, it is a duty; to cease from it may be a sin.
10. Ver. 22. God deals with us in mercy according to his pleasure, and not our merit.
11. Ver. 23. The forgiving spirit is magnanimous; it gives more than is asked.
12. The good way and the right way coincide.
13. A sense of gratitude ought to enlist us in God's service.
14. When gratitude fails, it may be necessary to appeal to a sense of interest.
15. The service of God is a profitable as well as reasonable service.—Peloubet.

BAND OF HOPE BIBLE LESSON.

WATCH AGAINST TEMPTATION.

34. And take heed to yourselves, lest at any time your hearts be over charged with surfeiting, and drunkenness, and cares of this life, and so that day come upon you unawares.
35. For as a snare shall it come on all them that dwell on the face of the whole earth.
36. Watch ye therefore, and pray always, that ye may be accounted worthy to escape all these things that shall come to pass, and to stand before the Son of man. Luke 21: 34-36.
42. Watch therefore, for ye know not what hour your Lord doth come. Matt. 24: 42.

Golden Text.—Watch and pray, that ye enter not into temptation. Mat. 26: 41.

Central Truth.—Constant watchfulness is our only safeguard against temptation.

1. Primarily this means the great day of final judgment, but in a secondary sense sickness, sorrow and death are days of judgment for which we must all be prepared.

2. Liquor, as shown in previous lessons, does its worst mischief on the brain. Now a man's will and conscience is so connected with his brain that they cannot act intelligently if the latter is crazed or stupefied. To have clear ideas of duty we must have clear heads.

3. In Liverpool out of 26,000 arrested in 1868, 16,000 were intoxicated, and Sir Matthew Hale says that "four-fifths of our worst crimes are directly produced by intemperance."

4. Said the principal of one of the Philadelphia public schools, "The most marked symptom of the tobacco habit is dulness of intellect." The reason is because tobacco, like alcohol, though in a less degree, poisons the brain and nerve centers and thus blunts the moral sense. Any vice which hurts the body must also hurt the soul.

5. Indulgence in such vile habits as smoking and drinking hardens the conscience.

6. Many are hindered from preparing for eternity because they are too full of business or pleasure. If we hold a piece of pasteboard an inch square before the eye it will shut out miles of beautiful landscape; so any worldly good that we set our hearts on, however trifling, is enough to hide heaven from us.

7. Secret societies, like Freemasonry, Oddfellowship, etc., prevent men from preparing for eternity. The reason is because they are false religions, and do not require a change of heart.

8. No one knows the hour of their death, or the time of final judgment. We only know that death and judgment are sure to come. It is said that for two or three days before the late dreadful earthquake in Italy there were warning signs of the coming disaster; but they were not heeded and thus many thousands perished. We cannot expect to escape if we neglect the warnings of God's Word.

9. We must watch and pray because temptation meets us everywhere. It may come in the home-made cider or wine offered us by some kind friend. We shall be tempted to break the Sabbath in small ways because others do so, and even boys and girls may be enticed to join some secret temperance organization. We must watch and pray because we are in more danger from little temptations than from greater ones.

PRACTICAL TRUTHS.

We must all meet death and the judgment.

Liquor, tobacco and secret societies hinder men from preparing for eternity.

Prayer and watchfulness are neccssary; (1) because tempations meet us everywhere; (2) because only prayer and watchfulness will keep us from little sins, which are like the tiny opening in its timbers which sinks a ship.

LESSON TALK.

There is an Oriental fable about a camel which came to the door of an Arab's tent one night and asked for shelter. "This tent is so small there would not be room for us both. It is impossible for me to let you in," was the answer. Upon this the camel asked permission to put in the tip end of his nose, which favor was readily granted. But the camel when the end of his nose was fairly in pushed a little more and a little more until he got all his nose in, then his head, and finally his whole body. This is always the way with temptations to evil. We must say as stern a No to the smallest temptations as to the greatest; to a glass of home-made wine as to a glass of grog from the saloon. Freemasonry in this country has acted very much as the camel in the fable did. The murder of Morgan in 1826 so opened people's eyes to its wickedness that nearly all the lodges in the country went down. Christian men refused to have anything to do with it. Then it went to work and invented a great variety of secret orders. It said to Christian people, lamenting the evils of the liquor traffic, join the secret temperance lodge. This was the tip end of the camel's nose; but it kept crowding in more and more, till now there are nearly two hundred of these minor secret orders, which have done little or nothing for temperance or charity, but have made the principle of secrecy popular, so that Masonry has been able to drift back into all its former power. Says Henry, "a soul without watchfulness is like a city without bolts and bars." Any time the enemy may enter and make us his prey.

"My soul be on thy guard,
Ten thousand foes arise."

THE LAMENT OF THE LODGE.

BY A MAD AND MOURNFUL MASON.

1. A terrible doctor in Brandon did dwell,
His name was Groves and we hated him well;
He fooled a Knight who regalia did sell,
A Royal Arch Mason the secrets did tell.

CHORUS.—
Boaz, Shibboleth, Jachin, Tubal Cain,
Mah-hah-bone, Joppa, Siroc, Giblem,
Rabboni, Adonai, Jah-buh-lun,
I am sorry I joined the Masons.

2. Our stock of gay finery none of us wear
To make the children and simpletons stare,
Our benevolent gifts are very rare,
We have wasted in riot the widow's share.
CHORUS. —

3. We feel dreadful lonely up here in this loft,
Respectable relatives know we are soft,
We think of disbanding, but we are afraid,
For that would acknowledge the error we made.
CHORUS.—

4. What shall we do! O what shall we do!
Our foes are so many and candidates few;
We make no more money by roping them in,
The hood-wink has fallen, the trick is too thin.
CHORUS.—

5. The apron, hood-wink, drawers, cable-tow,
Our paraphernalia lie there in a row,
The rats and the mice they shout as they run,
Is there no help for the widow's son?

CHORUS.—
Boaz, Shibboleth, Jachin, Tubal Cain,
Mah-hah-bone and Jah-buh-lun,
There is nary help for the widow's son,
I am sorry I joined the Masons.

6. Those horrible oaths no more can I swear,
With the shock no more the novice scare,
From the worship of Hiram my heart I must tear,
We meet on the level, we part on the square.

CHORUS.—
Boaz, Shibboleth, Jachin, Tubal Cain,
Mah-hah-bone and Jah-buh-lun,
There is no more help for the widow's son,
I am sorry I joined the Masons.

[This may be sung to the tune of the Irish song, "Teddy was the Mason Man;" the same tune as the song, "The King of the Cannibal Islands."]

FRANCE, CHINA AND TONQUIN.

The region of Tonquin, lately the scene of conflict between the Annamese and the French, is one of those places with which the civilized world is little familiar, and about which it exercises little curiosity, till some such political complication arises as the one now in progress. The threatened war with China, if devoid of all other benefits, promises at least to enlarge our knowledge of geography, and our information about the conformation, resources, and inhabitants of an out-of-the-way corner of the world. It seems that, far removed as we are from the scene of operations, we in England know more about Tonquin than its near neighbors; for a special correspondcut of the Times, who has been at great pains to acquaint himself with the district, and to send an account of it to his journal, says, that "ignorance grows as England is left, culminating at Hong Kong." In his task he was far from being assisted by the French, who, regarding him as the representative of a paper hostile to their interests and influence, did not at all go out of their way to facilitate his efforts. He managed, however, in company with another correspondent, to charter a steam launch, and follow in the wake of the French fleet when it went to bombard Hue, the capital of Annam, and he has just sent home his impressions of the locality. Tonquin is divided by him, for descriptive purposes, into four parts—the central delta, the plateau country in the north, the mountain belt in the south, and the forest district in the west. The flat delta lying around the mouths of the main river, the Songkoi, and its tributaries, and forming the sea-board on the western side of the Gulf of Tonquin, is the best known part of the country, and has been explored chiefly by French naval officers. What the natives call the Songkoi, and the French the Red River, is the main stream of this part, but it is accompanied by many affluents, and opens by many mouths into the sea, and, with its multitudinous branches connected by cross streams, forms a network of water-courses that intersect the low-lying plains in every direction. The river gets its name from its color, which it derives from the iron ore in its bed and banks, and which distinguishes it from the green waters of one of its lucid tributaries, called by way of contrast, the Clear.

By these and numberless other streams, named and unnamed, there is constantly being carried to the delta's edge and to the shallow shores of the Tonquin Gulf the alluvial deposit which adds to the size of this flat country, and ever drives further back the waters of the sea. In fact, the delta is as the correspondent says, simply a gigantic "funnel," through which is incessantly poured the debris washed down from the hills that fence it round. By this process Hanoi, which, when it was first built in the eighth century, was on the coast, has been converted into an inland town two day's journey from the sea, and solitary hills which rise here and there from the plain, are the remains of islands which not long ago stood far out in the ocean, but have been rendered captive by the embrace of the advancing land. Two results naturally come to pass in the district from such a mode of formation: one is the periodical recurrence of tremendous inundations, the other a condition of great fertility in the soil. The floods commence in April and end in November. They change the country into a vast lake, from the surface of which stick out "clumps of trees, villages, pagodas, and occasionally needled rocks." Brought on by the melting of the snow and torrents of rain, they are often sudden and appalling; and in one night a flood has been known to rise thirteen feet. But if, in this respect, Tonquin shares the disadvantages of delta lands everywhere, it equally shares their proverbial fertility. Its provinces present an "aspect of great agricultural wealth." Rice (of which there are two kinds, the one for food, the other glutinous for sacrifices) forms the principal production, and there are two crops of it every year. But besides rice, the soil produces castor-oil plants, mulberries, cotton, sugar-canes, plantains, sweet potatoes and tobacco. Not much tea is grown, but some of a specially fine quality comes from Laos, a province which borders on Tonquin, and the French hope, once they can secure the latter kingdom, to get this export from the former conveyed through their own territory, and to reap a benefit from the trade. This is a sample of the reasons actuating them in their present belligerent movements, all of which are dictated by a mixture of political ambition and commercial desire. But, from what has gone before, it will be seen that they have no slight difficulties to overcome. They have already experienced the obstacles presented by the floods and the sickness which comes with the rains. The rivers, which form the highways of the kingdom, are not favorable to navigation; at no time do they allow the transit of large or heavily-laden vessels, and when the rains set in, they are turned into torrents of great rapidity.

In man, as well as in nature, the French will encounter formidable enemies, for though the Annamese proper are timid and contemptible foes, the irregular and mercenary troops, known as the Black Flags, are bold, well-trained and well-armed. It is moreover far from an improbable contingency, that in case of the continuance of the strife, the regular forces of the Chinese Empire would be brought to their assistance. Still, there is much to tempt the French on. Apart from the vegetable wealth already mentioned, there are in the provinces valuable mines of coal, lead and tin, while iron and gold are to be found. Rumour speaks of "big game" on the hills, poultry is plentiful everywhere, and "buffaloes work on the fields." If our acquisitive neighbors ultimately succeed in seizing the province, they will find much for them to do in the way of giving it better forms of government than it at present possesses. The underpay of officials—the governor only receiving per month 16s., the prefect 2s. 6d., and private soldiers 9d.—has rendered Tonquin a very focus of extortion and bribery, and made honesty "an unknown quantity" in the land —London Christian World

THE CHURCHES VS. LODGERY.

The following denominations are committed by vote of their legislative assemblies or by constitution to a separation from secret lodge worship:

Adventists (Seventh-day.)

Baptists—Primitive, Seventh-day and Scandinavian.

Brethren (Dunkers or German Baptists.)

Christian Reformed Church.

Church of God (Northern Indiana Eldership.)

Congregational—The State Associations of Illinois and Iowa have adopted resolutions against the lodge.

Disciples (in part.)

Friends.

Lutherans—Norwegian, Danish, Swedish and Synodical Conferences.

Mennonites.

Methodists—Free and Wesleyan.

Methodist Protestant (Minnesota Conference.)

Moravians.

Plymouth Brethren.

Presbyterian—Associate, Reformed and United.

Reformed Church (Holland Branch.)

United Brethren in Christ.

Individual churches in some of these denominations should be excepted, in part of them even a considerable portion.

The following local churches have, as a pledge to disfellowship and oppose lodge worship, given their names to the following list as

The Christian Cynosure.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, OCTOBER 25, 1883.

PROF. CLAUDIO JANNET.—By special arrangement this distinguished professor, whom the Brussels Courier calls "One of our first economists (Premiers Economistes) will send his articles, written for the French press, for republication in the Cynosure. He says he would be a regular correspondent of this paper but he is overworked by his course in political and social economy in the University (Catholic) of Paris; and by his engagements to the European press. He is a charming writer, and gentleman of an excellent Christian spirit. His articles and letters will be translated by Prof. W. H. Fischer of Wheaton College. Our readers will have something from his pen in the next Cynosure.

KNIGHT TEMPLARS are like those Philistines (1 Sam. 5: 3) who set up the Ark of God in the temple of their Dagon, to make God "Serve with their sins" Isa. 43: 24. That is to say, these Templars think to make Christ subserve Masonry.

But the Ark overthrew Dagon and shattered him in his own temple. So will Christ shatter the lodge.

But the spell of Dagon-worship was so mighty that the Philistines did not dare to tread, afterward, on the threshold where the stump and fragments of their shattered god lay! So will charmed Masons worship the shattered fragments of their lodge.

GEN. J. B. WEAVER who reduced the Republican majority in the late Iowa election, many thousands, was colonel of the Iowa 2d and used to keep Bible class in his tent, and all in the regiment who had Bibles attended. Capt. Heaton, one of his captains, says also that he has for years superintended a Sabbath-school in Bloomfield, Iowa. Gen. Weaver was strongest on the stump and mercilessly exposed the record of Gov. Sherman's treachery.

THE CONGREGATIONAL COUNCIL at Concord did not fulfill the expectations of some of its members in censuring the past management of Dr. Quint. His friends forestalled any such manifestation of righteousness, and he is retired with honorable mention by the Council. It is at least a merciful deliverance, and his career is also a lesson which Congregational churches do well to heed; but their pastors have yet something to learn of the iniquitous nature of the lodge, if the good letter of our correspondent in the church news is an indication of the spirit in which they generally meet this question. Bro. Bailey's New England letter on the Council is well worth the pains he took to prepare it. His estimate of the meeting is more than confirmed by this opening paragraph in the leading editorial in last week's Independent:

"Of the five meetings of the Triennial Council of the Congregational churches of the United States the best and most profitable was held in Concord, N. H., last week. For the Presbyterian body it would have been a complete failure; for it had no docket prepared, nothing to do, and it did nothing. Being a Congregational body, for the same reason it was a great success. Having nothing to do, it found something to feel. The most important piece of business it did was to select Chicago as the next place of meeting. Our report, on a previous page, will be found very empty of votes and proceedings; but one who looks beyond ballots will observe a good temper which deserves recognition."

THE GLOVE IN THE ARENA.

"Hang out our banners on the outer walls."
Shak. Macbeth.

In the late Iowa election (Oct. 9), the contest was hot. Gov. Sherman and Senator Alison are Masons, and believed by many to be liquor men in Republican uniform. Gen. Weaver, Greenbacker, stumped with the Democracy against the Republicans, and made a terrific onslaught on Sherman and Alison. The prizes were the Governorship and the U. S. Senate. Stubbs of Fairfield spoke effectively with Weaver, and they reduced the Republican majority fearfully. Senator Jas. F. Wilson, who is regarded as a good man, was the chief reliance on the Republican side.

In this general melee, the lodge, as always, was seeking its own, and by instinct, opposed to Wilson and prohibition. The Fairfield Daily Journal, though professedly Republican, on the eve of the election, came out vehemently against Fordyce, (legislative candidate), who was the regular caucus Republican nominee; because, though he had not declared himself, he was known to be in principle anti-lodge. The Journal editor, Oct. 6, calls its janizaries around him and thus pitches in:

"Are you a Mason? Can you consistently vote for Preacher Fordyce an anti-secret society man, whose friends call you murderers?"

The Journal calls, in this same style on "Odd-fellows," "Knights of Pythias," "Red Cross," "United Workmen," in all, eight different secret clans, to come to the rescue and defeat Fordyce!

This is cheering. Once made, (in the words of Edmund Burke) to "bolt out of their holes," and their doom is nigh. They will make such fight as owls and other birds of night, when out at mid-day.

FAITH CURES.

"The prayer of faith shall save the sick, and the Lord shall raise him up." James 5: 15. In my early ministry, this text was to me a painful puzzle. When visiting the sick, I feared to pray out-right, that God would heal them, for fear that would be superstition. And not to pray for them would be to discard praying for the sick, which had always been done. I longed to know the meaning and practical import of that text. It was taught me. I baptized a child given up to die; all believed it to be dying; and I was willing it should die because it was a feeble infant. I went to my study and knelt to pray for a revival meeting then in process, and for the only time in my life, my mind was borne away without my wish or consent, to pray for the life of that child. I did pray for him, and he is alive now. And with the life of that child came the explanation of that text which is this:

1. It does not mean to contingently confer earthly immortality on those who are prayed for. All must die. "It is appointed."

2. It does not mean to dispense with means.

3. It does not mean that a man by prayer can govern God. He is sovereign and does as he pleases.

4. It does mean that God will and does hear prayer and heal the sick when there are good reasons for it, and those reasons are plead in paith. This is the rule, and not the exception, and hence the direction is general, "Is any sick, call for the elders of the church," etc.

5. Thousands die for lack of obedience to the above precept, and of faith. "If ye shall ask ANYTHING in my name, I will do it," are the words of Christ. B.

—The Wisconsin State meeting begins on the 6th inst. in Menomonie which is Tuesday, not Wednesday, as the notice furnished last week read. Bro. Bancroft, the State agent, has been for some days on the ground, canvassing the whole surrounding district, and arousing an interest in the convention and the principles which it is to discuss. He is already familiar with the ground, having years ago traveled thoroughly over it as a Bible agent. The Menomonie friends are anxious to secure some of the best speakers for addresses, preferring them to degree workers, Bro. Ronayne having killed Hiram so terribly that he is beyond resurrection for the purpose of Masonic exposition.

—Rev. S. F. Stratton, brother of Prof. L. N. Stratton, of Wheaton Theological Seminary, died at Elkhorn, Wis., on Saturday evening after suffering for some two weeks from an attack of pneumonia. He was a graduate of Wheaton in 1865, of the Union Park Theological Seminary, Chicago, three years later, and had taken also a post graduate course at Harvard University. For several years he was Professor of Natural Sciences in Wheaton College, and since the establishment of the Wesleyan Theological Seminary in connection with the College he has assisted in the instruction. But the greater portion of his public life has been in the pastoral work, and many households at Lisle, Wyanet and Downers Grove, Ill., where he has preached, will learn with pain of his death. Funeral services were held at Elkhorn on the Sabbath and at Wyanet, where the body was taken for burial, on Tuesday afternoon.

THE N. C. A. BOARD held a meeting Oct. 13th, at the call of the chairman, Dr. Meloy. There were present brethren Meloy, Hodge, Gault, Blank, Thomson, Travis and Lumry.

The important business of the meeting was the consideration of the Washington work. The following resolutions, presented by the General Agent, were adopted with slight change:

Whereas, It is the judgment of this Board that Rev. E. D. Bailey, is a suitable and the most available man to take charge of the building purchased for the N. C. A. at No. 215, 4½ street, Washington, D. C.; and

Whereas, There is an unpaid balance on said property which it is desirable to cancel at the earliest possible date; and

Whereas, A number of friends to the N. C. A. have signified a willingness to unite in a joint stock company to publish a paper advocating the principles embodied in the platform of the American party; and

Whereas, The time has come for a more thorough and systematic organization of the anti-secrecy friends; therefore,

Resolved, That we appoint Rev. E. D. Bailey to co-operate with our General Agent in the Washington department of our work.

1st. In taking charge of our interests and renting such portions of the Washington building as are not required for the Association's use.

2d. To solicit funds to pay the indebtedness remaining on the said property.

3d. That he be authorized to co-operate with such friends as may be enlisted in the formation of a joint stock company to publish a paper advocating the principles of the American party, to lecture, organize and do such other work as the anti-secrecy cause may require; and furtber,

Resolved, That when such joint stock company is organized and ready to enter upon the publication of a paper as above stated we recommend that the said company be allowed the use of rooms for composition and office free of charge until the annual meeting of the N. C. A. in June, 1884.

Resolved, That we deem it highly important that Rev. E. D. Bailey enter at once upon the work of raising funds to clear the building of debt and the organization of a joint stock company, and that he make his headquarters in Washington as soon as arrangements can be made to accommodate the parties interested.

The following was also adopted at the suggestion of Pres. J. Blanchard, to prevent any misunderstanding with respect to the control of the proposed political organ:

Resolved, That the above paper is adopted with the distinct understanding that this Board assumes or expects to assume no authority whatever in or over the joint stock company when it shall be formed; our only purpose being to assist in the formation of the company.

The matter of paying any present deficit in current expenses of the Association was referred to the finance committee and the Treasurer. The request of Pres. C. A. Blanchard, that interest on his note to the Association be remitted for one year, for services rendered at various State and National conventions, was granted; and the Board adjourned.

REFORM NEWS.

THE INDIANA CONVENTION.

A card from Secretary Stoddard notes the close of the convention at Oakland with good attendance and good meetings throughout. He was to speak at Princeton Friday afternoon, and expected to spend the Lord's day at Cincinnati, starting for Syracuse and the New York State meeting on Monday. Dr. S. L. Cook reported briefly on the 20th:

"DEAR CYNOSURE:—Our meeting has just closed. There was a good attendance, and entire harmony prevailed throughout. Better work has seldom been done. We had the presence and help of J. P. Stoddard. It is marvelous to see his physical and mental ability to grapple this monstrous subject. We had the friendship and hospitality of the community, and the assistance of Justus Miller of Pike county, Rev. Levin Wilson of Posey, Capt. W. S. McCullough, brethren Hobson, Law, and Torrence and others. I have found, wherever I have been, an awakening, and hope a better day is coming. I will write more fully when I have time."

FROM THE GENERAL AGENT.

We are now at seven o'clock A. M. seventy miles below Terre Haute, on the White River bottoms. The soil is apparently rich, but early frosts have ripened the corn prematurely. The same good Providence that has kept me in health and protected me from accidents for thirteen years of almost continuous travel, has kept me another night, and I am sweetly resting in him.

I have just landed at Princeton, amid a motley crowd many of whom are exceedingly anxious to take in the stranger, and offer special inducements to a hungry man. I have found a man who knows Bro. McCormick, and has kindly offered me transportation to his house free of charge. From the depot I see but little of the town, but from the number waiting and loafing I infer quite a village near at hand. When I see Bro. McCormick I shall get in line, but from what I can learn of ways and means, presume I shall not reach Oakland before three P. M., which will be in time for the opening of the convention. I feel confident that we shall have a good meeting, and we shall see fruits from the sowing by Bro. Ronayne in former years.

VINCENNES, Ind., Oct. 20th.—The Oakland City Convention was a local success, and the few who came from abroad seemed well satisfied. There is a good element all through this region needing only to be worked up and organized to become very efficient. The effect of Bro. Ronayne's work and subsequently of Dr. Cook is visible, and so far as I can discover the fields are ripe for the harvest.

I spoke last evening in Rev. D. C. Martin's church at Princeton. The streets were very muddy and the rain falling rapidly, but despite the difficulties a fair audience was present, including seven ministers of the place. My remarks were apparently well received, and my only regret was that I was not able to follow up an opening so hopeful in appearance. If, as indicated by some of the friends, my assistance is desired at a future time, I shall be glad to aid the brethren in their work.

Bro. McCormick, the veteran reformer of this region, showed me much kindness, and worked with a zeal and courage showing that he not only believes in, but actually practices the "perseverance of the saints." Bro. Martin's hospitality was freely tendered and gratefully accepted, and my brief stay in his estimable family is among pleasant memories.

At Princeton I purchased a ticket to Syracuse, via Cincinnati, Cleveland and Buffalo, for $21.50, and am now waiting in the depot for an east-bound train to Cincinnati, where I shall probably spend the Sabbath, though I may possibly get a train to Dayton or Galion before Lord's day. J. P. Stoddard.

SOUTHERN PENNSYLVANIA.

Washington, Oct. 16, 1883.

Dear Cynosure:—I have recently visited the Cumberland Valley in Pennsylvania and spoke four times to full and attentive congregations at Salem and Cuder's churches, both in the country a few miles from Chambersburg. These churches had, through the influence of the ministry, been heretofore closed against the discussion of the secrecy question.

Nearly all the country churches in this part of the State are free from members of the orders. They are mostly Dunkards, River Brethren and United Brethren. The two former churches testify against organized secrecy, and while they are not aggressive in their action, they are practically freer from the evil than the U. B. churches. And yet I was pained to find, with a general assent, but little intelligent interest in the subject. Among the Dunkards and River Brethren this is due largely to their exclusiveness and indisposition to read any but their own publications; and also from the fact that Freemasonry is regarded as a political question, and many of them conscientiously abstain from voting, war, and all political discussion as tending to war. They do well to obey the command, "Have no fellowship with the unfruitful works of darkness;" they would do better if they remembered that the apostle said, "But rather reprove them."

The U. B. churches on the other hand regard the question as a source of discord, and are afraid of discussion lest it drive off their few city congregations. Yet all alike, both radicals and conservatives, deplore the condition of the denomination, and mutually blame each other for the manifest decadence of what has in the past been one of the most aggressive and effective of all the religious bodies.

The bishops and presiding elders seem to belong largely to the conservative class, and are using their power to resist discussion and prevent the enforcement of discipline, hoping that by silence and quietness the evil will die out, and that getting back to the times of old-fashioned revivals they will find the "expulsive power of holy affection" a stronger impulse than the selfishness of secretism. It is strange indeed that men of so much intelligence should hope for a religious revival by ignoring fundamental principles, trampling on solemn covenants, and clasping hands with avowed repudiators of a sacred compact.

I am reminded of the lady who, on going out, left a note on her parlor table to tell her husband that the key by which he was to enter was hidden under the doorstep. Repentance of known sin is the first condition of spiritual growth. To expect to reverse this order is as absurd as to have supposed the hidden key would be found without the possibility of knowing its hiding-place. Judgment must begin at the house of God.

There is reason to think these conservative influences are to some extent giving way. It has been found that secretists will rule or ruin, and they sometimes succeed in doing both. They are like the "two daughters of the horse leech."

Then, too, the manly protest of the "United Brethren in Christ" and the "Richmond Star" voicing a great host of noble men and women, is beginning to tell. There is great reason to hope that the spell of the tempter is to be broken, and that this division of Zion will "awake and put on her strength and her beautiful garments, and that henceforth there shall no more come in unto her the uncircumcised and the unclean."

I visited also Martinsburg, West Virginia, where I found an excellent United Brethren pastor earnestly desirous to do his duty. He invited me to preach for him, and desired a lecture in that place, though he could not offer his church for that purpose. I also visited Harper's Ferry, where I am invited to address the students of Stover College, but as the president was absent I returned to Washington. Yours in the Lord,

H. H. Hinman.

THE NATIONAL CONGREGATIONAL COUNCIL.

First Impressions—Credentials—The Addresses—The Papers—Important Questions shelved—Congregationalism attacked in its vital point.—Secretary Quint has cracked the nut and gives up the shell.—A Final Estimate.

Worcester, Mass.. Oct. 16, 1883.

Knowing the interest felt by many in the National Counell of Congregational churches, convened at Concord, I went thither to see and hear. Having been much prejudiced against this Council from its first organization, I resolved to guard against a hypercritical spirit and see in it all there was of good, with no more of bad than actually existed. Whether I succeeded in maintaining a judicial state of mind or not others may judge.

The Council was held in the South church at Concord. The first impression from the proceedings was that the body had nothing to do and meant to do it at all hazards. On entering the church it appeared a temporary organization had been effected by placing Hon. A. C. Barstow of Rhode Island, in the chair. The body of the house was about one-fourth filled. Three gentlemen appeared to be leisurely writing, and it was announced that they were examining the "credentials" of the delegates and that nothing could be done until the roll was completed. One fiery old gentleman, whose patience was not equal to the occasion, suggested in somewhat foreible language that they might go ahead with the election of officers without a formal roll as all present were "honest, or ought to be." This view did not prevail, but it was concluded that they might have a fifteen minute prayer meeting without "credentials." But the time hung heavily, and after a session of an hour and a half the roll was still incomplete and the Counell adjourned till 2:30 P. M. On re-assembling new delegates had to present their "credentials" and more time was consumed. Nominations for president were then freely made. At last some one nominated Rev. Alonzo H. Quint, D.D., which was received in the part of the house where I sat with undisguised sneers from delegates.

On the second ballot Dr. Arthur Little of Chicago, was chosen by a large majority, and he served the Council with great acceptanee. Dr. Quint received only two votes, only 159 votes were cast in all. Three addresses of welcome were extended, by the governor of the State, the mayor of the city, and a city pastor, respectively.

Gov. Hale's address was the most devout, sensible and evangelical address that it was ever my privilege to hear from an officer of the State. Though timid in manner, his good sense and devout piety won the hearts of the assembly. Dr. Noble of Chicago, preached in the evening an excellent discourse, setting forth the evident central idea of the Gospel.

Concerning the papers read, one pastor remarked that "it hardly seemed necessary to call a National Council to hear papers on 'Christian Giving' and 'Training children.'" His remark was seconded by a group of listeners. So far as I was able to discover, only two questions arose which needed the action of the National Counell, and one of these was immediately suppressed, while the other caused a protracted discussion and resulted in referring the whole question to the several State associations! One related to the theological seminaries and the other to questions of polity.

Committees were appointed to report on the Benevolent Societies, on the several papers read and on various other things, but the only thing which really needed a committee was slighted. It was moved that a committee be appointed on theological seminaries. This was understood to involve a report on the Andover controversy. A wave of electrical excitement seemed at once to sweep through the assembly and there was evidently danger ahead. Dr. Noble of Chicago, (his name in this case is inappropriate) came to the rescue, and moved to postpone that matter as "we are not ready for that question yet." Said a pastor from Maine: "The only question on which the churches care to know the opinion of this Council is thus suppressed." By the way an effort was made to bring the Andover matter before the last New Hampshire State Association, but the "Business Committee" refused it admittance, though leading men of the State advised it.

But the second question of national concern was brought up in a paper read by Rev. Dr. Ross of Michigan,—a paper prepared by a committee appointed at the last Council. His paper was excellent in many respects and its claims harmless, but in one important respect it proposed a revolution of Congregationalism.

In answering the question as to the guarantee the denomination has of the soundness in doctrine of its churches and ministers, he advocated a change from "installing councils" and recommended that local associations be empowered to receive, try, and expel, ministers and churches, and that standing in these associations determine the standing in the denomination. Good bye "independence!" Farewell "Historical Congregationalism!" Your democracy was very good in early times, but we need a more centralized government. "Consolidation" is the title given these new ideas by some of the ministers. This called forcibly to mind a fact to which my attention was called in Chicago last summer. A pamphlet was handed me one Sunday as I went out of the church. It was put forth by the new Chicago Congregational Missionary Society. In it is an address by Prof. Curtis, in which he argues without disguise that the "Independent churches" under the supervision of that society should not be allowed to choose their own pastors independently, but the society should choose them with the consent of the churches! It was to me a new view of "independence." To my certain knowledge two "Independent churches" in Chicago have within a year been refused the men of their choice, in accordance with the principle thus laid down.

But to return to the paper of Dr. Ross. I was not present when it was finally disposed of, but the dispatches say that it was referred to the State associations for settlement.

Dr. Quint was not even nominated for the office of Secretary, but in his place Rev. Mr. Hazen of Boston, was chosen. A Vermont pastor told me that both Mr. Hazen and his brothers, of whom several were ministers, were good men, and of a kind not likely to be connected with the Masonic lodge. Dr. Quint's course was frequently censured, both in private and occasionally by some "hit" publicly. It is said that at one time his drinking habits were a matter of public scandal. It is probable that his neglect of the Council grew out of the fact that it could no longer serve his political aspirations and he was therefore willing to step down. Dr. Dexter offered resolutions of thanks to him for his services, which were passed.

Of the 360 delegates elected 250 were enrolled. All the Benevolent societies were heard in brief speeches from some representative man of their selection. The Council seemed to me very much like the meetings of the Illinois Associations, plus a quantity of red-tape. Some of the devotional meetings were excellent. But my story grows and must be cut short.

I learned from two pastors, who were deeply interested in our reform, though unacquainted with our work, that the subject of secret societies was discussed at their last association meeting. They were eager for information. E. D. Bailey.

WISCONSIN.

The annual convention of the Wisconsin Christian Association will be held in Menomonie, Dunn county, Nov. 6th to 8th. This convention will be under the management of Rev. Isaac Bancroft, State Agent, and J. P. Stoddard, General Agent of the N. C. A. After the opening address by J. P. Stoddard at 7:30 P. M. of Tuesday, the 6th, announcements will be made for the following days and evenings, which will include addresses, discussions, and, if desirable, working of degrees. President C. A. Blanchard is expected to be present and fill a prominent place on the programme. Come in the name and in the Spirit of the Master.

Against Lodges.—The United Presbyterian, of Pitts burg, in its last number offers another testimony that agitaion against secret societies is constantly gaining ground. In connection with the experience of the late famous and energetic Pres. Finney, of Oberlin College, it says: "Charles G. Finney was a Mason when converted and afterwards said to President Blanchard, as the latter relates, respecting the lodge: "As soon as I was converted to Christ I loathed it, and I went to the lodge and demanded my discharge." Similar statements have been made by other persons. They are such as we might expect in greater numbers. The associations into which men are brought in the lodge to speak of nothing else, are such that Christians cannot help despising them, and the doings are stupid and wicked, for which they become responsible, ought to lead them to do as Mr. Finney did. And yet we find men who claim to be Christians, and who abound in all good works, remaining in the lodge and seeming to be proud of their connection with it. This remains a puzzle to thousands of their brethren.—Lutheran Standard.

The Home.

HE DIED FOR ME.

After Dr. Bethune's death the following beautiful hymn, which was evidently written only the day previous, was found in his portfolio. Its devout simplicity and exquisite tenderness give it a fitting place beside such hymns as Toplady's "Rock of Ages," and Charles Wesley's "Jesus! lover of my soul!"

When time seems short, and death is near,
And I am pressed by doubt and fear,
And sins, an overflowing tide,
Assail my peace on every side,
This thought my refuge still shall be,
I know the Saviour died for me!

His name is Jesus, and he died
For guilty sinners crucified;
Content to die that he might win
Their ransom from the death of sin,
No sinner worse than I can be,
Therefore I know he died for me.

If grace were bought, I could not buy;
If grace were coined, no wealth have I;
By grace alone I draw my breath,
Held up from everlasting death.
Yet since I know his grace is free,
I know the Saviour died for me.

I read God's holy Word, and find
Great truths which far transcend my mind;
And little do I know beside
Of thought so high, so deep and wide.
This is my best theology,
I know the Saviour died for me.

My faith is weak, but 'tis thy gift;
Thou canst my helpless soul uplift;
And say, "Thy bonds of death are riven,
Thy sins by me are all forgiven,
And thou shalt live from guilt set free,
For I, thy Saviour, died for thee."

AGAINST EVOLUTION.

Clark Maxwell, Professor of Experimental Physics at Cambridge, England, who died in 1879, was one of the highest scientific authorities and was a devout Christian. His studies in molecular physics led him to reject the theory of evolution. In a famous address before the British Association, he said:

"In the heavens we discover by their light, and by their light alone, stars so distant from each other that no material thing can ever pass from one to another; and yet this light, which is to us the sole evidence of the existence of these distant worlds, tells us also that each of them is built up of molecules of the same kind as those which we find on earth. A molecule of hydrogen, for example, whether in Sirius or in Arcturus, exccutes its vibrations in the same time. . . . . No theory of evolution can be formed to account for the similarity of molecules, for evolution necessarily implies continuous change, and the molecule is incapable of growth or decay; of generation or destruction. None of the processes of nature, since the time when nature began, have produced the slightest difference in the properties of any molecule. We are therefore unable to ascribe either the existence of the molecules or the identity of their properties to any of the causes which we call natural. On the other hand, the exact equality of each molecule to all others of the same kind gives it, as Sir John Herschel has well said, the essential character of a manufactured article, and precludes the idea of its being eternal and self-existent. Though in the course of ages catastrophes have occurred, and may yet occur in the heavens, though ancient systems may be dissolved and new ones evolved out of their ruins, the molecules out of which these systems are built—the foundation stones of the material universe—remain unbroken and unworn. They continue this day as they were created, perfect in number and measure and weight; and from the ineffaceable characters impressed on them we may learn that those aspirations after accuracy in measurement and justice in action, which we reckon among our noblest attributes as men, are ours because they are essential constituents of the image of him who, in the beginning created not only the heaven and the earth, but the materials of which heaven and earth consist."

The Quarterly Review remarks upon this passage as follows:

"No apology need be made for this lengthy extract when it is reflected how important is its bearing upon the nebular hypothesis of Laplace, which, it is to be feared, is being too readily accepted by the world without giving due weight to the difficulties which beset it as regards the origin of matter and of force; as well as upon that extreme phase of evolutionism which some men of science prefer to the alternative belief in special and distinct creative acts by an intelligent First Cause. The greatest physicist of the present age has declared that the marks of skill and handicraft impressed upon the molecule are a fatal difficulty in the way of that theory which was dimly adumbrated by Kant and Laplace, and brought into definite expression by the labors of Darwin, Tyndall and Huxley:"

A HARD VIRTUE.

Forbearance, considerateness—we need them everywhere we go. Our common imperfections are mutual limitations. They demand self-restraint, patience, mutual concession. These virtues are hard, but so are all. These are especially hard, because they are incessant. I will tell you what will help much to make them practicable, perhaps easy. Do them for God. It is God's ends that demand them, which demand these almost more notably than some others. His greatest end is love. No material or intellectual progress; no prosperity in church, state or home; no moral, religious, social or philanthropic interest—is so precious to him as the mutual sympathy among his children, out of which alone his two great aims can reach fruition. These two great aims are the development of our race and the elevation of our individual characters. Humanity cannot progress, save as we stand closely by each other, heart and hand; our own characters cannot beautify themselves, save as we attain to the unselfish benevolence which is the comprehensive symbol of the divine character. What is hard for yourself, then, do for God. Let his love be the reward of your self-sacrifice. He has made self-sacrifice the law of the universe; each thing, each being, depends on and gives itself for the other. The extinction of self is the paraphrase of love. Be sure that in habitual self-constraint, self-forgetfulness for others' good, in considerateness, in forbearance, in yielding to others' views and wishes, so far as conscience will allow, we are both rejoicing and resembling him. If he should mark iniquity, who should stand? Let not us, then! "Let us not judge one another, but judge this rather, that no one put a stumbling-block, or an occasion to fall, in his brother's way." So (is it not sweet, is it not manly?) says the zealous, persistent, self-confident, but self-sacrificing, the, of all men, most manly Paul. And also, "Love is the fulfilling of the law." Wherefore, to go back to his Master for a general maxim, "Have salt in yourselves, and have peace with one another."—Joseph May.

HOW INGERSOLL DID GOOD.

A correspondent of the New York Times is responsible for the following:

An intimate friend of Gen. Lew Wallace contributes this bit of gossip, telling how "Ben Hur" came to be written: "Before, and for some time after the war, Gen. Wallace was inclined to be skeptical on religious matters, particularly as to the divinity of Christ. Chance one day, while traveling on a railroad, threw him in company with Col. Ingersoll, the infidel. Their conversation turned on religious topics, and in the course of their discussion Ingersoll presented his views. Wallace listened and was much impressed, but finally remarked that he was not yet prepared to agree with Ingersoll on certain very extreme propositions relative to the non-divinity of Christ. Ingersoll urged Wallace to give the matter the careful study and research that he had, expressing his confidence that Wallace would, after so doing, fully acquiesce in the Ingersoll view. After parting, Wallace turned the matter over in his mind and determined to give it the most thorough investigation. For six years he thought, studied and searched. At the end of that time 'Ben Hur' was produced. I met Wallace at a hotel in Indianapolis not long after the book had been published. The book was naturally the topic of our conversation. After having told me the story I have just given, Wallace turned to me and said: 'The result of my long study was the absolute conviction that Jesus of Nazareth was not only a Christ, and the Christ, but that he was also my Christ, my Saviour, and my Redeemer.'"

Twenty years ago the French literateur and atheist, M. Renan, began the publication of a History of the Origin of Christianity. It has grown into a work of seven volumes, the last of which was published not long since. The literary excellence of the work has been freely acknowledged, and it has also been commended for its historical candor. Of this work his "Life of Jesus" is a part, and in a newly written preface to a recent edition of this he makes some noteworthy admissions. The sum of what he considers "certain" he thus states:

"I have said, and I repeat, that should we confine ourselves in writing a Life of Jesus to asserting only what is certain we should need but a few lines. The man existed. He came from Nazareth, in Galilee. He preached engagingly. He left behind him maxims which imprinted themselves deeply upon the memories of his disciples. His two principal followers were Cephas and John, the sons of Zebedee. He excited the hatred of the orthodox Jews, who contrived to have him put to death by Pontius Pilatus, then Procurator of Judea. He was crucified outside the city gates. It was believed shortly after that he was resuscitated."

It will be understood that M. Renan says we should know this much with certainty, even if the gospels did not exist, from documents of indubitable authenticity and fixed date, such as the evidently genuine epistles of Paul, or the epistle to the Hebrews, or to the book of Revelation, and other writings universally accepted. He says about the gospel of John: "I still believe that the fourth gospel is linked to the Apostle John, and that it was written about the end of the first century." He does not think that John wrote it, but that one of his disciples did. This much from a notorious infidel is a notable concession.—United Presbyterian.

HOME HINTS.

IMPROVE THE KITCHENS.

The question is, what shall be done to the kitchen to make it bright and attractive, and the suggestions given are intended particularly for country kitchens, which seem to be very often the thoroughfare, if not the resting place for the family. Vines, of course, would be in the way in the summer, and at that time they are not needed so much, as the kitchen doors are frequentiy draped with honeysuckles or morning-glories on the outside, as well as the kitchen windows. But in the winter, when it is cold and cheerless outside, and the graceful vines have turned into brown, dead-looking stalks, try to have something green and fresh in the kitchen. Train a vine, if only a sweet potato vine, on one of the windows, and besides, having saved all the empty cans from canned fruit or vegetables, paint a couple of them red; have two holes bored in each near the top, through which to run the strings, by which they are to be suspended over the window. In one plant "Wandering Jew," or a Tradescantia, so easy to grow from slips, and which will soon run on the sides, making it a thing of beauty; and in the other, which must be nearly full of water, lay an old sponge or piece of white cotton, over which sprinkle flax seeds thickly, keeping the cotton moist where they are sown. In two or three weeks these will sprout, and the cotton will be covered with a beautiful green mossy looking growth.

Save the old kitchen chairs; cut off the broken backs close to the seats, also the lower part of the legs, to make them a convenient and comfortable height. Then make a bag the size of the seat, of some old ticking or other material, and stuff it with fine shavings or slivered husks, and after nailing it securely on the seats, cover with bright cretonne or chintz. The former can be bought for twenty or twenty-five cents a yard, and would be forwarded from a city store on sending the order, and giving an idea of the ground color wanted. Two or three palm-leaf fans painted a bright red would decoratc the wall very prettily. If the edges are worn, they can be bound with some material of the same color. The lower part of the dresser would look well, if, instead of being covered with the usnal pieces of scalloped newspapers, it were covered with a strip of crash towelling, the ends fringed out, and hanging down about a quarter of a yard or so, and the center ornamented with a large letter in red cotton or worsted embroidery.—American Agriculturalist.

PREPARE WINTER CLOTHING NOW.

Sudden changes of temperature, and cold, penetrating winds may now be looked for, and it is prudent to be ready to meet them promptly. Strong, vigorous persons, in full blood, may resist a fall of twenty or thirty degrees in the thermometer, but none ar e sure of doing so.

A change from 50° to 40° or 30°, before the system is inured to cold, is more felt than 0° in December and January. So, good warm under and outer clothing should be at hand for instant use when an unexpected northerly blast comes. A cold caught in autumn is apt to last a long time, if it do not terminate fatally. Let the winter apparel be looked over at once, mended and remodeled, and new clothing ordered. Tailors and seamstresses, if to be employed, will be over-busy, and less accommodating later on than now, and fabrics are in more variety at the stores. and cost no more now than later.

To doubly protect the throat and lungs, line the undershirt inside, both back and front well down the waist, with warm, soft flannel. Give special care also to the feet and limbs. Home-knit stockings of soft wool are by far the best. Line the knees and heels of children's stockings with flannel.—American Agriculturalist.

Scolding.—Why do Christian parents sometimes scold? For two reasons, as it seems to us. First, from lack of self-control; secondly, from habit. Children are often terribly trying, and loud, angry tones seem a safety valve for our stirred tempers. Besides, we feel that gentleness alone can never safely steer the family bark over life's troubled sea. Force, firmness, decision, sternness, even severity, are often necessary. A suitable degree of these is not incompatible with gentleness. The gentleness that makes one great comes from subdued strength.—Good Words.

OUR BOYS AND GIRLS.

THE DEACON'S ADVICE.

"Think more of the harvest and less of the labor,"
Said good Farmer Smith to his neighbor one day,
Who paused on the hill-side, both stony and sterile,
To chat with the deacon, hard-fisted and gray.

The prospect seemed cheerless where even weeds wilted,
And oft would the husbandman growl and lament,
Yet still he worked on, with heart unconfiding,
Vexation his portion, instead of content.

Soft dews and warm rains on the hill-side descended,
A capital crop blessed the young farmer's eyes,
"O fool that I am," in the autumn he murmured,
"My summer-time doubts I now deeply despise!

"I might have spared all the fretting and worry;
The deacon was right, and my duty was clear—
'Think more of the harvest and less of the labor,'
I'll sing both in spring and in autumn next year."

'Think more of the harvest and less of the labor,'
Should be the grand motto of all as they toil;
For God will bless those who act nobly and wisely,
And flowers will spring from unpromising soil.

LIVES OF CELEBRATED MEN.

WILLIAM TYNDALE.

It is sometimes very hard to think ourselves back into the past.

It is hard for us to imagine what it must have been to live in an age when it was accounted a crime to own a copy of the Bible, and when men were thrown into prison or even put to death because they had read or listened to some portion of the Scriptures. This was the case in England for a long time after the death of Wycliffe: and his followers, the Lollards, as they were called, were persecuted from one part of the land to the other. Still, the light which had been set burning could not be put out, and men who had learned to love the Word of God could not be hindered from studying it even by the fear of death itself. Yet copies of the Book were scarce, for they all had to be carefully made by hand, and beside that, whenever they were discovered they were taken from their owners and destroyed

In the first half of the fifteenth century a great invention was made—the invention of printing. In the year 1450 the first book was printed, and that book was a Latin Bible. After that the students in the universities had copies of the entire Bible in Latin and of the New Testament in Greek. The common people, who could read no language but their own, were supposed to learn enough from the priests.

The priests often taught them things which were very different indeed from the precepts of the Bible. They wanted to keep the people ignorant in order to have them under their own control. They knew that ignorant folks are easily imposed upon, and they were afraid that if the multitude should come to know the truth for themselves it would be less easy to to make them obey the commands of the Romish church. So they taught that all that the people needed to do was to obey them and the bishops and the pope, and then they would be sure of going to heaven.

It was a difficult thing to do this, to be sure, for the priests were hard task-masters, and made life very uncomfortable for those whom they compelled to go on pilgrimages, to keep fast days and holy days, to pay for relics and for pardons, and for prayers offered for their souls. As though either money or good works could buy salvation! The blood of Christ alone could purchase that, and the price had been paid long before. The people learned this when at last they got the Bible in their own tongue, and then the power of the priests was gone forever.

Wycliffe died, you remember, in 1384. Just about a hundred years afterward William Tyndale was born. He it was who gave to his nation the priceless treasure of which it had been so long in need.

It seems that when he was a very young man, a student at Oxford, he made up his mind first to translate the Bible into English, then to print it and supply it to his countrymen. This became his one idea, his ruling purpose, and he carried it out, although he had to give his own life as a forfeit.

After studying at Oxford and at Cambridge he became tutor in the house of a wealthy gentleman who lived near Bristol. Here he went on with the work of translation which he had already begun, and here he had so many disputes concerning the Scriptures with the abbots and deans and others who were accustomed to visit his employer, that they at length ceased coming. They preferred, it is said, "the loss of Squire Welch's good cheer to the sour sauce of Master Tyndale's company."

After a time "Master Tyndale," fearing to get his kind patron into trouble, went off to London. He hoped to have help in his work from the bishop of that great city, whom he had reason to suppose favorable to his plan. He was disappointed in this, however, and after remaining some time in London he began to fear that it would be unsafe for him to stay any longer in England, lest his translating should be interrupted. So he borrowed ten pounds of a friend and sailed for Hamburg, where he was able to finish, or nearly to finish, his translation of the New Testament.

After that he went to Cologne, where there were celebrated printing presses, and where he expected to get his book printed. Again he was disappointed, for John Cochlaeus, a famous enemy of the truth, followed him to that city, found out where the printing was going on, and probably would have got possession of the Testament had not Tyndale fled with it to Worms. Here he was successful in printing two editions. These were secretly carried into England by merchants, who hid them in their bales and packages of goods. That was a sort of smuggling for which they have been honored ever since.

The books made a great stir in England. They were eagerly bought and read by the people, and as eagerly fought against by the abbots and bishops, who soon discovered their existence. The Bishop of London sent a merchant named Packington to buy up all that remained in Tyndale's possession, saying:

"Gentle Master Packington, do your diligence and get them, and I will pay for them whatsoever they cost you; for the books are naughty, and I intend surely to destroy them all, and to burn them at Paul's cross."

Tyndale, although he knew what they were wanted for, willingly sold them, for he said:

"I shall gette moneye of him for these bookes to bryng myself out of debt, and the whole world shall cry out at the burnninge of God's Worde, and the overplus of the moneye that shall remain to me shall make me more studious to correct againe, and newly to imprint the same."

He accordingly did this, and printed not only "the same," but also the five books of Moses and some of his own writings besides. Indeed, he went on issuing edition after edition of the New Testament, and afterward of a larger part of the Bible, with a perseverance that was most remarkable.

The King of England, Henry the Eighth, was persuaded to issue a decree commanding that all of Tyndale's books should be burned, and from that time Bible-burning became the order of the day, in a land from which Bibles are now sent out all over the earth.

From burning the books the priests and prelates proceeded to the burning of some of those who loved them, and after awhile it was thought necessary to secure Tyndale himself.

"If we can only destroy him," his enemies reasoned, "we will stop the publication of these dreadful books which make the people think that they know more than we, their old masters and teachers."

The priests reasoned wrongly. They could take the life of the man whom they hated, but they could not destroy the effect of his work. The Bible had found a home in the hearts of the people, and they would not let it be taken from them.

After several vain attempts to imprison Tyndale, he was at length secured by treachery. A man named Philips, who was entirely without principle, was sent by the English government to Antwerp, where Tyndale was then living. He pretended to be very friendly to the reformer, boarded in the same house with him, talked with him, ate with him, and at length, when his plans were all laid, first borrowed a sum of money from him, then accepted an invitation to dinner, and, on the way to the place where they were to dine, had him arrested by men who were in waiting.

Tyndale lingered for a time in prison, but in the year 1536 he was burned at the stake for the crime of having translated and printed the Bible.

His dying prayer was: "Lord, open the King of England's eyes."

"ONE STITCH AT A TIME."

"Put the thread over, Bessie. See how grandma does. Take the stocking in your own hands, and I'll hold the ball. Take up the stitch on this needle; so, dearie. Now put the yarn over; now take the stitch off; now another, and another; there, you have knit five stitches. Finish off to the end of the needle. You will soon learn, little Bessie; but remember, only one stitch at a time!"

"And is this just the way you make all the warm stockings you send to father and all us children, grandma?" said Bessie, looking earnestly into the dear old lady's bright spectacles: "One stitch at a time! one stitch at a time! one stitch at a time!" and she slipped the needle along, and put over the yarn slowly. "Why, grandma, it would take me forever to knit one stocking!"

"No, my dear; if you will only persevere, I will promise that you shall knit one whole pair for little Gracie before you go home next month; and won't dear mamma be pleased!"

"Oh, can I; can I, grandma? And you and I can sit together on the porch, and knit all the afternoon perhaps. I can learn to make my fingers fly, but not so fast as yours, dear, kind grandma;" and Bessie leaned over and kissed the ever busy hand, and grandma took the fair fingers of the little girl within her own and said,

"Make them useful fingers, helpful fingers, busy fingers, my dear child, and God will find work enough for them to do."

Bessie had to take several more lessons on grandma's stocking before she knew the stitch well enough to begin a pair for little Gracie; but soon grandma brought out some pretty colored yarn and a set of shining needles, and set up a pretty striped stocking, which she put in Bessie's hand, promising to keep an eye about the widenings and the narrowings, and the "heel work," as grandma called it. Bessie was very happy, and the two busy knitters would sit on the porch and talk earnestly while the bright needles were plying, and Bessie said the tune they always played was, "One stitch at a time! one stitch at a time!"

Grandma said, "Some people think that 'one stitch at a time' is a very slow motto; but better 'slow and sure,' Bessie. Whatever you do, do well. Don't hurry over your spelling lessons, and drop out the letters; don't hurry over your reading, and drop out the words. Be sure the last stitch or the last step was a right stitch or step, before you take the next. God gives us but one moment at a time to do our life work in."

Bessie kept on with her "one stitch at a time," and the pretty striped stockings were finished before her father came to take her home; and was not mama delighted when they were held up for her admiring gaze?

"And I knit them all, mother; grandma taught me how; and it is all done by 'one stitch at a time!'"—Anon.

TEMPERANCE.

The California wine product this year will not exceed 10,000,000 gallons, being a reduction of 40 per cent. The disease in grape-vines, known as "canleme" in France, made its first appearance in California this year.

A judge of Topeka, Kansas, lately imposed fines to the amount of $3,600, exclusive of costs, in disposing of seven cases of selling liquor contrary to the prohibitory law of that State.

The Emperor of Japan has taken the initiative in the cause of temperance in his empire by appointing a commission to devise methods for the suppression of the liquor traffic.

The Prince of Montenegro recently closed all the drinking shops in his dominions, and has now turned his attention to another phase of temperance by issuing an edict against all luxurious wearing apparel.

Temperance people will not be satisfied, though saloon keepers pay all the expenses of building work-houses, jails, prisons, insane asylums, and of running them, if their own fathers and sons and husbands and brothers must fill them.

For every five persons who use tobacco in England, France and Russia, there are 15 in Germany and North America, 24 in Belgium, and 28 in Holland. The medical fraternity are comparatively unanimous in condemning its use in every form, and rank it only second to intoxicating liquors as the foe to longevity and the promoter of insanity.

Mr. Francis Murphy, abroad for two years, reports most gratifying success in his work. At Dundee, out of a population of 155,000, 33,000 signed the pledge. One-third of the little city of Spalding, with a population of 7,000, took the pledge. In Stockton-on Tees 5,000 men and women did as much; in Sunderland 3,000 joined the ranks. Forfar too, impregnable as it was, the most dissipated town in Scotland, yielded. In Ireland, where Mr. Murphy left his son, Mr. Thomas E. Murphy, 100,000 people took up the cause.

It is stated that there are only six distilleries of rum in the country, and all six are in Massachusetts. Of nearly half a million gallons of rum exported last year the greater part went to Africa. The Germans say of a man who has taken just enough alcohol to be mentally stimulated that he is "illuminirt;" but rum is plainly not the kind of illumination which the Dark Continent needs.

The Cincinnati saloon keepers are terrible sticklers for "personal liberty," but they want it all on their side. It has been the custom of certain poor women to keep coffee stands at the public markets. The saloon keepers have organized to break up this business, since it interferes with the sale of beer, and they have induced the Board of Health, which has control of the markets, to prohibit the sale of coffee at the public markets.—Dayton Herald.

The number of accidental deaths in Quebec within the past six months has been fearful. Drunkenness has played a large part in this sad harvest. We are really afraid to maintain a guilty silence in not stigmatizing in a striking manner each death cause by drink. Family chagrin and the grief of friends arrest our pen. We are wrong, perhaps, to have so often ceded to these considerations, for the scourge of intemperance augments in alarming proportions. There must certainly be a remedy to the evil. Christian preaching evidently no longer suffices, and the secular arm must be placed at the service of religion and of morality. It can not be denied that our country is overrun by drunkenness.—Quebec Paper.

A PROHIBITION ARGUMENT from the Union Stock Yards may be very conveniently drawn from this paragraph in the Chicago Daily News: "There is a row brewing at the Stock Yards about the slaughtering of diseased cattle. Because the health officer kills infected cattle which are intended for city consumption the dealers accuse him of being overzealous, and charge that he forgets that "individuals have some rights which must be respected." We believe the cattle men are right in this matter. If any one in the city desires to make his Sunday dinner off a roast from an animal covered with putrid, cancerous sores he ought to be permitted to do so. The people have some rights which even a cattle inspector is bound to respect."

The Churches.

—Elder J. Grillen, of the Free Baptist church, Hootonsville, Wisconsin, last week parted in Chicago from a son and his wife who are on their way to India as missionaries of the Word of God. These devoted young people leave two children to be trained by their grandparents while they are absent on their errand of mercy to the souls of men.

—Prof. Excell, a new and well qualified leader in the service of Gospel song, has lately come to Chicago, and is grandly assisting those who labor in word and doctrine. At the exposition of the Sabbath school lesson by Pres. C. A. Blanchard last Saturday noon, he sang with Mr. Herald and will assist next Saturday when the meeting will be transferred from the lecture room below to Farwell Hall itself, so have the meetings outgrown the accommodations which have for years been found ample. Last Saturday the address was eloquent and convincing. Doors and aisles were filled until hardly any standing room remained, and the keenest attention, with occasional ejaculations of approval, was given to the fearless and faithful address. President Blanchard also spoke Sabbath morning and evening in the Moody church.

—The dedicatory services of the new Swedish Theological Seminary of the Northwest were held Wednesday afternoon in the first Methodist Episcopal church of Evanston, Ill., in the presence of a large audience.

—A number of well known and prominent citizens met at Farwell Hall on the 13th inst. and took steps toward organizing a Scotch Presbyterian church in which the services and preaching shall be in the Gaelic language.

—A formal call has been extended by the Tabernacle Presbyterian church of Indianapolis to the Rev. Thomas H. Hanna, pastor of the First United Presbyterian church of Monmouth, Ill. His salary is to be $3,500.

—Plymouth Congregational church, of this city, has taken the advice of the pastor, Dr. Scudder, and taken steps to make the Sabbath evening services more attractive to non-church goers of the poorer classes by adding thereto a special song service. A choir of one hundred voices has been organized from the young people of the congregation, and will sing at all the evening services. The quartet choir will not be dispensed with, but will assist the larger choir. Moody and Sankey hymns will be used, so that all who attend may be able to join in the singing.

—The Wesleyan General Conference began its quadrennial meeting in Syracuse, N. Y., last week Wednesday. The American Wesleyan says that "from many considerations it is evident that there never assembled a General Conference in the history of our connection of churches under more favorable auspices." There is no general inclination to change any part of the discipline, and the work of this meeting will be to plan for the extension of the principles held by the Wesleyan churches.

–Rev. A. R. Brooks of Kansas, sends greeting to the Wesleyan General Conference with the assurance that though he was at one time opposed to the introduction of the "new rule" on secret societies, he is now on reconsideration of the subject, most heartily in accord with it.

—The United Presbyterian Synod of Illinois met Oct. 9th at Aledo, and selected Dr. W. T. Meloy of this city for its moderator. The Synod passed a unanimous and warm commendation of the prohibition movement.

—The semi-centennial of the United Presbyterian church of Bloomington, Indiana, was celebrated on the 7th ult. The principal address was given by Rev. W. P. McNary, the pastor since 1870. He said that the United Presbyterian church testified in the past against slavery and the union of church and state. It testifies now against secretism and intemperance, and must take no steps backward until it sees the triumph of these principles. Thirteen years ago this church numbered 208; 344 have united since, and the present membership is 302.

—Elder Miles Grant of Boston has been holding a series of revival meetings every evening in Green St. Tabernacle, near Madison, this city, since the 30th of September. In connection with the preaching of the Gospel Elder Grant lectures on Sabbath afternoons, and on Monday, Wednesday and Saturday evenings on prophetic history, making use of Adam's celebrated chart enlarged to 68 feet in length. His labors are seconded by the pastor of the church, Elder A. P. Moore, and interesting conversions have taken place during these meetings, which continue until November and possibly later.

—The many friends of Rev. J. H. Timmons, late pastor of the Tarentum congregation, held a reception at his residence on Thursday evening, October 4, and presented him with a handsome gold-headed cane and gold watch chain.

—The Interior makes a suggestion. It is that the cent saved by the new postal-law on each letter be appropriated to missions engaged in the work of converting the world to Christ.

—The Christian World Pulpit, of London, of a late date, advertises in its contents "a powerful sermon by the Rev. Dr. Dykes, preached last Sunday morning in Regent-square Church, and an eloquent discourse by the Rev. Robert Collyer, D.D., of New York, besides sermons by the Revs. Henry Ward Beecher, E. W. Shalders, B. A., and Alfred Rowland, LL.B." This is such a combination of Freemasonry, Unitarianism, liberalism and the Gospel as will do English readers more harm than good.

—The annual financial account of the Moravian Missions for the past year gives total receipt of £19,728, or about $98,000. Of this a little less than one-quarter (£4,500) came from Moravian societies in America and Europe, £7,947 from friends in other churches, £2,011 from endowment funds, £4,611 from legacies and £737 from mite societies. The expenditures are £8,756 for support of missions, £8,574 for pensions of retired missionaries and their widows and education of their children, and £2,012 for expense of management and support of a training institution. The proportion in the items of expense is somewhat remarkable. The mission reports give totals of 114 stations and out-stations, 284 missionary agents, 26,401 communicants and a total of 79,021 adherents. Of the communicants 796 are in Greenland, 456 in Labrador, 15,374 in the West Indies, 6,860 in Surinam, 3,750 in South Africa, 25 in Australia and 13 in Thibet.

—The McAll Mission is to establish a meeting in Calais, where, until a short time ago, no Protestant preacher's voice had been heard for two hundred years. The first attempt to introduce the new Paris flower mission to its work in the hospitals has ended by the flowers being taken away from the patients, because they were distributed by Protestants.

—The Minister of Public Worship at Berlin has ordered all Protestant school children in Germany to be presented, on the approaching Luther anniversary, with a valuable little work containing a well-written life of the great Reformer.

--In Philadelphia Presbyterianism leads, and it is stronger there than in any other city. Within the city limits it has 145 ministers, 84 churches, and 27,835 communicants, the net increase of members the last year being 882. New York city has 126 ministers, 38 churches, and 18,285 communicants, and the denomination lost more last year in that city than it gained.

—The thirty-seventh annual meeting of the American Missionary Association will be held in the Central Congregational church of Brooklyn, New York (Rev. Dr. Behrends) beginning Tuesday, October 30, at 3 P. M., and closing on the evening of Thursday, November 1. The sermon will be preached by Rev. John L. Withrow, D.D., of Boston, on the evening of the first day, and be followed by the communion service.

—At the Wesleyan conference held recently at Hull, England, eighteen clergymen of the church of England, residing at Hull, and led by the vicar of the parish, attended the session to extend a formal welcome to the members of the conference, and to present an address expressing a most fraternal regard. The visit was conducted with great courtesy and delicacy. The event is said to have had no precedent since Wesley separated from the Establishment.

—The Church of England Zenana Missionary Society has established a training school for its missionary candidates. A medical course of two years includes the essentials for Eastern practice, and is carried on under the direct supervision of Dr. Gauld, late medical missionary in China. The general training course for teachers plans for one year of work. The first three months are a testing time for the "probationer."—Heathen Woman's Friend.

—Until recently Bavaria was the least favored as to religious liberty of all parts of the German Empire The law recognized only family worship, and forbade all public worship except that of the Roman Catholic church. The Methodists meet with all sorts of difficulties. But good times have come at last. A royal manifesto has just granted to all Bavarian Methodists the rights of a distinct church, including liberty to preach, to hold Sunday-schools and to have places of worship and cemeteries. The population of Bavaria is about five millions.—L'Evangeliste.

—A Norwegian philosopher named Heergard, who was at one time a rank atheist, has been converted by the Christian truth, and in the preface of the second edition of one of his works he has made a noble profession of faith.

—Carey's first Hindoo convert built a chapel at Serampore entirely at his own expense, and was himself very useful as a native preacher; while the first native minister ordained by the Church Missionary Society—a convert of Henry Martyn's—was instrumental in getting some sixty souls into the fold of Christ.

—The annual report of the Southern Methodist Board of Missions for 1883 includes both domestic and foreign missions. The foreign missions are in Mexico, Brazil, and China, and among the domestic missions are included German and Indian mission conferences. In connection with the latter there are in the Indian Territory about 6,000 Indian communicants. The Brazil undertaking is comparatively new; but it reports 113 members. There are two missions in Mexico, the Mexican border, and the Central Mexican. Together they have 2,553 members. In China the Board has 131 members.

THE PULPIT LAGS.

CENTRAL WEST ASSOCIATION AT LAWN RIDGE, ILL.

A ride of eight or nine miles from the station brought us to the hospitable home of Oscar Stowell for tea, whose acquaintance with my brother, "the Major," gave me a pleasant introduction. Lawn Ridge is a beautiful rural settlement in the edge of Stark and Marshall counties where the mass curls up into a sort of prairie mountain, the divide between Spoon river and the Illinois. It is a pleasure to the average Illinoisan to see so sightly a place in his own State. The Congregational church with its tall spire forms a conspicuous object for many miles; a nearer view shows stained glass windows, and the interior is furnished with bell, organ, furnace, finely decorated chapel, kitchen, etc., and with an active, united people and a wide-awake pastor they seem to require only the blessing of God to be useful.

This is, like Washington, a city of magnificent distances, but good roads, good horses, and pleasant company made this only an additional charm. The hospitality of the people is abundant, and their social powers equal to the occasion.

With so long a preface, let me mention a portion of the exercises particularly interesting to your readers.

Rev. A. R. Thain, in a paper on "In what sense shall we adapt our Preaching to the Times," left the door so widely open that Bro. P. P. Chapman felt constrained to speak of Freemasonry, and in a temperate manner urged the duty of dealing faithfully with that and kindred evils. Your correspondent followed, after whom several of the pastors expressed themselves. Bro. Clark did not wish to assail that of which he knew nothing. Bro. Ellsworth thought the ministers did not want to be cranks. The moderator, Rev. W. R. Butcher, said the true position of the ministry was that of a wise conservatism, and when they felt called upon to deal with this matter they would go solid against the evil. This was about all the leaders of 3,000 Christians had to say of the principal organized form of misbelief of our time.

A remark of my host, Bro. Clemans, an intelligent farmer, struck me as easily put into the terms of Christian exhortation. He said he never kept stock on his place any longer than he could make it grow; he wanted improvement all the time. "Grow in grace," etc.

Respectfully yours, F. W.

RED CLOVER.

TESTIMONY OF A WHEATON LADY.

Wheaton, Ill., Aug. 9, 1883.

Messrs. Needham's Sons:—We have great reason to be thankful that so simple, cheap, and at the same time effective a remedy as your Red Clover has ever been discovered. Nearly two years ago, my oldest son was troubled with a very disagreeable rash, which broke out on his neck and arms, and finally extended over his whole body, it being the worst on his feet. We tried three physicians, and every domestic remedy we knew anything about; but nothing did any good for any length of time. Finally, others of the family were afflicted in the same way, until five of us were suffering from this skin eruption, when we heard of the Clover. We have used only three packages and one bottle, and now consider ourselves free from the disease.

Your Clover has also done wonders for me, aside from this. For twelve years I have been troubled with sick-headache, which grew worse and worse, until I would have an attack once, and sometimes twice a week, until existence seemed almost burdensome. After paying out hundreds of dollars to physicians, and trying every known remedy, I had become discouraged, when I commenced drinking the Clover tea, without a thought it would help my head; and I have not had an attack of sick-headache since (nearly four months); and I have not felt so well before in years. I would like all to know what the Clover will do for suffering humanity, especially the thousands of women who are afflicted with sick-headache.

Gratefully yours,
Huldah E. Loveless.

FARM NOTES.

BEANS.

The Sanitarian is loud in its praises of beans as a food. It says: The nutritive value of beans is very great—greater than almost any other article of food in common use. Considering their richness they are probably the cheapest food we have, but somewhat difficult of digestion, probably owing to the fact that we rarely cook them enough and masticate them insufficiently. In preparing beans for the table they should first be well soaked in cold water, and then thrown into boiling water and cooked until of a medium consistency—betwcen a fluid and a solid, neither too thick nor too thin. They require some acid on them when eaten, and a sufficient amount of salt to render them palatable. They may be eaten with potatoes or other vegetables, whieh contain more stareh and less albumen; rather than with too much bread and meat. In Germany there is a process patented, by which beans and all leguminous seeds are reduced to a very fine flour, and rendered capable of being used as food by the most delicatc persons. We have samples of this flour, whieh equal in fineness the best wheat flour; and it is used extensively in making soups for invalids. These soups are worth a hundred times as much as beef-tea. There is a fortune awaiting any one who will prepare a flour from beans as perfect as this flour from Germany. Bean-soup, rightly made, is exceedingly delicious and wholesome, and ought to bc used more extensively than it is.

LIMA BEANS.

For the past six consecutive years Mr. Smith has taken the first prize for Lima beans at the exhibition of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society. It is not usual here to sow these beans in the open garden before the end of May or first of June; but Mr. Smith starts his in small boxes in his cool grapery early in May, and transplants them, a box to a hill, into the garden-patch early in June, and thus secures a few weeks' advantage in earliness over those sown out-of-doors. The boxes are seven inches wide at top, eight inches at bottom, and six inches deep, and are bottomless. He arranges them closely on his grapery floor, fills them with fresh earth, and plants five seeds, eye downward, in each box. At planting time he brings in a barrow, lifts the boxes with a spade, and gently sets them in the barrow till it is full; then wheels them to the patch, which has been thoroughly prepared by deep working and manuring and marked off into hills three by four feet apart. A little hole having been dug out in the middle of each hill, the boxes are lifted on the spade off the barrow and set one in each hole without in the least disturbing the contents; then the boxes are slipped off over the tops of the plants and the earth drawn up around the beans in the hills with the hoe.—Country Gentleman.

VALUE OF HEN MANURE.

We saw on the premises of a first-class farmer, some time ago, a well-constructed hen-house, though not at all complying with the conditions which hen fanciers would impose. It was designed only for laying and roosting in; and it at first seemed strange to find at mid-day, with a cool atmosphere, turkeys and chickens occupying it. They had free egress and ingress, and were not fed or watered in it; yet the chickens always went there to lay. The secret was revealed, however, when the proprietor informed us that he had it cleaned out every week. All the droppings of the fowls were scraped from the floor, whieh was an inclined plane, into a trough or receiver, from which they were shoveled and heaped up, and the place whitewashed frequently. This required but little over half an hour, and the manure from last season was estimated at $120, and quite sufficient in quantity as on applieation to his entire crop of corn. As a rule we do not think farmers pay as mueh attention to their hen-houses and the manurial product as their real importance demands. Here was a most valuable amount of fertilizing material, obtained with little labor, upon the premises, ready for use when needed, which would have cost a heavy sum to provide; besides, from the excellent arrangement of the house, which was by no means expensive, an increase of eggs was obtained whieh more than covered all the additional expense in labor.—Germantown Telegraph.

The old method of working out the road tax has been abandoned in Ohio, and roads are now repaired under contract, and paid for by tax recieved from the county and township treasuries. The results are said to be excellent.

SEVEN DEGREES OF MASONRY

for One Dollar at the office of the Christian Cynosure, 221 West Madison street, Chicago. Send for catalogue, or call if in the city.

FULL OF GRAND IDEAS.

"Masonry and Mormonism are political engines with religious driving wheels. Their conductors are kings; their engineers, priests; their motive power, popular depravity combined with popular conscience, and their practieal end is the luxury and power of leaders who form men's interests for eternity that they may tax and govern them in time."

The above is a sample of the vigorous and striking thoughts, the grand ideas of which the pamphlet on the Batavia Convention is full. Get this book by all means. Price, post paid, 25 cents each.

FOLLY.

It's all folly to pay $50 or a $100 for seven degrees in Freemasonry in the Lodge and Chapter when you can send a dollar to the National Christian Association, 221 W. Madison street, Chicago, and get the whole thing by returu mail, without being hoodwinked and haltered or having to "put up refreshments" after tedious "initiations."

THE COMING CONFLICT.

A NEW AND RAPIDLY SELLING BOOK IN OPPOSITION TO FREE-MASONRY.

We desire to call your attention to this useful work, and ask you to help us in its circulation. We want Agents to canvass every community.

By selling this book one can do much good. It is by such literaturo that we must expect to awaken a popular sentiment against secret societies, and overthrow them. By selling this book one can make mouey. Liberal terms will be allowed, and any energetie Agent can sell many copies. Masons will buy it from mere curiosity. Anti-Masons will buy it for the facts and arguments presented. Many will buy it to send to their neighbors. Those on the fence will buy it that they may learn the truth on the subject. Those not interested in the discussion, and young people especially, will buy it for the story.

"A book which we trust may have a wide elroulation."—National Baptist, (Philadelphia.)

"It is an attack on Freemasonry with a sprinkle of Slavery thrown in to make it go down well."—A. R. Presbyterian, (S. C.)

"So intensely interesting did I find it that it was hard to pause until the last sentence was read. This work places the author high among the writers of the best class of fiction."—W. W. Barr, D D., in Christian Instructor, (Philadelphia, Pa.)

"A charming work fit to be classed with 'Uncle Tom's Cabin,' it is indeed less a work of fiction. The volume is aa valuable as a work of referenee as it is agreeable, truthful and useful. Our young folks will not leave the book, if they begin it, till they 'see how it turns out.'"—Cynosure, (Chicago, Ill.)

The book is neatly and plainly printed, handsomely bound, 352 pages, thick paper. A specimen copy sent to any one contemplating accepting an agency for $1.10.

Single copy $1.50; Per Dozon. $15.00.

HOLDEN WITH CORDS,

Or the Power of the Secret Empire. A faithful representation in story of the evil influeuce of Freemasonry, by E. E. Flagg, author of "Little People," "A Sunny Life," etc. This is a thrillingly interesting story, accurately true to life because mainly a narration of historieal facts. 384 pages. In cloth, $1; per doz., $9. Paper, 50c; per doz., $4.

NOTICES OF THE PRESS.

"There is no important history extant but has connected with it numerous other histories of which it was the initial point, or the dominating influenee. The abduction and murder of Morgan set ten thousand secret springs in motion, as the surrender of the charters of so many lodges at that time, and the severing of their connection with the order of some forty thousand of its members indicated. This story is one of these histories, and is a collection of facts woven into a story. It cannot fail to be read with interest."—Free Methodist, Chicago.

"The republieation of the Reform Story which run through the columns of the Cynosure for nearly a year is at last completed, and the book so anxiously expected by thousands of our readers has come from the press of Ezra A. Cook. The book is finely bound and fairly introduces the reader to the treasures within. The publisher has made occasional selections from Masonic works to verify the statements of the text; these make a helpful addition for some who can afford no more complete an armory of this kind."—Christian Cynosure.

"The exciting scenes of the fall of 1826, at Batavia, N. Y., when Wm. Morgan was murdered by Masonry, are woven into the story so as to give the truth of History a setting of attractiveness. The forty chapters of the volume are soon compassed by the eager reader who begius the volume. This volume ought to be read and will be sought as its merits become known."—United Brethren in Christ.

"It is one of the most fascinating narratives we ever read and teaches its lesson in a manner not soon to be forgotten. It is evidently written for the heart and its words go to the heart. It is singularly free from wild denunciation. Those who are interested in the secret society question would do well to form the acquaintance of this interesting work."—Lutheran Standard, Columbus, O.

Ex-President John Quincy Adams' Letters on the Nature of Masonic Oaths, Obligations and Penalties. Thirty most interesting, able and convincing letters on the above general subject, written by this renowned statesman to different public men of the United States during the years 1831 to 1833. With Mr. Adams' address to the people of Massachusetts upon political aspects of lodgery; an Appendix giving obligations of Masonry, and an able introduction. This is one of the most telling anti-secrecy works extant, aside from the Expositions. Price, cloth, $1.00; per dozen, $9.00. Paper, 35 cents; per dozen, $3.50.

History of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan. As prepared by seven committees of citizens, appointed to ascertain the fate of Morgan. This book contains indisputable, legal evidence that Freemasons abducted and murdered Wm. Morgan, for no other offense than the revelation of Masonry. It contains the sworn testimony of over twenty persons, including Morgan's wife; and no candid person, after reading this book, can doubt that many of the most respectable Freemasons in the Empire State were concerned in this crime. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

Oaths and Penalties of Freemasonry, as proved in court in the New Berlin Trial. Also the letter of Hon. Richard Rush to the anti-Masonic committee of York County, Pa., May 4th, 1831. The New Berlin trials began in the attempt of Freemasons to prevent public initiations by seceding Masons. These trials were held at New Berlin, Chenango Co., N. Y., April 13 and 14th, 1831, and General Augustus C. Welsh, sheriff of the county, and other adhering Freemasons, swore to the truthful revelation of the oaths and penalties. 10 cents each; per dozen, $1.00.

IN BRIEF.

—In 1790 there was one lawyer in the United States to every 8,000 inhabitants. Now there is one to every 800. This explains many things.

—In 1853 the highest gold production of the United States was reached, the total figures being $65,000,000. There has been a steady decline ever since. For 1880 the figures were $36,000,000. In 1853 the production of silver was $50,000,000; in 1882, $47,000,000.

—Bishop Wurtzburg, a noted clergyman, used to delight in telling a joke at his own expense. He was walking in a meadow. when he met a little shepherd lad. "What are you doing, my son?" said the Bishop. "Tending swine, your reverence." "How much pay do you get?" "One florin a week." "I am also a shepherd," continued the Bishop, "but I have a much better salary." "That may all be. your reverence; but then I suppose you have more pigs under your care," replied the boy.

—The Emperor of China, the ruler of the two hundred and fifty million people of which the Chinese nation probably consists, is now within five years of his majority. He is knelt to by all his attendants and honored as a god. When ministers of state and others enter for an audience, at four, five or six in the morning, according to custom, they have to go on foot to the center of the palace, over half a mile if they enter by the east or west gate. His mother, the princess, goes in to see him once a month, and kneels down when she first speaks to him, but rises afterward. His father does so too. Daily the Emperor studies Chinese for an hour and a half, and Manchu also for an hour and a half. He spends two hours in archery and riding, and in winter amuses himself with sledging. Eight eunuchs are in constant attendance on the Emperor, and at meal-times they take care not to let him over eat.

—Lieut. Stoney, who recently went to Alaska to give a government reward to the Tchuckchee Indians for their assistance to the wrecked crew of the steamer Rogers in 1881, reports the discovery of a river unknown to geographers. It had been vaguely spoken of by the Indians to former explorers, and Stoney, accompanied by an attendant and an interpreter, went in search of it. He believes he found it, and traced it to its mouth, about fifteen miles. He then went up the river about fifty miles, where he met some natives, who told him it would take months to reach the source, and that Indians came down on the river 1,500 miles to meet the fur-traders. They also said the river was twenty miles wide in some places. He has forwarded his report to Washington, and hopes to be allowed to go back for further explorations.

WHAT EMINENT ST. LOUIS PHYSICIANS SAY:

Preventive of Maleria.—Colden's Liquid Beef Tonic is a very agreeable article of diet, and particularly useful when tonics are required, being tolerated when other forms of animal food are rejected. In Diphtheria, Ague, Malaria, Typhoid Fevers, and every depressing disease, its use will be attended with great advantage. We have prescribed it with excellent success. J. H. Leslie, M. D.; G. P. Copp, M. D. S. B. Parsons, M. D.; R. A. Vaughan, M. D.; Drs. S. L. and J. C. Niedelet; Wm. Porter, M. D.; and many others. (Take no other.) Of druggists.

WHAT TOM MOORE SAID.

"Wrinkles are democratic and flatter nobody." The same may be said of all blemishes of the skin, whether caused by sickness, age or accident. "Glenn's Sulphur Soap" will at least retard the time when wrinkles make their appearance, by keeping the skin of a velvet softness, improving its elasticity, and preserving its healthful appearance. It gives a pearly aspect to the skin, which cannot be distinguished from the natural hue of a pure blonde complexion. Beware of counterfeits. See that "C. N. Crittenton, Proprietor," is printed on each packet, without which none is genuine. Sold by druggists and fancy goods dealers.

DR. JOHN BULL'S

Smith's Tonic Syrup

FEVER and AGUE

Or CHILLS and FEVER.

AND ALL MALARIAL DISEASES.

The proprietor of this celebrated medicine justly claims for it a superiority over all remedies ever offered to the public for the SAFE, CERTAIN, SPEEDY and PERMANENT cure of Ague and Fever, or Chills and Fever, whether of short or long standing. He refers to the entire Western and Southern country to bear him testimony to the truth of the assertion that in no case whatever will it fail to cure if the directions are strictly followed and carried out. In a great many cases a single dose has been sufficient for a cure, and whole families have been cured by a single bottle, with a perfect restoration of the general health. It is, however, prudent, and in every case more certain to cure, if its use is continued in smaller doses for a week or two after the disease has been checked, more especially in difficult and long-standing cases. Usually this medicine will not require any aid to keep the bowels in good order. Should the patient, however, require a cathartic medicine, after having taken three or four doses of the Tonic, a single dose of BULL'S VEGETABLE FAMILY PILLS will be sufficient.

The genuine SMITH'S TONIC SYRUP must have DR. JOHN BULL'S private stamp on each bottle. DR. JOHN BULL only has the right to manufacture and sell the original JOHN J. SMITH'S TONIC SYRUP, of Louisville, Ky. Examine well the label on each bottle. If my private stamp is not on each bottle do not purchase, or you will be deceived.

A REAL SKIN CURE.

There is only one and that with simple name. —"My skin, which has been covered with scaly sores, has become clean, smooth and soft as a lady's My hands were covered with little dry scabs. They have disappeared and I'm better than I have been for twenty years, using Dr. Benson's Skin Cure." —A. M. Noble, Selma, N. C., July 3, 1882.

—Dr. Benson's Skin Cure consists of internal and external treatment at same time and it makes the skin white, soft and smooth. It contains no poisonous drugs. $1. at any first-class druggists.

NIGHTS IN A BAR-ROOM T. S Arthur's great temperance book, complete and illustrated. By mail, 5c each; 50c per doz. By express, $3.50 per 100.

THE LIQUOR TRAFFIC THE GREAT SOURCE OF CRIME.

Leaves from the diary of an old lawyer.—By Hon. A. B Richmond, author of "Court and Prison," etc. A book of intense interest, rivaling the famous "Diary of a Physician," and, in its truthful, terrible pictures of the power and crime of intemperance, excelling the well-known "Ten Nights in a Bar-room." The temperance issue of the present time is, Shall prohibition be partial or entire? Shall the branches of the denth-bearing tree be pruned and trimmed, or shall the tree itself be cut down and its stump be torn up by the roots? The answer of "Leaves from the Diary" is, "Cut down the tree, tear up the roots, leave not a shoot or shred behind." It is certainly a very strong and eloquent volume Complete edition on fine, heavy paper, with colored lithograph of Sewall's stomach plates By mail, 30c each, $3 per doz. By express, $20 per 100. Abridged edition, by mail, 15c; $1.25 per doz. By express, $9 per 100.

THE LIQUOR TRAFFIC AND THE SOBER CITIZEN.

An able and telling work, by Rev. J H. Sherman which brings out the effects of the liquor traffic in a new light. The following are some of the commendations of the first edition.

"The author drives the nails of conviction through and clinches them."—N. Y. Christian Advocate.

"Speakers and workers in the temperance field will find valuable aid in this pamphlet. It is crowded with convincing facts "—Zion's Herald

"One of the ablest reviews of the drink curse ever issued from the press."—The Morning and Day of Reform.

"The arguments are put in telling form."—Judge Pittman.

New revised and enlarged edition. By mail, 10c each, $1 per doz. By express, $6 per 100.

DRINKS FROM DRUGS.

A startling exposure of the liquor traffic, by Eli Johnson. A book that cannot fail to arouse the American people to the gigantic swindle now being perpetrated. The writer was offered $10,000 by a leading brewer to keep still Liquor not only doctored, but made entirely from drugs. Extracts from a whole library of secret books, giving receipts for making and doctoring; advertisements of essences, fac-similies of labels, engravings, etc., etc. Claret, port, sherry, champagne, whisky, brandy, gin, rum, etc., all out of one barrel, and made at less than 25 cents a quart. Wine that never saw grape juice; cider that never saw apples; beer factories in place of breweries; fine cream ale without barley or brewing; whisky from arsenic; millions of gallons of liquor that pays no revenue tax. The farmer's corn and barley "all in your eye." A wholesale liquor store in a ten-foot square cellar; more French wine sold in New York City than is produced in the whole of France. By mail, 10c each; $1 per doz. By Express, $6 per 100.

W. C. T. U. ORGANIZATION AND WORK.

A book of general information on how to organize and run successfully a Woman's Christian Temperance Union. This book should be widely distributed among W. C. T. U. presidents, pastor's wives and other representative women. By mail, 10c each; $1 per doz. By express, $6 per 100.

HOME PROTECTION.

A lawyer's view of it. By J. C. Wells, attorney-at-law. The question of female suffrage for the protection of home ably discussed from a lawyer's standpoint. A book for the times. By mail, 10c each; $1 per doz. By express, $6 per 100

BAND OF HOPE RECITERS.

172 pages. 164 choice recitations of poetry and prose, containing some of the choicest bits of temperance material for the platform ever uttered, accompanied by an article on elocution. By mail, 10c each; $1 per doz. By express, $6 per 100

For $2.50 The same style of binding, medium size. Postage, 12c.

THE PERSIAN SEAL BINDING

Is very handsome and durable. It is this style of binding which is so much admired by Bible readers. Please notice particularly that these Bibles are kid lined and silk sewed. Many Bibles in this style outwardly are lined with black paper and sewed with thread in place of silk.

LEVANT MOROCCO BINDING.

The Persian Seal bindings are the best kept by most Bible dealers, and usually pass for the best teachers' Bibles made; and, to all appearance, they are so. There is, however, a better wearing binding, of which the Persian Seal is a good imitation; this is known as "Levant Morocco." In all respects the Levant morocco Bible corresponds with the Persian Seal description, except as to leather used for cover which, though looking like the Persian Seal, is stronger, and will last a lifetime.

Prices on genuine Levant Morocco bindings:

For $4.50—Small size. Postage, 10c.
For $5.50—Medium size. Postage, 12c.
For $8.00—Large size. Postage, 20cts.

Handsome Gift Bibles at Low Prices.

For 45c. Embossed morocco cover, gilt edges, gilt title on back. Very neat and durable. This is the handsomest 45c. gift Bible we have ever seen. Postage, 5c.

For 60c. Morocco cover, brass bound and plated, with handsome gilt clasp and gilt edges; two patterns; square and round corners. Exquisite lettering on side; printed in large clear type. Bibles no better are sold as high as $1 and $2. Postage, 6c.

For 70c. Similar size and style of binding to our 60-cent Bible; square corners, brass bound, with clasp and handsome tasseled book-mark; also medallion inserted on side in gold and red.

This was a new importation with the fall of 1882, and a very pretty design. It should be seen to be appreciated. (See cut.) Postage, 6c.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

—Creditors of the late Archbishop Purcell assembled in Cincinnati Thursday night and passed resolutions denouncing the recent decision of the District Court, asserting that the Judges were under clerical influence, and actuated by political motives. The assignee was requested to appeal the case to the Supreme Court.

—Fifty thousand people attended the celebration at Newburg, N. Y., Thursday, of the anniversary of Washington's farewell to his army. The streets were gayly decorated, and the procession was four miles in length. Senator Bayard, of Delaware, was president of the day, and ex-Secretary Evarts was orator, both gentlemen delivering eloquent addresses, the first speaker sketching the scenes of revolutionary times, and Mr. Evarts eulogizing Washington as the patriot, soldier and statesman. Pyrotechnics and social reunions closed the events of the day.

—Advices from Smyrna, Turkey, state that an earthquake on Tuesday, the 16th, shook the island of Chios severely, and extended along the entire coast of Anatolia and far into the interior of the western portion of Asia Minor. It was much more severe than indicated in the first advices received. The first shock was felt at Smyrna about twenty minutes past seven in the morning. With the first shock many dwelling houses came down. The damage was greatest on the lower slope of the ancient Mount Pegasus, where the vibrations were much more severe than along the plain between the hill and the shore, where the Christians reside. All the villages between Chesmeh and Vouria were destroyed. It is believed that upward of 1,000 persons perished. The survivors of the disaster are suffering fearful privation. A complete panic prevails. Most of the houses collapsed at the first shock, burying their inmates. People who escaped became panic-stricken and sought the fields, where many are still huddled together in a starving condition, and suffering from cold. Help for the stricken people is going forward from Symrna. The Porte has issued a notice stating that 20,000 persons are homeless and pleading for immediate assistance.

—The British Consul at Chios reports that 1,000 persons on the mainland were killed and wounded by the earthquake. The need of assistance is urgent.

—In the town of Altata, Mexico, yellow fever deaths have numbered twenty a day for two weeks. In addition to this horror, a hurricane struck the town on the 3d inst., literally blowing it to pieces, the inhabitants seeking shelter in the mountains. The depot and machine sheds are the only buildings now standing.

—In an Egyptian village the cholera has broken out again. The reappearance of the disease is attributed to the infiltration into the canal running through the village of water from the cemeteries in which the cholera victims were interred.

—An explosion occurred at the Wharncliffe-Carlton Colliery, Yorkshire, England, on the 19th. Twenty-five men were in the pit at the time. When the explosion occurred five men rushed to the bottom of the shaft and were rescued, though injured. The men remaining in the pit, numbering twenty, are lost.

—Twelve brigands, implicated in fourteen murders during the past six years, in the Amarosi district, Italy, have been sentenced to death. Eleven others, convicted of complicity, have been condemned to hard labor for life.

—Nihilist proclamations appear almost daily in Warsaw. A number of persons suspected of being the authors, including several students, have been arrested.

—A Vienna dispatch says a violent storm on Lake Ladoga and the Gulf of Finland caused great loss of life and shipping. Sixty vessels were stranded, and the bodies of sixteen persons have been recovered.

—During services in the Jewish synagogue at Ziwonks, in the government of Padolia, Russia, on Saturday, a false alarm of fire was raised in the woman's gallery, which caused a panic. The people rushed for the door where there was a terrible crush. Forty women were killed and thirty others injured.

NOTICE!!

Before sending a Postal Note be sure that POST MASTER HAS SIGNED it. Also, see that the date and amount of the note are properly punched in the margins.

I cannot collect where there is any irregularity or omission in filling them out by your Post Master. W. I. PHILLIPS, TREASURER.

ALL REMITTANCES should be made by draft on Chicago, New York or Boston, postal money order, express or registered letter. Currency by unregistered letter at sender's risk. In sending money the amount and what it is for should be distinctly stated. In every instance the name of the writer and his post office address should be given to avoid confusion or mistake.

We endeavor to make the Cynosure mail list absolutely correct, but in spite of careful supervision mistakes and errors will sometimes occur. If you do not receive the Cynosure regularly, or if your address is incorrect, you will confer a favor by notifying us at once. If you fail to receive any number of the Cynosure and will notify us we will send you another copy if possible.

POSTAL NOTES.

Some may have the idea that the new postal note ensures safety; but the only security is as heretofore in post-office orders, drafts, registered letters and by express. I prefer postage stamps to postal notes, but the better way is to send by registered letter or post-office money order. W. I. PHILLIPS, Treasurer.

REMEMBER!!

The largest subscription list reported by January 1st., 1884 earns a WEPSTER UNABRIDGED DICTIONARY; the next largest an ANTI-MASONIC LIBRARY: the third, a copy of "IN THE COILS;" the fourth, a copy of "HOLDEN WITH CORDS." Let the word go round for a list of 10,000. Let each old subscriber send a new one, and the work will be done before we realize that an effort has been made.

1ST. OF JANUARY.

TAKE ADVANTAGE OF THIS OFFER!

Trial subscriptions to the Cynosure from now to the 1st of January, 1884, will be sent for twenty-five cents.

Subscriptions new and old, from November 1st to January 1st 1885, only TWO DOLLARS. Take advantage of this offer, for it will be open only for letters received at this office before November 15th. This gives such subscribers the Cynosure for TWO MONTHS FREE!

If the Cynosure had TEN THOUSAND subscribers the yearly price could be reduced to a uniform rate of $1.50. Work and pray for this.

THE LARGEST LIST.

The offer of a premium for the canvassers who would send in the largest lists of subscribers to the Cynosure, has not been fairly stated. To prevent misunderstandings and to be just to all, this will be the plan:

To the friend who sends in the largest list of subscribers (counted by the year) will be sent a WEBSTER'S UNABRIDGED DICTIONARY.

To the one sending the next largest list will be sent an ANTI-MASONIC LIBRARY.

The third largest list gets a copy of IN THE COILS.

The fourth a copy of HOLDEN WITH CORDS.

Mark –

1. The offer is good only until January 1, 1884. Every name must be sent before that date.

2. Every one who wishes to compete for one of these premiums must send his name and address to this office, stating the definite purpose to compete.

3. Send in the names as fast as secured, writing the address plainly.

It is confidently asserted that temperance reform already saves Scotland over one pound a year per head of the population.

If we but knew the secret sorrows which other hearts endure, we would make allowance for many of their seeming inconsistencies, and pity rather than condemn.

A temperance victory has actually been won in a Chicago court, but the decision is by a judge and not a jury. The case involved the legality of the attempt by the Mayor and his demagogue aldermen to evade the State high license law. Judge Anthony delivered a long and labored opinion deciding against the city and fining the landlord of the Grand Pacific hotel $1,000. The decision will have an important effect upon the Chicago saloons, and if legal tricks and the knavery of politicians succeeds no better in the future the result will be the temporary closing of many drinking holes of the lowest class.

We do not know of any organization outside the Christian church which seeks especially the destruction of the low, sensational and often utterly vile literature which is not yet so bad as to forfeit its circulation in the mails. The Police Gazettes which fill the windows of second-class city news stores are always surrounded by a crowd of prurient youths. In many places there is a kind of spontaneous uprising against this dangerous incentive to youthful lust, and in Iowa the Railway Commissioners have taken up the matter with the purpose of suppressing the sale of those immoral prints on the trains, and it is promised that the legislature which meets in January will be asked to stop it.

The trials at Atlanta, Georgia, of a Ku-Klux band from Banks county was concluded last week and eight of the prisoners whre found guilty on every indictment. The testimony of the victims was conclusive and horrible. Negroes who voted for Ex-Congressman Speer were marked, and the mob swore vengeance upon every one of them, but such a trial as this through which they have just past will effectually subdue their colorphobia. Judge McCoy ("may his tribe increase!") treated the crime of the accused with a noble severity and used language in his charge to the jury which is worthy of the highest praise. The hellish Ku-Klux business, he said, "all grows out of the state of society which the freedom of the negro has brought about. His elevation seems to have set part of our people crazy. The evidence shows that this was a very wicked thing. It shows want of sense, want of propriety, want of principle of humanity, and all sense of justice. That men have gotten in that condition is a strange thing. It is strange that men should so forget their manhood, and so forget their God and the laws of their country, as to permit themselves to do such things on a poor, helpless negro. It is a disgrace to humanity and to society, and I say to you, gentlemen of the jury, as a citizen of the United States and as an observer that nothing has tended so much to bring this Southern country into disgrace, nothing has tended so much to put the balance of the United States against us as this kind of outrages. They are mean, they are disgraceful, they are horrible, they are things which people out of this country cannot comprehend or understand."

The Red Men of the Odd-fellow order, whose not unexpected practices in West Virginia have been unearthed and knocked in head, have their counterpart in the steady old Green Mountain State. A dispatch from Jamaica, Vt., to the Chicago News tells of the arrest and confession of some young men engaged in counterfeiting, and the discovery of a secret sworn gang from whose retreat in a mountain gulch they issued to commit depredations and circulate counterfeit money. These young fellows, twenty-three in number, from 18 to 21, impatient of the age-restriction of the Freemasons, got up their own order, the "United Birds and Brothers." They were fully organized and had a fearful initiation. Their oaths, if the testimony may be credited, are thus: "Do you solemnly swear upon your honor, by all that is great and small, to forever to keep secret what we are about to tell you, under the fear of being laid below the rays of the sun, moon and stars by the United Band of Avengers, so help you God." The second oath was: "Do you solemnly swear, upon your honor, to never tell or cause to be known by any being except yourself and your informers the secrets we have trusted to you, under the fear of being avenged by a party of which you know nothing of at present, so help you God?" The third oath read as follows: "Brother, knowing our secret purposes, do you solemnly swear upon your honor and by all that is great and small, by the devil and all his imps, hell and all its terrors, this world and all its dungeons, the United Birds and Brothers and all their avengers, never to betray, or cause to be betrayed, any one of our party, but to always defend each and everyone of us through thick and thin to the last, upon the fear of being shot dead in your tracks or stabbed through the heart with a nine-inch blade, so help you God." People read of these infamous clans with horror, knowing that no social order or safety can exist if they are permitted, but cautiously refrain from making any mention of Freemasonry, the source and spring of all these little thieving and murder clubs.

The Utah Commissioners are preparing their report to the President. If it reflects the sentiments of ex-Senator Paddock, one of the number, it will be enthusiastic in support of the Edmund's law. This gentleman believes that all is being done that was, or could be expected, since the polygamous Mormons have been disfranchised and are out of the legislature. He hopes the recommendation to Congress will suggest measures that will entirely uproot the evil. Governor Murray of Utah, on the other hand, in his report to the Secretary of the Interior, says that a combination has long existed in Utah to nullify the laws of Congress. At no time since 1852 has there been a lawful territorial government in Utah. "The history of all States," he says, "demonstrates that times come when military aid is necessary to support the civil authority. I know of no reason that takes Utah out of the rule. The Utah militia, organized under the law and the proper proclamation of my predecessors, but purposely organized to be independent of Federal authority, is not and cannot be made available. It therefore only remains for this Territory that the military forces of the United States be made available; and I present, with the necessity, the recommendation that it be made lawful for soldiers of the United States to be used " to assist the U. S. courts and marshals in all processes of law, thus meeting fraud and priest and lodge craft with the bayonet. But Congress will do little with recommendaitons if the people do not demand action.

VIRTUE VICTORIOUS.

I watch the circle of the eternal years,
And read forever in the storied page
One lengthened roll of blood, and wrong, and tears,
One onward step of truth from age to age.

The poor are crushed; the tyrants link their chain,
The poet sighs through narrow dungeon grates;
Man's hope lies quenched—but, lo! with steadfast gain,
Freedom doth forge her mail of adverse fates.

Men slay the prophets; fagot, rack and cross
Make up the groaning record of the past;
But evil's triumphs are her endless loss,
And sovereign beauty wins the soul at last.

—James Russell Lowell.

A Mormon leader at Salt Lake City recently said to a visitor: "We are laboring in every country; as far as Iceland on the north and New Zealand on the south. We almost encircle the globe." This is nearly true. During the present year 3,000 Mormons have landed at the port of New York, and it is estimated by the Mormon hierarchs that they have 75,000 converts in Europe ready to come. Recently twenty-five missionaries were sent into the Southern States, where they are reported as making many converts. Already the Territories adjacent to Utah are being Mormonized, and another five years will find them as fully under Mormon control as Utah. The laws thus far enacted are wholly inefficient, and there is good reason for alarm. The attitude of the Mormon church is that of open hostility to all laws, national and di vine. There is no mistaking the fact that the time has come for action on the part of Congress. No half-way measures will answer. It is not a question of politics, but one of outraged morals, a shameless disregard of decency, a slap in the face to well-ordered and civilized society. The Christian men and women of the land should arouse from their lethargy and do some active work before it is too late to avert a catastrophe.—Inter Ocean.

SUBSTITUTION.

BY E. RONAYNE.

The Bible is one complete whole. It is the revelation of the mind of God, but it is a revelation from God concerning the Lord Jesus Christ. From first to last, from Genesis to Revelation, we find the Lord Jesus everywhere either directly or indirectly presented. We first find him set forth as "the seed of the woman" in Gen. 3:15—the Lord God himself coming down in matchless grace to meet man in his terrible need and proclaiming to him the good news that "the seed of the woman" would in due time "bruise" the serpent's head. And from that time forward through all the types and shadows and figures of the ages the one great lesson that God was constantly teaching mankind was, that man, lost and guilty and sinful as he was, could come into his own holy presence and enjoy communion with himself, only upon the ground of another taking his guilt and meeting all the consequences of that guilt, by receiving in his own person the full penalty which God's infinite justice demanded on account of sin. Man had forfeited his life through sin—in fact man died, was separate from God, and he could lay no claim to life except through the death of another in his stead. This was the first lesson that Adam learned while yet a sinner in Eden. "He shall bruise thy head," said the Lord God to the serpent, "and thou shalt bruise his heel." And thus the bruising which guilty rebel man ought to have and which he richly deserved "the seed of the woman" took it. As it is written, "He was wounded for our transgressions, he was bruised for our iniquities, the chastisement of our peace was upon him and with his stripes we are healed." Isa. 53:5. And this same lesson was again impressed upon him when prior to his expulsion beyond the gates of Eden "the Lord God made them coats of skins and clothed them." Gen. 3:21. The spotless victim had to die, his blood had to be shed, his life had to be taken, and his covering transferred to the guilty rebel sinner in order that the latter might be in a fit condition to meet God and enjoy happy communion with him. And be very careful to observe that in all this, man himself had no part whatever. How could he? He was totally bankrupt, lost, ruined, helpless. God did everything. He found the remedy for man's awful condition, he gave the promise, he provided the victim, he made the coats of skins, and he clothed the guilty pair that rejected and despised his word and believed the devil's lie.

And thus it has always been and thus it is now. The sinner can only have life on the ground of another taking his place in death. And—O wondrous thought!—that other is no less a person than the well-beloved and only begotten Son of God himself. "God so loved the world"—loved it in all its ruin and guilt and rebellion—"that he gave"—not an angel, not an archangel, not a cherubim or seraphim, but "His only begotten Son that whosoever believeth on him should not perish but have everlasting life." John 3:16.

This is God's way, and furthermore it is God's only way of imparting life. God loved and God gave. Salvation flows only from one fountain, one source, and that, the fountain of God's love; it flows only through the person and work of the Lord Jesus Christ, and it can be appropriated only in one way, namely, by believing God's testimony and trusting in the faithful work of Christ upon the cross. "And neither is there salvation in any other, for there is none other name under heaven given among men whereby we must be saved." Acts 4:12. This was the way and the only way that Abel was saved. He "brought of the firstlings of his flock and of the fat thereof," and offered unto the Lord (Gen 11:4) and thus he testified that he had no right nor title to life except upon the ground of another dying in his stead. He justified God. And hence the Holy Ghost can bear testimony to his faith when he records in Heb. 11:4 that "through faith Abel offered unto God a more acceptable sacrifice than Cain, God testifying of his gifts." Abel confessed himself a sinner and expressed his faith in that Blessed One who was to take his place in death typified by his offering, and his name is enrolled by the Spirit of God as having obtained salvation.

Man to-day, taking his place as a sinner, owning and confessing his guilt and trusting in that blessed One who has come and who has died for sinners on Calvary's cross, not only receives forgiveness of sins but is actually "justified from all things" (Acts 13:38, 39); has "passed out of death into life," and shall never come into judgment as a sinner, the Son of God having already taken that place for him. John 5:24. Because him "who knew no sin, God made to be sin in our behalf that we might be made the righteousness of God in him." 2 Cor. 5:21. Is not that truly wonderful? The Lord Jesus became what we are that we might become what he is; was bruised that we might be blessed; died that we might live; and to show to the world that God was forever satisfied with the sacrifice that Jesus offered, he raised him from the dead and set him at his own right hand in the highest glory.

Thus "Christ suffered for sins, the just for the unjust that he might bring us to God." 1 Pet. 3:18. We were away from God, at the place of distance, in the "far country" and the Lord Jesus took that place and that condition for us upon Calvary's cross, when after enduring the horrors of that terrible scene and the three hours of darkness we hear him exclaim in the agony of his soul, "My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me?" Mat. 27:46.

Beloved reader it was because God loved sinners, the sinners of to-day—you, dear unsaved friends, who read this—that he thus dealt with his own well-beloved Son. Listen to his testimony in Isa. 53:6: "ALL we like sheep have gone astray, we have turned every one to his own way and Jehovah made ALL our iniquities to meet on him." All gone astray but all our iniquities laid on him. Dear friend, can you believe this good news? Can you trust what God says here? You would possibly believe me if I told about Hiram Abiff, can you believe God when he tells you about Jesus Christ? Listen to John 5:24: "Verily, verily, I say unto you, he that heareth my word and believeth on him that sent me hath everlasting life and shall not come into judgment but is passed from death unto life." This is to you, personally, addressed to your very self, and until you receive it as your own you are under condemnation just as much as if you were an ungodly Knight Templar and had drank the fifth libation out of a human skull. "He that believeth on him is not condemned but he that believeth not is condemned already, because he hath not believed in the name of the only begotten Son of God." John 3:18.

THE RIGHTS AND DUTIES OF NATIONS.

BY H. H. HINMAN.

Having in a previous article briefly considered the duty of individuals to the government under which they live, I desire to call attention to some of the duties of nations to their citizens and to those of other nations. I propose simply to state them and to dwell only on certain points.

Nations as well as individuals are subject to Divine law. They are bound "to do justly, love mercy, and walk humbly before God." They have no rights but such as are in harmony with these principles. They have a right, however:

1. To organize a government.
2. Declare laws with adequate penalties.
3. To levy and collect taxes for necessary expenses.
4. To prohibit the manufacture and importation of all such articles as are injurious to the health and morals of the people.
5. To suppress all injustice or immorality under the forms of law or religion.
6. To provide for, and require the education of all the people.
7. To provide for an international congress for the adjustment of differences, and to offer their friendly intervention for the pacification of contending nations.

Among the duties of government, are these:

1. To provide for the common defense by wise and lawful methods.
2. To establish justice by the prohibition and punishment of crime.
3. To secure domestic tranquility by the enforcement of just and wise laws.
4. To protect all persons in the enjoyment of rational liberty.
5. To protect them in all forms of religious worship not inconsistent with Christian morality.
6. To secure to all citizens the right to a Sabbath.

Among the things that governments may not do are: To deprive any person, whether subject to its own, or the authority of another nation, of any natural right; and no nation may deal with any other nation or with any individual in any way contrary to the Law of Love. It hence follows that no nation has a right to engage in war, because war cannot be carried on in harmony with Christian principles but requires a constant violation of them.

This is evident when we consider

1. That every soldier is required to swear unconditional obedience to his commanding officer. He can reserve no right of conscience, or of private judgment; but becomes a passive instrument in the hands of his superiors in rank. This is in violation of Lev. 5:4, 5 and the whole spirit of the Gospel.
2. Because strategy, which is the soul of war, is simply lying, to the opposing army. This is forbidden Ex. 20:16; Rom. 12:9; Col. 3:9.
3. It requires the taking of the lives of those unconvicted of crime, and unconscious of any criminal intent. Ex. 20:13.
4. It appeals to, and stimulates the worst passions in human nature.
5. It is not "loving our enemies;" not "blessing them that curse us; not doing good to them that despitefully use us." It is not "overcoming evil with good," but rather seeking to overcome evil with evil.

To these reasons may be added, that it terribly corrupts public morals and causes an excessive burden of taxation under which the nations contiually groan.

If it be urged that while wars of conquest and aggression are manifestly wrong, yet every nation has the right of self-defense,

I reply that it is usually impossible to tell which side is defensive; for invariably, both sides claim to be defending their rights if not their homes. This was especially true in the Franco-Prussian, the Turko-Russian and our own late civil war. Neither party to-day would admit that they fought for conquest, or except in national defense. We should remember, too, that both Jesus and Paul had special reference to defense, and prohibited the use of violence for self-protection. The language is, "resist not evil." "Bless them that persecute you." "Pray for them that despitefully use you." "Be not overcome of evil, but overcome evil with good;" or simply, abstain from defensive war.

If it be claimed that these rules are for individual, and not for national conduct it will remain to be proved that there is one law for individuals, and another for national morals, that nations are not aggregations of individuals, and that they have a right to discard justice and mercy in their treatment of each other.

If it be urged that war is justifiable for suppression of rebellion, it follows that there can be no such thing as the right of revolution. Revolution is only successful rebellion, and the right of rebellion and the right to suppress it by war cannot both exist, for rights, like obligations, can never conflict. The truth is, any people desiring a change of government have a right to seek such change by peaceful methods, and if such change is sought for adequate reasons, there can be no right to prevent it. War in the ordinary sense of the term, is as truly wicked as the duel. Nay, it is as much worse as nations are greater than individuals.

Washington, D. C.

THE TELEGRAPH MONOPOLY.

It should be remembered by those who see danger in government control of the telegraph, that there is much greater danger while it is in possession of a great monopoly controlled by a few individuals. This danger was very forcibly stated by Senator Windom in a letter written two years ago. He says, "There are in this country four men who, in the matter of taxation, possess and frequently exercise powers which neither Congress nor any of our State legislatures would dare to exert; powers which, if exercised in Great Britain, would shake the throne to its very foundation. These men may at any time and for any reason satisfactory to themselves, by a stroke of the pen, reduce the value of property in the United States by hundreds of millions. They may at their own will and pleasure discourage and embarrass business, depress one certain locality and build up another, enrich one individual and ruin his competitors, and when complaint is made coolly reply, 'What are you going to do about it?' In order to lay deep and sure foundations for the maintenance of their power, and to defeat the efforts of the people to curb it, they have now seized upon the channels of thought. Look at it a moment. One man, who controls more miles of railroad than any other in the world, and who is almost daily adding new lines to his colossal combination, now also controls the telegraph system of the United States and Canada, and is reaching under the sea to grasp that of Europe. What is there to hinder these men from depressing or inflating the value of all kinds of property to suit their caprice or avarice, and thereby gather into their own coffers the wealth of the nation? Where is the limit to such power? What shall be said of the spirit of a people who will thus submit to be bound hand and foot without a protest?'

The Senator then proceeds to suggest that the first and most important duty of Congress is to emancipate the people from such dangerous and despotic control of the channels of thought and intelligence by the establishment of a postal telegraph, "whereby they shall be afforded a safe, sure and cheap method of communication with each other."

Postmaster-General Howe, in his annual report last year, pointed out this great danger in similar language. He says, "The strongest reason why the government should control the telegraph is found in the fact that it is as potent for evil as for good. Like the government itself, it is a power too terrible to be wielded by any but the representatives of the whole people. In the great commercial centers, public stocks, corporate and mining stocks, bonds and staple products of agriculture, are bought and sold daily to the amount of thousands of millions. In all these markets one great telegraph company wags its tongue incessantly. It thus becomes the arbiter of prices, and may at pleasure buoy a market in which it wishes to sell, or break one in which it wishes to buy. This is an agency much too dreadful to intrust to private hands. Knowing that it can be so abused it seems to be the dictate of wisdom not to wait until it is so abused."

These are weighty words, especially when taken in connection with Dr. Norvin Green's statement to the Senate Labor Committee a few days since, that if there were no danger of legislative interference, the stock of the Western Union would be worth a hundred millions, and Jay Gould's repeated statement to the same committee, that the franchises of the company were invaluable. Free from government control the power of this company is the power of untold millions, its sway is absolute.—The Advance.

IDOLATRY.

The essence of idolatry is falsehood standing guard over sin. It dates back to the primal Lie launched by the devil in Eden. There are in the Hebrew Bible 20 names applied to idols, or human deifications, and literally translated they run like this: Carving, Device, Image, Statue, Shape, Shadow, Toil, Emptiness, Falsehood, Impurity, Horror, Filth, Shame, etc. All idolatry, in its highest character, is since the sun is the fountain of life. The supreme divinities in all nations have been the sun deified, as Baal, Jupiter, Zeus, Osiris, Apollo, Vishnu, etc. But nature is the product of the sun; therefore, in a more direct sense, all idolatry is and so we have a host of deified seasons, as Adonis, Bacchus, Saturn, Kronos, Tammuz, etc. Again, Satan is the spiritual ruler of nature, the "prince of the power of the air;" therefore nature worship is really homage received by him, so that all idolatry is DEVIL WORSHIP.

SUN-WORSHIP,

NATURE WORSHIP,

Some of the deifications of fire, and destroyers, as Moloch, Chemosh, Siva, etc., show this fiendish relationship very plainly; they are an equal mixture of cruelty and lust. In this line are the human sacrifices of Africa, and the suttee and Juggernaut victims of Asia. The Baal and Ashtoreth of the Bible, the male and female or sun and moon deifications of Phœnicia and Canaan, represent all the rest. Each nation has its

BAALS AND ASHTORETHS.

Egypt—Osiris (the bull, Apis) and Isis.

Rome—Jupiter and Juno; Mars and Venus.

Greece—Zeus and Hera; Apollo and Diana; Adonis, or Bacchus and Ceres.

Samaria—Adrammelech and Anammelech.

India—Vishnu and Lakshmi; Rama and Juggernaut are manifestations of Vishnu; while Siva is the wicked counterpart, the night of Vishnu's day.

Often the original Baal may be traced by name, as in the Philistine Beelzebub, the Celtic Beal, and Beltein, or Baal feast, the Scandinavian Balder, etc. Also in Babel, Bel, Babylon, Belshazzar, Hannibal, etc.

The worship of

or the female deification of nature, has been in all nations, and in all ages, attended by shameful festivals and secret orgies. A famous shrine of Ceres was at Eleusis, Greece, and the "Eleusinian mysteries" were so utterly vile that they have ever since been a synonym for all that is darkly evil. The initiated were sworn to secrecy under penalty of death. The wild and drunken worship of Bacchus, "Bacchanalia," was joined with it, until the government stopped it, fearing that society would be destroyed. In the same line was the terrible apostacy of Baal-peor, Num. 25: 1–3, and the women weeping for Tammuz, or Adonis, the deifications of the seasons, in the "chapter of abominations," Ezek. 8. In verse 14 the women are doing the simulated grief, and in verse 16 the men are discovering the joy. The worship of the golden calf, the Egyptian Baal, was equally horrid. Ex. 32: 4, 6, 25. Jeroboam's calves were the same, 1 Kings 12: 28, and were the centers of the religious festival of Israel for 300 years. It was also the moral ruin of Judah; 2 Kings 23: 7. Through all this mass of sin runs the fable of death and resurrection, of sorrow and joy, symbolized by the natural truths of day following night, and summer following winter. How different from the historical accuracy and purity and power of the resurrection of Jesus!

The spirit of idolatry is ever among us, since it is not simply a tendency of ignorant nations, but a tendency of human nature. Among the remaining among us to-day are

1. SUN RELICS; "worshiping the sun toward the East." Ezek. 8: 16. Ritualists insist upon turning to the East in public prayer, and it has split the English church. It seems a small matter, but it means a great deal. In papal churches and Masonic halls, parts of the marchings and services are toward the "East."

2. FIRE RELICS. The religious use of candles is the most prominent. They form a regular part of papal and "high church" worship. The old festival of Candlemas, Feb. 2, is so called from the procession with lighted candles.

3. FESTIVAL RELICS. Nature worship revolved about two centers, mid-winter and mid-summer. Christmas is the remaining relic of the first. It is the old Yule, or "wheel" of nature festival, confined now to green branches and wax tapers. Easter and St. John's Day are the relics of the second. Easter is Ostara, or the East, the German deification of early summer. Saint John's Day is the old mid-summer feast with John the Baptist added to it. Chambers' Encyclopedia, describing the ancient ceremonies at these festivals, says:

"The kindling of the fire, the leaping over or through the flames, and the flower garlands, show that these rites are essentially of heathen origin and of a sacrificial character. They are obviously connected with the worship of the sun, and were doubtless practiced before the Baptist was born."

SUMMING UP,

we may say of idolatry over all the world, and through all ages, that

Its PHILOSOPHY is the study of nature, in distinction from the study of grace.

Its OBJECT is pleasure, in distinction from duty.

Its METHOD is praying the gods to be reconciled, instead of God praying us to be reconciled.

Its ATTRACTION is the indulgence of sin, instead of the cleansing from sin.

Its NATURE is the worship of Satan, in distinction from the worship of God.

Its END is degradation and eternal death, instead of salvation and eternal life.

"This is eternal life, that we might know thee, the only true God, and Jesus Christ, whom thou hast sent," even "CHRIST WHO IS OVER ALL, GOD BLESSED FOREVER!"—Sandwich, Ill., Visitor.

PRESBYTERIAN TESTIMONY AGAINST THE LODGE.

(The following article was published in Edinburgh, Aug. 25, 1757, and has been often republished since.)

WHEREAS, An oath is one of the most solemn acts of religious worship, which ought to be taken only upon important and necessary occasions; and to be sworn "in truth, in judgment, and in righteousness;" without any mixture of sinful, profane, or superstitious devices: and,

WHEREAS, This Synod had laid before them in their meeting at Stirling on the 7th of March, 1745, an overture concerning the Mason oath, hearing that there were very strong presumptions, that, among Masons an oath of secrecy is administered to intrants into their society even under a capital penalty, and before any of those things which they were to keep secret be revealed to them, and that they pretend to take some of these secrets from the Bible; beside other things which are ground of scruple in the manner of swearing the said oath; and therefore overturing that the Synod would consider the whole affair, and give directions with respect to the admission of persons engaged in that oath to sealing ordinances: and,

WHEREAS, The Synod, in their meeting at Stirling on the 26th of September, 1745, remitted the overture concerning the Mason oath to the several sessions subordinate to them, for their proceeding therein, as far as they should find practicable according to our received and known principles, the plain rule of the Lord's Word and sound reason: and,

WHEREAS, The Synod, at their meeting in Edinburgh on the 6th of March, 1755, when a particular cause about the Mason oath was before them, did appoint all the Sessions under their inspection, to require all persons in their respective congregations, who are presumed or suspected to have been engaged in that oath, to make a plain acknowledgement whether or not they have ever been so; and to require that such as they may find to have been engaged therein should give ingenuous answers to what further inquiry the Sessions may see cause to make, concerning the tenor and administration of the said oath to them; and that the Sessions should proceed to the purging of what scandal they may thus find those persons convicted of, according to the direction of the above-mentioned Act of Synod in September, 1745, and:

WHEREAS, The generality of the sessions have, since the afore-mentioned periods, dealt with several persons under their inspection about the Mason oath, in the course of which procedure, by the confessions made to them, they have found others, beside those of the Mason Craft, to be involved in that oath. And the Synod finding it to be proper and necessary to give more particular directions to the several Sessions for having the heinous profanation of the Lord's name by that oath purged out of all the congregations under their inspection:—

THEREFORE, The Synod did, and hereby do appoint that the several Sessions subordinate to them in dealing with persons about the Mason oath shall particularly interrogate them:—If they have taken that oath; and when and where they did so? If they have taken that oath, or declared their approbation of it, oftener than once, upon being admitted to a higher degree in a Mason lodge? If that oath was administered to them without letting them know the terms of it—till in the act of administering the same to them? If it was not an oath binding them to keep a number of secrets, none of which they were permitted to know before swearing the oath? If, beside a solemn invocation of the Lord's name in that oath, it did not contain a capital penalty about having their tongues and hearts taken out, in case of breaking the same? If the said oath was not administered to them with several superstitious ceremonies, such as the stripping them off, or requiring them to deliver up anything of metal which they had upon them; making them kneel upon their right knee, bare; holding up their right arm, bare, with their elbow upon the Bible, or with the Bible laid before them; or having the Bible, as also the square and compasses, in some particular way applied to their bodies: And if, among the secrets which they were bound by that oath to keep, there was not a passage of Scripture read to them (particularly 17 Kings 7: 21), with or without some explication put upon the same, for being concealed?

MOREOVER; The Synod appoints that the Sevearl Sessions shall call before them all persons in their congregations who are of the Mason Craft, and others whom they may have a particular suspicion of, as being involved in the Mason oath, except such as have been already dealt with, and have given satisfaction upon that head, and that, upon their answering the first of the foregoing questions in the affirmative, the Sessions shall proceed to put the other interrogatories before appointed. And also, that all persons of the Mason Craft applying for sealing ordinances, and likewise any others concerning whom there may be any presumption of their having been involved in the Mason oath, shall be examined by the ministers, if they have been so; and, upon their acknowledging the same, or declining to answer whether or not, the ministers shall refer them to be dealt with by the Sessions, before admitting them to these ordinances. And that all such persons offering themselves to the Sessions for joining in Covenant-work shall be examined by the Sessions as to their concern in the aforesaid oath.

And the Synod further appoints that when persons are found to be involved in the Mason oath, according to their confessions in giving plain and particular answers to the foregoing questions, and professing their sorrow for the same, the said scandal shall be purged by a Sessional rebuke and admonition; with a strict charge to abstain from all concern afterward in administering said oath to any, or enticing any into that snare: and from all practice of amusing people with the pretended mysteries of their signs and secrets. But that persons who shall refuse, or shift to give plain and particular answers to the foregoing questions shall be reputed under scandal, incapable of admission to sealing ordinances, till they answer and give satisfaction as before appointed.

And the Synod refer to the Several Sessions to proceed unto higher censure, as they shall see cause, in the case of persons whom they may find involved in the said oath, with special aggravatioon, or taking or relapsing into the same, in opposition to warnings against doing so.

And the Synod appoint that each of the Sessions under their inspection shall have an extract of this act for executing the same accordingly.

The editor of the McGregor, Iowa, News, a German who works with the Prohibitionists, put the case in regard to the success of prohibition in this way: "Do you ask me will this idea of compulsory total abstinence triumph? I ask you why should not total abstinence prevail here as in other things that are wrong? I ask you, do you believe in total abstinence? I ask philosophers, divines, scientists, professional men of every class, is total abstinence from alcohol good? They exclaim, and I say, yes, it is. What is right and good shall prevail. Can the world be taught to live without alcoholic stimulants? The world does not need to be taught this. One-half of the world already believe and practice this. The female sex live, move, have their being, bear burdens we do not dream of, and are almost entirely total abstainers. God pity the human race if they were not! And cannot men live, move, have their being and bear their burdens upon the same food as the women and girls do? But enough of this."

A substantial German citizen who has recently himself shifted from the whisky brokerage to the coal business, said in his office the other day, "The truth is, the whisky business is dreadfully demoralized. The Western distillers are running at only one-quarter of their capacity, and yet even this overstocks the market. More saloon keepers than you dream of are anxious to go out of the business but cannot because all they have is invested in the saloon and nobody will buy them out."

"Well," we questioned. "What has brought about this state of things?"

"Why, partly the overproduction in Kentucky, but after all, I tell you, you temperance folks have made a big hole in the whisky business."

Cheer up and on, brave workers, the "big hole" will yet be a chasm that no earthly ingenuity can bridge.—Union Signal.

FREDERICK DOUGLASS ON THE SUPREME COURT DECISION.

An immense mass meeting of the colored citizens of Washington was held last week to discuss the late decision of the Supreme Court against the Civil Rights law. Frederick Douglass spoke eloquently as follows:

The cause which has brought us here to-night is neither common nor trivial. Few events in our national history have surpassed it in magnitude, significance, and importance. It has swept over the land like a moral cyclone, leaving moral desolation in its track.

We feel it as we felt the furious attempt, years ago, to force the accursed system of slavery upon the soil of Kansas, the enactment of the fugitive slave bill, the repeal of the Missouri compromise, the Dred Scott decision. I look to it as one of the striking and shocking developments of the conflict between the spirit of liberty and the spirit of slavery, and I venture to predict that it will be so regarded by after coming generations. * * *

The Supreme Court is the autocratic point in our national government. No monarch in Europe has a power more absolute over the laws, lives, and liberties of his people than that court has over our laws, lives, and liberties. Its judges live, and ought to live, an eagle's flight beyond the reach of fear or favor, praise or blame, profit or loss. No vulgar prejudice should touch them anywhere. Their decisions should come down to us like the calm, clear light of Infinite justice. We should be able to think of them and speak of them with profoundest respect for their wisdom and deepest reverence for their virtue, for what his holiness, the Pope, is to the Roman church, the Supreme Court is to the American state. They are men, to be sure, and may not claim infallibility, but, like the Pope, they are the supreme power of the nation. What will be said here to-night will be spoken, I trust, more in sorrow than in anger—more in a tone of regret than in a tone of bitterness.

We cannot, however, overlook the fact that, whether so intended or not, this decision has inflicted a heavy calamity upon the seven millions of the colored people of this country, and left them naked and defenseless against the action of a malignant, vulgar, and pitiless prejudice.

It presents the United States before the world as a nation utterly destitute of power to protect the rights of its own citizens. It can claim service and allegiance, loyalty and life of them, but it cannot protect them against the most palpable violation of the rights—rights to secure which governments are established of human nature.

It can tax their bread and tax their blood, but has no protecting power for their persons. Its national power extends only to the District of Columbia and the Territories, where the people have no votes and the land has no people. All else is subject to the States. In the name of common sense, I ask, what right have we to call ourselves a nation in view of this decision and this destitution of power?

In humiliating the colored people of this country, this decision humbles the nation.

He left the Constitutionality of the decision of the Supreme Court to the lawyers, but claimed the right to remark as to a strange and glaring inconsistency which appears in the action of the court on this Civil Rights bill. It is a new departure, entirely out of the line of the precedents and decisions of the Supreme Court at other times and in other directions. It has utterly ignored and rejected the force and application of intention as a rule of interpretation. It has construed the Constitution in defiant disregard of what was intended by the adoption of the fourteenth Amendment. It has made no account of the intention and purpose of Congress and the President in putting the Civil Rights bill upon the statute book of the nation. It has seen fit in this case, affecting a weak and much persecuted people, to be guided by the narrowest and most restricted rules of legal interpretation. It has viewed both the Constitution and the law with strict regard to their letter, but without any generous recognition of their broad and liberal spirit.

Now what I complain of, and what every lover of liberty in the United States has a right to complain of, is this sudden reversal of all the great rules of legal interpretation by which this court was governed in other days, in the construction of the Constitution and of laws respecting colored people. In the dark days of slavery this court, on all occasions, gave the greatest importance to intention as a guide to interpretation. The intention of the law, it was said, must prevail. Everything in favor of stavery and against the negro was settled by the intention. The Constitution was constructed according to its intention. Its plain language was sacrificed, and had to fall before intention of its framers. When we said in behalf of the negro that the Constitution of the United States was intended to establish justice and to secure the blessings of liberty to ourselves and our posterity we were told that that was not its intention, that it was intended only for white people, and that the intention must govern.

When we came to that clause of the Constitution which declares that the migration or importation of such persons as any of the States may see fit to admit shall not be prohibited, and the friends of liberty declared that that provision of the Constitution did not describe the slave trade, they were told that while its language applied not to slaves, but to persons, still the purpose and intention of that clause of the Constitution was to protect the slave trade, and that that intention was the law. When we came to that other clause of the Constitution which declares that "no person held to service or labor in one State, under the laws thereof, escaping into another, shall in consequence of any law or regulation therein be discharged from such service or labor, but shall be delivered up on claim of the party to whom such service or labor may be due," we insisted that it neither described nor applied to slaves; that it applied only to persons owing service and labor; that slaves did not and could not owe service and labor; that this clause of the Constitution said nothing of slaves or the masters of slaves; that it was silent as to slave States or free States; that it was simply a provision to enforce a contract, to discharge an obligation between two persons capable of making a contract, and not to force any man into slavery. For the slave could not make a contract; we affirmed that it gave no warrant for what was called "the fugitive slave bill," and we contended that that bill was therefore unconstitutional. But our arguments were laughed to scorn by that court. We were told that the intention of the Constitution was to enable masters to recapture their slaves, and that the fugitive slave law was Constitutional.

Fellow citizens: While slavery was the base line of American society, while it ruled the church and the state, while it was the interpreter of our law and the exponent of our religion, it admitted no quibbling, no narrow rules of legal or Scriptural interpretation of Bible or Constitution to govern the judicial mind of that high court. It demanded its pound of flesh, no matter how much blood was shed in the taking of it. It was enough for it to be able to show the intention to get all it asked in the courts or out of the courts. But now slavery is abolished. Its reign was long, dark, and bloody. Liberty now is the base line of the Republic. It has supplanted slavery, but I fear it has not supplanted the power or spirit of slavery. Where slavery was strong liberty is weak.

Oh, for a Supreme Court of the United States which shall be as true to the claims of human liberty as the Supreme Court formerly was to the claims of slavery! When that day comes, as come it will, a civil rights bill will not be declared unconstitutional and void, in utter and flagrant disregard of the intentions of the national legislature by which it was enacted and of the rights secured by the Constitution.

As individuals of the State of South Carolina may, under this decision, stamp out the rights of the negro wherever they please so long as they do not do so as a State. All the parts can violate the Constitution, but the whole cannot. It is not the act itself that is unconstitutional in the view of this decision.

Its unconstitutionality depends wholly upon the party committing it. If the State does it, it is wrong; if the citizen of the State does it, is right. "O, consistency, thou art indeed a jewel!" What does it matter to a colored citizen whether he is unlawfully insulted and outraged by a State if the same is allowed to be committed by a citizen of a State? The effect upon him is the same, and it has just this effect that the framers of the fourteenth Amendment plainly intended by that article to prevent. It was the thing, not the instrument. It meant to protect the newly enfranchised citizen from injustice and wrong, not merely from a State, but from the individual members of a State. It meant to give him the protection to which his citizenship, his loyalty, his allegiance, and his services entitled him, and this meaning, and this purpose, and this intention is now declared unconstitutional and void by the Supreme Court of the United States.

Will our readers turn to and read the record of Christ's disciples' behavior at and after the time Christ "set his face" toward Jerusalem, and they may expect to see their history reproduced in the movements of our reform. For Christ is taking his cause toward the metropolis of our nation as he did then to theirs; and all the devils with whom "we wrestle" will be astir. Let us keep on "the whole armor of God," putting it on anew every day, piece by piece, that we may "stand against the wiles of the devil."

WASHINGTON LETTER.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—I have before me the second number of "Father Columbia's Paper," the organ of "Butler and Regan for '84." It is devoted to Freemasonry, free trade, and free rum. It takes the place of the (Masonic) Advocate that expired in 1878, and represents what that did, the lowest and worst elements in society. It has the one merit of courage, or rather audacity, and claims a circulation of over a million. It regards all restrictions on the liquor traffic as "infernal monopoly," and claims that the election of Hoadly in Ohio is a vote to let poor men sell whisky as well as the rich.

Logically, this is correct, for if the liquor traffic is the right of any, it is the right of all. But so terrible are its effects, so distructive to the good, and so promotive of all that is evil, one is astonished that any should contemplate it without horror, and not long for its suppression.

But let no one be astonished at the strenght of such a movement or think lightly of it as though there were no danger. When Freemasonry and free rum make common cause we can only feel safety in remembering that Jehovah reigns. We remember how strong was slavery, and yet the wealth invested in the manufacture and sale of intoxicants is greater than the market price of all the slaves. The number of slave-holders was scarcely half so great as the number of Freemasons, and their power of united action was inconceivably less.

Nor need we be surprised at a ticket whose head was a Northern general and his associate a member of Davis's rebel cabinet. Are they not brethren? Did they not each on the night of his initiation listen to the wonderful words, "How good and how pleasant it is for brethren to dwell together in unity?" There is power in aiming low. In all our great cities there is an inconceivable number of those whose most marked characteristic is, that they prove and illustrate the doctrine of total depravity. Let no one underestimate the power of the vicious element in a land where the ballot may be sold for rum, and yet such ballots choose the rulers of the nation.

The paper has several articles in praise of Masonry, each of which appeals to the selfishness of those who aspire to special advantages over their fellows; but such advantages are consistent with neither benevolence nor justice. The lure of the lodge and the saloon are kindred in every respect, and their power is such that God only can restrain it. May he help us.

H. H. HINMAN.

WHAT WILL YOU DO?

We ask this question of every operative Anti-mason in Michigan. A few of the friends of our cause have taken hold of the work and have organized and incorporated a society to help carry on this work, and we earnestly invite your sympathy and co-operation. We have already an agent in the field who is lecturing, circulating literature, and soliciting subscriptions to the stock of the association. and we propose, just as fast as we can secure the funds, to send men out to inform the people of the evils of secretism and the dangers arising therefrom. Do you want a part in the good work? if so let us hear from you at once. You can help the cause we are striving to promote.

First. By taking stock in the association. Every Anti-mason in the State should pay something every year for the overthrow of secretism.

Second. By inducing others to subscribe for stock or contribute in other ways to the funds of the association.

Third. By circulating and securing subscriptions for the Michigan American, This paper is now the property of the association and should have a circulation of 5,000 subscribers before the new year.

Fourth. By inviting the agent to visit your community. If you are willing to board him and spend a little time in taking him to those who should be interested in our reform he will be glad to visit you, if you can secure a place or places for him to lecture so much the better. Don't say "we would invite him but we are afraid we can't pay him," if you are not sure of raising a single cent, do not be deterred on that account from inviting him, as he is paid by the association. Now will you not take hold with us and assist us in pushing forward this enterprise? Any information you may desire in reference to the association or its plans of work can be obtained by addressing the Secretary and General Agent, Rev. H. A. Day, Parma, Jackson county, Mich., or the President, Rev. W. H. Ross, Williamstown, Ingham county, Mich.

W. H. Ross.

It is an excellent rule to be observed in all disputes, that men should give soft words and hard arguments; that they should not so much strive to vex as to convince each other.

REFORM NEWS.

NOTICE.—Arrangements are being made for a Convention of Hollanders to meet in December, in the interests of the anti-secrecy reform, and under the auspices of the Michigan Christian Association, of which due and timely notice will be given. An issue of the Michigan American in the Holland language is now being prepared, and will be issued in November.

WISCONSIN.

The annual convention of the Wisconsin Christian Association will be held in Menomonie, Dunn county, Nov. 6th to 8th. This convention will be under the management of Rev. Isaac Bancroft, State Agent, and J. P. Stoddard, General Agent of the N. C. A. After the opening address by J. P. Stoddard at 7:30 P. M. of Tuesday, the 6th, announcements will be made for the following days and evenings, which will include addresses, discussions, and, if desirable, working of degrees. President C. A. Blanchard is expected to be present and fill a prominent place on the programme. Come in the name and in the Spirit of the Master.

FROM THE GENERAL AGENT.

DAYTON, O., Oct. 22, 1883.

Leaving Vincennes at 2 P. M. Saturday, our train ran into the Union depot at Cincinnati a few minutes before 9 o'clock. I found I could reach this city at 11:40 P. M. and so determined to keep Sabbath in Dayton:

At 9 next morning I dropped into the First U. B. church, where were gathered a large and very interesting number of young and middle-aged persons engaged in the study of God's Word. It was an intensely interesting sight, and after lingering a few moments to gather inspiration and hope I passed on to Bro. D. H. French's United Presbyterian church, where I met this estimable brother with his wife and children and other households engaged in the study of the Word, I accepted an invitation to speak to his people, and afterwards to share the hospitality of his home, and after being much refreshed in body and spirit I sought out the home of our venerable friend Prof. L. Davis, D.D., to meet a most hearty welcome.

The doctor is fully in accord with the law of his church on secrecy and deeply interested in the work of the N. C. A. His genial and loving spirit shrinks from personal hostility to even those who widely differ from him on vital issues, but if there is in his renewed nature one element of compromise with sin or disposition to purchase peace at the expense of the right, I failed to detect it in an interview extending through the hours of an intimate and to me exceedingly profitable conference. Almost three score and ten, he is hale and hearty in body and mind, and his countenance, lighted up with intelligence, is itself a benediction and inspiration rarely met with in this world where so many, even among Christians, have "their teeth set on edge." The thirty young men preparing for the Gospel ministry who are brought in daily contact with this mind, great in its childlike simplicity and downright honesty, are highly favored.

Bro. Kemp was not at home and I missed the pleasure I had anticipated in a personal interview with him. At the evening services I met Bro. Hott and other brethren well and widely known, and this morning paid a hasty visit to the Biblical Institute, and was much pleased with the neatness, tasteful and orderly appearance of all that I saw in and about this fine structure. It was too early for class or general exercises so that I got only an outside view. At the depot I find that my best train to Cleveland leaves at 9:45 this morning, and as I have an hour and forty minutes I purpose accepting Bro. Hott's kindly invitation to visit him in his sanctum at the U. B. publishing house and gather what inspiration and encouragement I am able, then hasten on to Syracuse.

The Missionary Review states that fifty American denominations, numbering 115,436 ministers and 10,286,331 members, contributed last year for foreign missions $3,086,587.27, being a trifle less than thirty cents each. This is a gain over the preceding year of over $89,000. There was in the same year a gain in home membership of 128,389. Over 2,200 foreign missionaries are sustained and 8,678 native helpers. The membership in the mission churches is 222,906; a gain during the year of 14,440. We thus see that the gain in the home churches was only about one per cent., while the gain in the foreign field was almost seven per cent. In view of these facts who shall say that money and labor spent in mission work is not well repaid? The sum contributed is indeed a "magnificent example of true Christian benevolence, but how many professed Christians have had no part in this noble work? Every Christian who has any income should devote a generous part to this Gospel work. The American Board, the Oberlin Faith Mission, the Wheaton Anti-masonic Mission, and the various denominational missions open a wide door to every giver. Let us hasten to obey his word, "till he come."

AMERICAN POLITICS.

NOMINATIONS FOR 1884.

For President,

JONATHAN BLANCHARD,
OF ILLINOIS.

For Vice President,

JOHN A. CONANT,
OF CONNECTICUT.

PLATFORM.

We hold: 1. That ours is a Christian and not a heathen nation, and that the God of the Christian Scriptures is the author of civil government.

2. That God requires and man needs a Sabbath.

3. That the prohibition of the importation, manufacture and sale of intoxicating drinks as a beverage is the true policy on the temperance question.

4. That the charters of all secret lodges granted by our Federal and State Legislatures should be withdrawn, and their oaths prohibited by law.

5. That the civil equality secured to all American citizens by articles 13th, 14th and 15th of our amended Constitution should be preserved inviolate.

6. That arbitration of differences with nations is the most direct and sure method of securing and perpetuating a permanent peace.

7. That to cultivate the intellect without improving the morals of men, is to make mere adepts and experts; therefore, the Bible should be associated with books of science and literature in all our educational institutions.

8. That land and other monopolies should be discouraged.

9. That the government should furnish the people with an ample and sound currency.

10. That maintenance of the public credit, protection to all loyal citizens, and justice to Indians are essential to the honor and safety of our nation.

11. And, finally, we demand for the American people the abolition of electoral colleges, and a direct vote for President and Vice-president of the United States.

—The final count in Ohio shows a yet larger prohibition vote than we have reported. The total vote was 711,791, the vote for the second amendment 320,554. A bare majority would have been 355,896, so that the amendment failed by only 35,342 votes and not 70,000 as is frequently reported.

POPERY AND ITS CONTROL OF CIVIL GOVERNMENT.

Froude quotes Luther as having written thus:

"That devilish popery is the last worst curse of earth, the very worst that all the devils with all their might can generate. God help us all. Amen."

Froude adds:

"Very dreadful and unbecoming language the modern reader thinks who has only known the wolf disguised in innocent sheepskin. The wolf is the same that he ever was, and if ever he recovers his power he will show himself unchanged in his old nature. In Luther's time there was not the smallest affectation of sheepskin (but) one passionate desire . . . to carry fire and sword through every country which had dared to be spiritually free."

And this is the wolf in sheep's clothing which our truculent politicians load with favors, which must prove a curse to our future history as a people; for we cannot nurse the serpent and expect to escape the sting. May a kind providence avert such a result as, or worse than, slavery brought upon us! Who shall say that the agencies of evil may not combine together in secret and try with more success than slavery to overturn our central government and attempt a partition of our country—Mormonism here, Romanism there, and lodgery with its great bands of trained soldier worshipers of high sounding titles—all to find a home where it need not confine them to the secret chamber, but emblazon and engraft them upon its civil government! What allies, with divide and govern on their flags! T. H.

WHAT WOMEN CAN DO.

The Union Signal prints the following from Rev. A. Willey of Northfield, Minn., which, while it is an argument for the conservative side of the question of woman suffrage, is full of noble enthusiasm for the highest and holiest influence that can be used by human beings for the elevation of the race:

Never since the "morning stars" welcomed and celebrated her advent to this world has it been such a privilege to be a woman as it is now. And her possibilities as man's "helpmeet" are far from a full development. Men may move the head, but she moves the heart of the world. Logic had done its utmost for the slaves when "Uncle Tom's Cabin" sent its electricity through the heart of the nation. And her labors are still more potential against the great liquor torment of the country, although her powers are yet far from exhausted. Some call for the ballot, and seem inclined to wait until they get it before "meddling much with politics," dimly perceiving the vast political influence which they can exert without it.

They can stand by and assist the men in enlightening society on its political duties; and if they have the fidelity and courage to all vote right if they have the ballot, as is affirmed, why should they be deterred from any effort to induce others to do it now? They hold in their arms every voter of the future, in the nation, and can nearly make him what they please. What civil power equals that? And their possible influence over present voters is little realized.

In the State of Maine in anti-slavery days, the women had a State organization, with local societies in the towns in much of the State. They called it "The Daughters of Freedom." Their object was to inform their husbands, fathers, sons, brothers and neighbors on the condition of the slaves and what their votes could do for them, and what they were doing against them when cast for parties and men in alliance with slavery. Then with earnest affection they would plead with them. On election days they would have their flags flying in front of their houses, with such mottoes as "Vote for the slaves," "Vote for freedom." And when husbands, fathers, etc., were leaving for the elections they would plead with them, "Will you vote for the poor slaves to-day?" And when they returned, they would meet them at the door or the gate, "Did you vote for the poor, suffering slaves to-day?" What man could long stand that?

And that organization called a great Fourth of July celebration in the interior of the State, the only one ever called by women, people coming by carriages fifty and sixty miles. John P. Hale of New Hampshire was the chief orator, and Mrs. H. B. Stevens, a visitor. It was estimated that 8,000 were there, the largest rally ever seen back among the farmers in the State. Politicians came to look on, and were heard to say, "It is no use to fight this any longer," and the reconstruction of the State was soon completed into the new Republican party, which rose to 10,000, 20,000 and 30,000 majority. It was believed that the women did more for this result than they would with the ballot. May they do it again "For God and Home and Native Land."

CORRESPONDENCE.

WHAT DID HE MEAN?

A few weeks ago while on my way to Jackson to attend the meeting of the Board of Trustees of the M. C. A. I fell in with a large number of M. E. ministers and laymen on their way to their conference to be held in Albion. While waiting in the depot at Kalamazoo I saw a tall layman, who sported a Knight Templar jewel at his vest chain, approach and roughly seize by the lappels of his coat a young, spruce-looking chap whose general demeanor indicated that he might be a candidate for ministerial dignities. After shaking him up in a manner that would have done credit to Jubela himself the young man said to him, "Don't use me too roughly, I can see what I am doing now."

I wondered whether that laymen had ever shaken that young minister when he couldn't see what he was doing. The tall layman had a jolly laugh with some of the ministerial brethren over the remark. W. H. Ross.

SECRET SOCIETIES IN WEST AFRICA.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—In your extract from the work of Capt. Ellis on "The Land of the Fetish," I am reminded of scenes once familiar in West Africa.

Having spent several years in the region described, and taken much pains to obtain accurate information about the unchanging customs of that people, I think I may perhaps add something to the interesting narrative.

The secret society of which he speaks as the Boun, is doubtless the Boundoo, and is composed of both men and women, though controlled by women, and presided over by a female devil, who is an object of worship. I once broke up and drove off a company of such worshippers, who had congregated on the mission premises. This order initiates young women, but I am not aware that it ever offers human sacrifice.

I think the author confounds this order with the Purroh which is composed entirely of men, and is the much more powerful order. This order which makes the laws, and declares war or peace, meets in places just as described, and always offers a victim—boy or girl—wherever it is established. It initiates young men with ceremonies very similar to the third degree of Freemasonry. It has three degrees. They are symbolically slain, lie in the grave, are raised from the dead, become new creatures, and have a new name.

The distinguished Masonic writer, Dr. Olliver, in his "History of Initiations," proves that a similar system has prevailed in nearly, if not every portion of the habited world, and notably in Mexico and Peru, and that in all cases it had its origin in the ancient sun worship of Egypt and India. He admits that Freemasonry has similar ceremonies, and claims for all these forms of mystery a common origin. Both he and Dr. A. G. Mackey speak of the ancient mysterics, of which those in Africa are but the continuation, as spurious Freemasonry.

There is frequent mention in the Bible of this ancient sun worship, which seems to have been the most ancient idolatry. See Ez. 8:1–18; Eph. 5:11–13, and many other passages. It was the form of wickedness into which the Jewish people were most prone to relapse, and which brought down on them the most terrible retribution. It may be a satisfaction to the Freemasons to claim an ancient origin, but surely they must share the claim with the children of Purroh and Boundoo. In each case it is heathenism intensified. H. H. HINMAN.

A FRIEND OF DAVID C. MILLER.

CAMBRIDGEBORO, Pa.,

EDITOR CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE:—Not long since I wrote asking if your paper was still printed, not having seen a copy for years, and in answer received a copy of Oct. 11th, for which receive my thanks; as with it in my possession, and such other literature as you may be able to send me, I expect to be assisted, sustained, and sympathized with in the work before me.

In order that you may understandingly do so, allow me to give you some points in my history. I was born in 1824; read Morgan's work; became an Anti-mason in early life, and have remained one ever since; was a few years since well and intimately acquainted with Col. David Miller, who frequently related the circumstances connected with the Morgan affair at Batavia, in which he (Col. Miller) was engaged as printer, etc., which tended to deepen my conviction of duty to oppose secret societies, especially Masonic.

In 1842 I united with the Baptist church here, and have been a member with the exception of about one and a half years while in the West. The church was by its record Anti-masonic when I united, and for a number of years past I have interrogated candidates for the pastorate on the subject, because I could not conscientiously support a man as pastor who belonged to and sustained a secret, oath-bound society. The church has now given a call to a man whom they know—by his own admission—belongs to the Masonic order.

But the younger members (and several of the older ones) are ignorant of the workings of Masonry, and so to some extent, are excusable, but it is my duty to inform them to the best of my ability. Hoping to become better acquainted, I am,

Very respectfully yours, J. H. GRAY.

THE PRAYER MEETING AND THE PAPER.

CLEARFIELD, Iowa, Oct 15, 1883.

Stand up! stand up for Jesus!
Ye soldiers of the cross;
Lift high His royal banner,
It must not suffer loss.

The thoughts of reform prayer meetings encourage me. Let them be started everywhere. Let us see to it that we have clean, pure hearts, so that God can work in us "both to will and to do" his good pleasure.

An M. E. brother was at my house. I gave him a short history of the N. C. A.; told him that the secret empire is controlling church and state, and corrupting the courts to a great extent; told him the Lord was raising up a standard of reform against it, the same as he did against slavery; and asked him to subscribe for the Cynosure. He said he did not need to take it; that he is, and does not know the time when he was not, an anti-slavery man. I gave him a copy. He took it home and read it, and indorses all of it. The Cynosure has many such excellent friends. These dear brethren must be impressed that they are the men that God wants to use in this good cause. They are the men that must help.

Ye are the men, now serve him,
Against unnumbered foes,
Your courage rise with danger
And strength to strength oppose!

The Christian Cynosure, organ of the National Christian Association, was raised up of the Lord to battle for the right, the principles of which are worthy of their patronage and must have it. We do not, we can not depend upon the powers of darkness for help; let us look to Jesus and to the friends of his eternal truth and light.

Put on the Gospel armor,
And watching unto prayer.
When duty calls, or danger,
Be never wanting then.

CYRUS SMITH.

ANTI-TOBACCO.

MELVIN VILLAGE, N. H., Oct. 22, 1883.

Editor Christian Cynosure,

DEAR SIR:—I wish to express my thanks to you for the kindly notice of the little paper I am publishing in the interest of the "Anti-tobacco reform," as given in your issue, Oct. 18, 1883.

If there are friends enough in this fair land of ours to help sufficient to pay for printing 1,000 copies once in three months I shall keep the Gem "going."

It requires much prayer, and I doubt not if God wishes me to continue in the work he will give me some friends to assist. I owe nothing for what I have published, and up to date have nothing to publish any more. Any who wish sample copies, or quantities to distribute I shall be pleased to send on application until present edition is exhausted.

I know it is a grand cause. Every child saved from this evil tends to better the condition of society, the nation and the world. The work seems almost overwhelming and the foe formidable, but I dare in the strength of Israel's God to combat, on the field of conflict, this filthy, man-degrading giant, regardless of smoke, slights or abuse. Yet I purpose to be judicious in my publication, adapting it to the needs of the people, especially the rising generation.

Yours very respectfully,

C. H. SHEPHERD.

PITH AND POINT.

GLAD OF THE PRAYER MEETING.

I am praying daily for the destruction of lodgery. I am glad to see so much said on the necessity of all Christians calling earnestly upon God for the downfall of this great evil, which has brought such deadness upon the churches of the whole nation.—Elder Wm. Plant, Camp Douglas, Wis.

EASTER.

I read the article of "Senex," Mass., on Easter, in your 18th Oct. number with much interest. Without entering on the question of the first or seventh day for worship may I be permitted to call in question the statement to the effect that "no other ordinance" has been appointed in commemoration of the resurrection of Christ than the first day of the week. This statement is of course at variance with the idea of all who regard the Apostle Paul's words in Rom. 6:3, 4 and Col. 2:12 as fixing the truth that baptism was burial and rising with Christ. Faith first, then immersion—its first action as in the commission of Christ, and in the first sermon thereafter in obedience to him. The death has the Bread and Cup; the resurrection has the water grave to be observed until the end of the world.—Another "Senex."

A TRACT ON THE HIGHWAY.

A private letter from a young man and Sabbath school teacher in a country place in Alabama, shows how truth and moral light spreads, He writes:

"I was passing along the public road and chanced to pick up a piece of paper which I read with much pleasure and now write to the Association whose address was on the paper for some sample tracts. The title of the paper was, 'Selling Dead Horses.'"

In another letter since received he writes: "I am a thousand times pleased with my tracts."

LEUTY—BARKER.

MARRIED—On the 19th inst. in Blanchard, Iowa, by Rev. H. Avery, assisted by Rev. A. W. Hall, Rev. William Leuty, of College Springs, and Mrs. Amy Barker, of Blanchard.

Bro. Leuty needs no introduction to the readers of the Cynosure. He is well known to the family of the N. C. A. He has given of his substance that the causes of reform might be pushed onward. He took the wise plan of placing the "plant" while he lived, reserving only a living. He was obliged to leave his chosen denomination because he could not tolerate Masonry. In his old age he found himself alone in the world.

Mrs. Barker was the companion of Rev. D. R. Barker, who fell with his armor on some ten years ago. They knew what it was to labor and sacrifice in the causes of anti-slavery and anti-secrecy.

Now these two Christian workers will help one another and spend the evening of life together. May the Lord bless them and reward them a thousand fold for their work and labor of love.

OBITUARY.

Llewellyn Dwight Bryant died in New Market, N. H., Sept. 29, 1883, of pneumonia, after an illness of about two weeks, aged 30 years. He publicly professed faith in Christ while a student in Austin Academy, and united with the church at Center Strafford. He immediately showed great zeal to lead others to become Christians, and became active in the Anti-masonic reform. The church of which he was a member asked the New Durham quarterly meeting to license him to preach the Gospel, which request was denied. The Barrington church of which he afterwards became a member, renewed the request for his license to preach, but this second request was also refused. It was the general opinion that his opposition to Freemasonry hindered his getting a license to preach. He preached, however, with good acceptance as the Lord opened the door. Bro. Bryant had a tenacious memory, and was remarkably versed in history and literature. He contributed valuable articles for the Christian Witness and Cynosure. His father was killed at the battle of Antietam. His uncle, Crosby Wheeler, is a missionary in Turkey, and his mother's sister, wife of Rev. Mr. Allen, has also been a missionary many years. He leaves a mother and one brother. "Blessed are the dead that die in the Lord."

INTRODUCTION.—Samuel now an old man of over eighty years is sent once again to meet Saul, who was now universally acknowledged as king, and who, though so successful in his battles, (ch. 14:47, 48) had again and again shown his wilful and disobedient spirit, for which the prophet sternly rebuked him, (see ch. 13:9–14; 14:34, 35. cf. Lev. 17:1; Num. 18:7.) Another and final opportunity is given Saul to retrieve his character. Samuel is sent to him with a new commission to utterly destroy the Amalekites, who for their wickedness and cruelty had centuries before been doomed (ch. 15:1–3). Saul is quick to go, but again shows his really rebellious spirit, and also hypocritical nature, and so is finally rejected from being king over Israel.

Our lesson is a striking illustration of the spirit of disobedience, under the pretence of serving God. Its great, practical doctrine is, that obedience is better than sacrifice, (cf. Ex. 19:5; Jer. 7:21–28; Isa. 1:11–17; Micah 6:6–8).—Notes for Bible Study.

PRACTICAL—THE MARKS OF A FALSE AND HYPOCRITICAL OBEDIENCE.

1. It seeks its own glory. "It was told to Samuel, saying, Saul came to Carmel....and set him up a place (or monument). V. 12. "But all their works they do to be seen of men." Mat. 23:5. If the heart is pursuing a wrong end we may expect to find everything perverted.

2. It boasts its own goodness. "I have performed the commandment of the Lord." V. 13. "I will spue thee out of my mouth, because thou sayest, I am rich and increased with goods and have need of nothing; and knowest not that thou art wretched, and miserable, and poor, and blind, and naked." Measuring itself by a false standard, there is little hope that such a heart will ever discover its radical mistake.

3. It seeks to shift the blame of its shortcomings to others. "They have brought them from the Amalekites. The people spared the best of the sheep and of the oxen" (v. 15). "And the man said, The woman whom thou gavest to be with me, she gave me of the tree" (Gen. 3:12). "Most men will proclaim every one his own goodness; but a faithful man who can find?" (Prov. 20:6). "Whoso boasteth of a false gift is like clouds and winds without rain" (Prov. 25:14).

4. It claims to be governed by the holiest motives. "The people spared the best of the sheep....to sacrifice unto the Lord" (v. 15). "And thou, Solomon, my son, know thou the God of thy father, and serve him with a perfect heart, and with a willing mind; for the Lord searcheth all hearts and understandeth all the imaginations of the thoughts" (1 Chron. 28:9).

5. Pride of heart makes it forgetful of its dependence on God. "When thou wast little....wast thou not made the head? (v. 17). "Look to the rock whence ye are hewn, and the hole of the pit whence ye are digged" (Isa. 51:1).

6. It forgets that God's will should be obeyed, not its own choice. "The Lord sent thee on a journey" (v. 18). "He hath showed thee, O man, what is good; and what doth the Lord require of thee, but to do justly, and to love mercy, and to walk humbly with thy God?" (Micah 6:8).

7. It refuses to accept the admonition and rebukes of God's Word. "Yea, I have obeyed the voice of the Lord, and have gone the way which the Lord sent me" (v. 20). "He that being often reproved, hardeneth his neck, shall be destroyed, and that without remedy" (Prov. 29:1).

8. It manifests great zeal in matters of its own liking. "Rebellion is as the sin of witchcraft" (v. 23). "Saul had put away those that had familiar spirits" (1 Sam. 28:3). "Woe unto you, scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites! for ye pay tithe of mint, anise and cummin, and have omitted the weightier matters of the law, judgment, mercy and faith; these ought ye to have done, and not to leave the others undone" (Mat. 23:23). Saul's great zeal in putting away witchcraft did not shield him from the due reward of gross disobedience.

THE DOOM OF HYPOCRITICAL DISOBEDIENCE.

1. It will be detected sooner or later. "What meaneth then this bleating of the sheep?" (v. 14). "God will bring every work into judgment, with every secret thing, whether it be good or whether it be evil." (Ec. 12:14).

2. It will surely be punished unless sincerely repented of. "Because thou hast rejected the word of the Lord, he hath also rejected thee" (v. 23). "The hypocrite's hope shall perish" (Job 8:13).—U. P. Bible Teacher.

If men reject us God may take us up. But when God rejects us who shall help?—Watson.

Good intention can never be a right rule of conduct and a good guide of conscience.—Sanderson.

If sacrifice could replace obedience, God would never be obeyed, for men will sacrifice all rather than obey.—Watson.

We must judge rather than justify ourselves if we would escape Divine judgment.—Henry.

Before seeking the approval of conscience, we must learn to regulate conscience by the will and word of God.—Wordsworth.

The obedient man will learn to put implicit trust in the wisdom and justice of God's judgments (vers. 11–16).—Peloubet.

BAND OF HOPE BIBLE LESSON.

PROFANITY A SIN AGAINST OURSELVES.

3. For Herod had laid hold on John, and bound him, and put him in prison for Herodias' sake, his brotber Phillip's wife.
4. For John said unto him, It is not lawful for thee to have her.
5. And when he would have put him to death, he feared the multitude, because they counted him as a prophet.
6. But when Herod's birthday was kept, the daughter of Herodias danced before them, and pleased Herod.
7. Whereupon he promised with an oath to give her whatsoever she would ask.
8. And she, being before instrueted of her mother, said, Give me here John Baptist's head in a charger.
9. And tbe king was sorry; nevertheless for the oath's sake, and them which sat with him at meat, he commanded it to be given her.
10. And he sent and beheaded John in tbe prison.
11. And his head was brought in a charger, and given to the damsel; and she brought it to her mother.
12. And his disciples eame, and took up the body, and buried it, and went and told Jesus. —Mat. 14: 3-12.

GOLDEN TEXT.—And the king was sorry. Mat. 14:9, f. c.

CENTRAL TRUTH.—Swearers sin against themselves.

1. This was Herod Antipas, the son of Herod the Great.

2. He had divorced his wife, the daughter of an Arabian king, to marry the wicked Herodias, though she was the wife of his brother Philip who was still living. John had the courage to rebuke them both for their sin.

3. There had been no prophet since Malachi, four hundred years before.

4. It is likely that the dancing was indecorous to a high degree to so suit the tastes of a company of drunken revellers. Much of the public dancing among the Greeks and Romans was of this character.

5. Herod's kingdom was not his to give away. He held it only through the favor of the Roman emperor.

6. He did not stop to think what a rash and foolish oath he was taking. It is so with almost every one addicted to profanity. They do not stop to think.

7. When a man becomes a Freemason he must take an oath to suffer a dreadful death if he reveals any of the secrets. Now a man has no right to swear away his life for it doesn't belong to him. It belongs to God, his country, and his family.

8. Every secret order requires some kind of an oath or obligation beforehand. This is wrong. Every oath is rash and sinful when the one who takes it does not know what he is swearing to.

9. Herod had no idea that such a thing would be asked of him; nor is it likely that the scores of Masons who helped in the death of Morgan thought when they took the oath that it would ever require them to murder an innocent man.

10. Herodias seems to have planned the whole thing to trap the weak and foolish Herod. In the secret lodge it is never the majority who rule but a few leaders, often wicked, selfish and designing men, who make the others their tools.

11. Many are sorry for taking these wicked oaths, but like Herod have not the courage to renounce them. It is a sin to take such oaths in the first place, but a far greater sin to keep them.

12. A Christian should not engage in any act that he cannot "go and tell Jesus" about. When he enters the secret lodge he goes where Christ is not admitted, where he cannot have the Saviour's companionship or sympathy. This ought to prevent us from ever joining any secret society.

PRACTICAL TRUTHS.

We are not our own—our lives belong to God and to humanity. Those who take the oaths of Masonry sin against God, their fellow man and their own souls.

Those who enter secret societies commit more sin in keeping their oaths than they did in first taking them.

QUESTIONS.

1. Who was Herod? v. 3. What had he done to John?
2. Why did he do this? How did Herodias feel towards him? Mark 6:19. What were Herod's feeling? v. 20.
3. Why did the people think so much of John? v. 5. What was done on Herod's birthday? v. 6.
4. What kind of dancing was this? What did Herod promise to give her? v. 7. Mark 6:23.
5. Had Herod any right to make such a promise?
6. Why did he make such a rash and foolish oath? Is this true of profane swearers?
7. What can you say of Masonic oaths?
8. What does every secret order require? Why is this wrong? What request did she make of Herod? v. 8.
9. Did Herod suppose she would ask such a thing? v. 9 f. c. Was this any excuse for his breaking the Sixth Commandment? Give an illustration.
10. Did Herodias lay this plan to take John's life? v. 8, f. c. Mark 6:21, f. c. What is there like it in the secret lodge? Can you think of another prophet who acted something like John? 1 Kings 21: 17-24. Of another woman like Herodias? 1 Kings 21:1-15. A king like Herod? v. 15:16. Why did not Herod refuse to do what she asked of him? v. 9.
11. Is this the reason why many keep their lodge oaths? Is it right to keep sinful oaths? Lev. 5:4-14. What did Herod do? vs. 10, 11. What was done with the body?
12. Should a Christian tell everything to Jesus? How does joining a secret society prevent his doing this? Recite the Golden Text, Central Truth, Practical Truths.

LESSON TALK.

Men are sometimes foolish enough to sign their names to papers without reading them, and then they very often find themselves obliged to pay a sum of money for something they never bought, or else submit to a troublesome and costly lawsuit. Among the early cases which won fame for a certain distinguished lawyer, was a suit between a man whose house had been burned down, and a dishonest insurance company which refused to pay the amount for which it had been insured, because a certain clause in the policy had not been complied with. This clause was put purposely in fine print that it might not easily catch the eye, but if the man had taken the trouble to read his policy over very carefully he would have seen it. All secret societies work in this way. The candidate pays his money and swears to obey all the laws and requirements of the order before he knows what they are. They may be in direct opposition to the laws of his country; they may even require him to commit murder like the Invincibles in Ireland, or the Nihilists in Russia. If he is a good and brave man he will break his oath at any cost. Far better to even suffer death, like John, for the truth's sake, than act the part of the cowardly and wicked Herod. But it is much the best way to be wise in the first place, and refuse to take such oaths at all.

LESSON HYMN.

Glory to God! whose witness train,
Those heroes bold in faith,
Could smile on poverty and pain,
And triumph even in death.

Oh, may that faith our hearts sustain,
Wherein they fearless stood,
When in the power of wicked men,
They poured their willing blood.

God whom we serve, our God, ean save,
Can damp tbe seorehing flame;
Can build an ark, ean smooth the wave
For such as love his name.

The Christian Cynosure.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 1, 1883.

EDITORIAL CORRESPONDENCE.

SYRACUSE, Oct. 25, 1883.

Yesterday I was introduced to the Wesleyan General Conference, and made a brief address. On being introduced to this conference, one has to be vouched for; or, under their rules, questioned whether he belongs to a secret society. Mr. Capwell and I passed without difficulty, and so were introduced to the body; but a delegate, bearing fraternal salutations from the M. E. church, was found to be a Mason and ruled out! The Conference would not receive him. This was right. How could he properly bring Christian salutations to the Wesleyans, and Satanic salutations to the lodge? "Doth a fountain send forth sweet water and bitter?" Wherever Christianity reaches, this should be told of the Wesleyan General Conference of its fearless hostility to the false worships which curse the earth. Satan subordinates everything to this. He told our Saviour everything else would be right, and he would give him "all the kingdoms of the world and the glory of them for one little act of this false worship!"

FOR A MEMORIAL

Gen. Pomeroy is billed for to-night. I am to speak to-morrow night. The Wesleyan Conference is a strong body of good men, well handled by Moderator Wardner.

THE STATE CONVENTION.

SYRACUSE, Oct. 26.—Mr. Pomeroy has telegraphed and will doubtless be here this morning. We had a fair opening last night. Mr. Stoddard spoke effectively, very. Donald Kirkpatrick for whom we voted as candidate for Vice-President, was on the stage, the same agreeable gentleman as ever. Mr. Capwell and wife are here. He presides admirably and toils incessantly. Willie Stoddard, too, toils nobly. The Wesleyans help out the meeting grandly; and though the city crowd is not out yet, the time will come when it will be.

SYRACUSE, Oct. 27.—Our convention closed last night with increased audience, in spite of mist and mud, Secretary Stoddard and the official report will tell our readers about it. Donald Kirkpatrick heads the list of fifteen delegates to Washington.

Ex-Senator Pomeroy spoke in the afternoon and an hour before train last night. He looks well and fresh, but is taxing his physique to the uttermost. Our readers have seen his Chicago speech. He has excelled that speech, great as it was, in his efforts here which were wholly extemporary. He has spoken rapidly and I shall not attempt a full report, but correct, as far as I write. He only spoke on one article of the American platform, namely, the civil rights of the negroes secured by the three amendments, and reviewed the late decision of the Supreme Court that the States, not Congress, must decide whether the colored people who travel can be shut out of taverns at night on the road; in short, that the negro, freed and made a citizen by Congress, must be remanded back to Alabama, Mississippi, South Carolina and the other States South to say what his citizen's rights are, and protect them.

MR. POMEROY'S SPEECH.

He said, I am here, where I spoke and acted with now departed men forty years ago. Gerrit Smith, Beriah Green, William Goodell, Myron Holley, all, all are gone!

> "I feel like one who treads alone
> Some banquet hall deserted,
> Whose guests are fled, whose lights are dead,
> And all but me departed."

Here I spoke, in this city, for W. H. Seward, when we elected him Governor. Here I helped the Abolitionists take the ex-slave Jerry from the U. S. Marshall and send him to Canada. You who heard of the "Jerry Rescue Case" understand what I say. Jerry afterward came to me at Washington. I got him into the army, and he fought nobly and well.

And now, our Supreme Court, after the Federal Government has made Jerry a citizen, has decided that it has no power to defend him in his rights! We ask no governmental invasion of social customs or tastes. Let men marry, visit and interchange courtesies with those with whom they affiliate. But theatres, hotels, restaurants, taverns, and public carriers are public servants, and if they may exclude citizens who have red hair, or black or brown complexion, they may introduce caste in its most odious form, and make the negro's last state worse than his first. He is made a citizen and shut off from the rights of citizenship. Charles Sumner brought into Congress, the phrase, "Equal before the law." But where is the equal citizenship of the negro if, when he has toiled in his calling or handicraft till noon, he cannot go into a restaurant for a 25 cent dinner? Where, if he, his wife and daughters, when he has paid for first-class tickets, must ride in a third-class car? Down South, they have what they call dog-cars, where hunters dogs are accommodated, and colored girls, neat and elegantly dressed, must ride in those cars!

When this decision came out, Judge Harlan of Kentucky, who had probably been raised among negroes, alone dissenting, my wife asked me, "Husband what was the matter last night that you could not sleep?"

"I had a horrid dream," I replied. "I saw Charles Sumner rolling in his coffin!"

Mr. President, what did Lee surrender at Appomatox? Some old horses, mules, and battle-flags, riddled with Northern bullets? No, sir. He surrendered the infamous heresy of "State Sovereignty," the doctrine that makes the State greater than the Union; that makes the outrageously absurd proposition that there are in this country thirty-eight supreme or sovereign powers. This is the heresy now affirmed by our Supreme Court. But it will be reviewed and reversed. Petitions signed by eminent names are already demanding the review.

No! Our Constitution was formed not by "we, the States," but by "We, the People," and the Constitution is the government—a government modelled after the Universe, where the States, like the planets, revolve around one central sun, the Federal Government, each shedding its own beaming lustre, and making one perfect, harmonious whole. B.

PRAYER FOR REFORM.

The earnest call for prayer meetings against the lodge, which took a definite and official form at the Illinois State Convention at Sparta, is meeting a warm response from many quarters, and it is not too much to expect that within a year thousands of such meetings will be held every month all through the nation.

The Illinois Convention

Resolved, That we recommend to brethren in all testifying churches to make the triumph of the truth as it is in Jesus Christ against the secret lodges a subject of frequent prayer and conference, and that pastors lead their congregations in public prayer to God for reformation in this matter; and also that brethren in churches not testifying on this subject meet statedly with others of like mind for united prayer to God for his blessing upon the reform and those who maintain its principles.

The arguments which were urged for this important resolution were briefly these:

1. The Lord Jesus Christ has overcome the devil, and beheld him falling like lightning from heaven. We must by faith take this victory in our particular work.

2. We fail in accepting in their fullness the gracious promises of Christ, and that especially made to his meeting and agreeing people. Matt. 18: 19. The prayer meeting will be a means of remedying this failure.

3. Indirectly these meetings in testifying churches will tend strongly to draw these churches together and to strengthen each the others, since they will soon have a more profound realization of the power their common enemy wields against the kingdom of Christ in the lodge.

4. They will unite scattered brethren, living perhaps in remote neighborhoods, and fearing to engage in a single-handed battle. Human sympathy will act with the divine fevor to give courage to the heart and zeal to the efforts against the lodge.

5. Honest praying will make noble doing. No church, no neighborhood meeting can long pray against secretism without working against it. The Holy Spirit will open to them many methods of promoting the truth and the genuine activity in reform will be, as a rule, in proportion to the praying.

6. All the lecturers, agents, colporteurs, editors and others especially engaged in this work will feel a new zeal, a doubled energy, a quickened faith, as they realize in how many prayer meetings, at how many family altars, their work is remembered.

Brethren of the reform we must pray more.

IS LODGERY IDOLATRY?

After carefully studying the article on "Idolatry" from the pen of pastor E. S. Hicks of the Baptist church, Sandwich, Illinois, let the reader of this paper turn to the following extract from an article by an East Indian lady in the October number of Dio Lewis's Monthly, and let the two be compared and studied.

The subject as presented by Elder Hicks in the Sandwich Visitor has seldom been put more compactly, clearly and forcibly. Add to his argument the fact presented in the Monthly, and the case against the lodge can hardly be made stronger. It is true that the heathen of Greece and Rome, with their multitudes of deities and their images in every household and on every street, worshiped the power, or force, or influence which these gods represented. Thus Cicero and other learned Romans repudiated the gross image worship which prevailed among the masses, but argued that it must be retained for political reasons, and Paul found at Athens an altar without an image or a local divinity. It is evident that images are not essential to idolatry. The imagination does not altogether depend upon the eye, and an idea, sprung from the brain of man can be worshiped as well as the gross and revolting forms before which multitudes pour out their substance and even their blood.

Freemasonry imposes a form of religious ceremony, but without any Christ, or any regard for the will of God as revealed in his Word. This ceremony is of the same nature as the worship of an intelligent Greek or Roman who worshiped Zeus or Jupiter, or of an intelligent Hindoo who worships Vishuu, Siva or Brahma. The extracts referred to read thus:

> There are Christians who seem greatly to mourn over what they call the superstitious idolatry of India. No doubt they believe that idol-worship is a common fact in my country; and, to the superficial observer, our people do pay homage to various objects and images called idols.
> The truth is, however, we do not believe for a moment that these idols have any divine power in themselves. We know very well that the thing before us is a stone or clay image, prepared by human hands, bought at the market after the manner of any other purchase, and perhaps chosen out of many, to suit individual taste; but it always either possesses or is made to represent some attribute which helps the imagination in coming nearer to the Supreme Invisible. This is the generally received opinion among orthodox Hindoos. Pundit Promada Das Mitra, a learned Hindoo professor at Benares, the great holy city of the Hindoos, thus replies to an attack upon our religious worship:
> "If by idolatry is meant a system of worship which confines our ideas of the Divinity to a mere image of clay or stone, which prevents our hearts from being elevated with lofty notions of the attributes of God—if this is what is meant by idolatry, we abhor idolatry, and deplore the ignorance and uncharitableness of those who charge us with this grovelling system."
> The most intelligent and philosophical, while holding that the highest form of worship is Manasa-puja and Nirakara-puja (heart-worship and formless worship), justify the common method on the ground of consideration to weaker-minded persons. Worship before images, not to images, is what is practiced by the Hindoos. It is a notable fact that the worship of all Hindoo idols begins with the sentence Ekamevadvitiam (there is One only and no second. * * * * There is nothing absurd or ridiculous in the much lamented "bowing down to wood and stone" which the heathen is supposed to do in his "blindness." There is not a single idol in the Hindoo pantheon but has a whole volume of philosophy behind it, the exposition of which is made with at least as much logic and lucidity as many a venerable book on "Christian Evidences." It may be noted, that even now, after the Gospel of the Testament has been offered to the Hindoo by zealous missionaries for over two hundred years, he does not seem to be convinced of the error of his ways. His temperance, filial devotion, almost immaculate personal cleanliness, and social and moral purity compare favorably with the habits of any other people. * * * * I do not mean to say that there is not a single man, woman or child in India who believes in the divine personality of any one of our idols. There are poor, ignorant, superstitious Hindoos who believe in the personality of a stone or clay image, but I think there are fully as many professing Christians who believe that the bread and wine are the real body and blood of Christ.

---President Arthur has issued a proclamation designating Thursday, November 29, as a day of national thanksgiving.

—President Kephart of Avalon College, Missouri, has appointed a lecture in the town on Wednesday evening of this week, on the "Relation of Freemasonry to Christianity." Pres. Kephart is a vigorous and able speaker and profoundly believes in the principles of our reform. Friends in Missouri should give him frequent calls for addresses, to the mutual profit of all.

—The Illinois State Convention of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, meeting last week in Alton, subscribed $1,000 to the stock of their excellent paper, the Union Signal. The Cynosure rejoices in this proof of devotion and expects soon to see the day when a corresponding movement will give its list an additional 1,000 names, which is the kind of stock now and always paying highest dividends.

—The American Freeman of Albany, Mo., may be indulged in a little honest boasting, since in a locality twelve years ago under the heel of the lodge, the opposing sentiment is now so strong that a church has been formed which openly opposes the lodge and utterly disfellowships it.

—Beside the monthly reform prayer meeting which the Chicago Christian Association expects to keep up, Rev. C. B. Ebey, chairman of the Chicago district Free Methodist church, has heartily endorsed the plan and promises to urge all the pastors in his district to adopt it. The College church at Wheaton will probably make such a meeting a regular appointment at the next business meeting.

—The article from Prof. Claudio Jannet of Paris, France, promised last week, cannot appear before our next. Prof. Fischer has translated the interesting private letter that accompanies it which assures our readers that they may expect an occasional article upon the movements of lodgery in Europe that they will value highly. Prof. Jannet is also willing to give what assistance he may be able to a translation of his great work, or such portions of it as may be of most value to American readers.

—Bro. E. Ronayne lectured in Carpenter Hall, N. C. A. Building, on Wednesday evening of last week on the "Tabernacle," showing with his usual forcible style how the idea of this earliest erected structure for the worship of the true God was perverted by the lodge to its own low and idolatrous purposes.

—B. F. BUTLER, though nominated by the Democrats, and Labor Union parties for re-election as Governor of Massachusetts, is finding that his former success is no basis for future hope. A strong anti-Butler movement in each party is organized, and it is impossible to find a man who will take the second place on the ticket, so improbable is it that he will be elected.

—Before starting for the East Pres. J. Blanchard addressed a large audience in the College Chapel at Wheaton, Monday evening, upon the educational interests of the town. As the history of the College has been one continued battle with the lodge, that dark system was reviewed in some of its important characteristics. The address appears in the local paper, the Wheaton Illinoian, of last week. On Tuesday afternoon, escorted to the train by some 200 students and friends, he left with Mrs. Blanchard, for Syracuse and the New York State Convention.

—The discussion of Freemasonry is still continued in the Interior, the greater proportion of those who defend the lodge writing from the South, and several ministers being among the number. Last week the only contribution was the report of a baptismal service conducted by high Masons, in Washington some years ago, according to the ritual of the order, and a long and detailed account of which was published in the Washington papers. Such evidence as this of the religious character of the order not even the cunning and hypocrisy of Rob Morris can explain away. This week the Interior promises to publish an article from Bro. Ronayne.

—The death of another "prince in Israel," a great-souled friend of Christian reform, must be noted this week—Rev. David A. Wallace, D.D., pastor of the United Presbyterian church, Wooster, Ohio, the founder of Monmouth College, and for twenty-two years its president, and just elected professor in the Theological Seminary at Xenia, Ohio. The disease which compelled his leaving Monmouth, at last, on Sabbath, Oct. 21, cut him off. Few men had more influence in the United Presbyterian church than he nor used their power with more candor and Christian spirit. Dr. Wallace was always known as a warm friend of the N. C. A. and its work, being active in at least two National Conventions and occasionally using his pen in a masterly manner. A memorial service attended by 2,000 people was held in the Opera House, Monmouth, last Sabbath. The exercises were presided over by Dr. J. T. McMichael, president of Monmouth College, and the following addresses were made: "Dr. Wallace as a Pastor;" tributes from the First United Presbyterian church, by Dr. T. H. Hanna, present pastor; from the Second United Presbyterian church by Miss J. C. Logue; from the Henderson congregation by Miss Belle Rodgers; Professor Ed F. Reid spoke of him as an educator; Professor J. C. Hutchinson, as a friend; Hon. D. P. Phelps, a graduate, delivered an address on his character as a public citizen; Hon. R. W. McClaughry, also an alumnus, on the subject "Dr. Wallace as Father of Monmouth College," and Judge John J. Glenn on his character as a man.

GOOD MEN TRADUCED.—Cowper says of the now sainted Geo. Whitefield, that he stood pilloried

> "On life's stage
> And bore the pelting scorn of half an age.
> His sins were such as Sodom never knew
> And perjury stood up to swear all true!"

John Wesley says in his journal, "Wicked men say all manner of evil against me, and good men believe them."

FREE TRACT FUND.

The fund for the free distribution of N. C. A. tracts is exhausted and but few tracts remain in stock. If six hundred of the Cynosure readers would sit down quickly and enclose fifty cents for this important work the gift would be as timely as it is needed. Read on page 6 how a single leaflet blowing along the road enlisted a young colored man in our reform. Scatter the tracts. They should be issued by millions instead of thousands.

A PRAYER MEETING STARTED.

Father Benjamin Williams of Warren, Ill., believes profoundly in the recommendation of the Illinois State Association and makes the resolution good by opening a meeting for prayer against the lodge in his own house, of which he writes:

"Prayer is the lever that moves the moral universe. Thus a few of God's freed ones meet and make the work of the N. C. A. a special subject of prayer once a week on Friday evening at my house, as the churches don't allow it in their houses."

THE CYNOSURE FOR THE SOUTH.

Frequent calls for the Cynosure come up from the colored brethren in the South, most of whom, while engaged in preaching, are too poor to subscribe. It is a grand means of promoting the reform to put the paper in the hands of these pastors of colored churches. No people are more open to conviction on this question, and a wide circulation of the paper and N. C. A. tracts will in every case counteract the lodge. Who will send a contribution to this fund, and so help answer such letters as this from Wetumpka, Alabama:

DEAR EDITOR OF CYNOSURE:—I would be glad to have your paper if possible. I am pastor of about 700 or 800 members. Yours, SILAS JONES.

TELL YOUR EXPERIENCE.

Let us have more testimonies like this one from Sedgwick City, Kansas. What can arouse indifferent Antimasons like it? what produce greater trembling among the pillars of lodgery? what more enrage Satan? So let them appear more and more often:

"I feel interested in the reform work, but have not been able to help much yet, only to tell my own experience. I have belonged to the Masons and Odd-fellows, but I could not enjoy religion and stay with them. To-day I am free in Christ. Praise his holy name. May the Lord help you in your good work. There are several here who will vote the American ticket.

JOHN S. HOWE.

25 CENTS.

Here is another point. In how many towns will Antimasons club together and have their paper, the Cynosure, sent for two months to every family in the place? November and December numbers 25c. TRY IT.

—Mr. J. Madison Taylor has just returned from China after an absence of four years. At a recent meeting in London he gave the following account of missionary progress in that land. He said that when he went out four years since, there was not a single native Christian, to their knowledge, in the western half of China; now they had a record of at least 150. Five years ago there was not a European lady missionary to the west of the central line; now they have sixteen such laborers. Mr. Cameron and others had traversed the length and breadth of the empire. Mr. Cameron had visited every province in the land, with one exception, taking the name and gospel of Jesus with him. It was difficult to reckon up or tell the effects that had been produced. Some, at least, of the seed sown had come to light again. To illustrate this, Mr. Taylor told how he knew of four distinct cases of conversion through the reading of the four gospels; from these conversions several native churches had been founded in distant places, where no European missionary had ever been.—The Presbyterian.

—The annual meeting of the North China Mission of the American Board was lately held in the city of Tsangchou (fifteen miles east of Peking). The reports showed a total increase in membership of sixty during the year. Medical reports were presented by four missionary physicians, two of whom are ladies. By common consent it was agreed that the medical missionary work is proving to be the most effective instrument for breaking through heathen prejudice and opening doors for direct evangelistic work.

—"Irenæus" says that in Saratoga "it is not gentce to go out riding or driving for pleasure on the Lord's day."

—The Methodist ministers of New England receive an average salary of $560 a year, the Baptists a trifle more, the Presbyterians $740, and the Episcopalians $900.

—There are 11,000 abstainers from intoxicating drinks in the British army in India, and it is admitted that they are better soldiers than their drinking comrades.

THE NEW HAMPSHIRE STATE CONVENTION

CANTERBURY, N. H., Oct. 24, 1883.

We are in the midst of an interesting convention. Brethren are gathered from this State and Massachusetts; an excellent spirit prevails, and the business of the convention is receiving more careful and earnest consideration than usual. We awakened this morning to look out on the New Hampshire hills covered with a light snow which fell during the night—the first of the season. These resolutions have been passed:

WHEREAS, Since our last annual meeting brother L. D. Bryant has passed from earthly conflicts; therefore

Resolved, That we hereby place on record our high appreciation of his past services to this reform, and extend to his afflicted mother our most hearty and prayerful sympathy.

Resolved, That in our judgment, no greater evil now afflicts the American people and no greater danger imperils American institutions than secret societies, inasmuch as they furnish to the evil elements of society a centralized, powerful and dangerous organization with which to prosecute evil designs. We believe it is by means of secret combinations that the liquor traffic, Mormonism, political rings, infidel sentiments and socialism are maintained. We therefore renewedly pledge ourselves to increased energy and devotion in exposing and withstanding these secret orders.

The convention gave way to a meeting of the American party. At that meeting A. H. Brown, Esq., and Prof. S. C. Kimball were elected delegates to represent the State at the next National Convention; and the following resolutions were adopted:

Resolved, That we see multiplied reasons why the American party should press the reforms which it advocates and complete its own political organization for renewed activity. We believe that the cause of anti-secrecy, prohibition, labor-reform, civil service reform and universal suffrage demand the advent of this party, and we urge our political committees to press the interests of the party most vigorously.

Resolved, That we regard the purchase by the N. C. A. of a building in Washington for reform purposes as a most important step, full of great promise to the reform. We believe the remaining indebtedness on the building should be speedily paid by the contributions of reformers throughout the country. We also approve most heartily of the organization of a joint stock company to publish a paper in Washington, believing that in no better way can we press the issues of the American party upon the consideration of the people.

Resolved, That we commend the address of Hon. S. C. Pomeroy in Chicago, as a forcible and truthful presentation of our cause and we commend the speaker as an able and worthy representative of the American party.

Resolutions endorsing the Christian Cynosure and Christian Witness were passed.

The address of welcome by A. H. Brown, Esq., was a carefully written, interesting paper, and was well received by the convention.

Dea. I. Leadbetter, Dea. E. Smith, Prof. S. C. Kimball, Elder J. G. Smith, and Rev. Geo. Juchau have enlivened and profited the convention by able and interesting addresses.

Prof. S. C. Kimball has engaged to work six months of the year for the cause, canvassing, lecturing and preaching. A large part of his support was pledged on the spot. The brethren feel this has been one of the best conventions yet held.

The convention was ably presided over by B. M. Mason, Esq., of Moultonboro. E. D. BAILEY.

—The Congregationalist almost complains that at the General Council of a few days ago at Concord there was so little discussion of great principles underlying all efficient action and of the best methods to meet the demands of the time. What may be called routine work consumed the time. The same regret is often expressed by Presbyterians after the General Assembly and by our own representatives after the General Synod. We have heard it and joined in the complaint many years. Is there no remedy? Must the time of assemblies so important, brought together at so much expense, composed often of picked men, be consumed by business that would be as well done and as satisfactorily and effectively by half a dozen men of fair administrative ability. Is it good for the church to allow these highest courts to be so occupied?—Christian Intelligencer.

One of the most important missionary gatherings of the year, says the New York Witness of Oct. 25th, is to take place in Brooklyn next week, namely, the annual meeting of the American Missionary Society. This annual meeting lasts three days to give opportunity for reviewing the work of the past year carefully, and deciding upon the plan for the current year. This year it will have a very special interest inasmuch as a new constitution is to be voted upon, and all the leading friends of the Association are likely to be present. Our readers know that the education and evangelization of the colored race is the chief work of this society, to which is now added the missions of the A. B. C. F. M. among the Indian tribes. It also has a vigorous Chinese mission in California. It is in fact a home missionary society to the most destitute and neglected races on this continent. It has been said that the three days' annual meetings of this Board produce as vivid impressions and awaken as much zeal as three weeks of revival services. The meetings are to be held in the Central Congregational church, Brooklyn, beginning on Tuesday, October 30.

THE HOME.

WITH CONFIDENCE.

Thou, Lord, alone canst make me whole,
Build every waste within my soul.
Let me like watered gardens be,
That spend their fragrance, Lord, for Thee.

Sin caused me only want and shame,
Bringing reproach upon Thy name;
Now make me clean, all clean, my Lord,
According to Thy faithful word.

Purge Thou, and prune, refine and till,
Enrich, with all Thy fullness fill;
Enlarge my heart, and fill with bloom,
For fruits of paradise make room.

Thou, Lord, hast spoken, Thou wilt do,
Thy spirit doth make all things new;
My feet shall walk in all Thy ways,
My tongue shall sing aloud Thy praise.

My goods, my flesh, my mind, my soul,
I claim no more, take Thou the whole.
Perform Thou all things, Lord, for me,
Anoint my eyes Thy work to see;

And cause my ears to hear, O Lord!
Thine every precept, every word,
That I may nothing lack whereby
I may my Saviour glorify.

A MADAGASCAR REMINISCENCE.

The prohibition of Christian preaching in 1835 was speedily followed by the flaming out of a persecution that waxed even fiercer and fiercer, till it grew into a seven-fold furnace of wrath. Neither age nor sex was spared. Old men, children, weak women, tender girls, went fearlessly to death. Insignificance could not shield the peasant who toiled in the rice-fields, high birth and long service could not save the noble who stood beside the throne. "I must obey God rather than man in this matter," said one gallant fellow, "but I will serve the Queen faithfully nevertheless." The words were hardly spoken when he was a corpse. And at last there came a day when eighteen victims at once, among whom were several of the noblest names in Madagascar, were dragged before the judges amid the yells of a blood-thirsty multitude and all condemned to die—fourteen to be hurled from the Rock of Nampaminarina and the remaining four to be burned alive.

Then—the little band of heroes having refused every offer of life—came the last scene of all, the description of which, by a native eye-witness, may bear comparison with anything in Fox's "Book of Martyrs" or the annals of the Scottish Covenanters: "And the eighteen appointed to die, as they sat upon the ground surrounded by the soldiers, sang the hymn:

"There is a blessed land,
Making most glad:
There rest shall never end,
There none be sad."

"And when the sentences were all pronounced and the officer had gone back to the place of the chief authorities they took those eighteen away to put them to death. They tied them by the hands and feet to long poles and carried them on men's shoulders. And those brethren spoke and spoke to the people as they were being carried along. And some who looked upon them said that their faces were like the faces of angels. * * And as they took the four that were to be burned alive to the place of execution, these Christians sang the hymn, 'When our hearts are troubled then remember us.' And when they came to Faravohitra there they burned them, fixed between split spars. And there was a rainbow in the heavens at the time. They prayed as long as they had any life, and they died softly and gently. And all the people were amazed who beheld the burning of them there."

Equally cruel was the fate of the heroic fourteen who were doomed to the fatal rock. With a savage refinement of torture, their murderers prolonged the last agony by suspending them with cords passed round their bodies over the brink of the fearful precipice, as if to make them taste the full bitterness of that hideous death before it came. An awful hush fell upon the fierce multitude that crowded the summit of the rock as the executioner's gaunt black figure came gliding like a spirit of evil up to the spot where the swinging forms hovered in midair, with the glorious panorama below outspread as if in mockery before the eyes that were so soon to be closed forever. Once more, and for the last time, mercy was offered to each victim in turn on condition of renouncing the Christian faith. The firm refusal that answered it was barely uttered when the doomsman's ax flashed and fell, and in the tomb-like silence were heard the "snig" of the parted rope and the dull thud of the mangled body on the cruel rocks far below.

No churches have been founded, no shrines decorated, to honor these nameless heroes; but many a saint whose name stands high on the muster-roll of the noble army of martyrs, and whose memory lives in costly silver and imperishable marble, might fairly yield his place to the "witnesses" of Nampaminarina. Of all that doomed band one only escaped with life from that Golgotha. This was a young girl, who walked quietly to the place of execution, saying that there was no need to bind or carry her, for she was quite ready to go. Hopes were entertained that she might be induced to recant, and with this view orders were privately given to the native officers who superintended the butchery to reserve her to the last. She was set close to the edge of the precipipe and held there by the executioners while the slaughter proceeded. One by one her fellow-martyrs were crushed into shapeless hideousness before her eyes till she alone was left. But the brave girl never flinched. To all offers of life she replied simply: "I will not give up my faith; let me go with my friends." Infuriated by her steadfast calmness the chief of the ruffians who directed the massacre struck her savagely on the face and bade her take the oath of abjuration and do homage to the gods of the country or die forthwith. But her answer was still the same: "I will follow my friends." "She is an idiot, and knows not what she says!" roared the baffled savage; "take her away!" She was accordingly removed from the spot and dragged away to a distant part of the island, where she survived to recount, years later, all the details of a scene worthy to be commemorated in words of fire like those wherewith the greatest Englishman of the seventeenth century branded the Piedmontese massacre.—London Cor. N. Y. Times.

LITTLES—EACH—MUCH.

The wife of a Presbyterian minister canvassed a part of the parish to obtain pledges from the people to give a specified amount for the conversion of the world. Among other places, she entered a shoemaker's shop, and inquired of the old man on the bench if he would be willing to pledge $18.25 a year in weekly installments for the salvation of the world. He said: "$18.25! No, indeed, I seldom have such an amount of money. I would not promise one-half so much."

"Would you be willing to give five cents a day, or thirty-five cents each Sabbath for the cause of Christ?"

"Yes, and my wife will give as much more."

"I do not wish to play any tricks nor spring any trap on you. If you will multiply five cents by 365 days it will make just $18.25."

"Don't say anything more to me about the $18.25. I am good for five cents a day. Let me take your memorandum."

He pledged himself for thirty-five cents a Sabbath.

He took the book to his wife, for she took in washing and ironing and so had an income. She cheerfully gave her name for five cents a day. Their daughter was a seamstress and she wrote her name for four cents a day. Weeks came and months passed, and the shoemaker said: "I enjoy this, for I can give thirty-five cents a week and not feel it. It goes like current expenses; and then it amounts to so much more than I ever gave before; it gives me a manly feeling. I feel that I am doing my duty."

We doubt not that he might have said much more, that he felt a growing interest in home and foreign missions; found more comfort in prayer; was more conscious of the Saviour's presence, and he seemed to be nearing heaven Sabbath by Sabbath. Did that investment pay? "Every one that hath forsaken houses or lands," (or money?) for my name's sake, shall receive a hundred fold, i. e., $5.00 worth of comfort, refreshment, and soul's satisfaction for five cents a day.—Christian Giver.

"Blessed are ye when men shall revile you, and persecute you, and shall say all manner of evil against you falsely." The following little incident we clip from Glad Tidings: "Old Peter Cartwright was alarmed at one time because he had not heard an evil report of himself for several months, when a friend stopped him on the road and told him that a certain blacksmith had said that he (Cartwright) was the biggest hypocrite he ever saw. 'Glory to God,' says Peter, 'now I am delivered from all my fears, for the Bible says, Woe unto you when men speak well of you.' The best trees in the orchard have the most clubs on their branches—clubbed for the excellent fruit they bear. Righteous Stephen was stoned to death, and heaven opened to receive him."—Gospel Banner.

—A Presbyterian minister of a Western town was once accosted at a fair of his church, where some of the usual expedients were in full blast, by no less a personage than the well known Dean Richmond (afterwards President of the N. Y. Central Railroad, but then known to be a habitue of the gaming table) in this fashion: "Dominie, I don't exactly understand all your games here, but I would like to help the cause along. If you've no objection, I'd like to go into one of these side rooms and play a game of poker with you—the winning to go to the church any way." The parson squirmed a little, but the church game of blanks and prizes disappeared from that branch of Zion forthwith.

GRACE.

In olden times the term grace was used for a royal life-pardon, a reprieve from captivity and death; and now our King comes to us with this unspeakable gift of royal bounty; we must gather with reverence something of the wealth of meaning belonging to it, that we may be partakers of the abundant fullness of the riches of his grace.

In the visible world of physical life, grace means ease of motion, bearing with it a charm that is readily recognized, in the soul life; it is a gift bringing freedom and ease of onward movement, showing that the rough places are made plain, and captivity is ended; there is no need to stumble on in darkness; the soul may press on buoyantly in the Christ light.

In other words, it adds to the forces of Christian living a new atmosphere that sheds abroad the Christ-sunshine (Mal. 4: 2) and brings quickened vigor like the fresh pure air of the mountain height.

It is written in the brief record of the Christ-child, that the grace of God was upon him; it is for us to be fashioned in that likeness and as children of the King, come boldly, that is, freely and with confidence, to the throne of grace in every need.

The word grace has regal kindred. Looking into its origin and meaning, we find that it blends with the thought of joy and thankfulness; also with liberality and gratitude. A life in harmony with the Giver of all good gifts, cannot fail in largeness of heart and liberality to others.

Grace came by our Lord Jesus; of its fulness we may receive "grace for grace," wave upon wave of mercy reaching out around us in the present time, far beyond all human thought, or care, into the eternal future, into the infinite ocean of God's mercy and love. That we may receive more and more abundantly is the Christ-gift; freedom and abundance are its Scriptural associations.

The apostles' prayer and greeting for their dearly loved and sorely tried disciples, attain no higher thought than the "May grace and peace be with you." The inspired Word closes with the divine benediction: May the grace of our Lord Jesus be with you all.—Times of Refreshing.

A PERTINENT QUESTION

A poor child, straying into a Sunday-school one day, asked simply: "Is this the way to heaven?" The superintendent was for a moment startled. Was the school, indeed, the way to heaven? Was he trying to make it so? Were his teachers intent on the same object? The artless question struck home. From desk to class the question went round with a thrill. What were they all doing? Whither were they all tending? The question was like an angel suddenly come into their midst to make a record of all that transpired in that school. Oh, superintendents, teachers, make sure of this one thing: with all your efforts to impart knowledge, make the salvation of the soul of paramount interest; whether your school be a model, or struggling up to perfection, be sure that every scholar shall feel that it is the road to heaven.—The Christian.

Many of our conscientious women might learn a lesson from the letters of Jane Carlyle, in which we learn that she stayed at home a whole day to mend a boot, thus saving a shilling which would otherwise have gone to a shoemaker. This, too, not in the days of their poverty and struggle, but after the financial sky had brightened, and the cost meant little, compared with the drain on delicate nerves, and the weary head that ached for God's fresh air and sunshine. And still another and higher reason protests against such employment for the powers intended for better things. It is noble and heroic to "make a virtue of necessity," but degrading to give precious time and talent to inferior tasks, when God has set our nature to a loftier key and given opportunity to praise him with sweetest harmonics. It is a false idea of economy that leads us to such mistakes often. Some one has said, "Extravagance is not spending,—but disproportionate spending." Let us be careful that we do not ask, "to what purpose is this waste?" when the beautiful lavishness is all at the feet of the Lord, and will be forever our most precious "memorial."—Union Signal.

"Please get my china cup for me, Ann," Daisy said, coming in from the "sweet out-doors," as she called it, where she had been trying to read her new picture book.

Ann was shelling peas for dinner, and did not wish to be disturbed.

"What do you want of your cup?" she asked crossly.

"I want to get a drink for an old man."

"Well, take the dipper."

"No, the dipper won't do; I must have my cup, and I'm in a great hurry, a fearful hurry," Daisy said, imitating her brother Tom.

"I can't be bothered with your notions," Ann said, making her fingers fly very fast. "I'm in a hurry too; it's high time these peas were cooking; besides what old man is it? I don't believe your mother would let you give a drink of water out of your cup to every old fellow that came along if she was at home; like enough he's a tramp."

"No, he isn't a tramp; he's a 'siple. He told me so."

"A 'siple!" Ann said, bursting into a laugh. "What is that?"

"Why, papa read about them in the Bible. They are Jesus' servants, and he wants folks to give 'em a good drink of cold water when they are firsty."

"Well, I can't help it," said Ann, laughing again. "I can't be jumping up from my work all the time to wait on everybody." Take a dipper, if you must give him a drink."

"Oh dear," cried Daisy. "I told you the dipper wouldn't do. It said a cup; and I want my very bufulest one — that one with little birds on it. Come! do get it for me."

"Can't do it," Ann said, shelling peas with all her might.

Poor Daisy was hot and tired. She rested her elbows on the doorsill, and her chin on her hands, and looked very despairing. Two great tears came into her eyes, and at last she buried her face in her white apron and began to sob just as grandpa came along from the garden.

"Tut! tut!" said grandpa. "What's the matter with my pet?"

He sat down on the step, drew Daisy to him, and wiped her warm, tear-stained face with his clean linen handkerchief. It took but a few seconds to make grandpa understand what the trouble was; then he got up and said:

"Come and show me where it is."

The sun shone out again on Daisy's face, and with her hand tightly clasped in grandpa's she pattered along to the dining-room closet —not tired a bit now.

Grandpa reached down the beautiful cup, and then he got a pitcher and filled it with good cold water, and they two went down the front walk as fast as they could go.

When old Mr. Burton started out that morning to walk to the next town, he did not know what a very long, hot walk he had undertaken. He was a stranger, and was on his way to his son's house. When he left the cars the stage had gone. He was too poor to hire a carriage to take him over, so he had to walk five miles in a burning sun.

As he jogged along he grew very thirsty. He wished there was a spring by the roadside, but there was none. He came in sight of a large white house on the hill, and said to himself:

"I have a great notion to go in there and get a drink of water; but then, they are rich folks. They would take me for a tramp, and maybe set the dog on me."

As he came slowly along, looking up at the broad lawn with cool shadows of the great trees over it, he spied at the front gate a little girl. Her rosy face was hidden away in a white sun-bonnet, but her blue eyes looked up smilingly.

"Be you a 'siple?" she asked shyly.

"A what?" the old man said, looking down.

"A 'siple. Do you love Jesus?"

"Oh, you mean a disciple! Yes, little one, I belong to the Lord Jesus, Mr. Burton said.

"Do you want a drink of water?"

"Yes, indeed, my dear."

"Then I'll bring you one."

And Daisy's white dress vanished among the bushes while the tired old man sat on the green grass at the edge of the walk and waited.

He was beginning to think he should see no more of her, when she appeared with a pretty china cup full of cold water; then grandpa came with the pitcher full, and the thirsty traveler had all the water he needed.

Grandpa invited him into the house to get a lunch before he went. Then Prince was harnessed and brought round, and grandpa said he had promised Daisy that he would take her to ride, and they might as well drive toward Woodbury as anywhere. So they all got into the carriage, and old Prince trotted off. The road was so smooth, the air so sweet, and the talk so pleasant, that before they knew it they were at Woodbury; and there they left Mr. Burton. He said he never should forget the little girl who brought him the cup of cold water, but that every day of his life he would ask God to bless her.

The verse that Daisy meant can be found in Matthew 10:42.—The Pansy.

HOW CLOTHES PINS ARE MADE.

Clothes pins now come principally from Maine, where the requisite lumber is abundant. A Bangor paper describes the way they are made in one of the larger factories, at Vanceboro, in that State.

The wood used is mainly white birch and beech. The logs are cut and hauled to the shores of the lake or the streams emptying into it, whence they are floated down to the mill. As fast as required they are hauled into the mill by a windlass and chain worked by steam power, and sawed into lengths of 16 or 22 inches—the former to be made into pins, and the latter into boards for the boxes required in packing. The 16-inch lengths are next sawed into boards of the requisite thickness by a shingle machine, then into strips of the proper size by a gang of 12 circular saws, and finally into 5-inch lengths by a gang of three saws.

The logs have now been cut up into blocks about five inches long and three-fourths of an inch square. Falling, as they leave the saws, on an elevator belt, they are carried into an upper story, and returning to the first floor are deposited in troughs, whence they are fed to the turning lathes, of which there are several—each being capable of turning 80 pins a minute. They are then passed to the slotting machines, in which a peculiar arrangement of knives inserted in a circular saw gives the slot the proper flange, after which they are automatically carried by elevator belts to the drying bins on the second floor, where they are subjected to a high temperature, generated by steam pipes, until thoroughly seasoned. There are several of these bins, the largest of which has a capacity of 100 boxes, or 72,000 pins, and the smaller ones 50 boxes.

The pins are now ready for polishing and packing. The polishing is accomplished by means of perforated cylinders or drums, each capable of holding forty bushels, in which the pins are placed and kept constantly revolving until they become as smooth as if polished by hand with the finest sand paper. A few minutes before this process is completed, a small amount of tallow is thrown in the drums with the pins, after which a few more revolutions give them a beautiful glossy appearance. These polishing drums are suspended directly over the packing counter on the first floor of the mill, and being thus immediately beneath the ceiling of the floor above, are readily filled through scuttles from the drying bins on the second floor, and is easily emptied on the counter below, where the pins are sorted into first and second grades, and packed in boxes of five gross each. The sorting and packing are done by girls. Two hundred and fifty boxes are packed in a day.

The market for clothes pins are not confied to any special locality, but is found nearly all over the world. Ten thousand boxes have been shipped to Melbourne, Australia, within four months. Ten firms in London carry a stock of ten thousand boxes each, and two firms in Boston carry a like amount.—Mastery.

Why the Fingers are not of a Length.—A master, in illustrating on this question, made his scholar grasp a ball of ivory, to show that the fingers are equal. It would have been better, says Sir Charles Bell, had he closed his fingers upon his palm, and then asked whether or not they correspond. The difference in the length of the fingers serves many ends, adapting the form of the hand and fingers to different purposes—as for holding a rod, a switch, a sword, a hammer, a pen, a pencil, engraving tools, etc.' in all of which a secure hold and freedom of motion are admirably combined.— Transcript.

A Duck's Ruse Against a Dog.—While hunting above the Grand River dam a man shot, but he did not kill, one of two ducks which were mates. He sent his dog into the river after it, and as the injured one could not swim very fast the dog was likely to get it. Seeing this, the other one, which had swam quite a ways ahead, turned about and came near the dog, which immediately left the other and chased this. The duck now just kept out of reach of the dog and led it down toward the dam and just before reaching it dove under. The dog failed to get it and, being so near the dam, he went over and came very near drowning.—Detroit Free Press.

An unkind word from one beloved often draws the blood from many a heart which would defy the battle-axe of hatred or the keenest edge of vindictive satire.

TEMPERANCE.

DRUNK BY DRUGGING.

Dr. J. C. Jackson, of Dansville, N. Y., who knows by experience what it is to be a slave to the tobacco-using habit, and who has treated thousands of persons who have come under his professional supervision in the Health Institute at Dansville, who were in the use of this poison, says: "As a physician, I have for a long time entertained the opinion that the use of tobacco by our people is far more delcterious in its effects upon their health than is the use of alcoholic drinks; but as no one at once gets at the truth in detail, or so as to feel himself comprehensively the master of it in all of its relations, and to be aware of all its bearings, it is only within a few years that I have settled myself down thoroughly in the conviction that no habit of the American people is so destructive to their physical vigor and their moral character as that of the use of tobacco.

"Deplorable, however, as are the effects of the mere physical conditions of confirmed tobacco chewers, in the breaking down of their health and the inducements of a great variety of diseases, many of which are organic in their nature, and of course incurable, they all melt into nothingness by the side of the destruction to the higher faculties caused by its use. It is hard enough to have a debilitated body, but to have a mind and soul made drunk by drugging is terrible. I know of no sin among all the group of sins, which crop out in our habit of living and curse us as a people, that for destructive vigor and ruinous accomplishment can compare with the use of tobacco. I am not fanatical. I do not exaggerate. I speak the truth in perfect soberness, and am sure that abundant testimony awaits me in the way of demonstration."

HOW I WAS DELIVERED FROM TOBACCO.

As the evils of tobacco have been treated on through the columns of the various religious papers, I wish to tell how I was delivered from this slavish habit.

For some time I had been addicted to its use, and often felt a desire to be delivered therefrom and occasionally left off its use for a time, but as often would fall back into the habit again. The cause of my failure however was that I tried in my own strength. But not long since while listeuing to a sermon in which this evil habit was spoken of, the thought was very forcibly impressed upon my mind that it was wrong in the sight of God for me to indulge in so needless and filthy a habit. The day following it became yet clearer that it was wrong for me to indulge in its use, and there and then I went to God, and promised that by his grace I would abandon the evil habit, and thank God, from that day to this, I have had no desire for it

Now perhaps there may be those who like myself would desire to be delivered but think they cannot. To such I would say, do not undertake it in your own strength, but go at once to God, who will, if you believe and trust him, give you complete victory.—A Brother in Gospel Banner.

Here is an instance to make parents think a little. A few days ago a bright boy of fifteen, in Brooklyn, died of nicotine poisoning. Some eight or nine months ago he adopted the manly fashion of smoking cigarettes. Argument and persuasion were tried upon him by his parents,—of course he was above a command to let the mischievous things alone. It was of no use; and the poison had ample opportunity to do its deadly work, before medical aid was seen to be necessary to arrest the lad's failing health. Nothing could then be done, though a whole concourse of doctors was called, all of whom were agreed as to the cause which led to this fatal result. This instance will, we hope, call the attention of some careless parents to the perilous nature of the habits their boys are forming; whether they will stop their money-making, speculating, shopping and fine dress-making long enough to do the boys any good, we do not know, but the need of their careful, vigilant attention grows every day more apparent.—Union Signal.

Miss Frances E. Willard, president of the National Woman's Christian Temperance Union, writing in the Union Signal from Salt Lake City, says: "The Temple [Mormon] has been thirty years building and is by no means ready. It is of fine granite with walls six to sixteen feet in thickness. It is not for purposes of assembly but of initiation, the "Endowment House," a plain building near by, being temporarily used. The accounts given of these ceremonies [of initiation] are horrible beyond anything known in civilized countries outside of Morgan's book."

It will be remembered how Joseph Cook a few years ago exposed the Mormon initiations in his Boston lectures, and how they corresponded in many respects with the revelations of Freemasonry as given in Morgan's book. This recognition of the fact, if not the truth of Morgan's revelations, by Miss Willard, is a "straw" blown in the direction of the anti-secrecy reform. More will be heard from these noble temperance women in a few years. The Christian women of this country are certain to become the strength of the anti-secrecy reform as they now are of the temperance reform. Secrecy, like whisky, is the foe and robber of women. Let us bide our time, brethren, and we will have not only heaven but womanhood on our side in God's own good time. Meanwhile let us help the good brave women along in their temperance work. They will help us bravely against the lodge before many years. They are our natural and destined allies.—United Brethren in Christ.

THE CHURCHES.

—Elder E. L. Harris, of Delavan, Wis., has been spending a few days in Chicago with two sons, on his way, with Mrs. Harris, for southern Kansas where he expects to spend the winter in Sedgwick and Butler counties laboring with several poor churches as an independent home missionary, and, as Paul labored in Corinth and Thessalonica, not chargable even to the feeble flocks among whom he ministers. May there be rich reward for his labor of love.

—A fine audience gathered ou Saturday noon last in Farwell Hall to hear the exposition of the Sabbath school lesson by Pres. C. A. Blanchard. Prof. Excell and Charles Herald conducted the singing with most inspiring effect. The Chicago Evening Journal of Saturday afternoon began last week to publish Pres. Blanchard's remarks upon the lesson and will continue to do so. A great blessing seems to attend the fearless explanation of the Word of God in these meetings. The remarks of Saturday bearing upon a Christian's duty in politics one gentleman present is understood to intend having published in a religious journal and have 5,000 copies circulated in his denomination.

—A. M. Purdy, of Palmyra, N. Y., well known throughout the country as a horticulturist and publisher of the Fruit Recorder writes to the Christian Worker of this city of a gracious revival in his vicinity under the labors of two Quaker evangelists, Wm. Allen and Chas. Sweet, over thirty conversions occurring on a single evening.

—Rev. W. C Dinius writes that a blessed revival is progressing at his church in Montpelier, Williams county, Ohio, in connection with the regular meetings of the church, and great victories for Christ are expected. The lodge power is strong in the place, and seeks the ruin of the United Brethren church, but God reigns and his faithful people will rejoice in the victory he will give them.

—The Presbyterian Synod of China reports one hundred per cent. increase of accessions to its membership in the past five years.

— The census of missions to be taken next year will, it is said, show an increasc of 200,000 native Christians in India, Ceylon and Burmah for the last ten years—500,000 in all.

—The Government of Natal, South Africa, has granted a beautiful tract of land of about 3,400 acres to a society in England that proposes to establish a Christian settlement on it on principles similar to those adopted by the Moravians.

—The last news from the Livingstonia Mission in South Africa is that the whole of the New Testament has been translated into the language of the Chinyanja, and that sections of the steam-launch of the London Missionary Society have arrived at the head of Lake Nyassa.

—It is a serious question whether one generation should pile up endowments so that the next generation will find it less expensive to support the Gospel. The Congregational Council has indorsed the idea of spending a hundred thousand dollars or two to endow some secretaryships. It seems to us that it is a great deal better investment of such a sum of money to put it all into immediate use for church work where needed so much for immediate evangelization. It seems to us better ecouomy and better honesty to let the reasonable expense of management be fairly seen and paid, and not to be ashamed of it.—Independent.

—Mr. Shaw, the English missionary in Madagascar, whose ill-treatment by the French has been brought so prominently before the public, is not a clergyman, but a layman, according to the Pall Mall Gazette. He is now forty-three years old, and was educated at the Normal College of the British and Foreign School Society. Desiring to be employed in missionary work, he undertook an educational appointment at Samoa, under the London Missionary Society. In 1871 the society requested Mr. Shaw to become superintendent of education in the Betsileo Province, South Central Madagascar. In 1878 he went home for a holiday, and, on returning to Madagascar in 1880, was sent to Tamatave. At Tamatave he has superintended every department of mission work, religious and educational, medical and mechanical, including the erection of schools and churches. He is a member of the Zoological Society of London and a correspondent of the Meteorological Society.

—Dr. Otis Gibson, of the San Francisco Chinese Mission, has been unanimously requested by the Oregon Conference to organize a Chinese Mission in Portland, where it is estimated 7,000 Chinese reside.

—The second biennial conference of American Church Workers among the Deaf was held at Philadelphia on October 13th. A number of papers bearing on the religious welfare of deaf mutes were read. On Sunday the 14th, Bishop Stevens ordained a deaf mute to the priesthood; the first, it is said, ever ordained in the Protestant Episcopal Church.

—The report of the secretary submitted to the Congregational Council, at Concord, N. H., yesterday, showed a net gain of 262 churches during the past three years, and of 5,079 in membership. The addition to churches by profession averaged 12,500 annually. The contributions for Sabbath-schools last year amounted to $300,000, and for charitable objects over $6,000,000. There were 874 more churches in the United States than there were clergymen to supply them.

—The Sunday-school work in the State of Minnesota shows signs of a healthy and vigorous vitality. The first Sunday-school in the State was organized at St. Paul, thirty-seven years ago; now there are 1,444 schools with 76,000 scholars and 11,000 teachers and officers. During the last year there has been a net gain of 118 schools, nearly four thousand scholars and 100 teachers and officers.

—According to The Gospel in All Lands, there are in Lucknow and Cawnpore forty-five publishing houses engaged in printing and circulating infidel and pagan books. One publisher received from a rich Mohammedan $4,000 to assist in printing Mohammedan works. A million Hindu tracts were issued at the expense of one Hindu prince. 103 newspapers, mostly weekly, advocate and support paganism and Hinduism, and assail Christianity in India.

—The Synod of the Reformed Church of the United States convened at Reading, Pa., on the 10th. The opening sermon was preached by the retiring President, Rev. George H. Johnston, of Philadelphia. Rev. Thomas C. Porter, D. D., of Easton, Pa., was elected President. A committee was appointed to make arrangements for the celebration of the 400th anniversary of the birth of Ulrich Zwingli, on the first Sabbath of January.

—The efforts to effect a union of the four Methodist bodies in Canada, known as the Canada Methodists, Bible Christians, Episcopal Methodists, and Primitive Methodists, have been successful. This union affects at least 600,000 people in the Dominion of Canada, Newfoundland and the Bermudas, and church property to the amount of millions of dollars in these provinces, and constitutes the strongest ecclesiastical body in Canada.

—The November number of the Reformed Presbyterian and Covenanter announces the death of Dr. Beattie in Syria thus: "We announce, with pain, to the church the death of Rev. Joseph Beattie, D.D., the senior foreign missionary. This took place at Latakiyeh, Syria, from gastric fever. It is a strange coincidence that this number contains the obituary of chairman of the Board of Foreign Missions, Rev. Dr. S. O. Wylie, and the notice of the death of the brother with whom he had so much to do in that relation. Dr. Beattie was the son of Elder John Beattie, of the Coldenham and then of the Newburgh church. He was a graduate of Union College, Schenectady, N. Y., and was educated for the ministry under Rev. Dr. James M. Wilson privately, while he was a pastor in Philadelphia. He went to Syria with the late Rev. Dr. Dodds, in 1856. His visit to America, the death of his wife in Philadelphia, his recall on this account, and his return again to his field of labor are fresh in the minds of our readers. He leaves a large family of children."

—Rev. Wm. Taylor, says the New York Advocate, is at the front in South America, and wherever he goes life and converting power attend him. Quite a number of privates and several officers on one of our United States war ships now in Chili have been converted, and are testifying with great clearness and force.

—The Romanists are endeavcring to counteract the Luther movement, are reviving old falsehoods in regard to the Reformer, have appointed a day of fasting and prayer on the anniversary of Luther's birth, and Prof. Jansen. of Frankfurt, has published a book to show that the Reformation was the greatest disaster Europe has experienced, and that the Romish Church has been the conservator of law and order and true progress in church and state.

TESTIFYING CHURCHES IN LARGE CITIES.—King street church, Chambersburg, has had several important works to do bearing on the church at large. One of its missions is to demonstrate that a congregation of United Brethren in Christ can exist and flourish in a large town or city while actively opposing secret societies, and carrying out the rule of the church. The United Presbyterians and Covenanters have long maintained large congregations in the cities while refusing membership to members of secret orders. Yet there has been a cry in our church that we can not build up in the towns and cities with our anti-secrecy principles. This cry is proved false by King street church. There are members of this church who follow the trades which are said to need the protection of the trades-unions. Yet these brethren do not belong to the unions. They find no great difficulty in keeping out of these secret dens, yet we are told by the lodge party in the church that men can not keep out of the secret unions while working at the trades. The United Brethren congregations in cities and large towns have almost generally yielded to the pressure, and taken in members of secret societies on the pretense that they can not live and respect the rule. The church here has clearly shown the hollowness and hypocrisy of this cry.—United Brethren in Christ.

CHRISTIAN TRAINING-SCHOOL.—Miss E. Dryer, superintendent of the Bible Work in Chicago, has addressed the following letter to members of the "Prayer Alliance" in the United States and Canada:

During the recent conventirn held in this city by Mr. Moody, he announced that measures are on foot for the establishment here of a Training-school for young men and young women in Christian work. Already young women are engaged in it, and we hope to see their numbers increase. The purpose is to fit Christian workers for the work of our Home Missions in our cities and on our frontiers, to visit from house to house, and, with open Bible, try to lead souls to Christ, and to build up his cause. By this means many are excellently fitted for foreign fields, and our Lord will certainly lead his children to their best place of labor, if they will obediently follow his leadings. Will you constantly pray that our Lord will send forth laborers into his harvest? Send them at home, send them here, send them all over the world, that "this Gospel of the kingdom shall be preached in all the world for a witness unto all nations; AND THEN SHALL THE END COME."

Who, among the multitude of young Christians in our land, is ready to seek first the kingdom of God, and his righteousness, trusting his promise to add all needed things?

THE WESLEYAN GENERAL CONFERENCE.

The eleventh quadrennial session of the General Conference of the American Wesleyan Methodist churches opened on the 17th of October in Syracuse and continued until the 24th.

Rev. N. Wardner, editor of the American Wesleyan, was re-elected president of the body; and Rev. Joel Martin, of Michigan, and Phineas Lamb, of Indiana, vice-presidents. Rev. E. W. Bruce, of Michigan, was chosen secretary and Revs. William Pinkney, of Illinois, and S. Bedford, of Seneca Falls, N. Y., assistants. Revs. N. Wardner and D. S. Kinney were re-elected respectively editor of denominational papers and publishing agent.

As in past years the Conference has had unpleasant experiences in receiving Masonic delegates from the conferences of other denominations. A committee was appointed to question fraternal delegates and signify to all who were defiled with the unholy fellowship of the lodge that the Conference did not wish to recognize any who so lightly regarded the vows of consecration to the only true God. This action of the Wesleyan General Conference stands by itself; we know not that it characterizes any other body. May God bless the churches that sustain it.

The editor of the Cynosure, the president of the National Christian Association and its General Agent and the son of the latter were presented to the Conference during its sittings.

Prof. L. N. Stratton, president of Wheaton Theological Seminary, was unable to be present at this meeting. On Monday the Conference received by telegram the annoucement of the death of his brother, Rev. S. F. Stratton, of Elkhorn, Wis., and suspended business for a time in sympathy for an absent and beloved brother, while Rev. O. S. Grinnell, of Michigan, led in prayer. Resolutions of condolence were also passed.

The Conference voted against the publication of secular advertisements in the Wesleyan, hoping to more than make up the difference with subscriptions. Good! It also gave its sanction to the celebration of the marriage ceremony on the Lord's day.

The committee on Reforms presented an elaborate report of which the following is a significant part:

"In the light of the experience of the last four years, we reaffirm our position on organized secretism of all kinds, and believe that the developments of oncoming years will demonstrate the wisdom of our action in cutting loose from all lodges of secretists. We also pledge ourselves to maintain our rule inviolate, and to keep our communion pure, so far as possible from fellowshiping the image of the beast. We deeply sympathize however, with the loyal soldiers of the late war, while we deplore the mistake made by them in making the organization called the Grand Army of the Republic a secret society; thus making it a kindred spirit of Freemasonry. We extend to all denominations, associated and independent churches, laboring for the same end, our most cordial greeting and fellowship in the work."

American companies have built over $30,000,000 worth of railroads in Mexico, and completed over 1,600 miles of track. The English lines consist of 353 miles, and the Mexican roads 635 miles.

A street railroad car was lately propelled by electricity for thirty miles through the principal streets of Paris, without any accident or frightening of horses. It was brought to a standstill without any trouble within a second, and the speed was nine and one-half miles an hour on level ground and five and one-half on an ascent. Its estimated cost is one-half that of horse-cars.

HORSFORD'S ACID PHOSPHATE.

In Impaired Nerve Function.

Dr. C. A. FERNALD, Boston, Mass., says: "I have used it in cases of impaired nerve function, with beneficial results, especially in cases where the system is affected by the toxic action of tobacco."

—The number of languages spoken is 4,064; the number of men is about equal to the number of women; the average of human life is 33 years. One quarter die before the age of 7, one-half before the age of 17. Of every 1,000 persons, 1 only reaches 100 years; and of every 100 only 6 reach 75 years; and not more than 1 in 500 will reach 80 years. There are on the earth 1,000,000,000 of inhabitants. Of these 33,333,333 die every year; 91,824 die every day; 7,780 die every hour, and 60 per minute, or 1 every second. These losses are about balanced by an equal number of births. Married people are longer lived than the single; and, above all, those who observe a sober and industrious conduct. Men who are tall live longer than short ones. Women have more chances of life previous to 50 years than men, but fewer after; the number of marriages are in the proportion of 76 to 100, and are more frequent after the equinoxes—that is, during the months of June and December; those born in spring are generally more robust than others; births and death are more frequent by night than by day. The number of men capable of bearing arms is about one-fourth of the population.

THE PUREST IS THE BEST.

In the selection of SUNDAY-SCHOOL PAPERS, the most important point to be considered is the moral tone of the subject matter. If this is of a questionable character, the papers should be shunned, no matter how large, how attractive, or how low the price. Such papers are

COSTLY AT ANY PRICE.

The country is being flooded with S. S. literature that is largely composed of what may be properly termed "RELIGIOUS FICTION," the tendency of which is to create a distaste for sound reading and foster an appetite for fiction of a more deleterious character.

The engravings of these papers are equally objectionable. In many cases a lady or girl dressed in the height of fashion is made the HEROINE OF A STORY, thus putting the highest sanction to extravagance and pride. With such instructors in our Sunday-schools we cannot expect the children to grow up with a love for sound literature and with correct ideas of Christian propriety. With a view of supplying S. S. papers, of a pure and elevating character, the publishers are issuing

FOUR MONTHLY PAPERS.

They are FREE FROM FICTION, and the cuts are chosen with great care. While they are thus carefully edited, they are not lacking in attractiveness. They are well printed on beautiful tinted paper. The children are delighted with them. The very low price at which this line of S. S. papers is issued, places them within the reach of even schools of limited means

FARM NOTES.

AUTUMN CARE OF LIVE STOCK.

Horses should be kept out of all hard storms, which are frequent during this month. One of the best cures for a severe cold is a warm stable and perfect rest, with a good run in the yard or pasture on pleasant days. It is too late in the year to permit horses to remain out of doors throughout the night. Young colts and yearlings need plenty of nutritious food. Much depends upon the care which colts receive during their first winter. Oats are excellent for them; if corn is used, it should be fed with wheat bran. Use the brush freely on all horses and colts, and keep the skin clean and active.

Cows, which are to give milk through the winter, need to be fed with special care at this time. If possible, the flow of milk must not be permitted to decrease. Mangels and sugar beets are excellent, cut in slices and sprinkled with bran. The rule, that good feeding brings good manure, should be kept in mind in a judicious care of farm animals during winter. Good feed in abundance is not enough it should be given with regularity. The habits of different animals have to be studied, and treated accordingly. Scarcely any two cows or horses have the same appetite. It is important to so mix and change the feed that sameness may be avoided. A variety of food encourages healthful digestion, and upon this the profits of the owner largely depend.

Sheep will bear more exposure than any other domestic animal, but even they winter poorly without a good shelter. Sheds and yards should now be put in order, that there may be no delays in getting the flocks into their winter quarters. Ewes should now be with young, excepting when late lambs are desired. Half a pint of corn per day will aid in keeping each ewe in good condition. All weak sheep should be placed by themselves and fattened for market. It does not pay to keep second-rate animals.

Pigs are most profitable if fattened and sold before mid-winter. A large part of the food is used up in simply maintaining the animal during the coldest winter weather. Well-bred swine will sometimes lose in weight during a severe storm. Give the pigs all the corn, or other feed, they will eat during the fattening period. Keep the pens clean, with an abundance of litter, and supply all needed pure water. —American Agriculturist.

CULTIVATING OAK TREES.

It is not too late at the North to direct the attention of our tree planters and our nurserymen to the planting and propagation of the varieties of the native oak, so abundant in American forests. The oak is the emblem of strength and endurance. It is a notable stalwart tree, stretching its brawny arms out far and wide and towering as loftily as its more rapidly growing companions of the forests. No one who has seen those fine specimens of native oak in the public squares of Philadelphia but must have admired their vigorous forms and strong, spreading branches. They are striking specimens of successful growth. Yet the same objection exists to the oak as to the white wood: its wide spreading, lateral and deep-descending tap-roots. For successful planting they should be started from the acorns where the trees are to grow. Of all the varieties the upland white, the common oak of the ship-builders, and swamp or lowland white, and the over-cup oaks are the grandest in their growth and stature. The latter throws up antler-like branches which, when denuded of their leaves, have a bold, striking appearance, with less of spray than the others, but a deeper colored, larger and longer leaf. The red, yellow, gray and black oaks, as they are severally called, but which in reality differ little in size and appearance, are also noble trees, and grand objects when standing apart, or in groups in the park or on the lawn.

GREEN FOOD FOR SWINE.

Prof. S. R. Thompson, of the Nebraska Agricultural College, speaks from experience on pork growing, in the American Agriculturist.

Green food makes thriftier and larger hogs. Farmers who raise many pigs and feed them exclusively on corn, know that some of the shotes will cease to grow at an early age, begin to lay on fat, and never reach the size of good, merchantable hogs. This tendency to fatten prematurely, at the expense of bone growth, is not seen to any great extent in grass-fed hogs. A pig fed on bulky green food will develop a larger stomach than one fed on concentrated food like corn; and when you come to fatten it, this enlarged capacity will enable him to eat and digest more corn, and thus fatten faster than the other, and be a more profitable hog to grow for market.

Grass-fed hogs are healthier than those grain-fed. Every intelligent breeder knows the advantages of feeding green food to sows about to farrow. They have less difficulty with their pigs, are less liable to destroy them, will give more milk, and nurse them better. Grass-fed hogs are less liable to disease. The dreaded hog cholera is not much to be feared where the hogs have the run of a good clover pasture. Undoubtedly, if exposed to contagion, they would take the disease, but they are not likely to develop it. For example, a farmer had his hogs in a small pen, destitute of grass, with no water except a muddy pool, which soon was made as vile as possible by the hogs. After a while the hogs began to die in considerable numbers, with symptoms resembling cholera. The owner was alarmed, took them out of this pen, turned them on a patch of green rye, and gave them water from a well. The disease was checked and the deaths ceased.

How may green food be most cheaply provided? Rye is the crop best adapted to this purpose, in the region west of the Missouri. This should be sown early in the fall, on well prepared soil, and if the growing season continues late in the fall, so that the rye is likely to joint, it must be fed down closely. The best condition for it to go into winter, is when it covers the ground with a thick mat of low leaves with but little tendency to shoot. Rye in this condition is fit to turn on as soon as growth begins in spring. The amount of feed which two acres of such rye will furnish, is surprising. If not fed down too close, and the stock be turned off about the middle of May or the first of June, the rye will still make a fair crop. Hogs are sometimes left on the rye until it fills, when they will pull it down and eat the heads; but this practice is not commended. There is a time after the rye is a foot high until it is in milk, that hogs do not eat it well. A better plan is to have a field of clover, or of clover and timothy or orchard grass, ready for the pigs when the rye is too large to be longer available. When the rye is getting too large the clover is in the best state to turn upon. The clover will do well till about the middle of June, when, if the weather turns off hot and dry, it grows quite slowly It is well to have a patch of oats sown near and ready to tide over this time. If not needed it can grow for the harvest. During the hot weather of July, August and September none of the crops named above can be fully relied on, and this is especially true where they have been fed too closely. Sorghum or Brown Dourra may be sown broadcast about the last of May and again the middle of June, to be used in July and August. Experience shows that sorghum may be eaten off close to the ground when a foot to eighteen inches high, without serious injury. It will come up again and grow right along. It is also an excellent plant to stand dry weather.

DR. JOHN BULL'S
Smith's Tonic Syrup
FOR THE CURE OF
FEVER and AGUE
Or CHILLS and FEVER.
AND ALL MALARIAL DISEASES.

The proprietor of this celebrated medicine justly claims for it a superiority over all remedies ever offered to the public for the SAFE, CERTAIN, SPEEDY and PERMANENT cure of Ague and Fever, or Chills and Fever, whether of short or long standing. He refers to the entire Western and Southern country to bear him testimony to the truth of the assertion that in no case whatever will it fail to cure if the directions are strictly followed and carried out. In a great many cases a single dose has been sufficient for a cure, and whole families have been cured by a single bottle, with a perfect restoration of the general health. It is, however, prudent, and in every case more certain to cure, if its use is continued in smaller doses for a week or two after the disease has been checked, more especially in difficult and long-standing cases. Usually this medicine will not require any aid to keep the bowels in good order. Should the patient, however, require a cathartic medicine, after having taken three or four doses of the Tonic, a single dose of BULL'S VEGETABLE FAMILY PILLS will be sufficient.

The genuine SMITH'S TONIC SYRUP must have DR. JOHN BULL'S private stamp on each bottle. DR. JOHN BULL only has the right to manufacture and sell the original JOHN J. SMITH'S TONIC SYRUP, of Louisville, Ky. Examine well the label on each bottle. If my private stamp is not on each bottle do not purchase, or you will be deceived.

HON. THURLOW WEED ON THE MORGAN ABDUCTION.

This is a sixteen page pamphlet comprising a letter written by Mr. Weed, and read at the unveiling of the monument erected to the memory of Capt. William Morgan. The frontispiece is an engraving of the monument. It is a history of the unlawful seizure and confinement of Morgan in the Canandaigua jail, his subsequent conveyance by Freemasons to Fort Niagara, and drowning in Lake Ontario. He not only subscribes his NAME to the letter, but ATTACHES HIS AFFIDAVIT to it.

In closing his letter he writes: I now look back through an interval of fifty-six years with a conscious sense of having been governed through the "Anti-Masonic excitement" by a sincere desire, first, to vindicate the violated laws of my country, and next, to arrest the great power and dangerous influences of "secret societies."

The pamphlet is well worth perusing, and is doubtless the last historical article which this great journalist and politician wrote. [Chicago, National Christian Association.] Single copy, 5 cents.

NIGHTS IN A BAR-ROOM

T. S Arthur's great temperance book, complete and illustrated. By mail, 5c each; 50c per doz. By express, $3.50 per 100.

THE LIQUOR TRAFFIC THE GREAT SOURCE OF CRIME.

Leaves from the diary of an old lawyer.—By Hon. A. B Richmond, author of "Court and Prison," etc. A book of intense interest, rivaling the famous "Diary of a Physician," and, in its truthful, terrible pictures of the power and crime of intemperance, excelling the well-known "Ten Nights in a Bar-room." The temperance issue of the present time is, Shall prohibition be partial or entire? Shall the branches of the death-bearing tree be pruned and trimmed, or shall the tree itself be cut down and its stump be torn up by the roots? The answer of "Leaves from the Diary" is, "Cut down the tree, tear up the roots, leave not a shoot or shred behind." It is certainly a very strong and eloquent volume Complete edition on fine, heavy paper, with colored lithograph of Sewall's stomach plates By mail, 30c each, $3 per doz. By express, $20 per 100. Abridged edition, by mail, 15c; $1.25 per doz. By express, $9 per 100.

THE LIQUOR TRAFFIC AND THE SOBER CITIZEN.

An able and telling work, by Rev. J H. Sherman, which brings out the effects of the liquor traffic in a new light. The following are some of the commendations of the first edition.

"The author drives the nails of conviction through and clinches them."—N Y Christian Advocate.

"Speakers and workers in the temperance field will find valuable aid in this pamphlet. It is crowded with convincing facts "—Zion's Herald

"One of the ablest reviews of the drink curse ever issued from the press."—The Morning and Day of Reform.

"The arguments are put in telling form."—Judge Pittman.

New revised and enlarged edition. By mail, 10c each; $1 per doz. By express, $6 per 100.

DRINKS FROM DRUGS.

A startling exposure of the liquor traffic, by El. Johnson. A book that cannot fail to arouse the American people to the gigantic swindle now being perpetrated. The writer was offered $10,000 by a leading brewer to keep still. Liquor not only doctored, but made entirely from drugs. Extracts from a whole library of secret books, giving receipts for making and doctoring; advertisements of essences, fac-similes of labels, engravings, etc., etc. Claret, port, sherry, champagne, whisky, brandy, gin, rum, etc., all out of one barrel, and made at less than 25 cents a quart. Wine that never saw grape juice; cider that never saw apples; beer factories in place of breweries, fine cream ale without barley or brewing; whisky from arsenic; millions of gallons of liquor that pays no revenue tax. The farmer's corn and barley "all in your eye." A wholesale liquor store in a ten-foot square cellar; more French wine sold in New York City than is produced in the whole of France. By mail, 10c each; $1 per doz. By Express, $6 per 100.

W. C. T. U. ORGANIZATION AND WORK.

A book of general information on how to organize and run successfully a Woman's Christian Temperance Union. This book should be widely distributed among W. C. T. U. presidents, pastor's wives and other representative women. By mail, 10c each; $1 per doz. By express, $6 per 100.

HOME PROTECTION.

A lawyer's view of it. By J. C. Wells, attorney-at-law. The question of female suffrage for the protection of home ably discussed from a lawyer's standpoint. A book for the times. By mail, 10c each; $1 per doz. By express, $6 per 100.

BAND OF HOPE RECITERS.

172 pages. 164 choice recitations of poetry and prose, containing some of the choicest bits of temperance material for the platform ever uttered, accompanied by an article on elocution. By mail, 10c each; $1 per doz. By express, $6 per 100.

GENERAL TEMPERANCE SONG BOOK.

"Temperance Songs," a Book for Adult Societies.—Eighty-three choice pieces, both words and music (old and new tune combination) choice selections from standard temperance collections; many choice new pieces. Book carefully edited by David C. Cook. Will prove just what is wanted by every temperance society Price in strong cardboard covers, by mail, 10c each; $1 per dozen; by express, $5 per 100.

TEMPERANCE ANTHEM BOOK.

Temperance Anthems.—A new idea; nothing else of the kind in existence. Will insure good music by the choir at temperance meetings. Forty-eight pages of choice anthems by ablest writers. By mail, 15c each; $1.50 per doz. By express, $10 per 100.

BAND OF HOPE SONG BOOK.

Band of Hope Songs.—Fifty-seven choice pieces for juvenile temperance gatherings, Bands of Hope, etc. Old, familiar tunes, also choice new words and music. Words far in advance of anything else issued. By mail, 8c each; 75c per doz. By express, $4 per 100.

DANIEL'S BAND.

A temperance concert exercise, with parts suitable for all ages; entirely new. Songs, recitations, dialogues, etc., of a thoroughly aggressive character; sure to carry weight with the rendering of it. By mail, 5c each; 50c per dozen, By express, $2 per 100.

THE COLD WATER ARMY.

For a primary temperance concert exercise. An entirely new exercise, containing songs and recitations, dialogues, etc., suitable for primary scholars. A pleasing and telling concert on temperance. By mail, 5c each; 50c per dozen. By express, $2 per 100.

THE PERSIAN SEAL BINDING

Is very handsome and durable. It is this style of binding which is so much admired by Bible readers. Please notice particularly that these Bibles are kid lined and silk sewed. Many Bibles in this style outwardly are lined with black paper and sewed with thread in place of silk.

LEVANT MOROCCO BINDING.

The Persian Seal bindings are the best kept by most Bible dealers, and usually pass for the best teachers' Bibles made; and, to all appearance, they are so. There is, however, a better wearing binding, of which the Persian Seal is a good imitation; this is known as "Levant Morocco." In all respects the Levant morocco Bible corresponds with the Persian Seal description, except as to leather used for cover which, though looking like the Persian Seal, is stronger, and will last a lifetime.

Prices on genuine Levant Morocco bindings:

For $4.50—Small size. Postage, 10c.
For $5.50—Medium size. Postage, 12c.
For $8.00—Large size. Postage, 20cts.

Handsome Gift Bibles at Low Prices.

For 45c. Embossed morocco cover, gilt edges, gilt title on back. Very neat and durable. This is the handsomest 45c. gift Bible we have ever seen. Postage, 5c.

For 60c. Morocco cover, brass bound and plated, with handsome gilt clasp and gilt edges; two patterns; square and round corners. Exquisite lettering on side; printed in large clear type. Bibles no better are sold as high as $1 and $2. Postage, 6c.

For 70c. Similar size and style of binding to our 60-cent Bible; square corners, brass bound, with clasp and handsome tasseled book-mark; also medallion inserted on side in gold and red.

This was a new importation with the fall of 1882, and a very pretty design. It should be seen to be appreciated. (See cut.) Postage, 6c.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

—Among the cases recently docketed in the United States Supreme Court is the city of New Orleans vs. Myra Clark Gaines. The record in the case is the largest ever submitted to the Supreme Court or probably any other court. It is bound in an immense volume which weighs over 200 pounds and contains 3,200,000 words. It takes two men to open and shut the book.

—It is one of the pleasant and significant signs of the times that Wendell Phillips is to address the National Cotton Planters' Association at its meeting in Vicksburg the 21st inst.

—An explosion in J. H. Smith's Excelsior squib factory at Kingston, Pa., Tuesday, blew eight children out of the building, one falling in the creek. Their ages are between 11 and 16, and all are horribly burned and blackened by the powder. One died and five others cannot recover.

—Six miles from East St. Louis, Tuesday morning, a broken rail caused two coaches of a Louisville and Nashville train to jump the track and were dragged some distance on their sides. Thirty-seven persons were injured—ten seriously and one fatally.

—In the Banks county (Ga.) Kuklux trial Tuesday, one man swore that a band gave him 175 lashes, and another that he had been shot and left for dead. The first witness exhibited the scars on his back.

—At Bloomington Ill., Thursday, the ex-Rev. Hoffman, the Freemason expelled a year ago from the Methodist church for immorality, officiated, by request, at the funeral of Mrs. Ira Lackey, occupying his old pulpit in the temporary absence of the present pastor. Some members of the congregation declare the church has been profaned, and excitement in Methodist circles runs high.

—The baggage and passenger coach of a Delaware and Hudson train fell through a trestle near Fort Edward, N. Y., Monday P. M., eighty feet to the Champlain Canal, killing three persons and wounding twenty, one fatally.

—The steamship Heimdehl, from Christiansand, arrived off New York Monday evening on fire, which broke out Sunday in the lower main hold. There were 366 persons on board, who were rescued by the fire and police boats, and the Castle Garden barges, after which the steamer was run ashore on Bedloe's Island.

—Judge Noonan decided at St. Louis, Friday, that poker was a game of chance, and comes under the Johnson law making gambling a felony.

—Charles Lorentzin, a farmer residing near Elgin, Ill., died Friday of glanders, having contracted the disease from his horse. His wife, also suffering from the same complaint, will not recover.

—Captain Rand and his mate, Thomas Pender, who violated the neutrality laws by furnishing war munitions to the Haytian insurgents, were sentenced Friday at Philadelphia to a year's imprisonment and $500 fine each, and costs.

—During the recent outbreak at Port-au-Prince, Hayti, 1,500 persons were killed and $4,000,000 worth of property destroyed. The government forces were repulsed at Miragoane, and General Piquent fatally wounded.

—Touching affairs in Tonquin, the French Yellow Book states that the negotiations with China have been conducted in a friendly spirit, but nothing has been gained, China demanding the whole of Northern Anam, and giving the French a foothold only in the Southern provinces. The Paris Government hopes that the presence of re-enforcements in Tonquin will convince China that France is resolute, and that the government is indorsed by the Chambers and the country.

—One thousand pirates threaten the French at Hoi Phong, while the Black Flags hold out at Bac Ninh, their forts being mounted with Krupp guns. French re-enforcements are awaited with impatience, as the condition of the roads for army movements is daily improving.

—Explosions in the Lady Pitt and Wharncliffe-Carlton coal mines in England killed eight persons and wounded several others.

—Earthquake shocks were felt at Malta and Trieste early Monday morning, last week, and a Constantinople dispatch of Thursday says that many inhabitants of Smyrna are fleeing from the city, on account of fear from further earthquakes. The government has sent a sufficient quantity of lumber to construct 5,000 sheds for the shelter of those rendered homeless by the catastrophe. The editors of the local papers here have formed a committee for the aid of the sufferers. Slight shocks are still occurring at long intervals, but are doing no damage.

—A new circular containing, under the head "Black List," the names of the jurors in the Phœnix Park murder trial, was mailed to thousands in Dublin last week.

—The Pope threatens to declare the Pantheon a pagan temple, if a monument to Victor Emanuel is placed therein.

—Russia and Germany are massing armies on their respective frontiers, and German fortifications are being strengthened.

—At the British Cabinet meeting Friday it was stated France would give Missionary Shaw £1,000 damages, and officially express regrets at his ill-treatment in Madagascar.

—Owing to jealousy of foreign enterprise in Russia, the newspapers are fiercely attacking an establishment favored by the government, a mixed company of American, French, and Russian capitalists, with a capital of 27,000,000 rubles, for the erection of American grain elevators throughout the empire.

FULL OF GRAND IDEAS.

"Masonry and Mormonism are political engines with religious driving wheels. Their conductors are kings; their engineers, priests; their motive power, popular depravity combined with popular conscience, and their practical end is the luxury and power of leaders who form men's interests for eternity that they may tax and govern them in time."

The above is a sample of the vigorous and striking thoughts, the grand ideas of which the pamphlet on the Batavia Convention is full. Get this book by all means. Price, post paid, 25 cents each.

IN THE COILS.

The third edition in English of this popular book has been issued. One edition in Swedish and another in the Holland language has been published, as we are informed by the publishers. Send to the N. C. A. office for a copy; price $1.50.

HOLDEN WITH CORDS,

OR THE POWER OF THE SECRET EMPIRE. A faithful representation in story of the evil influence of Freemasonry, by E. E. FLAGG, author of "Little People," "A Sunny Life," etc. This is a thrillingly interesting story, accurately true to life because mainly a narration of historical facts. 384 pages. In cloth, $1; per doz., $9. Paper, 50c; per doz., $4.

NOTICES OF THE PRESS.

"There is no important history extant but has connected with it numerous other histories of which it was the initial point, or the dominating influence. The abduction and murder of Morgan set ten thousand secret springs in motion, as the surrender of the charters of so many lodges at that time, and the severing of their connection with the order of some forty thousand of its members indicated. This story is one of these histories, and is a collection of facts woven into a story. It cannot fail to be read with interest."—Free Methodist, Chicago.

1ST. OF JANUARY.

TAKE ADVANTAGE OF THIS OFFER!

Trial subscriptions to the Cynosure from now to the 1st of January, 1884, will be sent for twenty-five cents.

Subscriptions new and old, from November 1st to January 1st 1885, only TWO DOLLARS. Take advantage of this offer, for it will be open only for letters received at this office before November 15th. This gives such subscribers the Cynosure for TWO MONTHS FREE!

If the Cynosure had TEN THOUSAND subscribers the yearly priee could be redueed to a uniform rate of $1.50. Work and pray for this.

THE LARGEST LIST.

The offer of a premium for the canvassers who would send in the largest lists of subscribers to the Cynosure, has not been fairly stated. To prevent misunderstandings and to be just to all, this will be the plan:

To the friend who sends in the largest list of subseribers (counted by the year) will be sent a WEBSTER'S UNABRIDGED DICTIONARY.

To the one sending the next largest list will be sent an ANTI-MASONIC LIBRARY.

The third largest list gets a eopy of IN THE COILS.

The fourth a copy of HOLDEN WITH CORDS.

Mark –

1. The offer is good only until January 1, 1884. Every name must be sent before that date.

2. Every one who wishes to eompete for one of these premiums must send his name and address to this office, stating the definite purpose to compete.

3. Send in the names as fast as secured, writing the address plainly.

The evangelists, Moody and Sankey, began their great work in London on Lord's day and the press dispatches give an interesting account of the meetings. Leaving the great Chicago convention Mr. Moody and his companion went directly to Limerick in the west of Ireland. The three weeks spent in that city, Cork and Waterford, Mr. Moody says were among the most productive of good result for the kingdom of Christ of any during his whole work. A careful description of the iron buildings to be used in London this winter appear from an English paper in our church news. On Sabbath the work began with four great meetings, each attended by from 4,000 to 6,000 persons. The appeal of both the evangelists, in song and exhortation, took hold upon the hearts of the multitude. A hundred persons rose to be prayed for, and when at the close of the evening meeting a scoffer cried out that Moody's last work in the city was a failure, he was answered by 3,000 men springing to their feet as volunteers in Christian work. The great work in which these brethren are engaged will be remembered at the family altar in a million American homes this winter.

The responses to the Supreme Court decision against the Civil Rights act from the South, while approving the doctrine of the court, exhibit also a spirit of candor and a desire to do justly with all classes. Senator Brown of Georgia says the decision "will have a good effect upon the country, and result in the adjustment by natural methods of many questions that have been vexatious to the public peace." The Atlanta Constitution, a journal of wide influence in the South, says no less plainly: "It now behooves the South to show that she is capable of doing the negro justice without fear of impending statutes." Once we would have received such expressions with much misgiving, but the late decision against the Ku-Klux raiders in the same city and the heavy penalties laid upon them give much assurance of promises of justice to the freedmen. A terrible and bloody battle between the races in Danville, Virginia, on Saturday evening reads most forebodingly. The Supreme Court Justices may well read of it with apprehension. A white man beats a negro for some rudeness. A melee begins in which both races engaged. A white man drew a pistol and it was fired. A white political meeting broke up poured into the street, and the opposing crowds began firing; but as the universal result has been the blacks run, the blacks only are killed, and the town is put under the control of white militia. It is impossible to believe that those who do all the killing in these cases are not the most guilty; and, with the interpretation which the old, latent Southern prejudice will put upon the decision, that there will not be a recurrence of so-called mobs, fatal, however, always and only to the long-suffering race.

Capel, the English priest, reached Chicago last week and is devoting all his eloquence and extraordinary persuasive powers upon arguments to prove that Romanism is happily harmonious with Republicanism in our finest and largest hall. The papers overflow with long and servile descriptions of the missionary, of his address and of his auditory. But who can say what his errand may be to the educated and wealthy Americans? Will he find them as easily moved by his persuasions as have been the higher classes of England? He is believed to be one of the ablest advocates of Rome, a man of immense power in English society, who hesitated not a few years since to take up polemic arms against Gladstone himself. A priest, the strictest of his sect, he is yet a man of high and courtly breeding, and of thorough scholastic training—a man among a million. He is, we may be sure, sent here on no fool's errand. If the names of half a dozen of our millionaires can be borne back as trophies, will that be sufficient? He is yet to speak here on the common school system and few can donbt that he will stand upon the ground taken by the prelacy for a generation—the position taken by Bishop Hughes forty years ago, that the church must take care of the education of its children. As the losses to Romanism are immense through the common school institution, Capel's visit will be a good point from which to begin a new war on this great system of which Americans are so justly proud.

The attack upon the study of Greek and Latin in American colleges by Charles Francis Adams, Jr., last summer has been replied to by Lord Coleridge, the English Chief Justice now visiting this country. He was at New Haven a few days ago and spoke to the Yale students in the chapel. During his remarks he said: "I have done many foolish things in my life and wasted many hours of precious time, but one thing I have done which I would do over again, and the hours I spent at it are the hours which I have spent most profitably, and the knowledge I have thus gained I have found the most useful and practically useful. From the time I left Oxford I have made it a religion, so far as I could, never to let a day pass without reading some Latin or Greek, and I can tell you that so far as my course may be a successful one, I deliberately assert, maintain and believe that what little success has been granted me in life has been materially aided by the constant study of the classics, which it has been my delight and privilege all my life to preserve in.

One of those student battles, of which it should be written the last, took place at the Polytechnic Institute at Troy last Friday. One class posted a banner upon the ridge of the roof which was in the eyes of another like a red rag to a bull. The two classes joined battle with a beastly ferocity. One hundred young idiots were fighting at one time upon a perilous roof, breaking heads and limbs; but, for a wonder, escaping death. The officers of the institution seemed to be powerless, and when all was over instead of turning over the young savages to the city authorities, lectured part of them and suspended the rest. Such disgraceful rows will not cease so long as students imagine that they are answerable only to their instructors for acts of criminality.

STRIVING FOR TRUTH.

EXTRACTS TRANSLATED BY PROF. H. A. FISCHER, WHEATON COLLEGE, FROM DER REICHSBOTE, BERLIN, OCT. 3, 1883.

NOTE.—The article below is translated with a few unimportant omissions, from "Der Reichsbote," a German daily published in Berlin, Oct. 24, 1883. The papers were furnished by the kindness of Mr. W. Broeckelmann, the Sunday-school apostle of Germany. Words in brackets are inserted by translator.

In a recent article in Die Bauhuette, a Masonic organ, we read:

"We [i. e., the Masons] are neutral towards confessions of faith, but emphasize the authority of the moral law, the root of all religious life. We gather the scattered good people striving for light, from all nations, without forcing on them a confession of faith, and nourish in them, as far as lies in our power, the unconditional love of truth, and the endeavor for understanding, without which all faith is dead and worthless. In this way we at least do not block the way for the new third gospel, of which our Lessing prophesied and which alone can save us out of the distresses of the present time. Whatsoever has decayed [become obsolete,] must go under; the infidelity of to-day is the fertilizer for the seed of the future. The Masonic order already is ideally the germ of the future church of the Holy Ghost of mankind."

In the liberal press, closely united with Masonry, the phase "striving after truth," and Lessings's saying, that "striving for truth was dearer to him than the possession of the same," is very often and very gladly used against the church, which is thereby either explicitly marked as the enemy of truth, or by the manner in which it is mentioned, made to appear as such. Now the church has translated her historical charter into the languages of all peoples and has called out to all: "Search in the Scriptures, for you have life in them, and they are they which testify of Christ." The historical charter of Christianity thus lies open on the table of the world's history; all can and should seek for truth in it; the church has also openly presented her doctrines drawn from the Bible, her confessions, teaches them in all her schools, nowhere makes a secret of them, but treats all these things as public things of the world.

For 1800 years the church and the Bible have endured the criticism of the learned and the unlearned, and have at the same time furnished the grandest evidence of the divine truth of their faith and doctrine, in the immense, blessed influence which they, through religious regeneration, have exerted at once on the moral, social, educational and political regeneration of the world. A religion which is not truth but falsehood, error and myth, can indeed, like Mohammedanism, be forced on great nations by force of arms, but it has never yet exerted such an influence, and can never exert such an influence as Christianity, which has been spread solely by the convincing power of the preaching of the Gospel. Only where Christianity has gone, a new specifically Christian culture has been developed, such as the world has at no time and among no people produced of itself. Where the individual is to be morally renewed, refined and deepened, the Christian faith must be planted in the heart, else all morality and culture remains a whited sepulchre. Just so it is with nations. Only Christianity has the power to awaken to a new life the heathen nations out of their torpor which has lasted for thousands of years. All these are historical facts which we can everywhere seize with our hands [i. e., they are so plain to be felt].

But these are all indisputable proofs of the truth of the Christian religion and of the power of the Divine Spirit working in and with it [i. e., in and with the Christian religion],—and if our modern Epicureans will only believe what they see, they need only open their eyes and compare Christian civilization with the non-Christian, and they will see palpably before them the Christian spirit, and if they have a spark of honesty, they must confess that this Spirit, which does such great things; which renews men, nations and continents after this fashion; which only brings good, love, humanity and all virtues, must be the truth and cannot be error or falsehood! Whoever honestly seeks the truth, whoever is of the truth, he will even to-day, perhaps, after many devious and circuitous routes, come to Christ and hear his voice. He will, in case a really honest "striving after truth" possesses his soul, fall down before him with the confession: "thou art Christ the living God,"—and he will be far from talking here, like the Freemason, about god-myths, placing the story of Jesus on a level with the god-myths of the heathen. . . . . He will understand that faith in the divinity of Christ has been the "fertilizer" out of which has germinated the glorious seed of Christian civilization, and he will then see the [fatal] error of the Freemasons. The Masonic doctrine means radical revolution. . . . Naturalism or Materialism is the death of morality for it proclaims the sovereignty of natural impulses as the only authorized rule for human life! Where is the "striving after truth" here? Is materialism, infidelity, which reduces man to an animal, really the truth and Christianity with its high ideals a lie? The answer stands written on every page of the world's history, on the wrecks of stranded nations, as on the wastes of the heathen world, as also on the starry crown of the Christian, civilized world.

(Another article from "Der Reichsbote" of Oct. 3d, 1883, will follow.)

MORAL SUASION.

BY ALEXANDER THOMSON.

The ripe apple as it hangs upon the bough is full of a healthful and pleasant sap. The wine in the grape cluster has in it the blessing of God. The barley, the corn and the rye, as they come from the mint of nature, are stamped with their Maker's brand of All very good. But when the apple begins to rot, when decomposition takes place in the juice of the grape, when by the perverse ingenuity of man the barley is first sprouted, then killed, this spirit of death and decomposition is bottled by man, and labeled Alcohol. It lurks in the cider, it sparkles in the wine, it foams in the beer, and burns in the brandy, but ever remains the same, a most deadly poison, and man's bitterest foe.

Many reason, it must be right to drink intoxicating liquors, for they are made by God, and whatever he has made is a blessing, if used in moderation. Has God made death, and sin, and suffering? Then he has made alcohol, for he has created it in the same way as all these. Death is a curse, and suffering is a curse, the result of sin, the deadliest curse of all, and alcohol belongs to the same dark family. God is the author of strong, joyous life, but in such life alcohol has no part. The rotten apple, the decaying sap, the corrupting grain,—these are the sources of alcohol.

But you will say, surely one or two glasses of beer would not hurt any man. That is not true, neither is it the real question. When we would ascertain the good that is in any substance, we are not careful about knowing it would do no harm, we must know it would be of some benefit. It would do no great harm to go into the fields with the cows, and Nebuchadnezzar like, eat two or three handfuls of grass every day, yet I never heard of any one doing that, just because it would do no harm.

Even suppose two glasses of beer a day would do no harm, which is not true, how can any man of good common sense be sure he will stop there. Glancing our eyes backward over the ages, we find them strewed with the wrecks of millions of drunkards. Not the weak-minded, the ignorant and ignoble alone. Like the harvest of a great battle field, the colonel and the general are lying there as well as the common soldier.

We have sometimes seen a boy running down a steep hill. Every moment the motion is increased till he is more than satisfied with his speed and wants to call a halt; that is, his head does, but his feet will not obey, and as a consequence he comes to the bottom of the hill in a demoralized heap. The man who drinks any kind of intoxicating drink is on a steep hill side. He may indeed be able to walk with becoming steadiness to the bottom, but when so many millions have gone down that hill like a bomb-shell, destroying themselves and others, is it wise to walk in a position of such danger, when the good, safe highway of total abstinence lies so open and inviting?

SHORT SERMON.

MY BRETHREN:—There are two great shining lights held up before you for your guidance; one in religion, and the other in politics; one is St. Paul as represented by Martin Luther, and the other as George Washington. These two shining lights are both representatives of great reforms, and both therefore are exceedingly hated, one by the Jews and the other by Jacobins, or modern Democrats. Never was a man worse treated than was St. Paul, and by his own countrymen. He was driven out from the temple of God at Jerusalem, out of the temple of Diana at Ephesus, out of the synagogue everywhere, and, after being stoned and whipped, was finally beheaded by a gentile emperor. The other great light, George Washington, might perhaps, escape some of the indignities which our Anti-masonic missionaries have had to go through, but he could never become President of the United States by the votes of either the two parties now in the ascendant.

My friends, one of the ridiculous indignities inflicted by the Jews upon St. Paul was to hire a foreign lawyer (for so the name Tertullus would imply), doubtless a gentile, a heathen, an unbeliever, to accuse the Jew Paul of desecrating the temple at Jerusalem, before the tribunal of a foreign, heathen, gentile, unbelieving governor. The Jews in their insane spite against reform, subjected Paul, the foremost of all Jews to the indignity of being tried by foreigners for desecration done to their own and his own temple, which these foreigners despised! The Jews preferred to have the heathen Cæsar and his dirty tools to rule over them than embrace the reform offered by St. Paul!

You will doubtless say, my friends, that this act of the Jews was very silly, very flat, very insane. But let me ask you, if in your refusal to accept the Anti-masonic reform, you are not doing something equally silly, equally flat, and equally insane?

My friends, so long as this foreign, heathen, gentile, unbelieving power, the Masonic lodge, remains planted in our midst, as the Roman Legion was in Judea, you will find yourselves accused by foreign, infidel, Masonic lawyers, before the tribunal of a foreign, infidel power; for Freemasons will hold the ascendancy in every court of law, in every religious temple, in every school committee, in every railroad company, and in every legislature of the land. The better American you are, the more you will be persecuted. The more you endeavor to follow the example of St. Paul or George Washington, the more you will be discredited and despised. You will be the last persons in the world to be favored with office. The veriest minion of the lodge, from whatever land he may come; the blackest African, the most disbelieving Jew, the first caste Hindoo, yea, the most determined worshiper of high or low priests will enter the heaven of official favor before you. You must humble your American name and character to the very dust before this foreign infidel power, the Masonic lodge. You could no more get an office without first cringing to that power than St. Paul could have held the position of floor-sweeper, much less door-keeper, to the house of the Lord in Jerusalem.

My good friends, you who expect reform to come by observation, and stand star-gazing to see it come, do you think that this reform will be brought about by a change of parties? Do you really imagine that either the Republican or the Democratic party, both filled to the gorge with foreigners, Freemasons and knaves, can restore to you the American government which they have perverted and debauched? Never! Whichever of these two parties comes in power, or goes out of power, it will leave the true American character of our institutions bound, hood-winked, gagged, and finally burnt to ashes by the Masonic lodge.

My American friend, pick a smooth ballot from the clear, pellucid current of American thought and feeling, and let it fly with all thy force, crushing through the brassy os frontis into the very brains of this giant wrong, the Masonic lodge.

SO MOTE IT BE!

OPEN LETTER—NO. III.

TO REV. W. H. PRUETT, PASTOR OF FIRST MISSIONARY BAPTIST CHURCH, WESTON, OREGON.

MY DEAR BROTHER:—I take my pen once again for the purpose of saying a few words more in response to your appeal. If you do not need the suggestions I am about to make, perhaps some one else may; and so, if you do also according to an old saw, I may "kill two birds with one stone."

Masonry is vulnerable on many sides; and at the bar of many minds. As you are a Christian minister, and your work is much among Christians, and in the world for the purpose of persuading people to become Christians, it is important that you know Freemasonry on its religious side. Whatever else it may be, it is a religious institution. Look over the roster of officers of Blue Lodge, Chapter, Council, Commandery, Grand Lodge, etc., and everywhere find chaplain, priest, prelate and deacon. See for their ritual, altar, prayers, burial and baptismal formulas, with a creed; and all the paraphernalia for fitting its members for the "Grand Lodge above;" and you will be struck with the religious aspects of the order. But on closer inspection you will not fail to mark that their prayers confess no sin, and make no mention of a Mediator. Study their quotations from the New Testament, with that book in hand, and it will soon be apparent to you that Christ's name is left out, by no carelessness on the part of some inexperienced typo; but it was designed, and for a purpose; and that purpose did not aim at promoting the honor of Christ, but the reverse. Rob Morris, in Webb's Monitor, will tell you why Christ is so dishonored. You may read it also under "Religion," in Morris's Analysis of Masonic Law. Mackey's Lexicon, under the same word will suggest to you the same reason. Mackey's Ritualist, under "Blazing Star," will make it still more plain.

Now, I need not say to you, that a Christless religion, is not the one you are called to preach, or in any way to sustain. But on the contrary, you are, as you become acquainted with it, to antagonize and fight it, if you would not be guilty of treason to Christ. To lay holy hands on it, knowingly, and baptize it into the church, is to commit malfeasance in office, and prove guilty of high treason against the Great Head of the church, and nor you, nor any other Gospel minister, has a right to remain ignorant of this "unfruitful work of darkness;" or to unite with, or remain in fellowship with it. Does this shock you; and will you tell me that many of our most prominent ministers and laymen are members of the order, and ask me to modify my statements? I should say to you, I dare not modify them, except to make them stronger.

"'Tis true 'tis pity; and pity 'tis 'tis true;"

that so many ministers, D. D.'s, and men without these "lunar fardels," are worshipers in these Christless conventicles, and they are frequently the priests, prelates and pontiffs among them.

You should also know this religion is not a modern invention. It is older than our distinctive Christianity itself, i. e., its basal principles. Masonic authors trace it back to the old Baal, or sun-worship of the ancients; and many of the very ceremonies of the heathen mysteries are now practiced in every lodge room in the land. These same titled, and other ministers have gone through with them as they have been "initiated," "passed" and "raised," to "ancient and sublime degree." Some of these embassadors of the meek and lowly Jesus, among our ministry, are to-day wearing titles to which they have no right, in the kingdom of Christ, or in these United States.

Had you been in San Francisco some weeks since you might have seen many thousands of be-feathered, and be-sworded—to say nothing of the be-sotted—"Sir Knights," and among them some prominent D. D.'s of our own and other denominations. You might have seen some other things, which I will not stop to mention. And these were Christian (?) Knights, par excellence, who were warned by one of their High Mightinesses not to enter a drinking saloon with their uniforms on! !

As a Christian teacher you ought to know these things, and make them known to the membership of the churches among whom may be found some who will be thoughtful enough to inquire—if their pastor is a Mason—what does my pastor want of two religions—one Christly, and the other Christless? He cannot be true to both. If he clings to and remains true to Masonry, and adheres to its obligations he must of necessity be a traitor to my Lord! How long ought it to take a conscientious man, thus enlightened, to come to the conclusion that he will no longer receive the Gospel from the lips of a man who in a condition bordering on nudity, has mouthed the Master Mason's oath?

Strike Masonry among Christians on its religious side. Give the facts when you speak, from Masonic authors. Confine yourself to the facts, and every blow will tell. Load yourself with the truth—seek opportunities, and then shoot, to kill!

But, dear me, my sheet is full. God be with you.

Fraternally yours,

J. L. Barlow.

AN UNHOLY MIXTURE.

We read that there is no new thing under the sun, but there are some things done by some people, and some ministers, and some churches, which are an abomination to God, and all well-informed Christians; for instance, a professed minister of our Lord Jesus Christ, to publicly invite the Masonic fraternity, in lodge order, to come to a professed Christian church and take part with them in divine worship. Certainly this is a strange mix up, a mix up certainly forbidden in the Bible. Hear what the Lord's true prophet says: did he invite the prophets of Baal to take part in Divine service with him? not an intimation of such an absurdity. Hear what the prophet Elijah has to say, 1 Kings 18: 21. "And Elijah came unto all the people, and said, How long halt ye between two opinions? if the Lord be God, follow him: but if Baal, then follow him. And the people answered him not a word." No mix up here; please read the chapter. The services of the two were separate and distinct, and when the prophets of Baal had gone through with their folly, (for such it was, and worse than folly)." "Then Elijah the prophet came near and said, Lord God of Abraham, Isaac and of Israel, let it be known this day that thou are God in Israel, and that I am thy servant, and that I have done all these things at thy word." It would be well for these latter day Baalims and their sympathizers to read carefully this entire chapter, and repent, ere it will be too late, in all probability. Could Baal have had the privilege of membership in mixing his idolatrous worship with the prophet Elijah, and the people of God's ancient worship, would not Baal have been willing to have been called in those days, if the prophet of the God of Israel would have consented to it, a leader in the holiness band of that day? Certainly he would; but the true prophet of God's ancient Israel proposed no such union; but his orders were to slay them, and they were slain. Our God, says the Apostle, "is a consuming fire," and should not these Baalamites be driven from all the professed Christian churches of the land? Certainly they should, or every Christian man and woman should withdraw themselves from such churches. The Bible doctrine of separation from all corrupt associations and to have no fellowship with the works of darkness is distinctively taught in the Bible. The Holy Ghost has said, "His name shall be called Jesus, for he shall save his people from their sins." When Jesus sent his disciples out two and two, he said, "As ye go, preach, that men should repent and believe the Gospel;" believe what God has commanded them to do, as well as what God has promised to do for them, is distinctly impressed by the Holy Spirit on every man, so as to have no possible chance to mistake the orders. "Be ye holy, saith the Lord, for I am holy. Without holiness no man shall see the Lord." This certainly is meant for personal experience and practice.—Montgomery Merrick in the Am. Wesleyan.

What is India?—As your memories take you back to it, what is India? It is Bombay, with its mighty harbor, its Elephanta caves, and its multidudinous mixture of sects and nationalities like that of Alexandria of old; it is Allahabad, with its junction of the Jumna and the Ganges; it is Delhi, with its religions and its philosophies; it is Lucknow, with its pathetic memories of the siege of 1857; it is Cawnpore, with its monumcnts of British martyrs; it is Agra, with the tomb of Akbar and the peerless Taj Mahal, a structure of which Bishop Heeber said, most justly, that "is was designed by Titans and finished by jewelers;" it is Benares, with its stately residences for the few and its squalid streets for the many, its guady temples, with frivolous or filthy rites, its crowds of pilgrims. bathing in the Ganges, its burning ghats, where the dead are reduced to ashes; it is Calcutta, with its palaces and schools and fleets and toiling thousands; it is Madras, with its surf-boats, its vigorous missions, its firm grasp on both the land and sea. You find India to mean Christianity in conflict with paganism; you find India meaning, at least, the rudder of reform for all Asia. You become attached to this land, because you feel that whoever is useful in India is reaching all Asia at large.—Joseph Cook.

Patience is always crowned with success. This rule is without an exception. It may not be a splendid success, but patience never takes any thing in hand that she does not succeed with in some form.

THE REFORMATION HYMN.

It is known beyond a doubt that Luther wrote six chorals, the most famous among which is the well-known Reformation Hymn, "Ein Feste Berg ist unser Gott." Many translations of this sublime hymn have been made, among the best of which is that of Thomas Carlyle which appeared in Frazier's Magazine in 1831 and is reprinted below. Few English writers are better able to express its spirit than Carlyle whose esteem for Luther and Protestantism was a part of his very being:

A safe stronghold our God is still,
A trusty shield and weapon;
He'll help us clear from all the ill
That has us now o'ertaken.
The ancient Prince of Hell
Has risen with purpose fell;
Strong mail of craft and power
He weareth in this hour,
On earth is not his fellow.

With force of arms we nothing can,
Full soon were we down-ridden,
But for us fights the proper Man,
Whom God Himself hath bidden.
Ask ye, Who is this same?
Christ Jesus is His name,
The Lord Sabaoth's Son,
He, and no other one
Shall conquer in the battle.

And were this world all devils o'er,
And watching to devour us,
We lay it not to heart so sore,
Not they can overpower us.
And let the Prince of ill
Look grim as e'er he will
He harms us not a whit,
For why? His doom is writ,
A word shall quickly slay him.

God's Word, for all their craft and force.
One moment will not linger,
But spite of hell shall have its course,
'Tis written by his finger.
And though they take our life,
Goods, honor, children, wife,
Yet is their profit small,
The City of God remaineth.

MARTIN LUTHER.

THE TRIBUTE OF GREAT MINDS TO THE NOBILITY OF HIS CHARACTER AND THE GREATNESS OF HIS WORK.

Speaking of Luther's birth, Carlyle says: "In the whole world that day, there was not a more entirely unimportant-looking pair of people than this miner and his wife. And yet what were all emperors, popes and potentates in comparison? There was born here, once more, a mighty man; whose light was to flame as the beacon over long centuries and epochs of the world; the whole world and its history was waiting for this man. It is strange, it is great. It leads us back to another Birth-hour, in a still meaner environment, eighteen hundred years ago—of which it is fit that we say nothing, that we think only in silence; for what words are there! The age of miracles past? The age miracles is forever here!"

Again says Carlyle: "As a participant and dispenser of divine influences, he shows himself among human affairs a true connecting medium and visible messenger between heaven and earth; perhaps the most inspired of all teachers since the first apostles of his faith; and thus not a poet only, but a prophet and God-ordained priest, which is the highest form of that dignity. I will call this Luther a true great man; great in intellect, in courage, affection and integrity; one of our most lovely and precious men. Great, not as a hewn obelisk; but as an Alpine mountain, so simple, honest, spontaneous, not setting up to be great at all; than for quite another purpose than being great! Ah yes, unsubduable granite, piercing far and wide into the heavens; yet in the cleft of its fountains, green beautiful valleys with flowers! A right spiritual hero and prophet; once more, a true son of nature and fact, for whom these centuries, and many that are yet to come, will be thankful to heaven."

Bower says of Luther: "In the personal character of Luther we discern many qualities calculated to enable him to discharge with success the important duty to which he was called. A constitutional ardor for devotion, a boundless thirst for knowledge, and a fearless zeal in communicating it, were prominent characteristics of this extraordinary man. An unwearied perseverance in theological research, led him to detect errors, and to relinquish step by step, many of his early opinions. In all situations Luther is the same, pursuing indefatigably the knowledge of the Word of God, and never scrupling to avow his past mistakes, whenever the confession could facilitate the inquiries or confirm the faith of others. It was in vain that the head of the church and the chief of the German empire combined to threaten and proscribe him—he braved with equal courage the very lance of either power, and continued to denounce, with an unsparing hand, the prevalence of corruption. In no single instance did he seek to turn to his personal advantage his distinctions and the influence attached to them. How few individuals would have possessed Luther's power without making it subservient to the acquisition of rank or honors? All these were disdained by him, and his mind remained wholly occupied with the diffusion of religious truth. Even literary fame had no attractions for him. The improvement of the condition of his fellow-creatures was the object which with him superceded every other consideration. No temptation of ambition could remove him, in his days of celebrity, from his favorite University of Wittenberg. While his doctrine spread far and wide, and wealthy cities would have been proud to receive him, Luther clung to the spot where he discharged the duty of a teacher, and to the associates whom he had known in his season of humility. The freedom of his language in treating of the conduct of the great, arose partly from his constitutional ardor, and partly from an habitual impression of the all-powerful claims of truth. The lofty attitude, so often assumed by him, is not therefore to be attributed to pride and vanity. In treating of the Scriptures, he considered himself as acting in the presence of God, whose majesty and glory were so infinitely exalted above all created beings, as to reduce to one and the same level the artificial distinctions of worldly institutions. Under this conviction, the prince or king who ventured to oppose what Luther considered the Word of God, seemed to him no more exempted from severe epithets than the humblest of his adversaries. However we may censure the length to which his freedom was carried, the boldness of his conduct was, on the whole, productive of much good. An independent and manly tone in regard not only to religion, but to civil liberty, literature, the arts and sciences, was created and disseminated by his example. Few writers discover greater knowledge of the world, or a happier talent in analyzing and illustrating the shades of character. It is equally remarkable that no man could display more forcibly the tranquil consolations of religion. Few men entered with more ardor into the innocent pleasures of society. His frankness of disposition was apparent at the first interview, and his communicative turn, joined to the richness of his stores, rendered his conversation remarkably interesting. In treating of humorous subjects, he discovered as much vivacity and playfulness as if he had been a man unaccustomed to serious research."

Calvin says: "Recall these things to your mind: how great a man Luther is, and in what great endowments he excels, with what fortitude of mind and constancy, with what excellent address and efficacy of doctrine he has labored and watched to overthrow the kingdom of Antichrist, and propagate the doctrine of salvation." "We sincerely testify that we regard him as a noble apostle of Christ, by whose labor and ministry the purity of the Gospel has been restored in our times."

Again: "If any one will carefully consider what was the state of things at the period when Luther arose, he will see that he had to contend with almost all the difficulties which were encountered by the apostles. In one respect, indeed, his condition was worse and harder than theirs. There was no kingdom, no principality, against which they had to declare war; whereas Luther could not go forth except by the ruin and destruction of that empire which was not only the most powerful of all, but regarded all the rest as obnoxious to itself."

Dr. Krauth's noble eulogy concludes: "Though he rose wondrously to a divine ideal, he did not cease to be a man of men. He won the trophies of power and the garlands of affection. Potentates feared him, and little children played with him. He has monuments in marble and bronze, medals in silver and gold; but his noblest monument is the best love of the best hearts, and the brightest, purest impression of his image has been left in the souls of regenerated nations. He was the best teacher of freedom and loyalty. He has made the righteous throne stronger, and the innocent cottage happier. He knew how to laugh, and how to weep; therefore millions laughed with him, and millions wept with him. He was tried by deep sorrow and brilliant fortune; he begged the poor scholar's bread, and from emperor and estates of the realm received an embassy, with a prince at its head, to ask him to untie the knot which had defied the power of the soldier and the sagacity of the statesman; it was he who added to the Litany the words: 'In all time of our tribulation, in all time of our prosperity, help us good Lord;' but whether lured by the subtlest flattery or assailed by the powers of hell, tempted by the mitre, or threatened with the stake, he came off more than conqueror in all. He made the world rich forevermore, and, stripping himself in perpetual charities, died in poverty. He knew how to command—for he had learned how to obey. Had he been less courageous, he would have attempted nothing; had he been less cautious, he would have ruined all; the torrent was resistless, but the banks were deep.

He tore up the mightiest evils by the root, but shielded with his own life the tenderest bud of good; he combined the aggressiveness of a just radicalism with moral resistance—which seemed to the fanatic the passive weakness—of a true conservatism. Faith-inspired, he was faith-inspiring. Great in act as he was great in thought, proving himself fire with fire, 'inferior eyes grew great by his example, and put on the dauntless spirit of resolution.' The world knows his faults. He could not hide what he was. His transparent candor gave his enemies the material of their misrepresentation; but they cannot blame his infirmities without bearing witness to the nobleness which made him careless of appearances in a world of defamers. For himself, he had as little of the virtue of caution as he had, toward others, of the vice of dissimulation. Living under thousands of jealous and hating eyes, in the broadest light of day, the testimony of enemies but fixes the result: that his faults were those of a nature of the most consummate grandeur and fullness, faults more precious than the virtues of the common great. Four potentates ruled the mind of Europe in the Reformation, the Emperor, Erasmus, the Pope, and Luther. The Pope wanes, Erasmus is little, the Emperor is nothing, but Luther abides as a power for all time. His image casts itself upon the current of ages, as the mountain mirrors itself in the river that winds at its foot—the mighty fixing itself immutably upon the changing."

Prof. George P. Fisher in the Century for October presents one of the finest and most vivid pen portraits of the great reformer, in which he says:

No man ever showed himself to the world more unreservedly than this mighty leader of the Teutonic revolt against Rome. He abhorred concealment. He was really incapable of disguise. He could not do otherwise than lay bare his heart and mind. His outspokenness was often a source of terror and anxiety to his friends, not less than of wrath to his enemies. If, on very rare occasions, he made the attempt to be shrewd and diplomatic, the effort was sure to be clumsy and abortive, and he was himself disgusted with the experiment. The secret fears and misgivings, from which even his clear and bold mind was not free, he had no inclination to hide. For example, we read in the "Table Talk": "A man must be plunged in bitter affliction when in his heart he means good and yet is not regarded. I can never get rid of these cogitations, wishing that I had never begun this business with the Pope. * * * But 'tis the frailty of our nature to be thus discouraged." Is he for the moment struck with weariness at being misunderstood and rejected? Like a child, he expresses the transient regret that he ever undertook to set the world right. Even the inward temptations of the flesh he does not hesitate, in the most simple way, to refer to. Witness his letters from the Wartburg, which depict his bodily infirmities and the evil thoughts that at times tormented him in his solitary hours. His unguarded freedom of speech respecting himself was connected with an equal freedom and candor in speaking of others. His writings are not only multitudinous; they were composed so rapidly, in quick response to emergeneies, that they are a transparent mirror of his thought and feeling. His personality is in them all to an extent that is, perhaps, true of no other writer on religion since the Apostle Paul. His correspondenee, stretehing through many volumes, is an endless source of information respecting him and his ways. The object of boundless interest in his own time, attracting the intense admiration of a part of mankind, and provoking the violent antipathy of another part, it was inevitable that numberless reports of his sayings and doings should become current. Devoted companions treasured up fragments of his spontaneous talk as he sat at the table with them, and their notes were subsequently compiled in a volume, one of the most suggestive and entertaining in this species of literature. By this time we ought to know Luther well. It demonstrates the richness and depth of his nature that men do not grow tired of him. They may dislike the fierce dogmatism, which became more boisterous in the battles which he waged and in the days of ill health and advancing age. The coarseness and occasional indelicacy of his language may repel readers who are not over-fastidious. But the originality of thought and the virility of expression, the insight into the deep things of the spirit, the vein of humor that mingles itself unbidden with the most profound and serious refleetion, the play of imagination—these qualities that belong to the utterances of Luther constitute an unfailing charm. A poet, and no less a poet than Coleridge, has said of him: "He was a poet, indeed, as great a poet as ever lived in any age or country; but his poetic images were so vivid that they mastered the poet's own mind. He was possessed with them as with substances distinct from himself: Luther did not write, he acted, poems."

THE PATRIARCHS IN TROUBLE.

Over the troublesome decree of the Odd-fellow "Sovereign Grand Lodge," whieh met in Providence, R. I., some weeks ago, the "Patriarchal Circle," which aspired to be the Knight Templary of Odd-fellowship, have been amazed, and then mad, and finally have decided to make their degree factory into a new order. On this decision the New York Times set one of its editors at work on a facetious article, which, given herewith, diseovers as mueh unpleasant truth for the lodges as of caricature:

There is trouble among the Odd-fellows. A few years ago certain Odd-fellows who felt that they were not sufficiently odd established a new society, the members of which were taken exelusively from among the Odd-fellows and were called Patriarchs. Nothing odder than a Patriarch in full uniform could well be imagined. The Masonic Knights Templar, who apparently believe that the original Knights of the Temple wore frock coats and shoulder straps, and as a rule kept grocery stores, present an amazing spectacle to the profane eye when they parade the streets in full uniform or pledge the banner of the cross in lager beer; but they are reasonable in comparison with the Patriarchs. The latter also wear frock coats and cocked hats, modcled on those worn by Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, and their idea of imitating the patriarchal customs of the three illustrious Hebrews is to give balls at the Academy of Music. The Odd-fellow who is a Patriarch should be, and undoubtedly is, satisfied that he is the oddest of all possible fellows, and this conviction must be a pleasant one, judging from the fact that there are at present fully 40,000 Patriarchs in the United States.

For some not very clear reason the Odd-fellows who are not Patriarchs dislike those who are, and the Sovereign Grand Lodge of Odd-fellows has just ordered all its subordinates to cease to be Patriarchs, and has assured them that in case of refusal they will be expelled from Odd-fellowship. This effort to crush the Patriarchs may possibly succeed, but in all probability it will result in the establishment of a new society in opposition to the Odd-fellows. The new society might be called the Eccentric Persons, and from its numbers would be drawn recruits for the Society of Patriarchs. The Eccentric Person could make himself still more eccentric by becoming a Patriarch, whereas the Odd-fellow would be cut off from any method of increasing his oddity. It need hardly be said that the order of Odd-fellows would soon find its rival too strong for it.

The fondness of the American for joining secret societies amounts to a national trait. He can become half a dozen different kinds of a Freemason and two varieties of an Odd-fellow, and yet he is not satisfied. If three Englishmen think alike on any given subject, they found a new club, but if seven Americans entertain the same views they start a new secret soeiety. The man who does not want to drink ardent spirts joins himself to other like-minded men and becomes an oath-bound Son of Temperanee, a Good Templar, or Templar of Honor, or a Rechabite. If he wants to save money enough to give himself a funeral he becomes a Knight of Pythias, or a Druid, or a Forester, while if he only wants to pass an occasional evening in the social chewing of tobacco he joins any one of a dozen other seeret societies.

Americans are apt to smile when they read of the terrible purposes ascribed by the European Conservatives to European Freemasons. The idea that a Freemason can be dangerous to anything but a supper-table seems very absurd to us. A seeret society in Europe is, however, a very different affair from a secret society here. We have so many secret societies that it is rather a distinction not to belong to one. If the same freedom was allowed in Europe to every one who might want to join a secret society that is allowed here the European Freemasons would be as mild and inocuous as our own, and even the Pope would smile at the quarrel between the Odd-fellows and the Patriarchs instead of issuing solemn denunciations of both.

NEW ENGLAND.

THE NEW ENGLAND BOARD of the National Christian Association has its headquarters at No. 8 Portland St., Worcester, Mass. A full supply of books and tracts constantly on hand. Orders promptly filled. Correspondence solicited.

E. D. BAILEY, N. E. Sec'y

FROM CANTERBURY TO UXBRIDGE.

WORCESTER, Mass., Oct. 29, 1883.

A few items of interest concerning the New Hampshire State meeting deserve to be mentioned. The Congregational church in which the convention was held has a Masonic pastor and one of the trustees is a Mason, but in this case two trustees were a majority even though the third was a Mason. The pastor attended the lecture one evening. The Canterbury people were alive to the issue, and their hospitality was greatly appreciated.

At the closc of the lecture on Odd-fellowship, Mr. French, a seceding Odd-fellow, endorsed the address and gave his reasons for leaving the order. An old gentleman also undertook a defense of the institution, but the points he dwelt upon were successfully combatted.

It was my pleasure to be entertained at the home of Mr. Robert S. Morrell, whose wife is a niece of Dea. Moses Pettingill, and wished to be kindly remembered to him. Good, clean Abolition blood runs in the veins of many of the people of this section, and they are as ready for a new reform as they were once for Abolitionism.

Returning from New Hampshire my engagements called me to Uxbridge in this State. By arrangement of Bro. John B. White the following resolution was to be debated before the temperance club: "Resolved, That temperance voters should abandon the Democratic and Republican parties and sustain a third party advocating prohibition." The evening for the debate was the evening of the grand Democratic rally of the town, but the interest in the discussion was sufficiently great to call together a good audience in the vestry of the M. E. church. The Republicans took the precaution to be represented by their strongest debaters. Their side was led by Rev. Mr. Cobb, the Congregational pastor, who was followed by Judge Putnam, the district judge, Rev. Mr. Rogers, the M. E. pastor and the postmaster. These all apparently came with prepared speeches. The reason for this was unwittingly given by the postmaster, who remarked at the close that they would have been glad to have given me the whole evening but they were afraid of the effect on the election.

The debate was spirited and well conducted, and we had no reason to be ashamed of the issue. Remaining there over the Sabbath by invitation, I preached in the M. E. church in the morning, in the Northbridge Congregational church in the afternoon, and the Friend's meeting-house in the evening. The services grew in interest through the day, and in the evening the room was literally packed "fore and aft."

With nearly all with whom I visited I had conversation concerning the secret orders, and was pleased to find an almost universal condemnation of them, many expressing their views most emphatically.

To-night it is my purpose to start for Washington, D. C., in accordance with the request of the Board, to see the new building purchased by the N. C. A., and consult with friends there concerning the "Washington movement."

E. D. BAILEY.

THE WASHINGTON ENTERPRISE.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Nov. 1, 1883.

In accordance with the request of the Board I came here as soon as prior engagements would allow. My enthusiasm has been rising ever sinee my arrival. The letters of brethren Stoddard and Hinman had prepared me somewhat to look with favor on this purchase, but there are more good things to be noted than I had supposed. Brethren Ford, Hinman and Grisham, with hammers, paint brushes and trowels were driving the repairs forward, putting on the finishing touches. With their own hands they are busily employed helping the workmen. Only a few minor things remain to be done and the building will be in first-class order for occupancy.

We held a consultation meeting last evening and organized a Washington Central Executive Committee to oversee the work here and push on the organization elsewhere. The members of the committee are, Hon. S. C. Pomeroy, president; E. D. Bailey, secretary; Milton Ford, treasurer, P. H. Grisham, H. H. Hinman, Isaac T. Gibson and Jos. Bowes. The action of the eommittee will be of interest to all whose eyes are turned toward this city. The following resolutions were adopted:

Resolved, That we approve of the action of the N. C. A. in appointing Rev. E. D. Bailey as agent for Washington and in the proposed grant of their building for the publication of a paper by a joint stock company.

Whereas, Steps have been taken to organize a joint stock company to publish a reform paper advocating the principles of the American platform; therefore

Resolved, That we approve of this movement and authorize E. D. Bailey to solicit stock for said company, and otherwise aid in its speedy organization.

Resolved, That we recommend that the proposed paper be started not later than the 1st of Jan., 1884, and earlier if practicable.

Resolutions were also adopted asking Bro. H. H. Hinman to aid in soliciting funds for the work and providing also for the renting of the two upper stories of the building. The committee here is anxious there should be no delay in the prosecution of the plans now so generally approved. The building here is well adapted to our purposes and the location is excellent. Under the careful supervision of brother Ford the repairs have been very thorough and there is nothing of which we shall be ashamed when the critics turn their eyes this way. Though at first reluctant to come here my enthusiasm has risen to fever heat, and it seems to me our cause has before it the grandest opening it has seen since its inception. I have taken some counsel about the size and style of the proposed paper and it is cheering to know that there is not the slightest difference of opinion as to what it ought to be.

What must be done before the paper can be started? There are over $2,000 wanted to cancel the debt on the building and the $25,000 stock should be taken at once. By letters and oral pledges received by me within a few weeks over $1,400 have been pledged toward the stock company and $100 towards the building. But the time has now come when the call for subscriptions must be strong and persistent. This money is not going to be raised without much self-sacrifice. Every friend of the cause will have to eontribute something.

The long session of Congress begins in December. I am told there will be 50,000 strangers in Washington during the winter, visitors from all parts of the country. The whisky business will have a lobby to further its schemes and every sort of "job" will be pressed in Congress. We could have no more favorable time to launch our paper than Dec. 1 or Jan. 1, when the city will be alive with population and business.

The plan for the stock company ought perhaps to be explained.

It is proposed to raise $25,000, in shares of $25 each, one-fifth of which will be paid to start the paper, and the remainder cannot be collected, unless it becomes necessary in order to sustain the paper. The man who subscribes for one share will pay $5 cash when the eompany is organized, and the balance he retains. There are few readers of the Cynosure who could not take one share, while there are many who can take more than one. It will be impossible to see all the friends individually. Write to Bro. Stoddard or myself at onee and state what you do. Every day now counts, and we must be energetic. The building has not been ready to rent till now, and we are having applications for rooms, so that we shall soon turn the corner between outlay and income. If the money was ready to purchase the type we could commence in a few weeks. But we must have the stock subscribed before we begin.

New England friends can address me at Worcester, Mass., for the present; and others can signify their intentions to Mr. Stoddard. Mr. Hinman is going, in a few days to Baltimore and Philadelphia, and he will solicit subscriptions. I intend to stay long enough to rent the vacant rooms, and then continue the solicitations for funds. Some have been delaying their subscriptions till the work took more definite shape. That time has come. We are ready to start the paper when the stock is taken.

E. D. BAILEY.

REFORM NEWS.

THE PULPIT TO THE FRONT

GALESBURG, Ill., Oct. 29, 1883.

EDITOR CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE:—The notes which I sent you and to which you prefixed the heading, "The Pulpit Lags," should properly be followed now by this with the above caption. Yesterday our pastor, Bro. Thain, made glad the hearts of many of his people by a vigorous denunciation of the claim that Freemasonry is more unselfishly interested in the work of saving men than the Christian church, made by Judge Lanphere, a prominent Mason, in the Republican Register.

The Register has always been friendly to the secret orders, but strange to say, at this time it, too, is found on the right side, repudiating the Judge's high-sounding rhetoric in a conspicuous editorial. With the pulpit and press coming over to the side of truth, what more could we ask but the blessing of our Heavenly Father. F. W.

THE INDIANA CONVENTION.

OAKLAND CITY, Ind., Oct. 30, 1883.

DEAR EDITOR :—The State Convention, which met at this place Oct. 16, 17 and 18, has made quite a stir. Rev. Stoddard, the distinguished Anti-masonic lecturer, arrived on the afternoon train Tuesday, Oct. 16. Mr. Stoddard has something cleric in his appearance and is a plain gentleman. Tuesday evening he gave a lecture on "Freemasonry in the Family." He showed very plainly that "Freemasonry strikes a deadly blow at the family, and denies the right of its members to obey God's laws in their own households." That it places the vilest "brother Mason" in more intimate relations with the husband and father than the wife and children are permitted to enjoy, since it requires him to deceive them when necessary to conceal the prohibited things of Masonry. His subject Wednesday evening was "The Covenant makes the Mason." He proved quite clearly that no Mason is a free man.

Thursday evening Dr. S. L. Cook proved beyond controversy that "Freemasonry stands in the way of prohibition." Others talked upon the subject. Rev. Stoddard gave another interesting lecture. Good order prevailed throughout. Impressions were made that will be lasting. The meeting did a good work that cannot be undone. We parted with Rev. Stoddard and Dr. Cook with great reluctance, feeling we wished them to stay always. To attempt to speak anything in praise of them would be out of place. Their's is a call from God and they are filling it.

It is one of the principles in the nature of man to seek freedom ; freedom in its broadest sense ; freedom uncontrolled by others. Yet there are thousands to-day who are not free ; they are ruled by the secret lodges. It was because the dark sons of Ethiopia were so long chained down in slavery that the threatening storm of 1832 cast a gloom over the whole nation, which was only rolled away by the iron will of Andrew Jackson. It was from the sunny South that the mighty hurricane of 1861 burst forth and startled the whole world by its strength and fierceness,—a tornado which caused the friends of freedom to tremble for the perpetuity of republican liberty—one which drenched this fair land in fraternal blood mingled with the tears of bereaved parents and helpless orphans. The cause of all this woe and misery was the failure of universal freedom. But the Southern States are not the only examples. Turn back to some of the mightiest nations the world ever held and the same will prove true.

Though these nations contained many of the greatest philosophers, soldiers and statesmen the world ever saw yet they perished for the want of unlimited freedom. Every success they gained over the barbarians only weakened them, because they carried home their captives as slaves. Here we find the greatest republics of ancient or modern times forever blasted because they failed to make freedom universal. America's situation, her climate, her soil, her mineral and vegetable productions are unequalled ; but a mass of her people are slaves to the lodge, and worshipers of Baal. Theism reigns supreme among them. Divorces, murders, suicides, robberies and mobs are of frequent occurrence, and hence the Republic of America, if she does not speedily retrace her steps, will be a disgrace and a failure. Two threatening clouds are looming up and are growing each day. The first is the tendency of secret societies to assume control of education. Many of our colleges and high schools are conducted by them. An individual educated in one of those institutions will usually partake of the religious belief. The second is, Masonry is working its way into the leading churches, destroying their power, and in reality controlling them. What is to be done ? Is it to be put down as slavery was ? These questions naturally arise. Let us pray that the Masonic institution may be speedily overturned. If it is not, independence, the characteristic of the American, will be no more. Liberty and freedom will depart forever and on their ruins will be reared oppression and tyranny. Fraternally yours,

AMERICAN POLITICS.

NOMINATIONS FOR 1884.

For President,

JONATHAN BLANCHARD,
OF ILLINOIS.

For Vice President,

JOHN A. CONANT,
OF CONNECTICUT.

PLATFORM.

We hold: 1. That ours is a Christian and not a heathen nation, and that the God of the Christian Scriptures is the author of civil government.

2. That God requires and man needs a Sabbath.

3. That the prohibition of the importation, manufacture and sale of intoxicating drinks as a beverage is the true policy on the temperance question.

4. That the charters of all secret lodges granted by our Federal and State Legislatures should be withdrawn, and their oaths prohibited by law.

5. That the civil equality secured to all American citizens by articles 13th, 14th and 15th of our amended Constitution should be preserved inviolate.

6. That arbitration of differences with nations is the most direct and sure method of securing and perpetuating a permanent peace.

7. That to cultivate the intellect without improving the morals of men, is to make mere adepts and experts ; therefore, the Bible should be associated with books of science and literature in all our educational institutions.

8. That land and other monopolies should be discouraged.

9. That the government should furnish the people with an ample and sound currency.

10. That maintenance of the public credit, protection to all loyal citizens, and justice to Indians are essential to the honor and safety of our nation.

11. And, finally, we demand for the American people the abolition of electoral colleges, and a direct vote for President and Vice-president of the United States.

NEW HAMPSHIRE AMERICAN STATE CONVENTION.

The second New Hampshire American State Convention met in Canterbury, Oct. 24th at 1:30 P. M. Convention called to order and B. M. Mason, Esq., of Moultonboro, was chosen chairman, and S. C. Kimball, secretary. E. D. Bailey addressed the meeting, and resolutions which have already been published were adopted.

A. H. Brown, of Canterbury and S. C. Kimball, of New Market, were chosen delegates to the proposed National Convention to be held in Washington.

The following State executive committee was also chosen : J. G. Smith, S. C. Kimball, A. H. Brown, E. Smith and B. M. Mason. Adjourned sine die.

S. C. KIMBALL, Secretary.

Ben Butler entertained Lord Coleridge and his party at the expense of the State. Two items of the bill run this way: "Wines, etc., at table, $180.70." "Lunch served on the train to Manchester, N. H., $264." The question then for the Massachusetts Prohibitionists who are making war on Mr. Robinson, the Republican candidate, is: Are you going to help Ben Butler to run up more wine and whisky bills which you yourselves will be called upon to pay in part?—Tribune.

CORRESPONDENCE.

INSINCERITY.

You can never trust an insincere man, for you can never know when he is truthful. Nor can you trust a man who keeps secret what is right and proper for others to know ; or who trusts to the ignorance of the masses to sustain him in making wrong statements.

But such kind of a man precisely is the Grand Master, High Priest, or other Most Worthy of the lodge. In a speech delivered by Grand Inspector General Butler of the 33d degree at Granfield, Massachusetts, October 23, 1883, he said, "I believe that the government of the few is the worst possible form of government."

Notwithstanding this assertion the general, as a high member of the lodge, sustains and commends a government that is especially devised for enabling a few knaves to rule, control, and govern many dupes. The whole education given by the lodge is calculated to accustom men to the rule of a few Masonic Grand Masters, and thus to effect a change in our republican form of government which is designed for the many and not for a few Masons.

In the same speech the general said, "The great blot upon this State (Massachusetts) is the hanging of the Salem witches, which was done by a few clergy who were the real rulers, and the people had nothing to do with it." Now if a few clergymen once governed Massachusetts, could not a few Freemasons do the same thing? Nay, does not the general know that Massachusetts is Mason-ridden, and that a few Masons have made him governor of the State against the wishes of the intelligent majority ?

Witchcraft was not so discreditable to humanity as Freemasonry is ; because witchcraft was a mere blunder of poor, blind humanity while groping after the higher excellencies of life, while Freemasonry is a perverse, deliberate, wicked fraud, wantonly or interestedly practiced upon the credulity of the ignorant, the depraved, or the unsuspecting. This appeal of Freemason Butler to the depraved tastes of his followers against the ancient and truly honorable clergy of Massachusetts is characteristic of that institution which, while pretending to be "ancient and honorable" itself is continually dealing in tricks and devices that are dishonorable and disgraceful. There is no sincerity in Freemasonry ; it is a sin against the spirit of truth and justice. AMERICAN.

ONE IN CHRIST.

CHICAGO.

The Presbyterians have just formed a "union" in Chicago in order to become better acquainted with each other—a very good idea. But the Rev. Dr. Kittridge declares that it is not for sectarian but only denominational purposes, in which there is in his view a great difference. He spoke very kindly of other denominations, and the next speaker in the same spirit said he had belonged to a Congregational club in Boston. It is well to see sectarian walls levelled, and Christ, not creeds, become the law for his people. Man-made creeds should all be cast aside and "the Bible" only be "the religion of Protestants." The Young Men's Christian Associations have no doubt done good work in bringing together various denominations for general work on which they could unite. Yet there are fundamental truths without which they would do more harm than good. The one great truth is that "Jesus is the Son of God who died for our sins, and rose again for our justification on the third day according to the Scriptures." Then those who believe and obey this same Jesus ought to be one in him before the world.

The Methodists in Canada have just formed a union of their various names into one, and thus are one of the strongest bodies in Canada. Let this spirit of union pro ceed and grow until there shall be "no divisions" and Christ's prayer shall be answered and all shall be one, and then the world shall believe that God sent him.

When the true spirit of obedience becomes the motive power in Christians then shall we hope for visible union also in the observance of the two Gospel ordinances instituted by their common Lord and Master.

Christians have learned much when they are able to "love one another" even while holding differing opinions. Another grand lesson will be to adopt the New Testament or Covenant as the supreme law for Christian churches and for Christian people in every department of human duty. The principles are there, and the details are left to be carried out in harmony therewith, care being taken never to adopt human wisdom where Divine wisdom has given law to man. From Cain to Herod and from Pilate to the pope or the lodge may be found illustrations of the evils of such a course. SENEX.

PITH AND POINT.

An aged lady in Galesburg, like Anna the prophetess, has noted some tokens of the coming of the salvation of God to overcome the reigning darkness, and sends it thus:

"Last Sunday and to-day I have heard secret societies alluded to by two different speakers in two different churches, as not being all they claim; but very tenderly, making comparisons in favor of the church. I believe the leaven is working and that ministers will be constrained to lift up their voices with no uncertain sound."

No old reader of the Cynosure will fail to note with interest the following from Mrs. Codding, daughter of that noble and steadfast reformer, Isaac Preston, and widow of the eloquent advocate for the rights of the slave in former days, Ichabod Codding. She writes:

"The Cynosure, which I receive at Hudson, I have put in circulation there. Masons have read it, but I find the evil out of my reach. I quite fully believe that all secret, oath-bound associations at this day work only evil; and my voice is to put them away. The regeneration of the individual is, it seems to me, the only means. To this end I pray and labor as I have opportunity."

A MISSIONARY TO BE WATCHED.

The distinguished Roman Catholic priest, Mr. Capel, has been in Chicago. His name is known all over the world as a most successful prosclytizer among the noblemen of Great Britain. The Catholics have been losing power in Rome and Italy and seem to have derived increased energy abroad. As the Pilgrim Fathers were driven to our shores and became the founders of our Great Republic, so the Roman Catholics seem to be inspired with the hope that they shall but become in our country the greater Rome! Mr. Capel uses words of hope which from such a man are more significant than from ordinary men, and he will doubtless try to show in his lecture on Romanism and Republicanism that the first is a necessity to the safety of the last. Well may he use such sophistry, but he is also characterized by the able Catholic Review as a "social missionary," a most significant term when we consider his vast power among the British aristoeracy. Let our people however take heed, for we know that many anti-Christs shall appear in the last days, and we can no more support our most holy Lord the Pope, than the equally arrogant and blasphemous titles found in lodgery. H.

LITERARY.

MAGAZINES.

The North American Review for November presents some features not unworthy careful notice. Senator Anthony's defense of the suffrage laws of Rhode Island, Dr. Norvin Green, president of the Western Union monopoly on government telegraphy, and Green B. Raum, late head of the Internal Revenue Bureau on the Civil Service Reform, contribute much to the public information upon these respective topics. The State of Rhode Island grants a vote to foreign born citizens only when they become owners of real estate to the value of $134. This provision prevents migratory voters from obtaining such power as is given them to misuse in New York and Chicago. Dr. Green opposes the government postal telegraph, and produces figures which, if they do not misrepresent the case, make the objection to the scheme very forcible. Rev. David N. Utter, a Unitarian preacher of Chicago, attacks the memory of old John Brown with considerable acrimony, which has a bit of theological flavor. His paper proves too much, for it makes Brown a hypocrite and a murderer, but seems very unwilling to ascribe such a character to him. "Solar Physics," "Modern Explosives," "Conversations with a Solitary," by Wm. Mallock, a celebrated English writer, and a reply to Dr. Hammond in his "Estimate of Women" are other articles.

Choice Literature, the cheapest and one of the very best and most deserving of popularity of our eclectic magazines has a new claim for praise in fine, new and large type. During the past three months a volume or two of choice reading has appeared in its columns, as Charles Francis Adams' famous attack on the Latin and Greek in "Fetich of the College," "Luther," by the English historian Froude, "The 19th Century to the 20th," "Animal Mythology," "The Four Chief Apostles," by the commentator Godet, "Jesus and Hillel," "Ranch Life in the Far West," "King Mtesa," "James Ferguson, the Astronomer," "The French Newspaper Press," etc., John V. Alden, 18 Vesey St., New York.

The Century Magazine forNovember is a superior number. In illustrations and important articles it almost raises its own standard of excellence. Among the engravers of the number, five are women, who contribute seven engravings. In technical skill Mr. Cole has hardly surpassed the full-page engraving of Wyatt Eaton's portrait of Modjeska, accompanying a study of Modjeska's Shaksperian characters, by J. Ranken Towse. T. Johnson's engraving from Thomas Sully's portrait (owned in Philadelphia) of Queen Victoria at the age of nineteen, is the frontispiece of the number; also, with Mrs. Oliphant's sketch of the life of the Queen, is printed a copy of a recent portrait. Mrs. Oliphant's paper is valuable for its analysis of character, which is interestingly shown, also, in several anecdotes of Queen Victoria's courtship and of her attention to public affairs. A particular interest attaches to Cole's engraving of the full page portrait of Tourgueneff, since it is an authentic likeness from life, painted within the last two years by E. R. Butler, specially for The Century. Alphonse Daudet contributes reminiscences of "Tourgueneff in Paris," the paper having been written early last summer. An important contribution to the history of the war, is the account of "The Capture of Jefferson Davis," by Burton N. Harrison, Esq., of the New York bar, who was the Confederate President's private secretary, and accompanied Mr. Davis and his family, with the leading members of the Confederate government, in their flight from Richmond. Charles Dudley Warner's sketch of the "Bull Fight," "An American Artist in England," "Glimpses of Paris," and "Nature in England" are all profusely and finely illustrated.

How he rebukes the hasty and false judgments of men. How he establishes his word, notwithstanding the attempts of men and devils to defeat his plans. Gen. 49: 10. How certain that his counsel shall stand. (See Ps. 1 and 2.) How certain that Jesus, David's son and Lord, shall reign eternally. How solemn the question, What is our relationship to the "King of kings and Lord of lords?" —Notes for Bible Study.

PRACTICAL.—GOD'S CANDIDATE FOR THE THRONE.

1. The circumstances of the choice. (a) A king had been rejected. "And the Lord said unto Samuel, How long wilt thou mourn for Saul, seeing I have rejected him?" (v. 1.) A king had been placed on the throne—one after the heart of the people. He bid fair at first to be a model king. He had eminent physical attainments; his deportment won him the affection of the people; he displayed great courage on the field of battle; he infused such an enthsiasm into the heart of the nation as led them to victory; but pride soon began to assert itself. He chafed under divine restraints and disobeyed divine orders. The people had virtually diselaimed God's authority in asking for a king, and now the king whom they chose directly disregards the divine claims. He recognized no higher sovereign than his own will, and like Lucifer, by exalting himself above God he fell. He was doomed to be cast down from his loftiness of heart and from his high position, and a new king is to be chosen, this time one "after God's own heart." Have we not here a striking picture of the condition of the human race under sin? Man was created pure and holy, and surrounded with good on every hand, while he was ruler over the creatures of the earth. He had set before him eternal life in the case of obedience, but eternal death in case of disobedience. He followed the advice of him who had tried to exalt himself above God himself, and was cast down to hell thereby. By sin the scepter of dominion which God gave him at creation was wrested from his hands. Then God provided a ransom. A new kingdom was set up, of which the Davidic kingdom was an eminent type, and the King of which was a descendant from David's royal line. Through this King, who now sits at God's right hand, we are called to become "kings and priests."

(b) Repair begins with sacrifice. "Take a heifer with theeand say, I am come to sacrifice unto the Lord." (v. 2). This was no deception. Nor was it a mere artifice employed to allay suspicion. The sacrifiee was sincere. There was a sad necessity for it. The people had sinned in asking a king. They had sinned still more grievously through that king in disobeying divine commands. If a kingdom was to be established on a lasting basis, the rubbish of this guilt and iniquity must be removed. Atonement must be made, for without it there could be no remission.

So was it with the everlasting kingdom which Christ the Son of David came to establish. It must not be set up on the ruins of the old, which was ready to perish; then what hope could there be of its durability? It must be built up on a new foundation; and for this purpose the blood of the eternal Son of God was shed, that it might take away the sin of the world, and thus prepare the way for establishing an everlasting kingdom which could not be moved. It is only those who are washed from their sins "in his own blood" that he makes "kings and priests unto God and his Father."

2. The subject of the choice. (a) Qualifications not essential. "Look not on his countenance, or on the height of his stature." (v. 7). Beauty of person, grace in motion, or physical development are not the tests by which to judge the character of men. The people's satisfaction with Saul at his first appearance showed that they placed a high estimate on physical excellencies in that day. So may we say that the delight of the masses in feats of skill and strength and speed indicates that we are tending towards the same measurements of human worth. There is special need for the Church to lead its youth up to something higher than base ball games, prize fights, etc.

(b) The qualifications pleasing to God. "The Lord looketh on the heart." (v. 7). David displayed many hopeful indications in his youth that should have arrested the attention even of human observers. He was respectful and obedient to parents and superiors, he was diligent and faithful in his duties, he must have manifested a deep acquaintance with the word of God for one of his years, etc. But God looked deeper than all these. He looked into the heart and saw such a disposition there (a disposition which, let us not forget, was inwrought by the Holy Spirit) as was pleasing to his all-seeing eye. The question may be asked, What was this disposition that so eminently qualified David for the position he was to fill? Not to mention others, we noticc one in particular; His yearning after divine fellowship, light and strength. The Psalms are the expression of his heart, and every one knows how frequently they express longing, a panting, a thirsting after the light of God's countenance. There is not another Scripture character which displays this disposition so fully. It was this, above all things else, that qualified him so abundantly for penning the Psalms, which the Church was to employ in all ages. For it matters not how deep the longing of our souls, we find that the Psalmist's were deeper still, and so his words always furnish an ample medium for the expression of our deepest wants. Oh, for more open-heartedness, that we might "be filled with all the fulness of God!"

3. The endowment necessary to fit the candidate for his position. "Then Samuel took the horn of oil, and anointed him....; and the Spirit of the Lord came upon David from that day forward." "The Spirit of the Lord is upon me; because the Lord hath anointed me to preach," etc. This is the great endowment necessary for every position in "the kingdom of God." It is by the Spirit's operation that sinners are born into the kingdom (John 3: 5); it is by the Holy Spirit that they are sanctified and made ready for the inheritance of the saints in light. "God hath chosen you to salvation through sanctification of the spirit" (2 Thess 2: 13). It is by the Spirit also that they are furnished for service on earth. "All these worketh that one and the selfsame Spirit (1 Cor. 12: 11).—U. P. Bible Teacher.

BAND OF HOPE BIBLE LESSON.

SEPARATION FROM ALL FILTHINESS.

17. Wherefore come out from among them, and he ye separate, saith the Lord, and touch not the unclean thing; and I will receive you,

18. And will he a Father unto you, and ye shall he my sons and daughters, saith the Lord Almighty. 2 Cor. 6: 17, 18.

1. Having therefore these promises, dearly heloved, let us cleanse ourselves from all filthiness of the flesh and spirit, perfecting holiness in the fear of God, 2 Cor. 7: 1

1. And you hath he quickened who were dead in trespasses and sins;

2. Wherein in time past ye walked according to the course of this world, according to the prince of the power of the air, the spirit that now worketh in the children of disohedience;

3. Among whom also we all had our conversation in times past in the lusts of our flesh, fulfilling the desires of the flesh and of the mind; and were by nature the children of wrath, even as others.

4. But God, who is rich in mercy, for his great love wherewith he loved us,

5. Even when we were dead in sins, hath quickened us together with Christ (hy grace ye are saved;)

6. And has raised us up together, and made us sit together in heavenly places in Christ Jesus. Eph. 2: 1-6.

Golden Text:—By grace ye are saved. Eph. 2: 5, l. c.

Central Truth:—Tobacco is a filthy habit from which Christians should separate themselves.

1. God commands us to be separate from the world; i. e., not to be like worldly people in our desires and tastes.

2. Tobacco is a form of filthiness very common in the world, and a great deal more common than it ought to be among Christians.

3. Tobacco is a poison affecting the nerves, and through the nerves all parts of the system.

4. No man has a right to poison himself; it does not matter whether it is with prussic acid or tobacco.

5. He has still less right to poison others. The families of tobacco users are often injured in health by breathing the air which their pipes and cigars have made foul and unwholesome.

6. This is not all the objection to tobacco. It creates thirst by irritating the salival glands. Now a natural thirst is satisfied with eold water. This is the kind of thirst which you feel on a hot summer's day, or when you have heated yourself with playing or running. But this is not a natural thirst which is caused by tobacco; it is an artificial one, and craves some stimulating drink. Thus a taste for alcoholic beverages is formed. The foreign laborer's pipe and mug of beer go as naturally together as the cigar and the wine-glass at a fashionable club dinner.

7. It fosters intemperance in still another way. Its depressing action on the nerves causes those who use it to be frequently troubled with an "all gone" feeling, and they think they must take something, the "something" being usually alcohol, either in the form of bitters or as a medicine by itself. Thus slowly but surely the terrible habit is formed.

8. Christians who use tobacco hurt the cause of temperance more than they can ever help it.

9. Christians are different from worldly people because their hearts arc changed, so that they do not care any longer for things that attracted them before. Now smoking, from the time Sir Walter Raleigh introduced it into the court circles of England, has been a worldly and fashionable vice. Men who have no regard for God, no respect for purity; the profane, the licentious, are generally the ones that indulge in the habit most freely.

10. Some ministers use tobacco, some deacons, and many members of the church; but this does not prove that it is right. The majority of Christian people look upon it as a vile habit, hurtful to soul and body. We are told of heaven, "there shall in no wise enter into it any thing that defileth," and we must prepare for heaven here by keeping our souls and bodies pure.

PRACTICAL TRUTHS.

Tobacco is a filthy habit—Christians are commanded to separate themselves from all filthiness.

It creates a thirst for liquor.

Men who are worldly or grossly immoral are most addicted to this vice—another reason why Christians should shun it.

"Separation from all filthiness" is one of the conditions of heaven.

LESSON TALK.

One process in the preparation of tobacco is to dry it by powerful heat, and then it is sprinkled with the best New England rum, and flavored with various essential oils as a confectioner seasons his candy. From first to last tobacco is rum's best ally, it firmest friend. But the old-fashioned pipe is far less harmful than the cigarette. A physician in San Francisco reports that he knows of 170 cases of leprosy, chiefly among the Chinese, but some among Americans, who smoke cheap cigarettes made by leprous hands. He had even seen boys who betrayed the dreadful disease about the lips and tongue. Says a high medical authority: "Careful investigations have led to the discovery that smoking produces the so-called amblyopica—dimness of vision. This form of amblyopica is precisely identical in all respects with that caused by the excessive use of alcohol. Both are incurable." Said John Quincy Adams: "In my early days I was addicted to the use of tobacco. More than thirty years have passed away since I renounced its use. I have often wished that every individual of the human race afflicted with this artificial passion would prevail upon himself to try but for three months the experiment which I have made, feeling sure that it would turn every acre of tobacco land into a wheat field, and add five years of longevity to human life." Boys and girls, fight tobacco, and don't be afraid to fight it because it is fashionable,

OBITUARY.

From the extended notice in the Wheaton Illinoian the following sketch of the life of REV. S. F. STRATTON, whose death at Elkhorn, Wis., on the 20th ult. was noticed in last Cynosure:

"He was born in Bureau Town, Bureau county, Ill., Aug. 27, 1837, and was at the time of his death forty-six years of age. His boyhood days were spent on a farm in the then new country. He was a son of Abram and Sarah Stratton. His wife, three children, mother, three brothers and a sister survive him.

He showed in early life a marked aptness in study and passed from the district school to Princcton Academy, where he spent a portion of two years. He spent his vacations on his father's farm. and, with some terms out at work, and teaching, he spent the next eight years or more in the preparatory and classical course of Wheaton College, from which he graduated in 1865. He determined to fit himself for teaching, for which he had a taste and started for Yale College to take a post-graduatc course. Reaching Syracuse, N. Y., he spent a little time with his brother, L. N. Stratton, attending him in his pastoral work, where by a marked incident his mind turned to the gospel ministry, of which with deep feeling and pathos he told his brother, "I am not going to Yale; I am going to preach the everlasting gospel." He returned to Chicago, entered the Union Park Theological Seminary and graduated therefrom in 1868. He was pastor of the Congregational churches at Lisle and Wyanet, Ill., each about two years, spent about five years in the chair of Natural Sciences in Wheaton College, where he was highly appreciated by his students. He preached meanwhile at Prospect Park and Bloomingdale. He was pastor of the Congregational Church at Downer's Grove about five and a half years, and went to the pastorate in the wider and more influential field at Elkhorn Wisconsin, when the roses of June were blooming, and fell with the fall of the variegated foliage of autumn.

He was a man of deep research into science, and a lover of the beautiful in nature. He accompanied the Harvard Geological and Botanical Survey of the Cumberland Mountains, accompanied by professors from Yale and other colleges. He gathered a large collection of specimens, a portion of which he did not remove from the cabinets of Wheaton College. He took a post-graduate course in the Harvard Summer School of Chemistry and Geology, atd received a certificate of first grade. He was modest and retiring in disposition and took no place which did not welcome him. He had an imaginative mind and was the author of numerous poems. He was a member of the Chicago Academy of Sciences.

He is reported as having made many warm friends in Elkhorn, where the well-organized and influential church, with their new edifice, were feeling the need of an able pastor, and felt they had found a man upon whom all could and did unite with most cordial and hearty support. He was planning great advancement for his church, and was more than usually filled with a desire to save the masses. "We never heard so much of Christ's love and power preached in so short a time," is the universal testimony of his congregation. His last work was done at his church, from which he went to his bed and his grave. He fell like a soldier harnessed for the battle, and died with his face to the foe."

LEWIS BISSELL died at the home of his son-in-law, Mr. W. I. Phillips, treasurer of the N. C. A., in Wheaton, Monday evening, Oct. 29, in the 64th year of his age. Bro. Bissell was a native of Vermont, and when a young man proved the devotion of his Christian faith by engaging as a missionary teacher among the Choctaws. This mission was under the charge of the American Board, and the result of its work now appears in the Christian character of this and other tribes of the Indian Territory. While engaged in this work his wife, who was likewise devoted to the missionary work, died of cholera, leaving two children, Henry Martyn, now missionary in Guadalajara, Mexico, and Mrs. Phillips. Mr. Bissell left the mission when the Indians and their missionary instructors took sides against the slave in the abolition discussion. He removed to Illinois, residing at Galesburg and Wheaton, and always active as a member of the Christian church, and warmly sympathizing in reform work. The eldest children, above named, graduated at Wheaton in 1873. In 1880 he removed to Grand Rapids, Mich., and while engaged in fruit farming, contracted a malarial disease that proved fatal. The last few weeks of his life were spent in Wheaton, where all that could be done with the physician's aid and the careful and assiduous nursing of two daughters was vainly spent in the effort to restore health. His desire was for home and rest with God, and the burden of his conversation was of the blessed hope given us through Christ, the victory over sin and death, and the joy of the redeemed. Thus the end of this life was met with the assurance of triumph and in peace. K.

WILLIAM FERRIS, in the 76th year of his age, at Galesburg, Ill. Mr. Ferris came from New York and settled in Knox county, Ill., in 1837 He was early identified with the efforts which have developed what was then a wild, uncultivated region, into one of the most prosperous and beautiful inland cities and districts in Illinois. He possessed a sympathetic heart, a clear head and an ever open hand to the needy and to every good work. He was a friend of reform and stood manfully by Pres. Blanchard in the early abolition struggle, and was no less pronounced in his opposition to all secret societies and shams. His condition for the last five years has been that of a helpless invalid, and his faithful companion has watched over him for these long years with patience and heroic devotion. His departure, Oct. 18th, was peaceful and his funeral largely attended by old settlers who came to pay their respects to one whom they had known long and well. Two brothers were present, Weston 84 years of age, and Henry nearly 73. He leaves a wife, one son and one daughter, who with numerous friends mourn for the departed, but not without a good hope.

THE CHURCHES VS. LODGERY.

The following denominations are committed by vote of their legislative assemblies or by constitution to a separation from secret lodge worship:

Adventists (Seventh-day.)

Baptists—Primitive, Seventh-day and Scandinavian.

Brethren (Dunkers or German Baptists.)

Christian Reformed Church.

Church of God (Northern Indiana Eldership.)

Congregational—The State Associations of Illinois and Iowa have adopted resolutions against the lodge.

Disciples (in part.)

Friends.

Lutherans—Norwegian, Danish, Swedish and Synodical Conferences.

Mennonites.

Methodists—Free and Wesleyan.

Methodist Protestant (Minnesota Conference.)

Moravians.

Plymouth Brethren.

Presbyterian—Associate, Reformed and United.

Reformed Church (Holland Branch.)

United Brethren in Christ.

Individual churches in some of these denominations should be excepted, in part of them even a considerable portion.

The following local churches have, as a pledge to disfellowship and oppose lodge worship, given their names to the following list as

THE ASSOCIATED CHURCHES OF CHRIST.

New Ruhamah Cong. Hamilton, Miss.
Pleasant Ridge Cong. Sandford Co. Ala.
New Hope Methodist, Lowndes Co., Miss.
Congregational, College Springs, Iowa.
College Church of Christ, Wheaton, Ill.
First Congregational, Leland, Mich.
Sugar Grove Church, Green county, Pa.
Military Chapel, M. E., Lowndes county, Miss.
Hopewell Missionary Baptist, Lowndes Co., Miss.

Simon's Chapel, M. E., Lowndes Co., Miss.
Pleasant Ridge Miss. Baptist, Lowndes Co., Miss.
Brownlee Church, Caledonia, Miss.
Salem Church, Lowndes Co., Miss.
West Preston Baptist Church, Wayne Co., Pa.

OTHER LOCAL CHURCHES

adopting the same principle are—

Baptist churches: N. Abington, Pa.; Menomonie, Mondovi, Waubeck and Spring Prairie, Wis.; Wheaton, Ill.; Perry, N. Y.; Spring Creek, near Burlington, Iowa; Lima, Ind.; Constableville, N. Y. The "Good Will Association" of Mobile, Ala., comprising some twenty-five colored Baptist churches; Bridgewater Baptist Association, Pa.; Old Tebo Baptist, near Leesville, Henry Co., Mo.; Hoopeston, Ill; Esmen, Ill.

Congregational churches: 1st of Oberlin, O.; Toica, Crystal Lake, Union and Big Woods, Ill.' Solsbury, Ind.; Congregational Methodist Maplewood, Mass.

Presbyterian church, Hoopeston, Ill.

Independent churches in Lowell, Countryman school house near Lindenwood, Marengo and Streator, Ill.; Berea and Camp Nelson, Ky; Ustick, Ill.; Clarksburg, Kansas; State Association of Ministers and Churches of Christ in Kentucky.

CHRISTIAN WORKERS

Who depend on voluntary contributions of Christian people in whole or in part for their support:

J. F. BROWNE, Germantown Ky.
ELI TAPLEY, Columbus, Miss.
J. F. GALLOWAY, Okahumka, Florida.
WM. HAZENBURG, Cape Town, S. Africa.
A. D. ZARAPHONITHES, Smyrna, Turkey.

Contributions for either of these brethren may be forwarded through the Treasurer of the N. C. A. PLEASE DESIGNATE to which one such funds shall be sent.

OLD FACTS IN A NEW FORM.

Do you want the Christian Cynosure for one year? There are three ways to get it:

1. Send the subscription price (single copy) $2.00.

2. Send $8.75 for a club of five, at $1.75 each, and get a copy one year for your services.

3. Send $15.00 for a club of ten at $1.50 each and get a copy extra for yourself.

Names may be sent at different times and papers addressed to different post-offices; but when you send the last name and order your extra copy, please give at the same time the entire list of names in your club, with the address of each, so as to avoid confusion or mistakes.

The Christian Cynosure.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 8, 1883.

FORTY-FIVE

NEW SUBSCRIBERS came in one day this week, and it was a bad day for business besides. We want no better proof of the popularity of the offer for two-month trial subscribers. Anti-masons, if you want your paper widely circulated, get up a heavy list in your town. November and December numbers for TWENTY-FIVE CENTS. This offer is good till Nov. 15th.

EDITORIAL CORRESPONDENCE.

TARRYTOWN, N. Y., Oct. 29, 1883.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—The press treated us fairly at Syracuse, and the bandogs of the lodge are all silent. Yet the necessity they are under of coming up to breathe, as we say of sea-monsters, and the infamous record they have made and must make, will enable us to keep them under the focus of the public gaze, till it serves them as the sun does snails, and other night-creeping creatures.

Our friends here are well. I preached yesterday in the Second Reformed (Dutch) church, to a large audience in this old aristocratic town, peopled by men of enterprise who have made fortunes. Almost all are members of secret lodges, into which men of business are so almost universally drawn to get secret advantages of their neighbors, or to keep their neighbors from taking secret advantages of them. If the gross sum paid here annually to the devil, for this sort of black-mail, as the Scotch paid Rob Roy to keep him from stealing their cattle, it would foot up fabulously large; probably more than all that is paid for religion, education, and perhaps the civil list thrown in. The number and diversity of the secret orders is enormous, and their members pay their dues as punctually as gamblers pay their debts of honor; or devotees pay for masses for their dead.

Yet a formal and traditional piety here makes Christianity hard to exterminate. The women still believe in Christ and pray to him, and there are embers enough in these fine old churches, if there were an Ezekiel here to call for "the breath of the Lord," to to kindle the whole population into a flame, and burn up the "wood, hay, and stubble" which now covers and conceals Christ from the masses in the churches themselves. It is hastening and will come.

The male membership, where I preached yesterday are largely Freemasons, even the venerable looking elders themselves. But their pastor is not; and they, who doubtless knew me when I was announced, seemed to cleave to me, as "Aaron the Saint of the Lord" clave unto Moses, though he practiced idolatry to please the people when Moses's back was turned.

As I preached unexpectedly to myself and the congregation, I of course, did not preach against the lodge; though Rev. Mr. Oxnard, formerly of Elgin, who called on us after sermon, to ask us to dine with him, said, had he known of my being here, he would have tried to secure a place for a sermon against the lodge. I preached on Hezekiah, as a "Reformer King," and said, "The worship in these high places was a confused and meaningless jumble of superstitious rites, and tricks of priesthood which confounded men's ideas of religion and government, till there was no 'One God' to swear witnesses by—"

"No pledge was sacred and no home was sweet."

If I could have another day here, I have no doubt the people here would give me a hearing to our cause.

THE AMERICAN MISSIONARY ASSOCIATION.

CENTRAL CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH, BROOKLYN, N. Y., OCTOBER, 31, 1883.—I am here in the midst of the sessions of the American Missionary Association, and among the friends of former years. It will be remembered that Dr. J. E. Roy, who reads the principal report here, addressed us at the unveiling of the Morgan Monument; that this great organization has instructed its schools and agents throughout the South to welcome the agents of the N. C. A; and that Mr. Hinman has been cordially received by them. I have preached two annual sermons for this body, and remember when we struggled for a hearing for missions divorced from American slavery—even in Illinois;—and the great convention which we called at Chicago, where one hundred ministers, and about as many delegates met to proclaim the divorce, was a pivot on which the Christian sentiment of the country turned forever against the propagation of a slave-holding Christianity.

After our call for a free mission convention had been out four weeks an opposition convention was run into Chicago two weeks before ours met, to close homes and hospitalities against us. But Philo Carpenter, and men like him, were there to welcome us. Soon after our convention, the American Home Missionary Society by its committee of twenty-five in the city of New York, took ground against aiding slave-holding churches; and when Christianity was divorced from slavery it fell, and "great was the fall of it."

We none of us then saw, as we now see, that the lodge stood in the shadow behind the human auction block; but now that auction block is gone, the Christless shadow now stands grinning in its place. I am sorry not to hear the anti-secret principles of this great body openly defended by the speakers, but that will come in due time. Even now the frequent utterance of the phase "unfruitful works of darkness," foretokens and declares the hatred of the Association for the organized deism of the lodge.

I received a little compliment from Secretary Strieby which I may be excused for giving the readers of the Cynosure. Dr. Flickinger of the United Brethren called for a staff to point out the Mendi Missions on his map of Africa. Secretary Strieby took the staff which I offered for the speaker, but another was handed in first. Dr. Strieby returned my staff, remarking, "Other people very seldom get ahead of you, but they seem to have done so this time."

While I am writing these hasty sketches, brethren come to speak with me; among them Mr. Minasian of Tarrytown, who heard me preach last Sabbath for Dr. Todd. He failed to hear the name announced and came to express his regrets. He has visited Wheaton, and is a devoted friend of its President, C. A. Blanchard, to whom he sends love.

I shall write out this great meeting when I get time. At the risk of good taste I send these sketches of a personal character, because many will be glad of the state of things which they adumbrate. The moderator calls to order, and I am yours in Christ.

B.

Nov. 1.—The 37th anniversary of the American Missionary Association, now meeting in the old Central Congregational church (Dr. Scudder) here, is, moderately speaking, a resplendent success. Rankin of Washington, D. C., handles the Association with calmness and ability. The action of the body, through its organs, against the secret lodge idolatries, keeps off lodge idolaters, and the unworthy men who came into the Association after God had brought it to popularity, are slowly sinking to their natural level; and though the shrinking of the present management from meeting the fearful lodge-power in their constituent churches, chills its prayer meetings somewhat by putting it out of sympathy with the Holy Spirit who chiefly opposes what chiefly opposes Christ, the old perfume still lingers in the vase. The vast auditorium, though not crammed to overflow, is well filled by men and women on whom the sun of heaven might be proud to look down; and one cannot sit and look on the pictures of its work as the kaleidoscope turns without exclaiming, "Marvellous are thy works LORD GOD ALMIGHTY.

The personale of the convention is wonderful. Old father Gleason, who had grey hairs thirty-eight years ago, when Mrs. B. and myself travelled down the Ohio with him, on his way to his Indian missions, and who must now be ninety or near it; Eels of Washington Territory is here, forty-five years out of white American society, whose sons are now holding up the banner of the cross and country which their good old father and the sainted Whitman lifted in the long ago before any Washington Territory was there; the Riggses, and some other of my old students at Knox College, and members of my first church in Cincinnati; Dr. Edward Beecher, tender and tearful, yet the same honest, good and really great man,—but I must stop. The shadows of the great and good men gone are more than the men who are here.

THE SPEECHES AND PAPERS

if slightly reported would fill the Cynosure. The colored orators and Southern men, as ever, are marked by every eye. The secretaries have done their work ably and well; and give us an agreeable panorama of the work of the Association.

"Like light and shade upon a waving field
Coursing each other, when the flying clouds
Now hide, and now reveal the sun."

But of all the magnificently grand and beautiful things done here, the Chinese speech of Wm. Alvan Bartlett, of Washington city, towered above the rest. I shrink from touching it, for the speech was literally indescribable. Learned, witty, eloquent, just, sound, statesman-like and Christian, all these adjectives heaped upon the speech would only cover and conceal its real excellencies; which were echoed by the rapturous applauses of the crowd. Mr. Bartlett had studied and mastered his subject. But, what was better, he loved and pitied the Chinese. He had had them as church members at Indianapolis, and their lofty national antiquity, their vast proportion of our entire race, their clinging together from the time where the dim past ages cease to be counted; their honesty and integrity, which, he said, made their word to be taken in the little shops along the North Pacific railroad, while others were not trusted; their intellectual splendor, attested by English statesmen, and by the success of their boys in our schools—all this appeared in the speech as if presented, not by eloquence but by magic. And then came the lying legislation; their false and self-conflicting indictments;—inserted here, and praised; then persecuted, stoned, driven all bruised and bleeding into dark dens and alleys, and then accused of herding together out of sight; forbidden by law to live in rooms short of so many cubic feet of air, and for disobedience to those laws, put in jails where there were not one-hal fthose cubic feet of air assailed as foreigners by foreign brogue—and all because they eat opium and worshiptheir ancestors, etc. "Well they took opium at the mouths of Christian cannon—and though I do not defend idolatry, I would sooner far, reverence my grandfather for his virtues, than curse my children with such laws. If forced to the option, I would sooner worship my ancestors than damn my posterity!" (Here the roar of plaudits was immense.)

But when Mr. Bartlett had lauded the learning and morals of Confucius, he said, "Yet the highest crests of billowy ideas and teachings of Confucius only throw their spray at the feet of Christ Jesus; whose doctrines we disobey in our treatment of the Chinese!" And the speaker ended with a volume of theology condensed into a single sentence, that "Though the splendors of Chinese history, arts, learning and civilization, must ever brand our treatment of them with infamy, the sole reliance for them, and for us, is in those Scriptures which show us our fallen and depraved condition, and our only hope of deliverance and salvation through the blood of Christ." B.

THE GOVERNMENT AND SOUTHERN LODGES.

Bro. Curtis of Olathe, Kansas, hands us the following from the San Francisco Weekly Call, the organ of secret societies on the Pacific Coast. It is a short paragraph; but it throws a flood of light on the past history of American politics:

An aged Washington Mason is just deceased, in the person of Erasmus J. Middleton, late Clerk of the Criminal Court. He was made a Mason in Federal Lodge, No. 1, on November 6, 1826, was its Secretary in 1828, was one of a committee appointed in 1830 to wait on President Andrew Jackson, Secretary of War John H. Eaton, and Postmaster-General William T. Barry, and inform them of their election to honorary membership in Federal Lodge. Brother Middleton was 80 years of age at his death.

Some of our friends speak doubtingly on the question, "Whether the lodge became a Southern institution and controlled our government after the death of Morgan, and the vote of 228,000 for Wirt and Ellmaker in 1832. Let them read and re-read the above paragraph, and particularly note its dates.

Jackson was a Royal Arch Mason, his Secretary of State, Edward Livingston, became the head of the order when De Witt Clinton died a broken-hearted aspirant to the Presidency of the United States, killed by New York Anti-masonry. Joel R. Poinsett, Jackson's minister to Mexico, took there with him the other rite from the one in use by the Mexicans; and, the two rites, (York and Scotch) sheltering treason to existing governments, by turns, kept Mexico in a "chronic state of revolution."

Now the above paragraph adds to Jackson and Livingston, his Secretary of War, John H. Eaton, and Postmaster-General William T. Barry, as "honorary members" of Federal Lodge in 1828, the year of Jackson's election, and, we believe, even before he was inaugurated, Mar. 4, 1829, and before his Cabinet had taken their seats!

Now if we turn North; John Quincy Adams, Daniel Webster, Edward Everett, Josiah Quincy, with the younger men, Seward, Granger, Fillmore, Stevens and Gov. Ritner, (almost every prominent politician) were Anti-masons. Did not Masonry become a Southern institution? and, combined with the slave power, did it not take possession of the U. S. government?

The San Francisco Masonic paragraph above, shows that Jackson owed his sudden boom of popularity largely to the lodges. He and his cabinet were virtually a lodge; and, as Secretary Livingston was head of the order, his recommendation to Masons to observe a "dignified silence" when proved guilty of murder, had the force of a mandate.

Jackson was a silent Mason, who doubtless despised the lodges which elected him. And the nullificationists fell under his terrific proclamation in 1832, the year of his second election. But their bold front and push for disunion at that early period, with the mere flimsy pretence of a tariff for justification shows that they relied on the lodge to carry them through. But they failed on Jackson. But at the time of the first secession convention, Columbia, S. C., Dec. 17, 1860, Jackson was dead; Buchanan was in his seat, and Parker, Inglis, Rhett, and Keitts boldly declared that they had been "working this thing up for thirty years," i. e., from Jackson till then. Of course they were drilling for secession and rebellion in the lodge-rooms of the South! Where else? They made no public speeches. Those lodge-rooms afterward contained the disguises of the Ku-Klux, Golden Circle, and White Leaguers. Treason, war, and about ten thousand murders since, rest on those lodge-rooms. And Northern Masons, like our Gen. Dustin, of the 105th Ill. volunteers met in a secret society convention in New Orleans just after the 400 murders of Republican voters in that city which Gen. Sheridan declared a "premeditated massacre," and while their blood was scarcely dry on the pavements, voted that the White Leaguers were belied, and that they were patriotic and orderly citizens.

We insert in this number an article from the N. Y. Times, Oct. 25, entitled "An Odd Affair." The sepulchral silence of the American press and pulpit is giving way under the batteries of the anti-secret papers, the Thurlow Weed revelations, and the turnings of the lodge inside out by our lecturers and seceded Masons. When men like Dr. J. N. Norris of Iowa, declare, as Republican papers the other day tell us he did, that, "The spirit of the lodge includes the spirit of murder and every crime this side,"—and thousands believe him—the lodges must say or do something or sink under popular odium. And our leading papers begin to see that they must say something or lose the popular confidence. It is therefore natural that their first articles should be feelers, striking both ways, like the M. E. preacher who, in an eloquent speech painted his "old ship Zion," delivering broadsides into slavery on one side, and Abolitionism on the other. But like the hen which undertook to brood chickens under one wing and young skunks under the other, they will find that labor difficult and short. Secret societies in Europe and in this country are NOT "different affairs," but the same. The Masonic orator Brainerd, years ago, before the murder of Morgan; showed that the lodge had men at its service who would stick at nothing when ordered by their superiors to commit crime in its behalf. This is all "Secret societies in Europe" are now doing. But the Times article is racy, and cuts the lodge to the quick. Our readers will read it with much satisfaction.

—The N. C. A. General Agent is this week attending the Wisconsin State Convention at Menomonie. Pres. C. A. Blanchard, of Wheaton, is also engaged to speak at the same meeting.

—Brethren A. B. Lipp and Cain have been busy in northeastern Wisconsin since harvest. Twelve days were spent in Linn and Sullivan counties. They then visited parts of Adair, Knox, Shelby and Macon counties, preaching and lecturing for Christ against the anti-Christian lodges. Their efforts were generally well received by the people, and, if they do not, some one will reap from this faithful sowing of the good seed of the kingdom.

—The Executive Committee for Illinois have thoroughly worked up financial matters in the State, giving all the Anti-masons whom they could reach an opportunity of subscribing to the State work. The committee is beginning to receive favorable responses, and their reports given from time to time will be a great encouragement. They desire an early reply from all with whom they have corresponded.

—Bro. Bancroft, Wisconsin State agent, has been laboring with great assiduity for the local success of the Menomonie convention. He has spoken eight times in Dunn county and thoroughly advertised the meeting in the local press as well as by distribution of bills. He expects a fine attendance from the vicinity.

—Mrs. C. S. Kennedy of San Jose, California, a welcome contributor to the Cynosure, having spent the season among friends at Wheaton has returned safely to her home.

—The health of Rev. Edward Hildreth, former treasurer of the N. C. A., has not been restored by his removal to Colorado, and he will spend this winter season in Southern California, where he will be often and prayerfully remembered, we trust, by the readers of the Cynosure.

—Bro. Reynolds, who went to northern Michigan three years ago after the Seceder's Convention in Chicago, writes of a Bro. Davis, laboring as missionary in the lumbering region, who is heartily in favor of our reform, rebuking openly the powers of the evil one, and desiring to be be better informed of the methods of the lodge enemy.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

THE KU-KLUX TRIAL IN GEORGIA.

The Banks county, Ga., Ku-Klux trial was begun yesterday. The defendants are Jasper, James, Dilmus and Neal Yarbrough, Lovel Streetman, Bold Emory, State Summons and E. H. Green. Ex-Congressman Speer appeared for the prosecution. Warren Bryson testified that he was called from his house one night in July and beaten by a crowd of masked men. The mob swore revenge against the negroes of the locality who voted for ex-Congressman Speer. Calvin Bush testified that he was taken out of bed by a howling mob, who stripped him and gave him 175 lashes. He was stripped in court and displayed the scars. Elisha Brooks told of how he was taken out and whipped by a crowd who remarked: "You see what your damned Speer has done for you." He recognized Jasper Yarbrough in the mob. Yarbrough said: "If you know anybody in this crowd and tell on him I'll put you in your grave." Brooks was also beaten with brass knuckles.—Press Dispatch.

Should the Georgia courts fail to convict the men who have committed these horrid crimes—as is not at all improbable—then according to the principle laid down in the recent decision of the Supreme Court, there is no redress from the General Government. If the Federal Government may not protect its citizens in some of their civil rights, because such duty of protection rests with the States, neither may it protect them in any of their rights. Hence this question rises far above any considerations of the rights of a race and makes it the question of the rights of mankind. What we had supposed to have been forever settled by the logic of events, as well as the decision of our National and State legislation, we find re-opened and we are face to face with the issue. Are we a nation, and if so can citizens of that nation look to it for protection?

It may be conceded that the decision of the Court is technically correct, and that the right of Congress to pass such a law is not given by express and positive provision, and it will still remain true that such questi ons are not to be decided on mere technicalities and that an implied power to protect the rights of the citizen is equal to a positive mandate to do so. The presumption in law is that it was the intention of the legislature to establish justice, and secure the blessings of liberty, and that this intention is the law. This is especially true of the interpretation of the Constitution; for it expressly declares in its preamble that this was the intention of its framers. Hence it follows as a legal axiom, that all laws or contracts calculated to impair the rights of any man must have the strictest construction, and be suffered to mean no more than the words absolutely demand, while on the other hand, laws that protect human liberty should have an enlarged and liberal construction.

No finer illustration of this principle has ever been given than in Shakespeare's "Merchant of Venice." Shylock's demand for a pound of flesh to be cut out next the merchant's heart, was fully sustained by the contract. It "was so nominated in the bond" and the decision (after all appeals to mercy were found to be fruitless), was "the law allows it and the court awards it." But it must be exactly one pound—no varying the scales the breadth of a hair, and there must not be shed one drop of human blood. That was not expressed; and nothing could be implied in such a contract as this. Not so, had the bond been for a pound of bread to feed the perishing. Then there would have been no limit to the quantity of bread, provided it was not less than a pound, and all the water required would be held to be included in the covenant. So ever will it be with all just legislation and all righteous judicial decisions. The presumption in law, is in favor of justice, even to the farthest extreme.

That such has not been the principle on which the Supreme Court has decided important questions during the last fifty years is a sad commentory on our republican institutions. The Constitution was tortured to sustain slavery, while its plain and ample provisions for the protection of liberty were treated as nullities. Alas that this same perverting influence should continue and that "judgment should be turned away backward!"

I have just read the text of Justice Bradley's decision, in which he holds that should an individual deny to his fellow man his right to vote, hold office or property, buy, sell, or sue in the courts; should he commit murder, or use ruffianly violence at the polls, "unless protected in these wrongful acts by some shield of State law or State authority" he can have no protection from the General Government.

Go on then, ye Ku Klux Klans! Crush out the pretentious negro who undertakes to interfere in a white man's government. Georgia will treat you leniently, and U. S. Courts have no power to protect. Does not the learned Justice know that the holding of slaves was only the act of individuals and not distinctly authorized by the State? What is to hinder their doing the same thing to-day? The Thirteenth Amendment? It is but a "glittering generality" if the nation has no power to enforce it. O for a government that will "Defend the poor and fatherless, do justice to the afflicted and needy, deliver the poor and needy and rid them out of the hand of the wicked." Ps. 82: 3, 4.

THE EX-DETECTIVES.

I predicted some months since that these men who planned robbery and shared its results, would escape all punishment. Some of them are known to be Masons and probably all are protected by the shield of the Secret Empire. Three of them have been tried. The first case was not sustained by any very positive proof, but the next two were shown by the most positive testimony to have been the receivers of stolen goods. No evidence was offered in defence except that the defendants had sustained a good character, and on this ground it seems a verdict was found of acquittal. Henceforth, ye citizens of Washington, look well to your locks and bars. "Take ye heed every one of his neighbor and trust ye not in any brother." Men of good moral character will either in person or by proxy steal your goods and divide the spoil, and because of favoritism the authorities of this District are powerless to protect you.

WEEK OF PRAYER, 1884.

The week of prayer commences with the first Sabbath in the year, January 6, and the general arrangement of topics is as follows:

Monday, January 7.—Praise and thanksgiving.

Tuesday, January 8.—Confession of sin, and prayer for cleansing and renewal.

Wednesday, January 9.—Prayer for families and instructors of youth.

Thursday, January 10.—Prayer for the church of Christ.

Friday, January 11.—Intercession for the nations.

Saturday, January 12.—Prayer for missions at home and abroad.

This is the general series of topics, and subdivisions may be made according to the wishes of pastors and churches.

25 CENTS.

Here is another point. In how many towns will Anti masons club together and have their paper, the Cynosure, sent for two months to every family in the place? November and December numbers 25c. TRY IT.

When Luther began his Reformation, eighty out of the one hundred millions who owed allegiance to Christian rulers were under papal rule; the remainder was chiefly under the patriarch of the Greek church. In A. D. 1700, the Roman Catholic people had increased to 90,000,000, the Eastern Christians to 33,000,000; while those of Protestant faith numbered 32,000,000 or about one-fifth of nominal Christian people. In 1800 there were under Protestant governments 149,000,000; under papal, 134,000,000; and under governments owning the Greek church, 60,000,000. In 1876 the record stands as follows: Under governments professedly Roman Catholic, 181,000,000; Greek church, 96,000,000; and under rule professedly Protestant, 408,000,000.—Ex.

—Rev. J. W. Hott, editor of the Religious Telescope, speaks in the following highly complimentary terms of the General Secretary of the N. C. A., who lately visited him:

"Brother Stoddard is a strong opponent of the great lodge-systems of our country, and a Christian man and minister of high character. Of course he handles Masonry with a steady and powerful hand, striking blows which are mighty. He believes himself called of God to show this age the folly and sin of these secret organizations. He speaks hopefully of the uprising of Christian sentiment opposed to the lodge and lodge-power in this country. A very vigorous effort is now being made to establish a strong agency at Washington, D. C. A good four-story building has been purchased within a few squares of the Capitol, which is in part now occupied by the Washington agent. It is probable that at no distant day a paper will be issued from that city in the interests of the reform. The Anti-secresy Association combats one of the most powerful as well as the most subtle opponents of true manhood, pure spirituality in the church, and independence of action in government that exists on our globe. We bid Bro. Stoddard God-speed in the work of opposing and exposing these powers of evil in our land.

—The Wesleyan General Conference adopted the following resolutions of sympathy with Elder D. P. Rathbun of Iowa, on the motion of Rev. D. S. Kinney:

Resolved, That we deeply sympathize with Rev. D. P. Rathbun, who, while fulfilling his duty as Connectional Lecturer, was inhumanly mobbed and barbarously and with murderous intent maltreated, in Kellerton, Iowa, by Freemasons, and those wedded to its interests.

Resolved 2nd, That in view of what our esteemed brother has suffered at the hands of the lodge for many years, and what we know of his history, we are surprised that the question as to the fact of our brother's having been a Mason can be questioned by any fair-minded person.

THE HOME.

FOR NOVEMBER 10, 1883.

Four hundred years ago
Did Heav'n on earth bestow
The man whose work should shake all coming ages,
The chosen instrument,
Whom God alone has sent
To put His Word above the wisdom of the sages,
To lift the darkness from the world,
And have the light unfurled,
Until the rays Divine
In many ransomed hearts should shine.

Four hundred years ago,
When God His work would do,
He knew where quickly He might find His Luther.
Rough? Yes, as Alpine crags;
In him no courage lags;
Perhaps than others rougher, and uncouther;
But for the telling of God's truth
In no wise too unconth
Nor rougher than his work
'Midst burghers, kings, and Pope and Turk.

Four hundred years ago,
When time to fullness grew,
And souls were sore with heavy burden-bearing,
God let the morning come.
In an Eislebein home
Was Luther born—in whom God was preparing
His chosen man, armed for the fight,
A truly armored knight,
Well trained, no sword to spare
Against oppression anywhere.

Four hundred years ago!
What man could then foreknow
How soon the mighty arm of God, awaking,
Would strike for liberty,
And set His nations free,
The thrones of old despotic powers shaking?
But God sent brave old Luther on,
And God the battle won;
For none 'gainst God can stand,
When He lifts up His conquering hand.

Four hundred years ago,
And yet the blessings flow
From fountains touched by Luther's mighty magic;
The opened Word of God,
Out of the darkness brought,
To smite, like Moses' staff, the rock of waters
To-day to millions of the blest
Brings grace, and peace, and rest;
And all these millions sing
This day the glories of their King!

Four hundred years ago!
What gifts may we bestow—
What outward sign our gratitude confessing?
This blessed liberty,
This soul and conscience free,
That nations now are everywhere possessing,
All this is Luther's princely gift;
Then let our voices lift
His praise with one accord,
And for our Luther thank our Lord.

LUTHER'S LAST DAYS.

BY JAMES ANTHONY FROUDE.

When Luther reached his last birthday he was tired and sick at heart, and sick in body. In the summer of 1545 he had wished to retire to his farm, but Wittenberg could not spare him, and he continued regularly to preach. His sight began to fail. In January, 1546, he began a letter to a friend calling himself "old, spent, worn, weary, cold, with but one eye to see with." On the the 28th of that month he undertook a journey to Eisleben, where he had been born, to compose a difference between the Counts Mansfeldt. He caught a chill on the road, but seemed to shake it off, and was able to attend to business. He had fallen into the hands of lawyers, and the affair went on but slowly. On the 14th of February he preached, and, as it turned out, for the last time, in Eisleben church. An issue in the leg, artificially kept open to relieve his system, had been allowed to heal for want of proper attendance. He was weak and exhausted after the sermon. He felt the end near, and wished to be with his family again. "I will get home," he said, "and get into my coffin, and give the worms a fat doctor."

But wife and home he was never to see again, and he was to pass from off the earth at the same spot where his eyes were first opened to the light. On the 17th he had a sharp pain in his chest. It went off, however. He was at supper in the public room, and talked with his usual energy. He retired, went to bed, slept, woke, prayed, slept again; then at midnight called his servant. "I feel strangely," he said; "I shall stay here. I shall never leave Eisleben." He grew restless, rose, moved into an adjoining room, and lay upon a sofa. His two sons were with him, with his friend Jonas. "It is death," he said; "I am going; 'Father, unto thy hands I commend my spirit.'"

Jonas asked him if he would still stand by Christ and the doctrine which he had preached. He said, "Yes." He slept once more, breathing quietly, but his feet grew cold. Between two and three in the morning he died.

The body lay in state for a day; a likeness was taken of him before the features changed. A cast from the face was taken afterwards; the athlete expression gone, the essential nature of him—grave, tender, majestic—taking the place of it, as his own disturbed life appears now when it is calmed down into a memory. The Elector, John Frederick, hurried to see him; the Counts Mansfeldt ended beside his body the controversies which he had come to compose. On the 20th he was set on a car to be carried back to Wittenberg, with an armed escort of cavalry. The people of Eisleben attended him to the gates. The church bells tolled in the villages along the road. Two days later he reached his last resting-place at Wittenberg. Melanchthon cried after him as they laid him in the grave, "My Father, my Father! The chariot of Israel and the horseman thereof."

His will, which is extremely characteristic, had been drawn by himself four years before. He had left his wife well provided for, and because legal proceedings might be raised upon his marriage, he committed her to the special protection of the Elector. Children, friends, servants, were all remembered.

"Finally," he said, "seeing I do not use legal forms, I desire all men to take these words as mine. I am known openly in heaven, on earth, and in hell also; and I may be believed and trusted better than any notary. To me, a poor, unworthy, miserable sinner, God, the Father of merey, has entrusted the Gospel of his dear Son, and has made me therein true and faithful. Through my means many in this world have reeeived the Gospel, and hold me as a true preacher, despite of popes, emperors, kings, princes, priests, and all the devil's wrath. Let them believe me also in the small matter of my last will and testimony, this being written in my own hand, which otherwise is not unknown. Let it be understood that here is the earnest, delioerate meaning of Doctor Martin Luther, God's notary and witness in his Gospel, confirmed by his own hand seal—January 6, 1542."

Nothing remains to be said. Philosophic historians tell us that Luther succeeded because he came in the fullness of time, because the age was ripe for him, beeause forces were at work which would have brought about the same changes if he had never been born. Some changes there might have been, but not the same. The forces computable by philosophy can destroy, but cannot create. The false spiritual despotism which dominated Europe would have fallen from its own hollowness. But a lie may perish, and no living belief may rise again out of the ruins. A living belief can rise only out of a believing human soul, and that any faith, any piety, is alive now in Europe, even in the Roman church itself, whose insolent hypocrisy he humbled into shame, is due in a large measure to the poor miner's son who was born in a Saxon village 400 years ago.—Sel.

A PIONEER MISSIONARY.

BY EDNAH SHAW.

William Carey was born at Pury, England, Aug. 17, 1761. There he received his only education in the village school. As a boy he was fond of reading, quiek of intelleet and persevering to a remarkable degree. At the age of twelve, a Latin grammar and vocabulary came into his hands, and he at once began to commit all the Latin words with their meanings, to memory. With all this taste and talent for learning, he could not gratify it in school, but at fourteen, was apprentieed to a shoemaker. Soon after, he found a copy of the New Testament with some Greek words in the notes. Determined to learn this language also, he copied the words and took them to a weaver who had a good education. With him he mastered the rudiments and did not rest till he could read the Greek Testament. When about eighteen he experienced "that vital change of heart which laid the foundation of his Christian character." He soon commenced preaching and for three and a half years supplied the pulpits of two villages. During this time he became convinced that baptism by immersion, after a confession of faith, was in accordance with the Bible and the practice of the apostolic age. And now, for several years Carey was a pastor, studying, and forming an acquaintance with eminently pious men, whose friendship was of the greatest service to him in his life work. Carey's first thought of missions came into his mind when reading Captain Cook's account of his voyage round the world. This book impressed him so much that he made a large map of the world and marked it so as to indieate the numerical relation of the heathen to the Christian nations. This map he placed in front of his work-stool, and looking upon it, formed the purpose never to tire nor rest till he and others had gone to carry the Gospel to a suffering humanity in heathen lands. When Carey first mentioned the subject of missions to his brethren, the senior minister present said sternly, "What, sir! ean you preach in Arabic, in Hindostani, in Bengali, that you think it your duty to preach the Gospel to the heathen?" Afterwards, when through love for the cause, Carey again asked his brethren to consider the question, the same stern voice replied, "Sit down, young man, when God pleases to convert the heathen he will do it without your aid or mine." And yet Carey was the very man to be Professor of Oriental languages for twenty years and to translate the Scriptures into tongues spoken by 200,000,000 of people. In 1789 this poor shoemaker wrote a pamphlet entitled "Thoughts on Christian Missions," while he and his family were suffering for the necessaries of life. In May, 1792, he preached the famous sermon from Isa. 54: 2, 3, which resulted in the formation of the first missionary soeiety. The first subscription amounted to about $60 and in less than a month $350 more were given. In June, 1793, Carey and Thomas left the shores of England for India, and Thomas wrote after their arrival, "Never did men see their native land with more joy than we left it; but this is not of nature, but from above." In this spirit the mission was begun and carried on. Who can wonder that so much was accomplished. For several years they had no legal standing in the eountry and were fettered by poverty so that they had to resort to trade and manual labor for subsistence, After a time, when Mr. Carey began to be employed by government, he and Mr. Marshman gave all their earnings to the work, receiving from the mission fund only their food and a trifle for their apparel. During all these years of anxiety and varied labor Carey went on steadily with his translation of the New Testament into Bengali and in 1801 he received the last sheet from the press. When the first copy was bound it was placed on the communion table in the ehapel and the mission family and converts held a meeting to render thanks to God for so great a blessing. In 1806 the New Testament was ready for the press in Sanskrit, the sacred language of India, and also proof sheets of the same in four other languages, besides dictionaries and grammars. It is said that Dr. Carey tired out three pundits or native interpreters who eame eaeh day to assist him in the revision of his translations. Forty years of this busy life for the perishing heathen passed away and then this veteran toiler "rested from his labors and his works do follow him." He wished this simple inscription to be placed over his tomb,

"A wretched, poor, and helpless worm,
On thy kind arms I fall."

"Though dead he yet speaketh," and to the end of time, the shoemaker of Northamptonshire will be remembered as the "Christian Apostle" of Northern India.

HOME HINTS.

THE LIVING ROOM.—What a fine, old-fashioned distinction that is, by the way, the living room! As if the rooms kept for company were dead rooms, full of ghostly furniture, kept for show, and of cold and fearful aspect. In a true home every room should be a living room. We should live all over our houses, having nothing too fine to use. Of course the nursery should hold the young de stroyers until they know what not to break, if that know ledge ever comes. But to a trooping set of happy boys and girls, the house should be open and free. Each person will find his sanctum, of course, and every one should, if possible, have a room to himself. There should be some place for those who must work to retire to, where solitude would be possible. But the dining-room, the library and the parlor should be cheerful and orderly, and always lighted up by some constant and familiar presence. Somebody should be there to welcome the wanderers, to greet the stranger, and to gather the children together as a hen gathers her chickens under her wings. This person is generally the mother, who is the core of the home. It is this hour of reunion, this happy hour by the wood fire, which pays her for all her work, all her trials. If she can see her group passing into a respectable manhood and womanhood, if she can see happy, honest, hopeful industrious sons, and blooming, modest daughters, she compounds with the past for all its pains, its desperate despair, its hard usage of herself. She does not mind her altered face and figure, the grey hair, the age which has come too soon. Her work is done; she has made a happy home, and its fruit is before her intact.

TOO MUCH SUGAR.—A mother often complains that her child is troubled greatly with sour stomach, but this case is no longer mysterious when the mother, to quiet the little one so that she can continue her account of the case, sets down before her a little dish of sugar, from which the child may help itself. Most mothers would give candy or a cookie instead, though some feed their children lumps of sugar from the bowl believing that the children need sugar, and might better have it in that form than in any other. In any case of this kind there is a very frequent call for water.

Do you know how vinegar is made? You can get plenty of it by simply mixing sugar or molasses with water and keeping it warm. A sour taste in the mouth after eating sweets, is of very common occurrence. It is the acid caused by the fermentation of the sugar left in the mouth, with the saliva that causes the decay of children's teeth—this and the lack of bone-forming material in the daily food. Vinegar "eats" lime, as one can tell by leaving an egg in vinegar. Bits of sugar or candy left to ferment among the teeth destroy their enamel as do pickles. The child that is fed on sweets naturally craves pickles as an antidote, but well-fed children are contented with plain, nourishing food if properly prepared and sufficiently varied. Many imagine that all children should have free access to both sugar and pickles in order to supply what they suppose to be natural cravings, and to prevent thefts of sugar from the family bowl. A mistaken policy.—American Agriculturist.

FURNACE. Read Dan. 3.

Behold I have refined thee, but not with silver; I have chosen thee in the furnace of affliction. Isa. 48: 10.

1. A furnace is very hot. Dan. 3: 15–25; 1 Pet. 4: 12.
2. The furnace softens iron. 2 Chron. 33: 12, 13; Hosea 5: 15.
3. The refiner purifies silver in the furnace. Mal. 3: 3; Pro. 25: 4.
4. The furnace tries gold. Job 23: 10; 1 Pet. 1: 7.
5. Hardens clay. Jer. 5: 3; Ex. 9: 34, 35.
6. Consumes fuel. John 15: 6; 1 Cor. 3: 12–15.—Notes for Bible Study.

GEORGE WAGNER, CALLED CARPENTARIUS.

When the bright light of the Gospel, which shone from Wittenberg, filled all Germany, its rays also penetrated Bavaria. On account of the great corruption existing in the church of Rome, all those who were anxious for their salvation heard the pure Gospel with joy. Also the Dukes of Bavaria were at first adherents of the pure evangelical doctrine. Under the influence of the bishops, however, their inclination towards the Word of God was changed into enmity. As early as the year 1523, at Munich, a baker was beheaded by order of Duke William. Many other martyrs of the faith followed. At Landsberg nine men were burned to death. At Munich twenty-nine men were put to death by drowning. Three others with their wives were burned at the stake, because they would not give up their Lutheran faith and become Roman Catholics. On August 16, 1527, the noble martyr Leonhart Kaiser, who in so many respects reminds us of Huss, was put to death by fire. He was repeatedly heard to say: "Jesus I am thine, receive and save me." In the same year in which Kaiser attained the martyr's crown, George Wagner was compelled to lay down his life because he would not deny the truth. He was pastor at Emmeringen in Bavaria, a man full of evangelical faith, who with joyful heart proclaimed the Gospel. His heart rested where the heart of a Christian who desires to be saved ought to rest, in Christ. Early in the year 1527 he was arrested and cast into the Falken Tower at Munich. Sentenced to be burned at the stake, he was led to the place of execution on the 8th of February, 1527. Several monks appeared desiring to accompany the martyr and to comfort him in their manner. George asked them to desist and to return to their cloisters, as he could not use that which they desired to teach and with which they wished to comfort him. Accompanied by the sheriff he reached the place of execution. Here every effort was put forth to compel him to give up his Lutheran faith. But George remained firm and unshaken. One person said to him: "My friend George, are you not afraid of the death you are about to suffer? Would you not rather be free and return to your wife and children?"

Tender bonds had been touched by these questions. George did not deny this, but he knew One who was more to him than wife and children. Hence he replied: "If the judge should set me free, to whom could I hasten rather than to my dearly beloved wife and to my children?" "Recant," said he, "and you shall be set at liberty." "No," said George, "my wife and children are indeed so dear to me that I would not give them to the Duke of Bavaria for all his land and people, money and property, yet I love God much more; for his sake I gladly leave them." Another then asked him: "George, do you as firmly believe in God your Lord as you confess to do with your mouth?" "It would be very difficult for me," said George, "yea, it would be impossible to suffer death, if I did not with all my heart believe what I confess with the mouth. For I well knew that I would have to suffer for Christ's sake, if I should confess and follow him. O my God, where a man's treasure is, there is also his heart."

Then the preacher of the cathedral said: "George, if you consider it necessary that any one should pray for you after your death, I will hold a mass for the redemption of your soul." George replied: "As long as my soul is in this my body, so long pray to the Son of God for me, that he may grant me true patience, humility, and a Christian faith that will enable me the more steadfastly to endure these torments. But when the body and soul have parted I no longer need any prayers."

The executioner thereupon tied the noble martyr to the stake. Then George opened his mouth and explained to the people several points of the Christian faith. Several pious Christians approached him with the request, that when in the fire he would give some sign by which they could know his faith. He answered, this shall be the sign, that, as long as I can open my mouth, I will confess the name of Jesus Christ."

So firm was this man in the faith. His faith made him joyful and strong. A short time before his death he cried, "This day I will confess my God before all the world!" When the executioner tied a little sack filled with powder to his neck, he said: "In the name of the Father, and of the Son and of the Holy Ghost." To a friend who was present, he said, "Good night." When the fire reached him he cried with a loud voice, "Jesu, Jesu!" And when the executioner pushed him with a hook he was heard to repeat several times the sweet name of Jesus. And thus he died. This occurred in the city of Munich in Bavaria, Feb. 8, 1527.

But what did the Roman Catholic church gain by thus putting great numbers of the faithful witnesses of evangelical truth to death amid the bloodiest and most horrible tortures? The blood of these faithful evangelical Lutheran martyrs has become a seed which testifies more loudly for the truth than any mere words could have done. These tribulations have only increased and strengthened the ranks of the confessors and warriors of God.—Church Messenger.

NOT TRUSTWORTHY.

One afternoon a gentleman was shown into Mr. Lamar's library. "Mr. Lamar," asked the visitor, "do you know a lad by the name of Gregory Bassett?" "I guess so," replied Mr. Lamar, with a smile. "That is the young man," he added, nodding toward Gregory. "A bright boy, I should judge," commented the visitor, looking over the top of his glasses. "He applied for a clerkship in my mill and referred me to you. His letter of application shows that he is a good penman. How is he at figures?" "Rapid and correct," was the reply. "That's good! Honest, is he?" "Oh, yes," answered Mr. Lamar. "The work is not hard, and he will be rapidly promoted, should he deserve it. Oh! one question more, Mr. Lamar; is the boy trustworthy?" "I regret to say that he is not," was the grave reply. "Eh?" cried the visitor, "Then I don't want him." That ended the interview. "O uncle!" cried Gregory, bursting into tears. He had set his heart upon obtaining the situation, and was very much disappointed in the result. "Gregory," I could not deceive the gentleman," Mr. Lamar said, in a low tone, more regretful than stern. "You are not trustworthy, and it is a serious failing; nay, a fault rather. Three instances occurred, within as many weeks, which sorely tried my patience, and cost me loss of time and money."

Mr. Lamar's tone changed into one of reproach, and his face grew dark with displeasure. "I gave you some money to deposit in bank," he resumed. "You loitered until the bank was closed, and my note went to protest. One evening I told you to close the gate at the barn. You neglected to do so. The colt got out through the night, fell into a quarry and broke its leg. I had to shoot the pretty little thing to put an end to its suffering." Gregory lifted his hand in a humiliated way. "Next I gave you a letter to mail. You loitered to watch a man with a tame bear. 'The nine o'clock mail will do,' you thought. But it did not, being a way mail and not a through mail. On the following day I went fifty miles to keep the appointment I had made. The gentleman was not there to meet me, because he had not received my letter. I lost my time, and missed all the benefit of what would have been to me a very profitable transaction. It is not too late for you to reform, and unless you do reform your life will prove a failure." The lesson was not lost upon Gregory. He succeeded in getting rid of his heedless ways, and became prompt, precise, trustworthy.—Sunday School Times.

USEFUL ELEPHANTS.

In the town of Maulmain, in Burmah, the whole business of moving timber is done by elephants. There are many large timber-yards at Maulmain; indeed, it has always been famed for its exports of teak logs, which are cut in the forests upon the banks of the Salween, and then floated, sometimes hundreds of miles, down to the capital. In these timber-yards elephants are employed in drawing, stacking, and shifting the immense teak logs, some of them weighing as much as two tons.

A log that forty men could scarcely move, the elephant will quietly lift upon his tusks, and holding it there with his trunk, will carry it to whatever part of the yard his driver directs. They will also, using trunk, feet and tusks, pile the huge timbers as evenly and correctly as one could wish. They will select and pick out particular timbers from the center of a stack or heap of more than a hundred simply at the command of the driver. The huge beasts are directed by the mahouts, or drivers by spoken orders, pressure of the feet on their necks, and by the use of the aubus, or elephant goad.

It usually requires a year or a year and a half to teach them the "lumber business," and when thoroughly taught they are worth from 500 rupees ($250) upward, according to their abilities. Sometimes an animal breaks his tusks through being forced to carry an excessive weight by a stupid or brutal driver, though the elephant knows his own power, and generally refuses to lift more than his tusks can safely bear. If these should be broken off close to the head death would ensue; if only cracked, they are hooped about with iron bands, and are thus rendered serviceable for many years.—Harper's Young People.

TEMPERANCE.

PROHIBITION'S COMING.

BY J. L. BARLOW.

There's a cry from countless thousands, on the viewless air upborne;
Out from sad and breaking hearts, of ev'ry joy bereft and shorn,
But we have a song, a glad content shall bring to those who mourn;
"Prohibition's coming on!"

CHORUS:—Glory, glory, hallelujah,
Glory, glory, hallelujah,
Glory, glory, hallelujah,
That Law comes marching on.

For the God who rules supreme o'er party strife, has heard the wail;
And by his Almightiness has sworn, "my vengeance shall not fail;
For I'll thresh the rummies and their allies with my pounding flail;
Prohibition's saving Law."

CHORUS:— That Law comes marching on.

"Ho! ye dumb and heartless churchmen, in the pulpit or the pew!
Has humanity no claims for service, on such men as you,—
And the Christ, no crosses to be borne—no work for you to do?"
Prohibition loudly calls!

CHORUS:— Yes, Prohibition calls!

Christians can you vote to license men to slay your lov'd and best;
Vote for party, when your party bides the liquor men's behest—
Vote to make your fellows here, and in eternity, unblest,
While God's Law is marching on?

CHORUS:— His Law comes marching on.

Up, ye freemen, arm you for the fight—the fight so well begun;
And no weapon e'er lay down, till final victory is won;
And our land is lighted with a glow, more brilliant than the sun,
By that Prohibition Law.

CHORUS:— That Law shall surely come.

THE REASON.

Mr. Joseph Medill, editor of the Chicago Tribune, was before the congressional committee on labor and education last week, and made some statements which workingmen would do well to heed. He said, among other things: "I have rarely known a steady, sober, industrious man, who saved his surplus earnings and prudently invested them, but attained independence before old age; and I have never known a workman, no matter what might be his wages, who freely indulged his appetite for liquor and smoke that ever made any headway. This sort of people always remain poor and dissatisfied, complain of their 'bad luck,' and allege they are cheated in the division of the profits produced by capital and labor. Those who have closely investigated the subject estimate that the money spent by the wages classes in our cities and towns on intoxicating drinks exceeds $400,000,000 per annum, and to this enormous sum must be added $100,000,000 for cigars and $100,000,000 for useless amusements and gambling, making a total of $600,000,000 a year squandered by the discontented employe classes of the urban population. The money thus thrown away on liquor by the wage-workers in the last ten years would have provided each family with a home free of rent, thereby emancipating all of them from servitude to landlords. If loaned out at interest it would now amount to the enormous sum of $5,000,000,000, and if invested in railroad stocks and bonds during the last ten years it would have transferred the ownership of every single mile of railway in the United States to the labor classes who squander their wages on drink. Drink is the evil progenitor of the worst ills which the poor man encounters, and is the chief cause of the bad luck which keeps him in poverty. The wage classes cannot support in idleness a quarter of a million of saloon keepers and their bar tenders and families and pay the rent of their dramshops, and hope to prosper themselves. No trades-union combinations, or Knights of Labor strikes to force up wages or shorten the day's work, will enable them to do it, and no relief that political legislation can give will essentially improve their condition in the absence of the virtues of temperance and economy, the corner-stones of prosperity and independence." There is little use in trying to increase the wages of wokingmen who are willing to spend such enormous sums for vicious appetites. If they should receive higher wages they would pay out more for drink and for the indulgence of the passion for play and for gambling. Therefore, to cure the ills of the laboring man, the ax of reform must first be laid at the root of his trouble—the habit of drinking intoxicating liquors. It is singular that the editor of the Tribune does not see that the radical cure is the prohibition of the sale and manufacture of intoxicating beverages. High license may reduce the number of saloons, but those who pay the increased sum will study new methods of advancing the traffic, so as to realize out of an enlarged business the sum paid into the public treasury to secure the right to sell at all.—Northwestern Christian Advocate.

Here is a little incident with a point: "A little boy—whose father neglected the duty of family prayer—spent some time with his pious relatives, where morning and evening devotion was carefully observed, and religious instruction imparted—remarked, 'We haven't got any God at my papa's house,'" There are many such homes.

THE CHURCHES.

—A Luther memorial meeting is to be held in Farwell Hall, Chicago, on Sabbath afternoon next a 3 P. M. All the churches and pastors of the city are invited. The Rev. Dr. F. W. Conrad, editor of the Lutheran Observer, Philadelphia, Pa., is to make the chief address in English. There will be brief remarks, too, in the German and Scandinavian languages, and Luther's "Battle-Hymn" is to be sung in four tongues at the same time.

—The Rev. Thomas Craven, who has been in this country about a year, will sail for India on his return to missionary work Nov. 24. He will leave Chicago about the middle of the month.

—The Y. M. C. A. of the United States and Canada request that Nov. 11–17 be observed as a special season of prayer for young men. They issue a series of topics for that week, and suggest daily religious services.

—The English correspondent of the Christian Worker says: "The Friends' foreign missionaries in Madagascar have at length got letters through to England. They say the natives are arming and training for the fight, but are also praying for themselves and their enemies. The demand for religious books has almost ceased, and schools are greatly neglected, while, on the other hand bands of women parade the capital chanting songs to the false gods of the land. The sword and the Bible never agree. War always hinders missionary effort. Our Friends, however, fear no evil for themselves so long as the present Prime Minister, who is also the new Queen's husband, retains his power, and they are longing for the arrival of the missionaries who are now prevented from leaving England."

—Young lady Baptist missionaries are continually being sent out. Two have recently sailed under the auspices of the Society of the West, Miss Hardin and Miss Johnson, and are now on the ocean. Miss Whitman, under appointment of the Society of the East, passed through Chicago a few days since en route for Tokio, Japan.

—Bishop Samuel Fallows assisted last Sabbath at the opening services of the new Grace Reformed Episcopal church in the northwestern part of Chicago; but there was a protest entered against his appearance, because of his Freemasonry, by a prominent member of the church and of the vestry.

—Captain Bray, commanding the American Board's ship, Morning Star, delivered an address in Oberlin, August 26. He has commanded the little missionary ship for five consecutive years. On his first voyage out from Honolulu he sailed in company with eleven other vessels, all of which have since been lost, while God's care over the mission ship, in delivering her many times from imminent danger of being shipwrecked, is remarkable.—Faith Missionary.

—Miss Wheeler, a missionary in India, who was so sick as to be ordered home, has been restored to health in answer to prayer.

—The Holland Evangelical Temperance Society of Chicago intends to conduct a vigorous campaign this winter. It is making arrangements for a series of meetings, and expects to be able to add the attractions of vocal and instrumental music to those addresses by carefully selected speakers.

—Only ninety years ago the only subscription list raised in England to carry the Gospel to the heathen amounted to $65.50.

—There are forty-eight woman's missionary societies, of which thirty-seven are in this country, four in Canada, four in England, two in Germany, and one in Sweden.

—The missionary societies of all denominations in London, have an income of $7,000,000, and the Bible and tract societies of the same city have an income of $2,000,000 more.

—The latest statistics show that there are in the Presbyterian church (North) 600,725 members, 5,218 ministers, 5,860 churches, and that $9,661,493 were contributed the past year for church purposes, of which $7,139,934 was of a local character.

—Rev. Wm. Johnston, of College Springs, Iowa, was granted a month's vacation by his congregation some weeks ago. This he proposes to spend in part as delegate of the General Assembly to the Synod of the Associate Reformed Church South, now meeting at Chesterville, S. C. There was an accession of seventeen to the membership of his church at the last communion.

—The declination of the call to the Tabernacle Presbyterian church at Indianapolis, Indiana, by Dr. Hanna, is the strongest evidence of his warm attachment to his congregation here, and high regard for the community at large. Immediately before the sermon Sabbath morning, the doctor, in referring to the matter said that he trusted that none were sorry that he concluded to remain, and that if they were as well pleased with him as he was with them, they would remain together a good while. The doctor said he hoped it would be understood that there was no fault in his fidelity; that as in the past, so in the future he expected to remain a United Presbyterian. In the evening, just before the service, Mr. Robt. A. Wilson arose and proposed the following resolutions which were adopted:

WHEREAS, Our pastor, Rev. T. H. Hanna, D.D., has received a call from a large and influential congregation in a neighboring city to become their pastor at a greatly increased salary; and, whereas, without having been offered any pecuniary inducements, he announced to us this morning that he had declined that offer; and at the same time expressed his entire confidence in us as a people, his joy and happiness in remaining with us, and his hopes that we might not regret his decision, but be likewise joyful; therefore be it

Resolved, That we hereby express our great joy in and unbounded gratitude for the conclusion to which he has arrived; and that we also extend to him our sincere love, our supreme confidence, and our universal esteem, and at his request of this morning, we will endeavor in the future to be more closely united in the great work of saving souls, which thing seems to be the desire of his heart and the burden of his life.

After the adoption of the resolutions, Dr. Hanna made some affecting remarks, expressing the hope that both pastor and people would work together in winning souls to Jesus.—Monmouth Atlas.

—Within the past two years in the Telugu Mission the increase in Christian adherents has been over 1,500. Mr. Hodges writes: "The great hope for the future, under God, is in the now full and flourishing schools for the high-caste girls. Without the women India will never become Christian." Had the young men of India, now panting for the truth, the sympathy of their wives and sisters, we should see history repeat itself, and a nation born in a day.

—Adana, Turkey, is reported to be so changed by the recent great revival there in connection with the mission work of the American Board that it would hardly be recognized. It was expected that 100 converts would be received at the June communion. During the last six months the sales of the Holy Scriptures have been three times as great as they had ever been before, and many in the Armenian church have been awakened to new spiritual life.

—An English bishop from India, recently visiting Persia, writes: "Inquiry appears to me almost more generally alive in Persia than in India. More Mullahs seem nearer to yielding their hearts to the Saviour than I have seen in the same space (and much longer space) of time in India. Political prejudices and social bonds seem to act with far less force; and the Mullahs cannot count, as once, on the blind submission of kings and princes to their dictates. The sale of Bibles I have seen, and the fearless, open acceptance of them, by Mullahs, especially, has astonished me."

—A correspondent writing to the London Times says: "It is an admitted fact that among the clergy of the Church of England there is an amount of personal poverty simply appalling. It is, I believe, also admitted that to the hard-working, thoroughly efficient and intellectual clergy disestablishment would, in a pecuniary sense, prove a blessing instead of a curse; for purchase would cease, and the people themselves would in some form or other have more power in the appointment of clergy to livings than they now have."

—The venerable Aldin Grout, after a life of missionary service among the Zulus, is spending his old age at Springfield, Mass. On Sunday, September 2, he reached the age of fourscore years, and, on the following day, greeted his friends and neighbors who brought him their congratulations. One of three missionaries, Mr. Grout commenced his labors among the Zulus in 1835, when they had no written language, no knowledge of God, no words which could express spiritual thoughts—all naked savages. He has lived to see Natal a Christian colony, with a good degree of civilization, the outward marks of which are houses, churches, school buildings and a well clad people.

—The church of Christ is not bound to furnish amusements to her young people. She has been organized for another and nobler purpose. They are not to be constantly bribed, like spoiled children with confectioneries and convivialities.—Sandy Lake News.

CHRISTIAN WORKERS FOR INDIA.—Is there a more needy field in all the world than India? For more than 100 years Christian workers, male and female, have been imported from Europe and America; 600 or more have died in the harness and are buried beneath the Indian soil. About 700 foreign workers still toil in India. But what are these among 250,000,000. To be sure we have twice or three times this number of indigenous workers; but what are these among so many. There is hardly a corner in India to-day which is not open to the free preaching of the Gospel of Jesus. The harvest truly is white but the laborers are so few. Worse than this such a vast number of those already in the ranks are so purely hirelings that did their salaries stop to-morrow a large number of them would migrate at once to other parts and possessions, so little is their trust in the Lord of the harvest, so little love have they for souls fast going to ruin. We candidly avow our fear that our apparent force in India to-day is not worth half face value. But until we begin to get a force of Christian workers working for Christ and the salvation of souls devoid of the hireling spirit, we see little of promise for the salvation of India. We are almost ready to conclude we shall never see the desired state of affairs brought about by existing agencies. The Lord must by some stupendous providence or spiritual outpouring thrust out a race of Indian Christian workers who are so in travail for the salvation of India that they will spread salvation like a wave of fire. Missionaries, native or foreign, who would throw up to-morrow if their salaries stopped, are not the men to settle the problem of evangelizing India. We are praying and looking for a generation of Christian workers who feel "woe is me if I preach not the Gospel," whose faith sees an all sufficient supply of grace and bread in the promises of the Lord Jesus. Christian workers fully saved and fully anointed will evangelize India speedily.—India Watchman.

GOSPEL WORK IN LONDON.

The evangelists Moody and Sankey, who have spent three or four weeks in Ireland are now in London and will remain in that city during the winter. The London Christian World gives this account of the plan of work in that city: "Thus early everything is in readiness for their visit to the metropolis, which may extend over six months. Without any public appeal the sum of £6,000 has been subscribed by a few friends to meet preliminary expenses. The services will be held in movable iron halls, each capable of seating 5,000 persons. The first of these structures is actually built, and ready for occupation, on the green spot close to Highbury, and known as the Priory, and a second hall is in process of erection at Wandsworth. The services at Islington will commence on the 4th of November, and terminate on the 19th. Messrs. Moody and Sankey will then go to Wandsworth, for it is the intention to alternate between the north and south side of the Thames. As soon as the evangelists betake themselves to Wandsworth the hall at Islington will be taken down and run up at Stepney, on a site cleared for the purpose, in one of the lowest quarters of London. Then in turn the Wandsworth hall will be removed to Clapham, the places next in order to be visited being Stratford and New Cross. There will be afternoon and evening meetings at these halls, and should a noon prayer meeting be started, as in all probability one will be, it will not be conducted by Mr. Moody, who at length has come to find that he is only human nature after all, and cannot go on for an indefinite period holding three meetings daily. The halls being smaller than those in use on the occasion of the previous visit of Messrs. Moody and Sankey, an effort will be made to prevent the regular attendance of people who may again be desirous of following the evangelists from place to place. Tickets will be distributed in the immediate locality of the hall, and the holders of these will have the preference of admission."

The Missionary Review states that fifty American denominations, numbering 115,436 ministers and 10,286,331 members, contributed last year for foreign missions $3,086,587.27, being a trifle less than thirty cents each. This is a gain over the preceding year of over $89,000. There was in the same year a gain in home membership of 128,389. Over 2,200 foreign missionaries are sustained and 8,678 native helpers. The membership in the mission churches is 222,906; a gain during the year of 14,440. We thus see that the gain in the home churches was only about one per cent., while the gain in the foreign field was almost seven per cent. In view of these facts who shall say that money and labor spent in mission work is not well repaid? The sum contributed is indeed a "magnificent example of true Christian benevolence, but how many professed Christians have had no part in this noble work? Every Christian who has any income should devote a generous part to this Gospel work. The American Board, the Oberlin Faith Mission, the Wheaton Anti-masonic Mission, and the various denominational missions open a wide door to every giver. Let us hasten to obey his word, "till he come."

THE PUREST IS THE BEST.
In the selection of SUNDAY-SCHOOL PAPERS, the most important point to be considered is the moral tone of the subject matter. If this is of a questionable character, the papers should be shunned, no matter how large, how attractive, or how low the price. Such papers are COSTLY AT ANY PRICE.
The country is being flooded with S. S. literature that is largely composed of what may be properly termed "RELIGIOUS FICTION," the tendency of which is to create a distaste for sound reading aud foster an appetite for fiction of a more deleterious character.
The engravings of these papers are equally objectionable. In many cases a lady or girl dressed in the height of fashion is made the HEROINE OF A STORY, thus putting the highest sanction to extravagance and pride. With such instructors in our Sunday-schools we cannot expect the children to grow up with a love for sound literature and with correct ideas of Christian propriety. With a view of supplying S. S. papers, of a pure and elevating character, the publishers are issuing
FOUR MONTHLY PAPERS,
They are FREE FROM FICTION, and the cuts are chosen with great care. While they are thus carefully edited, they are not lacking in attractiveness. They are well printed on beautiful tinted paper. The children are delighted with them. The very low price at which this line of S. S. papers is issued, places them within the reach of even schools of limited means

IN BRIEF.

The Rothschilds own $400.000,000 of United States bonds, or nearly one-quarter of all the bonds that are out. They are said to have invested thus heavily, for the reason that the political and social systems of Europe are in an uncertain condition. Vanderbilt is still the largest American holder of United States bonds, though the amount in his name has decreased during the last year from $50,000,000 $37,000,000. Mrs. A. T. Stewart has $30,000,000, and Mr. Flood, of California, $15,000,000.

Miss Nellie Whitney, of Kingston, N. Y., recently had a novel experience in snake-killing. Miss Whitney was going out calling, and on opening the front door that leads out on a piazza, she was startled to see a big snake facing her and hissing. She shut the door in a hurry, and then, stopping to think for a moment, made up her mind that if she opened the door a little the snake would come in, and then, shutting the door with a slam, she could squeeze it to death. Her idea was speedily put in practice, and the reptile was killed in the novel way she had planned. The snake measured four feet in length.

A marvel in the way of a mountain railway has just been completed in Switzerland. It starts about a quarter of a mile on the Vevay side of the Castle of Chillon, and runs to a point called Glion. It is 700 meters (2,275 feet) in length and has a gradient of 57 per cent, which makes it the steepest railway in the world. It goes apparently straight up the side of the mountain. The descent inspires terror, as the cars seem to rush tumultuously down the mountain side, while the ascent seems to be tedious and slow, yet this is all apparent, as the pace in both cases is the same. The locomotion is brought about entirely by water power, and its constructor is Mr. Riggenbach, the inventor of the Righi railway system which has always been a curiosity since it was built. This mountain railway is almost as long as that of Mount Pisgah, in Pennsylvania, which is 2,322 feet in length, with a gradient of 33 per cent.—Demorest's Monthly.

On the evening of Aug. 27 an extraordinary disturbance occurred in Colombo harbor. The sea subsided unexpectedly about six feet. It receded from ten to fifteen feet. Owing to the velocity of the outward current the stern moorings of several large vessels gave way. The tide continued to rise and fall for a half hour, when the water resumed its natural state. This disturbance was caused undoubtedly, by the volcanic eruption at the Straits of Sunda.

Information has been forwarded to the London police authorities by banking companies that there are upwards of 20, 000 spurious Australian and other sovereigns in circulation. These base coins are somewhat more difficult to detect than the spurious ones usually are, inasmuch as in addition to being of superior make and finish, they contain about 7s. 6d. worth of gold.

An Albany firm have found a use for tin scraps. They make wrought plate dovetails for stove legs, and utilize from six to eight tons of scraps every month for this purpose. The articles made are small pieces of tin of peculiar shape, which are used by stove-founders to secure a perfect dovetail on stove bottoms, and thus do away with all fitting of legs to their places.

President Seelye, of Amherst College, says that a four years' scientific course was organized which a student could pursue with no knowledge of Greek, aud only a slight knowledge of Latin. After an experience of ten ycars it has been found that the best scientific students havc, in every year, without a single exception, been the classical students, and the collegc has become so thoroughly convincecl that the best work in science is to be done only on the basis of a thorough grounding in the classics, that it has discontinued its scientific as separate from its classical course.

HORSFORD'S ACID PHOSPHATE.

Admirable Results in Fevers.

Dr. J. J. RYAN, St. Louis, Mo., says: "I invariably prescribe it in fevers; also in convalescence from wasting and debilitating diseases, with admirable results. I also find it a tonic to an enfeebled condition of the genital organs."

The question of drying up the Zuyder Zee is being actively discussed in Holland. The Royal Institute of Engineers purposes holding shortly a public meeting of their body at Amsterdam to thoroughly examine the scheme for carrying out this idea by connecting by strong dykes all the islands that form its outer fringe, and so, permanently excluding all inflow from the North Sea.

The wood pavement is to be given up in London. It has not only failed to realize the promised advantages, but has led, according to Prof. Tyndall's report, to serious affections of the eyes and lungs. By continual watering the wood became saturated with the nastiness of the London streets, and then, under the influence of the hot sun, gave forth a species of dust which was pernicious. The old macadam system is to be restored.

Two Georgia farmers near Savannah, who have started a rose-farm of three acres, have this year sold 220,000 trees in the North for from $10 to $20 a hundred, and have had orders for 50,000 which they could not fill. They believe that Georgia has a better climate for this industry than the south of France.

American companies have built over $30,000,000 worth of railroads in Mexico, and completed over 1,600 miles of track. The English lines consist of 353 miles, and the Mexican roads 635 miles.

A street railroad car was lately propel led by electricity for thirty miles through the principal streets of Paris, without any accident or frightening of horses. It was brought to a standstill without any trouble within a second, and the speed was nine and one-half miles an hour on level ground and five and one-half on an ascent. Its estimated cost is one-half that of horse-cars.

DR. JOHN BULL'S
Smith's Tonic Syrup
FOR THE CURE OF
FEVER and AGUE
Or CHILLS and FEVER.
AND ALL MALARIAL DISEASES.

The proprietor of this celebrated medicine justly claims for it a superiority over all remedies ever offered to the public for the SAFE, CERTAIN, SPEEDY and PERMANENT cure of Ague and Fever, or Chills and Fever, whether of short or long standing. He refers to the entire Western and Southern country to bear him testimony to the truth of the assertion that in no case whatever will it fail to oure if the directions are strictly followed and carried out. In a great many cases a single dose has been sufficient for a oure, and whole families have been cured by a single bottle, with a perfect restoration of the general health. It is, however, prudent, and in every case more certain to oure, if its use is continued in smaller doses for a week or two after the disease has been checked, more especially in difficult and long-standing cases. Usually this medicine will not require any aid to keep the bowels in good order. Should the patient, however, require a cathartic medicine, after having taken three or four doses of the Tonic, a single dose of BULL'S VEGETABLE FAMILY PILLS will be sufficient.

The genuine SMITH'S TONIC SYRUP must have DR. JOHN BULL'S private stamp on each bottle. DR. JOHN BULL only has the right to manufacture and sell the original JOHN J. SMITH'S TONIC SYRUP, of Louisville, Ky. Examine well the label on each bottle. If my private stamp is not on each bottle do not purchase, or you will be deceived.

NIGHTS IN A BAR-ROOM

T. S Arthur's great temperance book, complete and illustrated. By mail, 5c each; 50c per doz. By express, $3.50 per 100.

THE LIQUOR TRAFFIC THE GREAT SOURCE OF CRIME.

Leaves from the diary of an old lawyer.—By Hon. A. B Richmond, author of "Court and Prison," etc. A book of intense interest, rivaling the famous "Diary of a Physician," and, in its truthful, terrible pictures of the power and crime of intemperance, excelling the well-known "Ten Nights in a Bar-room." The temperance issue of the present time is Shall prohibition be partial or entire? Shall the branches of the death-bearing tree be pruned and trimmed, or shall the tree itself be cut down and its stump be torn up by the roots? The answer of "Leaves from the Diary" is, "Cut down the tree, tear up the roots, leave not a shoot or shred behind." It is certainly a very strong and eloquent volume Complete edition on fine, heavy paper, with colored lithograph of Sewall's stomach plates By mail, 30c each, $3 per doz. By express, $20 per 100. Abridged edition, by mail, 15c; $1.25 per doz. By express, $9 per 100.

THE LIQUOR TRAFFIC AND THE SOBER CITIZEN.

An able and telling work, by Rev. J. H. Sherman, which brings out the effects of the liquor traffic in a new light. The following are some of the commendations of the first edition

"The author drives the nails of conviction through and clinches them."—N. Y. Christian Advocate.

"Speakers and workers in the temperance field will find valuable aid in this pamphlet. It is crowded with convincing facts"—Zion's Herald

"One of the ablest reviews of the drink curse ever issued from the press."—The Morning and Day of Reform.

"The arguments are put in telling form"—Judge Pittman.

New revised and enlarged edition. By mail, 10c each, $1 per doz By express, $6 per 100.

DRINKS FROM DRUGS.

A startling exposure of the liquor traffic, by El. Johnson. A book that cannot fail to arouse the American people to the gigantic swindle now being perpetrated. The writer was offered $10,000 by a leading brewer to keep still. Liquor not only doctored, but made entirely from drugs. Extracts from a whole library of secret books, giving receipts for making and doctoring; advertisements of essences, fac similies of labels, engravings, etc. etc. Claret, port, sherry, champagne, whisky, brandy, gin, rum, etc, all out of one barrel, and made at less than 25 cents a quart. Wine that never saw grape juice; cider that never saw apples; beer factories in place of breweries, fine cream ale without barley or brewing; whisky from arsenic; millions of gallons of liquor that pays no revenue tax. The farmer's corn and barley "all in your eye." A wholesale liquor store in a ten-foot square cellar; more French wine sold in New York City than is produced in the whole of France. By mail, 10c each; $1 per doz. By Express, $6 per 100.

For $2.50 The same style of binding, medium size. Postage, 12c.

THE PERSIAN SEAL BINDING

Is very handsome and durable. It is this style of binding which is so much admired by Bible readers. Please notice particularly that these Bibles are kid lined and silk sewed. Many Bibles in this style outwardly are lined with black paper and sewed with thread in place of silk.

LEVANT MOROCCO BINDING.

The Persian Seal bindings are the best kept by most Bible dealers, and usually pass for the best teachers' Bibles made; and, to all appearance, they are so. There is, however, a better wearing binding, of which the Persian Seal is a good imitation; this is known as "Levant Morocco." In all respects the Levant morocco Bible corresponds with the Persian Seal description, except as to leather used for cover which, though looking like the Persian Seal, is stronger, and will last a lifetime.

Prices on genuine Levant Morocco bindings:

For $4.50—Small size. Postage, 10c.
For $5.50—Medium size. Postage, 12c.
For $8.00—Large size. Postage, 20cts.

Handsome Gift Bibles at Low Prices.

For 45c. Embossed morocco cover, gilt edges, gilt title on back. Very neat and durable. This is the handsomest 45c. gift Bible we have ever seen. Postage, 5c.

For 70c. Similar size and style of binding to our 60-cent Bible; square corners, brass bound, with clasp and handsome tasseled book-mark; also medallion inserted on side in gold and red.

This was a new importation with the fall of 1882, and a very pretty design. It should be seen to be appreciated. (See cut.) Postage, 6c.

For 60c. Morocco cover, brass bound and plated, with handsome gilt clasp and gilt edges; two patterns; square and round corners. Exquisite lettering on side; printed in large clear type. Bibles no better are sold as high as $1 and $2. Postage, 6c.

FARM NOTES.

CASTOR OIL FOR SHOE-LEATHER.—We have several times, in past years, commended castor-oil as a water-proofing for boots and shoes; and we are glad to quote the following, to the same effect, from so good an authority as that oracle of hunters and sportsmen, the London Field:—

There is one simple article which will render any decently made boot thoroughly impervious. It is nothing more nor less than cold-drawn castor-oil "pure and simple" It is best applied before a moderate fire. The boots to be dressed should be quite clean and dry; and especial care should be given to the welt and the tongues, and their stitching to the upper leathers. I generally begin by pouring the oil from the bottle all around the welt so that the angle between the sole and upper leather is quite filled with oil, and then proceed all over the boot, including the edges of the soles, rubbing it in with the hand. When one is done have a turn at the other, and so alternately till you have got in about a tablespoonful and a half to each boot. The tongues, being thinner leather, should be quite saturated. Subsequent dressings will not require so much oil. I have never found anything to touch this as a water-proof dressing: the gelatinous oil seems to effectually stop every pore in the leather. There is another advantage for those who are natty in such matters; the boots will soon take a good (common blacking) polish,—so much so, that a man may, if he likes, water-proof his ordinary walking boots for bad weather without spoiling their appearance. With a common walking boot of ordinary thickness apply the oil all over sole. I wear boots so treated, shooting, over thick woollen socks, for from eight to twelve hours a day, without feeling the slightest inconvenience in any way; but they have the chilly feel inseparable from all boots that are oiled in any way.

TREES FOR SHELTER.—Prof. Budd, of Iowa, recommends shelter belts of trees for stock yards and feeding lots. In the outside rows, he says, the quick growing trees, such as cottonwood and willow, may be planted for partial shelter, until the several inner rows of Scotch pine grow up into walls of living green. Only those who have had experience, can have any conception of the real value of the Scotch pine, for the use here indicated. The plants can now be obtained cheaply, they are easy to transplant, and twelve years of growth, with very moderate care, will every time make a wind-break that the owner would not part with for one hundred times its real cost. When the outer rows can be spared, they should be cut away, leaving the evergreen barrier alone in its glory. We would add to the above list of trees, the Austrian pine, an extremely hardy sort, and one which can be had as cheaply as the Scotch, which the professor recommends. With many persons the Austrian is thought more lasting than the Scotch.

HOW TO FEED SHELLED CORN.—Where corn cannot be ground, without too much expense, says the Live Stock Journal, the next best way is to mix the shelled corn with short cut corn stalks, dampen the mass and let it lie a few hours, when the cattle will eat the corn and stalks together, and masticate the corn much better than when fed in the cob. They are obliged to do this in masticating the corn fodder; besides, in this case the corn will be raised with the cud and remasticated, thus giving it the benefit of a second grinding, which it does not have when corn is fed alone. This is a matter of great importance in feeding, and every farmer may do so much since stalk-cutters have been so much improved that a ton can be cut in an hour with a two-horse power cutter. A farmer may have his fodder cut as his grain is threshed, by a traveling machine.

The process of preserving potatoes in Manitoba during the winter season will not soon be adopted by the housewives of the States, but in a region of 40 deg. below zero it does well. It is thus described by a Manitoban:

"The potatoes are boiled in large quantities, peeled and mashed as for the table. They are then packed in barrels and allowed to freeze solid, and a portion is chopped off and put in the oven when wanted for a meal. The process preserves the potatoes in a fine condition for the table."

BUSINESS.

A PRESENT.

Have you thought of making your friend a New Year's present of the Christian Cynosure? It will be sent 14 months, from Nov. 1, 1883, to Jan. 1, 1885, for only $2.00, if ordered before Nov. 15. Can you spend that amount of money in a more acceptable or profitable way than to make sixty visitations to your friend through the agency of your paper? WILL YOU TRY IT?

"FREEMASONRY AT A GLANCE."

An exposition of the first three degrees of Freemasonry in every village for little or no money! How can it be done? By sending to W. I. Phillips, Treasurer N. C. A., for a 32-page pamphlet, containing 40 illustrations with explanations, with the legal attestation of the past master of Keystone Lodge, No. 639, Chicago, as to the correctness of said exposition. We will send, postpaid, from now to first of January, thirty (30) of these pamphlets for one dollar; sixty-five (65) for two dollars, and 165 for five dollars.

Edmund Ronayne says: "One of these pamphlets put in each family will do as much good as a public exposition would do." The way to get them without money is to send new subscriptions for the Cynosure at $2.00 each, receiving for three such subscriptions 36 of the pamphlets exposing the first three degrees of Freemasonry.

Many have written: "Send a lecturer to our place, we need one very much." This is often impossible, but the above plan is much better than no lecture; does not need a church or hall, which often cannot be had; and costs but a fraction of what a lecturer usually costs. Will you see to it that you have one of these lecturers, silent as sunlight and as powerful, in your town. If you cannot afford the dollar or five dollars yourself, you can soon collect from friends for this purpose the needed funds.

N. B. Not less thau thirty sent on the above terms, and only open to January 1, 1884. Single copies 6 cents.

When opiates fail, then try Samaritan Nervine. Its a certain cure for all nervous ailments.

1,800 Organs in October, 1883.

Eighteen hundred organs were shipped from Mayor Beatty's organ factory for the month of October, exclusive of pianos. This is the largest shipment ever made from any organ factory in a single month.—Washington, N. J. Review, Nov. 2, 1883.

THE GOLDEN RULE which claims to be the best $2.00 religious weekly in the world, can be had by actual subscribers to the Cynosure for only $1.00. See particulars inannouncement on page 16.

R. S. & A. P. LACY, old and well-known Pat. ent Attorneys of Washington, D. C., publish quite an interesting volume on the subject of Patents, which is sent free on application.

Played-out Nostrums.

WILL codfish oil, opiates, or inhalation cure a consumptive cough? No! ! ! Reject these; they have been weighed in the balance and found wanting. Try Hale's Honey of Horehound and Tar. Thousands upon thousands are using it. Sold by druggists.

Pike's Toothache Drops cure in one minute.

Cold Winds Chap the Skin.

Glenn's Sulphur Soap softens and reunites it.

Hill's Hair and Whisker Dye, fifty cents

FOLLY.

It's all folly to pay $50 or a $100 for seven degrees in Freemasonry in the Lodge and Chapter when you can send a dollar to the National Christian Association, 221 W. Madison street, Chicago, and get the whole thing by return mail, without being hoodwinked and haltered or having to "put up refreshments" after tedious "initiations."

THE OFFER

made last week of the Cynosure till January 1, 1885, expires on the 15th inst. We make some new ones which are worth accepting by all concerned. PLEASE NOTE.

TO THE 370

subscribers whose time expired in November a special request is hereby given to renew at an early date. To make it easier to attend to this matter at once, every one of the 370 who sends $2.00 cash by DECEMBER 1ST shall have the Cynosure for 1884 the whole year and your servants in the office will send the paper right on from the expiration of the old subscription, so that no number shall be missed. Please do not take trouble to remember this offer, but do your paper the good service to send without delay, so there shall be no need of taxing the memory.

THE LARGEST LIST.

To the friend who sends in the largest list of subscribers for the Cynosure (counted by the year) will be sent a WEBSTER'S UNABRIDGED DICTIONARY.

To the one sending the next largest list will be sent an ANTI-MASONIC LIBRARY.

The third largest list gets a copy of IN THE COILS.

The fourth a copy of HOLDEN WITH CORDS.

Mark these particulars:

1. The offer is good only until January 1, 1884. Every name must be sent before that date.

2. Every one who wishes to compete for one of these premiums must send his name and address to this office, stating the definite purpose to compete.

3. Send in the names as fast as secured, writing the address plainly.

The civil service reform speeds slowly since Congress passed an unwilling and ungracious vote putting the popular demand into some kind of effect. Those saw clearest who said that without any special law the President had it in his power to suppress a large part of the official abuses so justly complained of. Mr. Arthur has just issued an order, amending one of the rules of the Civil Service, which distinctly forbids, in every department and in every post-office and custom house, the appointing power from making any discrimination in appointments on account of any political or religious opinion or affiliation. The modest manner of issuing this mandate justifies the suspicion that it does not mean all it says; otherwise, if enforced, we hope to bid a long and joyful adieu to the political huckster and office-monger. Let the day that sees the last of the tribe be forever celebrated with music and joy, processions and bonfires, ringing of bells and thunder of cannon.

The Luther festival proves how grateful Protestant Christianity can be for a God-sent man. All Germany seemed to join in a psalm of praise Saturday and Sabbath. Majestic statues were unveiled; the voices of immense multitudes, like the sound of many waters, chanted the sublime strains of Luther's battle hymn, that peon of victory snatched from the legion of devils that withstood him on the way to Worms; school children in processions of eighty thousand; a sermon by the Archbishop of York in Westminster Abbey—these were among the remarkable features of the occasion in Europe. In this country the observance was very general. Ten thousand people listened to a sermon at one place in Chicago, while half as many more were turned away. The Roman Catholics also observed the day—as directed by the hierarchy it was a season of fasting and prayer. But why? Have they not also reason to join the jubilee? The corruptions that had fastened upon that church during the Middle Ages would soon have polluted its whole frame-work and made, not reformation, but annihilation a necessity. Luther's work led to a suppression of a thousand abuses, and while Protestant Christianity prevails and conquers the foes of men by the arms of faith it will be impossible that the inquisition and the indulgence system should be revived. To Luther the papacy is much indebted. That system as Luther knew it would not be endured to-day. Let all the world therefore be glad—not for the man, but for the gift of God to the race named Luther.

The uniform and generous feeling of this celebration led Monsignor Capel, the Roman Catholic "proselytizer," to devote two sermons to Luther from a Catholic standpoint in the cathedral at Cincinnati. He plead that the church was holy in its origin, its object, its interior life, and this holiness it had in the sixteenth century, albeit there may have been gross abuses. About this time also great discoveries were made, the Western Continent, the printing press, by men within the Catholic communion. Therefore Luther's work for the world was being already anticipated by the church. The Monsignor argued in the same strain in this city on the relation of Romanism to Republicanism. His sophistries were ably exposed in the leading daily papers (The late criticism of the Cynosure. upon them is thus gladly turned to praise); so sharply, indeed, that Capel wrote a reply and explanation to the Tribune and Times. It is true that great enterprises were undertaken by members of the Catholic church, but they succeeded in spite of the opposition and persecution of the hierarchy. There are unmistakable evidences that the old principles of that church, which were destructive of the independence of the individual, of the family and of the state in the time of Luther, and which the labor of that reformer exposed and overthrew, yet exist, though no longer powerful because their opportunity is gone.

The elections of Tuesday last were in some sections a surprise, and in all of unusual importance. Butler was in the first place buried under a majority of 15,000 in Massachusetts and that mountebank in American politics has no longer any mission. So hope good men. Whatever might have been the favorable outlook for reform in politics under the lead of the American party, had Butlerism become the leading element in our next year's election, our hearts must rejoice that iniquity has been rebuked. Massachusetts has learned a dear lesson for the Butler regime has been an expensive one for the State treasury as well as to the self-repect of the people. They will not care to joke with politics again. In Virginia the election has developed a race war which has a serious meaning, following so soon after the rejection of the Civil Rights law by the Supreme Court. Senator Mahone, the "readjuster" was generally sustained by the colored voters. He was beaten by many thousands. The reports of negro rising, and of white arming have been sadly frequent. The election was conducted in many parts of the State so as to increase the race prejudice. Outbreaks such as occurred at Danville may not be repeated, but the spirit of that affair is roused in other places, and it is the spirit of a tamed tiger who snuffs blood. In New York the phenomenal vote which elected Cleveland and rebuked Conklingism last year is not repeated. The Republicans elect the Secretary of State and have a strong majority in the legislature. The Republican majority in Pennsylvania is as large as that given Hayes.

Babu Chundar Mazoomdar is an expounder of a Hindu theology which sprang into being some fifty years ago—a kind of Protestant movement—called the "Brahmo Somaj." Keshub Chunder Sen who a few years ago was often mentioned by the press, was an eloquent teacher of the new system. He began teaching in 1860 and infused new life into the movement, which is a blind reaching after one god in distinction from the multitudes of objects which the gross idolatry of Hindustan requires. According to Mr. Mazoomdar, who spoke in a Unitarian pulpit here Sabbath morning and in Plymouth Congregationalist church in the evening, the system is an eclectic one, separating from Buddhism, Mohammedanism, Confucianism, Christianity, those principles of monotheism, benevolence, self-sacrifice and purity which are in some measure found in all religions, true and false. With much of the spirit of modern Unitarianism, Jesus is most highly revered, and with so strong a preference that the reformation appears to be a triumph of Christianity; and as such its messenger is welcomed by leaders of the Christian church. But their wisdom must be doubted. While the Brahmo Somaj seeks for a divinity greater, nearer and dearer than a mere creative power, and thus takes a step in advance of the Freemason with his "Grand Architect of the Universe," yet it does not accept Jesus as the Christ, the only way to the Father, rejecting all else for him. As the Inter Ocean says it is "an Indian Summer" religion, beautiful and pleasing for the time, but as unfitted for the changing round of the year of life as are the fine colors of the butterfly for protection in a winter day.

As we stand on this planet between two eternities it behooves us to stand on the side of God.—Joseph Cook.

STRIVING FOR TRUTH.

EXTRACTS TRANSLATED BY PROF. H. A. FISCHER WHEATON COLLEGE, FROM DER REICHSBOTE, BERLIN, OCT. 3, 1883.

The ancient Grecks and Romans were excusable if they approached the Christian religion with the question, "Is it the Truth?"—but, if now, in the face of the Christian history of 1800 years with its blessings, in the midst of the Christian world, this same question is put, it should not be labeled with the proud boast 'Striving for Truth.' To doubt the truth of Christianity is as foolish as to doubt the truth of the light of the sun. As people endeavor to study the wonderful, life-producing power of the sunlight, so let them if they choose, endeavor to search out facts of the renewing, life-awakening power of Christianity; but it is folly to question its divine truth. If searching for truth is to have a practical aim, it should be directed towards making the miracle of sunlight as well as the miracle of Christianity ever more fruitful for the life of the world.

If men after all their bitter experiences in their work without God, will earnestly seek for truth, they will invariably return to him who could say: "I am the truth, I am the life, and I am the light of the world!"—to Christ and his church. While we Christians lay open on the table of the world the Christian religion, with its charter, its confessions, its history, and invite all the world to seek and to investigate, Freemasonry wraps itself in the darkness of secrecy, guards this [secrecy] with terrible oaths of its members, grants to the large mass of these only a very confined look into the secrets, excludes women from them entirely. Thus Freemasonry places itself on the ground of the heathen mysteries.

How little inclination Masons have to let the beams of science and truth fall into their darkness, is proved by events in the German Grand Lodge, recently brought to light in a pamphlet written by the Danish Professor of Church History, Dr. Neilson, on "Freemasonry and Christianity," published in German by Johs. Lehmann, Liepzig. As is well known, Freemasonry has surrounded itself with a mass of legends and myths concerning its origin, its age and the meaning of its symbols, which are only gradually disclosed in the different degrees, so that only very few chosen members, who reach the highest degrees, are initiated into the whole, and so that even the wisest Master Mason is not entirely at home, but, especially in the Swedish, Scotch and French lodges the secret direction of the whole lies in the hands of the "Ordensrath" [supreme council] and chapter.

Now some years ago the Crown Prince of Prussia demanded that the Grand Lodge of Germany, whose Grand Master he was, should cause its historical landmarks to be honestly and thoroughly investigated, so as to prove the genuineness of its teachings and traditions by historic search. But the wishes of the Crown Prince met with insuperable, passive resistance in leading Masonic circles. In consequence of this the Crown Prince resigned his office as Grand Master, and in his farewell address emphasized once more the necessity of bringing into the darkness of the history of our order light which shall meet the scientific demands of the present. The Crown Prince expressed the hope that his successor in the office of Grand Master would continue the investigations begun by him.

The latter kneeled before the altar, laid his hand in that of the Crown Prince and said: "I vow that I will continue the historical investigations, in the same spirit in which they have been instituted by your Royal Highness." While the Grand Master spoke these words, a brother of the "Ordensrath" [literally this word means council of the order, probably "Supreme Council" in the U. S.] said so loud that those standing near could hear it, "That will come to nothing!"—and so it proved!

The "Sovereign Architect" of the order, "Brother" Shciffman (Archdeacon in Stettin), had been previously commissioned to make the investigations. But Mr. Schiffmann received few thanks for his researches from the lodge chiefs "striving for light and truth." Their indignation at his penetrating the mystery-mongering and fantasticalness [of the order] increased almost to personal affronts; especially when he brought to the brothers of the eighth degree the evidence that the secret teachings of their degree contained cabbalistic dream fancies. The enmity against Schiffmann and his "striving after truth" was so strong that an investigation was instituted against him which ended with his exclusion from the order.

This decision of the "Ordensrath" has the following wording:—

"In the Masonic investigation against Gustav Adolf Schiffmann, Sovereign Architect, Presiding Master of the Provincial Chapter of Pommerania member, etc., the 'Ordensrath' of the German Grand Lodge, during the session, June 27, 1876, which Gartz, etc., members of the Ordensrath attend, have decided it just to declare the accused 'highly' guilty of continued violation of the oath of Masonic silence, and therefore to exclude him from the Masonic order. (Signatures.)

This sentence was confirmed by the same successor of the Crown Prince who made the vow above mentioned by laying his hand in that of the latter.

These are the men with the device "Striving for Truth."

Suppose thirty or forty men should walk in through that door. One man comes from Maine, another from New Hampshire, another from Massachusetts, and so on from each State, each bearing a block of marble of peculiar shape. Suppose I pile up these blocks in order, until I have the figure of a man, perfectly symmetrical and beautifully chiseled, and I say, "How did these men, who had never seen each other, chisel out that beautiful statue?" You say, "That is easily explained. One man planned that whole statue, made the patterns, gave the directions, distributed them around; and so, each working by the pattern, the work fits accurately when completed." Very well. Here is a book coming from all quarters written by men of all classes, scattered through a period of fifteen hundred years; and yet this book is fitted together as a wondrous and harmonious whole. How was it done! "Holy men of God spake as they were moved by the Holy Ghost." One mind inspires the whole Book, one voice speaks in it all, and it is the voice of God speaking with resurrection power. —H. L. Hastings.

THE FAIR-DAY FRIEND.

BY ALEXANDER THOMSON.

He is a fire to all your foes when you, not they, prevail;
And when the listening people cheer, admits you have done well;
And swears to be your very friend against the teeth of hell.

When you repose on Fortune's bank he basks him in the heat;
And sits upon the cushioned stool most humbly at your feet,
And all your wise and merry thoughts can like an ape repeat.

When Plenty like a queen bestows the blessings of her grace,
Behind your hospitable board he shows a smiling face,
And finds not in the whole round world so Eden-like a place.

When you require no friendly help he is a friend most true,
And you may well depend on him when bending skies are blue
And in your bones the sap of life goes coursing strongly through.

But when the strange kaleidescope of fortune takes a whirl,
And he who was the king of men becomes the village churl,
And all the woes their armed strength against your castle hurl,

Then does the fair-day friend depart at duty's pressing call,
And with his shadow darkens not your hospitable hall,
There's not a place he likes so ill on this terrestrial ball.

When Slander with her viper tongue assails your honored name,
He listens with approving smile when strangers would condemn,
And whispers to his nearest friend, "I did suspect the same."

Go, trust your life in mastless hulk when wintry tempests rend,
Go live within a sand-based house when funnel fiends descend,
But trust not in disaster's hour your smiling, fair-day friend.

AN OPEN LETTER.

TO THE HON. FRED. DOUGLASS.

WILLIMANTIC, Conn., Nov. 6, 1883.

RESPECTED SIR:—I have no claim on your time or attention but what springs from my knowledge of your history, my respect for your talents and integrity, and my earnest desire to save the Freedmen of our country, who are in a sense your wards, from the curse of the secret lodge system, which threatens to make their "last state worse than the first." False worships enslave the colored people in Africa, and, if practiced in the lodges of this country, will as surely enslave them here, as the same causes will produce the same effects on different sides of the Atlantic Ocean. This point need not be argued. The man who believes and practices a bauble-worship, is the slave of the priests who teach and govern that worship, the world over.

Now, my dear sir, I am advised that you have not been put on your knees and sworn into the secret worships, and abject submissions of the lodge; and, "who knoweth," as Mordecai said to Esther, "but thou art come to the kingdom for such a time as this?" You know the heart of those who are oppressed by despotism made strong and sanctioned by a corrupt religion; and your heart must bleed to see "the meek and much-enduring race" obeying secret laws which you do not recognize, wearing a livery which you despise, and practicing creeds which you hate and ceremonies which you abominate.

You are aware that a NATIONAL ASSOCIATION was formed at Pittsburgh in 1868, now fifteen years ago, which assails the secret lodge system in the name and interest of the religion of Christ, whose teachings you accept, and whose person you revere. And you are further aware that under the shelter of this National Christian Association, a political party has sprung up, called, properly, The American Party, which invites to its membership every voter who has an American heart, no matter where he was born; and who will cast that vote against the lodge, which organized the rebellion, and waged the slavery war.

If you doubt the truth of this last remark, look at the fact, the single, significant fact, that in 1826–32, Masonry fell in the North, and the Northern statesmen were Anti-masons; while President Jackson with his Secretary of War, John H. Eaton; his Secretary of State, Edward Livingston; his Postmaster General, William T. Barry; his minister to Mexico, Joel R. Poinsett, were Freemasons, and almost every large slave-holder in the South was, or became, a member of the lodge.

Now, honored sir, may we not hope that you, who have tasted the bitter cup of bondage; you who have been formed by the hand of God to oppose whatever is sneaking, secret, despotic, and mean; that YOU will now hail the National Christian Association, and this "American" political party as harbingers of joy and hope to the colored population of these United States.

Your first paper was born at Rochester, N. Y., on the slimy track which the wounded lodge serpent left there, where the Liberty party, of holy and blessed memory, was born, and its cradle rocked by Myron Holley, Gerrit Smith and others, all Anti-masons.

My dear sir, I am teaching you nothing; you was there yourself. You have seen in Thurlow Weed's letter and memoirs, the fangs and jaw-teeth of the lodge laid bare; and I write this friendly letter to you, in the hope that you will break your silence, and not cower and stand silent before this dark power which threatens to engulf the hopes of our people, colored and white, for two worlds.

I am very truly and respectfully,

JOHN A. CONANT.

SHORT SERMON.

TEXT:—Holding the mystery of the faith in a pure conscience.

MY BRETHREN:—What if Shakespeare had given to Henry V. on his coming to the throne Jack Falstaff as his prime minister and right hand man? You will agree with me, I think, that Shakespeare would thus have done violence to the nobler phase of English character, and to every trait pertaining to the dignity of human nature. Falstaff, it is true, could be the prime minister to the vices and follies of a young, giddy prince, but he was totally unfit for any serious or worthy office in human affairs.

And so it is, my friends, with Freemasonry, in its relation to the church of England. The lodge in a spirit of Falstaffan levity may make a mockery of the ritual of that church, by imitating it to some extent; but how absurd it is for that church to put the lodge on its right hand, in the seat of honor, as a worthy minister to its sacred offices!

My friends, the Episcopal clergyman of my village is absent this Lord's Day, having gone to attend the Episcopal convention in Philadelphia, which has spent much time in trying to alter the prayer-book, but has never made any move at all for altering the ancient land-marks of the Masonic Monitor; and who do you think officiates in his absence? It is no less a person than a Masonic High Priest!

The prayer-book informs us that the man who is appointed to read the service in the absence of the clergyman should be one who holds the mystery of the faith in a pure conscience; but we all know that the Freemason is a man who is trained by the Monitor to hold the mystery of disbelief in an impure conscience, his conscience having been defiled and trifled with by the foul oaths and tricks of the lodge.

My friends, any church that allows to its members two rituals, one to be observed in public and the other in secret; two books of service, one the prayer-book and the other the Masonic Monitor; two creeds, one openly teaching belief in Jesus Christ and the other covertly insinuating disbelief in Jesus Christ; two sets of priests, one preaching for decent, single-minded people, and the other mingling "on the level" with rowdies, whisperers, professional slanderers, grog-sellers, lechers and charlatans; two languages, one the plain, simple language of honest religious worship, and the other a forked tongued lingo, or thieves' slang, that breaks promise to the honest ear, while keeping faith with knaves; a church that shuts out evangelists from its pulpits while admitting these the ministers of the lodge—such a church, my brethren, is doing more to shake the belief of men in the efficacy of the Christian religion than did the burning of John Huss and Jerome at the stake.

My friends, lodges are worse than New Orleans lotteries. The lodge is a lie; and any nation that harbors it tells a lie. The church that harbors it, teaches a lie and not the truth. Therefore let all such churches be to you Anathema Maranatha.

SO MOTE IT BE.

TEMPERANCE HISTORY.

BY S. HART.

As early as 1804 Dr. Benjamin Rush of Philadelphia, issued a publication intitled: "Inquiry into the effects of Ardent Spirits upon the Human Body and Mind," which awoke an interest in the subject.

In 1808 was the first movement of an associated character, originated by Billy Clark of Saratoga Co., N. Y., with a pledge or agreement inflicting a fine for drinking or treating, excepting wine at public dinners, in sickness, or for sacrament.

In 1813 there was formed the "Massachusetts Society for the suppression of Intemperance;" and one in Connecticut in 1829. In 1826, however, the "American Temperance Union" was formed. At this time, out of a white population of ten millions almost four millions were habitual drinkers, nearly 400,000 of whom were drunkards.

At the beginning of 1828 the custom, hitherto so general, of treating visitors to wine, cordials and brandy, began to disappear, and the sideboards of the rich and influential were soon quite emptied of liquors.

In 1834 the teetotal pledge was introduced into this country and in a short time many societies were formed on that principle. Many, however, who were foremost in the movement in which wine was allowed on sundry occasions, now refused to go forward with the more radical measures, and there was an apparent falling off.

In 1835 Rev. George B. Cheever was whipped, prosecuted and imprisoned, for his writings, which only helped the cause of temperance.

In April 1840, six inebriates who were accustomed to meet and spend their evenings at a tavern in Baltimore, upon hearing a temperance lecture, conceived the idea of forming a temperance society of their own for the benefit of themselves and perhaps a few of their townfellows. It grew rapidly, however, and they more than had their hands full very shortly and were under the necessity of giving it a name; calling it the "Washington Temperance Society," widely known as the "Washingtonians." By the end of 1840 the reform had become so popular that thousands had flocked to its standard.

At first the meetings assumed the character of experience meetings. But soon reformed drunkards began to lecture and with the aid of influential men to organize; multitudes signing the pledge, and the reform sweeping over the country bringing joy and plenty to thousands of hitherto desolate homes.

But this was too good a thing for the old devil to give up. Hence he stirred up the secret lodges to organize a system ostensibly to help, but really to hinder the great temperance movement.

About 1842 or 3, the Sons of Temperance sprang up as if by magic, and soon the Washingtonians began to lose ground as they had no secret to tickle the fancy, nor tinsel to show to satisfy the vanity of man. But the Sons of Temperance excluded women, hence some wiseacre instituted the Good Templars, which I believe got under headway about 1850, and has flourished ever since, greatly to the detriment of this great reform. I do not say that secret temperance societies have done no good. But they have done no good in the temperance cause, that could not have been better accomplished without them. And I further assert that the temperance cause would have been as far advanced at the beginning of the war, if they had kept out of the field, as it is now. Yet still they cling to their little idol and block the wheels of temperance and Anti-masonic reform.

SOME LODGE PRETENSIONS.

The history of the murderous Molly McGuires, in the coal regions of Eastern Pa., Ku-Klux and Moonshiners in the South, the Land League in Ireland, the Nihilists of Russia, the Thugs of India is one of continuous crime. The most revolting and horrible crimes and conspiracies against the lives and property of private individuals and the government under which these hateful combinations have sprung up, are beacon warnings against the evils of secret societies. One would think any man or woman of average observation and common sense would be warned by the career of these dark-lantern, midnight conspiracies of evil men, against having anything to do with any secret society, however siren its song or fair its lying promises of office, honor or financial profit. But the generation of green people never seems to die out, and hence we find thousands allowing themselves to be duped into the mushroom secret organizations around us. These organizations are evil and only evil, and that continually, and how any Christian can have any fellowship with them is one of the strangest things in this world of mysteries. That a Christian freeman could sell out his manhood and be the slave to do the despotic and tyrannical bidding of some puny mortal, puffed up by vanity and pride with the empty title Grand Master, or some other equally useless appendage to his name, but shows how low some people will stoop in their conformity to the world, for the sake of some vain or visionary good which these unscriptural and ungodly secret fraternities hold out as an inducement to poor, simple souls to join them.

God's commaad is "Have no fellowship with the unfruitful works of darkness, but rather reprove them, for it is a shame even to speak of the things done of them in secret." Eph. 5:11. The best explanation ever given for men joining secret societies is that given by the Saviour himself, "This is the condemnation that light is come into the world and men loved darkness rather than light because their deeds were evil. For every one that doeth evil hateth the light, neither cometh to the light, lest his deeds should be reproved, but he that doeth truth cometh to the light that his deeds may be made manifest, that they are wrought in God." John 3:19, 20. Did you ever hear of a secret society quoting this language of Christ in its prayers or other sham religious services? Every man woman or child who reads the Bible and thinks of the teaching of these words must see at a glance, that they cut like a broad sword, right through all the hollow pretenses and vain excuses that secret societies set up in a Christian land for their existence.

The Bible says, oh, so faithfully, that the "unjust know no shame." If these unjust and unjustifiable secret orders had a particle of shame and not the brazen faced effrontery of a harlot, they would not, in the presence of the church and amid the surrounding light of the Gospel, set up a claim for a recognition or existence. Suppose the church does not do her whole duty to the poor or destitute, is that any reason that you or I sneak off from the church, cease to help her do her work or withdraw our funds from her treasury, and crawl, like a thief, at night into some secret chamber, whose doors must be guarded and windows closely blinded, lest the light of day should shine in on and "manifest the deeds of evil," the shameful carnivals, the deception and rascality that under the cloak of secrecy and the cover of darkness are so characteristic of secret societies? Is that the way for a Christian man to throw a suspicion over his honor, integrity and fair dealing? Is that the way for him to remedy the evils in the church? Admit that the church is not as careful of her poor or as charitable and benevolent as she should be, or as the world needs her to be, is joining a human contrived irresponsible secret clique or ring the remedy? By no means. Stick to and stay in the divinely appointed and chosen church of Christ, and there like leaven hid in the meal go to work till that church is leavened with your charitable convictions. Oh, how many are the lies with which the devil fills the mouths of men when he wants them to join his big church or the several smaller denominations of side show secret orders, on which he so largely depends for recruits to his ranks. When he gets the dog's collar of a secret society oath on a poor dupe how doth his kingdom rejoice. Be not entangled with this yoke of bondage and symbol of your serfdom. Break it off at once, if you have ever put it on. No secret society oath is ever binding. All such obligations are ensnaring and sinful and should at once be broken. Don't reply to this that to break a wicked unlawful oath is perjury. It is no such thing, and if you sincerely say it is, you manifest that you do not yet know what perjury is. Can that be perjury to cease to do evil, or to break an oath that may require you to do evil? No secret society has any authority, human or divine, to demand or administer any oath to any man. There is no authority in the lids of the Bible for any such mere human organization administering this sacred ordinance of religion. If people would study the nature of an oath and know what it implies, they would soon learn that a secret society that daringly presumes to administer the ordinance of an oath is no more justified in so doing, than in administering the Sacraments of Baptism and the Lord's Supper, or undertaking to preach the Gospel or administer the government of the church—Sandy Lake News.

A sportsman fired into a flock of ducks that were flying near a tank, and knocked over five of them. Three were killed, but the remaining two were only wounded, and these on coming to the ground fluttered to get into the water. The sportsman on seeing this, rushed to secure the struggling birds; but as for the dead ones, he took no notice of them, knowing they were all safe. So it is with the devil; he does not take any trouble with those that are dead in trespasses and sins, knowing they are safe in his clutches; he only tries to secure those that are striving to get into the living water; hence, fightings within and wars without. Which are you, reader—dead, or only wounded?—Sel.

A DANGEROUS BUSINESS.—It is well known that lager beer is kept in cool cellars until it is delivered to be used, and in order to keep it at a certain temperature to prevent, as we understand it, fermentation, pipes containing ammonia are provided in the cellars, and on Oct. 14, one of these pipes burst in the brewery of Moerlein & Co., Cincinnati, and resulted in destroying twenty-three valuable draught horses, who were in the building, and ten or twelve others were so injured that they had to be killed. How many men the beer in the cellars will kill before it is used of course cannot be ascertained, but it is said to be more injurious to health than whisky or brandy. —Christian Press.

—A Paris correspondent gives some very interesting and gratifying facts, indicating a growth of Sabbath observance in that gay city. He says that wholesale business is altogether stopped, while retail trade is generally lessening. In most localities only one distribution of letters takes place, and most public offices are closed. The new rules for military exercises leave the soldiers free to take part or not on Sundays, as conscience dictates. The subject is being brought to the front by various means, and that with most promising result.

—The church, these times, is too much tempted to go "one mile" into worldliness, without teaching the rising generation to go into her "twain."

THE "INTERIOR" DISCUSSION.

CLOSING ARTICLE BY EDMOND RONAYNE.

I would ask the liberty of bringing before the readers of the Interior the real facts in the case as regards Freemasonry, and as examined from Dr. Morris' own standpoint as a Masonic authority. It will be remembered, then, that Past Grand Master Morris bases his defense of the Masonic institution upon the supposition that "the objections urged against Freemasonry may be summarized thus :

1. "The secrecy itself is objectionable."
2. "It excludes the lame, halt and blind."
3. "It excludes females," and
4. "It ignores the name of Jesus."

Now, with regard to the first of these objections, I will say at once that no intelligent Anti-mason has the slightest objection whatever to Masonry on the score of its supposed secrecy, and for the very simplest of all reasons that it has no secrets to boast of, with the single exception of that sense of shame and self-reproach which the candidate must experience when conducted round the lodge room, and made to pass through the forms of initiation in a semi-nude state with a rope round his neck and a hoodwink over his eyes. With that single exception Freemasonry has no secrets. Our present system of Grand Lodge Masonry had its origin in the "Apple Tree Tavern" in London, in the month of June, 1717. In the year 1730 all its mysteries were published to the world by Samuel Pritchard, of the same city, in his book entitled "Masonry Dissected." In 1776 another book was published, called "Jachim and Boaz," in which all its famous mysteries and wonderful secrets were again made public. In 1825 Richard Carlisle, of England, published all the pretended secrets of Masonry, first in the Republican and afterwards in book form, under the title of "Manual of Freemasonry," and this work is extensively used even at this very day among the English and colonial Masons. You can procure a copy through any respectable bookstore, and Canadian Masons reading this letter can vouch for the truth of these remarks. In 1826 Captain William Morgan, of Batavia, N. Y., published the pretended secrets of the three degrees of Masonry, for which he was drowned in the Niagara River. In July, 1828, at a convention of Freemasons held in Le Roy, N. Y., where one hundred and three members of the "ancient order" were present, they published of "their own free will and accord" all the secrets of all the degrees of Masonry, from the degree of "Entered Apprentice" up to that of "Knights Kadosh" inclusive. Avery Allyn published thirteen degrees ; Jabez Richardson published thirty-three degrees, and Malcom Duncan published seven degrees. All these books can be had to-day through the house of Jansen, McClurg & Co., of this city, and every one of them gives the secrets of Freemasonry as they are imparted in "Oriental," "Blayney," "Keystone," "Covenant," or any other lodge in this or any other city. Where, then, are all these supposed secrets of Masonry ? Is phonography, or algebra, or trigonometry a secret ? Just as much as Masonry is and no more. Any one who wishes may go into any respectable book-store in Chicago and buy all the so-called secrets of the "ancient order" for sums ranging from twenty-five cents up to two dollars and a quarter.

But my list of revelations of Masonic secrets is not yet complete. Mr. Morris himself, some years ago, published in a sort of easy cipher, all the secrets of the first three degrees, and yet he tells us that Masonry has secrets ! But further than this you can order through any respectable bookseller, if not purchase directly over the counter, a noted book called Ecce Orienti, containing the first three degrees in full in a very simple cipher, and also a book called the Caballa, giving the complete work of the chapter, or four next degrees written in the same simple style. Any man or woman of ordinary intelligence can very readily understand and learn all that there is of Masonic secrets from these books. No, Mr. Morris, we do not object to your Masonic secrets, because you have none, and never had since 1730, but we do object, and we charge it directly upon the Masonic institution that it is a positive swindle to demand and receive from fifty to seventy-five dollars for those pretended secrets which can be purchased anywhere for from twenty-five cents to two dollars and a quarter. And now to examine the second point. Masonry claims to be a benevolent institution. In regard to this, it makes, as everybody knows, very loud professions ; but what are the facts ? To begin with, all females are excluded ; all young men under twenty-one years of age are excluded ; all poor men are excluded (because it is not every one who can pay out fifty dollars for jugglery); all blind and deaf and dumb men are excluded ; all one-armed men or men who have lost the thumb of the right hand are excluded. In a word, while Freemasonry claims to be charitable and benevolent, it excludes from "all its rights and benefits" more than seventy-five per cent of the human family. But it will be remembered that Mr. Rob Morris in his article claimed to be "the oldest Masonic teacher now living." Well, then, let us listen to his own teachings on this very point. Not only is an outsider or profane debarred from initiation under the circumstances above mentioned, but even a Master Mason is for the time being shut out from any participation in Masonic benefits whatever they may be. Hear Dr. Morris himself in his "Synopsis of Masonic Law," in Webb's Monitor, page 296, under the word travel: "A Master Mason on his travels has a right to visit every regular lodge in his way. Every well regulated lodge will have a seat and a welcome for him, every intelligent brother a hand and a word of greeting. But to secure this greeting and this welcome the traveling brother must have 'the pass of King Solomon.' He must be at least in outward sem blance mentally, morally, and physically perfect." Would it not appear that a man thus constituted—"mentally, morally and physically perfect"—ought to be able to earn his own living without begging for it? But hear the rest of Mr. Morris' teaching. "If his limbs are mutilated or his senses deficient, so that he cannot give and receive all the Masonic means of recognition in the ancient Masonic manner, he is physically imperfect and cannot visit the lodge." You pay your money, you are made a Mason, but if you are in a strange place and find yourself overtaken by poverty and suffering you are debarred from Masonic fellowship, even, unless you are "morally, mentally and physically perfect," and yet Masonry claims to be a charitable institution. Bro. Morris, we object to Freemasonry, and charge that it is one of the most gigantic swindles of modern times, because, claiming to be benevolent before the world the foregoing is your own teaching as to its practical workings. I am simply judging of Masonry from your own authoritative rulings as "the oldest Masonic teacher."

And now I must hasten on to notice briefly the fourth objection enumerated by Mr. Morris, as I have not time, nor is it scarcely necessary, to refer to the third: "It ignores the name of Jesus."

On this point there can be no doubt, nor mistake, nor controversy whatsoever. Freemasonry, in whole or in part, is a Christless institution; but, more than that, it is opposed to or against Christ. The name of Christ must never be mentioned in any prayer or in connection with any religious ceremony of the lodge. But, to be more definite, and that this part of our discussion may be better understood, I desire to refer to it under the two following heads, and, although I might easily quote from a score or more of undoubted Masonic standard authors, yet I prefer at this time to confine myself entirely to Dr. Morris' own teaching, and thus present him and his delectable system in their true character before your readers:

1. Freemasonry is a religious institution.

2. Freemasonry as a religious institution, most positively and without any equivocation, ignores and rejects the precious name of the Lord Jesus Christ.

On the first point Dr. Morris writes as follows: "Webb's Monitor of Freemasonry, with notes by Dr. Robert Morris, Past Grand Master," etc., page 7 (a note): "Masonry is a system teaching, symbolically, piety, morality, science, charity and self-discipline." Now, what is it that makes a man pious? Does commerce, or science, or architecture, or any of the other ordinary pursuits of life? Not one of them. Religion and religion only, teaches piety. But, on page 13: "No lodge can be regularly opened or closed without religious services of some sort." Again, on page 231, under the word chaplain: "The master of the lodge is its priest and the director of its religious ceremonies." "A meeting of a Masonic lodge is a religious ceremony." "Masonry, in many features, is a religious as well as a moral institution." Again, on page 284, under the word "religion": "The meeting of a Masonic lodge is strictly a religious ceremony......" "The religious tenets of Masonry are few, simple, but fundamental." "No lodge or Masonic assembly can be regularly opened or closed without prayer." "So broad is the religion of Masonry," etc. So much for Masonry as a religious institution, according to "the oldest Masonic teacher living."

And now to the second point, that it is and that it must, from its very nature and constitution, be antagonistic to the name, the person, the character, and the work of the Lord Jesus Christ. Referring to what the editor of the Interior said on this point in connection with the letter of X. M. in the number of Oct. 4, Mr. Morris remarks: "The fourth objection has afforded the editor of the Interior subject for some remarks more severe than those who know him could have expected. But they are superfluous, as he will see when he learns that the article he quotes was never adopted in a resolution of the Grand Lodge." Now, the evident purpose of Rob Morris here is to make outsiders believe that the name of Christ is not excluded by Masonic authority from its prayers and other religious ceremonies.

The "resolution" referred to as coming from the committee on correspondence has been received by the Grand Lodge, put forth by the Grand Lodge, endorsed by the Grand Lodge, believed by the Grand Lodge, and neither the Grand Lodge of Illinois, nor any other Grand Lodge of Masons in the whole world dare pass a resolution permitting the use of the name of Jesus Christ in any lodge prayer; and the "oldest Masonic teacher" knows this as well as any man living. What then, is Robert Morris trying to do, when he assumes to persuade the readers of the Interior, and the public at large, that Masonry does not, by authority, exclude the name of Christ? I'll just quote here one passage from his own teaching. "Synopsis of Masonic Law" in Webb's Monitor, by Robert Morris, page 196, I read Morris' own words:

"The first duty of the reader of this Synopsis is to obey the edicts of the Grand Lodge, right or wrong. His very existence as a Mason hangs upon his obedience to the powers immediately set above him."

This is Mr. Morris' own teaching, and it explains his position better than a whole volume of arguments can do. But now as to his teaching in the name of Christ in Masonry. I quote again his own words. "Synopsis of Masonic Law," by Robert Morris, page 285.

"So broad is the religion of Masonry, and so carefully are all sectarian tenets excluded from the system that the Christian, the Jew and the Mohammedan in all their numberless sects and divisions may and do harmoniously combine in its moral and intellectual work with the Buddhist, the Parsee, the Confucian, and the worshipers of Deity under every form."

Now let us inquire by whose authority are all sectarian tenets excluded, and why? By Masonic authority—by Masonic tradition, by Masonic landmarks, the very highest law of Masonry, as Rob Morris well knows, and "sectarian tenets are carefully excluded" for the express purpose of "excluding" the name of the Lord Jesus. When a Jew, Mohammedan, Parsee or Buddhist enters a lodge of Masons what must he exclude? What must he leave outside? Nothing, absolutely nothing whatever. But what must a Christian "exclude" upon entering a Masonic lodge? What must he leave outside? What name above all others must he never give utterance to in connection with the religious ceremonies of Masonry? The precious, peerless name of Jesus. The devils hate it, the high priests and council of Israel hated it (Acts 4:18), and Freemasonry hates it, and by its highest authority, according to Mr. R. Morris himself, it must be "carefully excluded." But listen again to Mr. Morris' own teaching on this very subject of using the name of Christ in Masonic prayers. "Synopsis of Masonic Law," page 285.

"Prayers in Masonic lodges should be of a general character, containing nothing offensive to any class of conscientious brethren. In theory the whole world of Masons is supposed to be present at every meeting of every lodge; and the intruction, moral and religious, should be directed accordingly."

The plain import of these words cannot for a moment be either mistaking or doubted. The name of Christ would be offensive to Jews, Mohammedans, Buddhists, Parsees and pagans in general; and consequently it must on no account be used in lodge prayers, or in any way connected with the other religious ceremonies of the order.

"Prayers in Masonic lodges," we are expressly informed, by a Christian elder, "should contain nothing offensive to any class of conscientious brethren."

But there is something still more convincing even than this, if that were possible, and of course, as before, I shall quote from the "oldest Masonic teacher." In the fourth or Mark Master's degree, when the lodge is being opened, the following charge is read. I shall copy it entire from Rob Morris' own book, published and sold in this city by the late John C. W. Bailey, and used as a standard text-book among the fraternity both North and South:

"The Freemason's Monitor, by Thomas Smith Webb, compiled by Robert Morris, LL.D. John C. W. Bailey, Chicago, 1872, p. 73. Charge to be read at opening the lodge:"

"Wherefore, brethren, lay aside all malice and all guile and hypocricies and envies and all evil speakings. If so be ye have tasted that the Lord is gracious to whom coming as unto a living stone disallowed indeed of men, but chosen of God and precious: ye also as living stones are built up a spiritual house an holy priesthood to offer up spiritual sacrifices acceptable to God."

Now, by looking at your Bible in 1 Peter 2:1–5, you will readily perceive that, aside from other mutilations, the name of Jesus Christ is wilfully and deliberately expunged from this quotation, while at the same time Dr. Morris calmly assures us in his own preface to this same book, p. 16, "that the Scripture passages, incorrectly quoted in former editions, have in this 'been set right.'" But again, on page 120, in the Royal Arch degree, the following occurs: "The following passage of Scripture is read at the opening (2 Thess. 3:6–17): 'Now we commend you, brethren, that ye withdraw yourselves from every brother that walketh disorderly, and not after the tradition which ye received of us.'" Now, look at your Bibles again, and you'll find that the name of Jesus Christ is also expunged from this quotation, and yet Mr. Morris assures the public in his preface that the passage is correctly quoted. But again, in verse 12, I quote from "the oldest Masonic teacher": "Now them that are such we command and exhort that with quietness they work and eat their own bread." Here, again, the name of Jesus is knowingly and deliberately expunged. And so the Masonic tradition, the unwritten law of Masonry, is in every instance obeyed according to the Masonic oath, and hence the name of Christ must be "carefully excluded," not only from every prayer and religious ceremony of the lodge and chapter, but his name must be expunged even from his own Scriptures whenever those Scriptures are quoted into the ritual of Masonry.

And now, in conclusion, I have nothing to say to the Christian with regard to lodge fellowship. The Holy Ghost through his Word has so plainly and so fully marked out the duty of the believer in that respect that nothing can be either added to it or taken from it. In 2 Cor. 6:14, we read: "Be ye not unequally yoked together with unbelievers." But where is there a more "unequal yoke" than that which binds a Christian to men, moral or immoral, who are nightly carrying on their bacchanalian worship in a Masonic lodge? In John 5:23, we read "that all men should honor the Son, even as they honor the Father. He that honoreth not the Son honoreth not the Father which hath sent him." How can a Christian believe this, and yet have fellowship with Masonry? Impossible. "Come out from among them, and be ye separate, and touch not the unclean," is the call of God to every child of his, and woe to him who refuses to obey it.

CORRESPONDENCE.

THRILLING AND LUDICROUS INCIDENTS.

NOTES OF A MICHIGAN JOURNEY.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—Since we came to Genesee county of this (Mich.) State, we have collected a few facts that may be of interest to your numerous readers. While at Fentonville we met with an elderly gentleman whose father joined the Masons before the abduction and murder of Morgan.

He related to us the following circumstances which occurred when he was a boy thirteen or fourteen years of age. He said his elder brothers obtained Morgan's book and spent their winter evenings for a time reading it, now and then referring to their father (who by the way was a deacon in the Presbyterian church) with the question, "Are these things so?" Their father would make no reply, but with a slight shake of the head would get rid of them as best he could. But his mind was evidently ill at ease. When spring opened and the day for their town meeting came, he went as usual to deposit his vote with the rest. The town meeting was held in a log school-house in a woody place only partly cleared.

After all had deposited their votes and the business of the meeting was finished, he deliberately mounted a hemlock stump and called the people around him telling them he had something to say to them. When they had gathered around him, he began to tell them the views he had come to entertain in regard to Masonry. He felt he must either give up his Masonry or his religion. He felt that his religion would carry him through, but Masonry could not be relied upon to do so. He further said that every word of Morgan's book was true, as far as he had gone in Masonry.

At this announcement a Baptist deacon stepped up before him, and shaking his fist in his face cried out angrily, "You lie! You lie!" But he was not to be daunted by his angry assailant, and would not retract anything he had said. He thenceforth abandoned all connection with the fraternity.

The next place we visited was Linden. Here we found several true friends of the cause. Bro. George M. Smith is a zealous and active worker in the anti-secret cause. It was under his hospitable roof that Bro. Hinman found a home while laboring in this vicinity. While in Linden we learned that we were but a few miles distant from Mundy, where there is a Baptist church that was favored with the labors of Bro. Barlow for about six months. There is a strong anti-secret element in this church, though there is one man among them who still adheres to the lodge. We were anxious to visit this place, but as it is an inland town it is difficult of access. Accordingly Bro. Smith kindly offered to take us over there with his own team, which we felt to be a great favor. In Mundy we were kindly received by Bro. John Remington, who is thoroughly committed to the anti-secret cause.

While stopping with him we learned that we were but a few miles distant from the residence of Sawyer, now a very aged man, who rendered himself famous by drumming on the well curb to drown the cry of murder by Morgan when he was seized by the Masons. It appears that somehow his neighbors are aware of the part he took in that tragical affair, and whenever he is so unfortunate as to offend any of them it has been common for them to cast it in his teeth, until he has become very sensitive on the subject.

Bro. Remington related to us a little circumstance that was rather amusing. It appears a peddler was going his rounds in the neighborhood and had passed the night with a near neighbor of Sawyer's. Before starting out in the morning he inquired who lived in the next house. His host replied that Mr. Morgan lived there. Accordingly the peddler, suspecting nothing wrong, after knocking and gaining admittance directly saluted him as Mr. Morgan. "Get out of my house! Get out of my house!" cried Sawyer, and instantly drove him out, never waiting for the least plea or explanation on the part of the astonished peddler.

We have been spending a few days in Gaines. There was formerly a Masonic lodge in this place, but it has gone down, and the few scattering members are obliged to go to the neighboring town to worship (?). E. C. A.

THE CHRISTIAN WITNESS.

BLOOMINGTON, Ill., Nov. 3, 1883.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—What an opportunity to gain honorable distinction was that when our Lord stood accused before Pilate, and all his friends had forsaken him and fled. What a noble place in history would that man have gained who had boldly stood forth and testified for Jesus as the Son of God, when wicked men were determined to put him to death! It might not have averted his doom, but it would have given his witness a place in history which all future mortals might well envy.

Somewhat in the same way I consider it an honor to be associated with those who dare stand forth and witness for our Lord against the blasphemy, impiety and charlatanry of the lodge. Thousands all around us are thoroughly convinced of the mean exclusiveness, the meddlesome interference, the bombastic falsehood, and the soul-stultifying practices of the lodge. They abhor the spirit and sincerely dread an institution which strikes in the dark, which teaches duplicity and secretiveness as a science. Such persons will glance about cautiously to see that no one shall overhear, before they will converse on the subject. Then they will admit all you say is true in regard to lodge wickedness. They will admit the dangers which threaten us as a Christian church and Republic, but to do or say anything in public on the subject is not their duty, and here their sympathy ends.

Now although the lodge enjoys a more wide-spread disgust than any institution I could name, still it goes on to prosper, caring little for the harmless contempt which is careful to keep its mouth shut. But I rejoice in the men who dare beard the old dragon in his den, and believe that history has an honorable place for those who openly oppose the enemy of all righteousness entrenched behind the secret oath.

I believe the day is not far distant when advocates of organized secrecy will be as scarce as are the advocates of human slavery now; when private contempt will become open; when public execration will bury the lodge so far out of sight that only the resurrection day can reveal it. And may God speed the day.

NEW YORK STATE CONVENTION.

REPORT OF THE SECRETARY.

The thirteenth annual New York State Convention, opposed to secret societies, met in Shakspeare Hall, Syracuse, Oct. 25, 1883.

Rev. N. Wardner, editor of the American Wesleyan, led the Lord's people in a service of prayer and song for half an hour, then the Association was called to order by the president, Mr. F. W. Capwell, of Dale. Mr. Geo. W. Clark, of Rochester, sang a song of thrilling interest in his peculiar way, and Rev. J. Blanchard, of Wheaton, Ill., offered a prayer.

The president after reading a telegram from Hon. S. C. Pomeroy, stating that he was on his way to the convention, delivered an address, briefly narrating the history of the origin of the Association and its progress and urging that we should vote as we pray.

Revs. S. R. Wallace, E. Jones and Isaac Hyatt were appointed a programme committee.

Rev. J. P. Stoddard, Secretary of the N. C. A., was introduced as the speaker for the evening. He did well, and inspired our hearts with hope as he recited the progress of the Anti-masonic reform as indicated in the conventions he had recently attended in Kansas, Illinois and other States. After a song by Bro. Clark, Rev. D. S. Richards, late of California, in a happy manner gave a hopeful outlook of our work in that State.

After the closing address by ex-Pres. Blanchard the programme committee announced the order of exercises for the remaining sessions of the convention and the Association adjourned till morning.

Friday morning after some time spent in prayer and conference, order was called by the president and Rev. D. S. Richards offered prayer.

Messrs. D. Kirkpatrick, F. W. Capwell and J. C. Allis were appointed a committee on finance; Messrs. E. Mathews, D. Booth and F. W. Capwell on State work; Messrs. W.B. Stoddard, G. W. Clark and M. Merrick on enrollment; Messrs. Isaac Hyatt, J. P. Stoddard and N. Wardner on resolutions.

Ex-Pres. Blanchard, of Wheaton College gave an interesting Bible reading, showing the unrighteous character of Freemasonry and that Masons ought to confess their sins and renounce all counection with the order.

Ex-Senator Pomeroy, of Kansas, was introduced and received the hearty congratulations of the convention. He spoke briefly, saying he wished, when it was the pleasure of the convention, to speak on the late decision of the Supreme Court. It was arranged for him to speak in the afternoon and evening.

It was voted to send ten delegates with power of substitution to attend the National Convention to be held at Washington, D. C., in the near future. At the suggestion of Mr. Pomeroy the number was increased to fifteen.

In the afternoon the convention met at 2 o'clock. The service of prayer was led by Rev. G. L. Paine. W. B. Stoddard gave a brief but interesting and hopeful report of his work as colporteur.

The report of the State committee to appoint committees to act with the Central committee at Washington, D. C., to organize the State for political purposes, to appoint a State colporteur, and secure a State agent as soon as a suitable person can be found and funds secured to pay him, was adopted.

Messrs. F. W. Capwell, M. Merrick, G. W. Clark, D. Kirkpatrick, H. Harris, N. Wardner, Thomas White, S. R. Wallace, B. T. Roberts, E. B. Palmer, J. C. Allis, H. De Jough and Mr. James, with two others to be named by the Executive committee, were elected delegates to attend the National Convention at Washington.

Messrs. F. W. Capwell, N. Wardner, and E. B. Palmer were elected State committee to co operate with the Central committee at Washington. The officers of the Association were made an Executive committee to do its business, with instructions to contract no debts.

Isaac Hyatt addressed the convention, showing the unchristian character of the first oath in Freemasonry.

The following resolution was adopted aud ably discussed by Hon. S. C. Pomeroy in the afternoon and evening:

WHEREAS, The Supreme Court of the United States has declared the Civil Rights law unconstitutional and void in the several States, on the ground that it is the duty of the States and therefore not the right of the general government to secure civil equality to citizens; therefore

Resolved, That in the sense of this convention this decision reopens all the issues of the war and makes it possible for the people of any State to trample on the Thirteenth, Fourteenth and Fifteenth Amendments, and in case such State shall fail to punish such violation, then these Amendments become inoperative and void.

Resolved, Second, it is the first and highest duty of every government to protect the civil rights of its citizens, and that if our Amended Constitution does not give such rights of protection it it is fatally defective and should be at once amended.

The following resolution was adopted:

Whereas, The seat of our national government is the natural and actual center of political reform; and,

Whereas, The press is a most efficient agency for exposing corruptions and disseminating the truth; therefore,

Resolved, That we approve of the purchase of a building already made at 215 4½ street, for the reform headquarters in Washington, and recommend that a joint stock company be formed to publish a paper in said building at as early a date as possible.

Mr. F. W. Capwell of Dale was elected president; Rev. S. R. Wallace of Syracuse, secretary; and M. Merrick of Syracuse, treasurer.

The evening service of prayer was led by Rev. J. P. Stoddard.

In addition to the excellent speech by ex-Senator Pomeroy, short addresses were made by Messrs. J. A. Richards and J. Blanchard. After tendering thanks to the several speakers, to G. W. Clark for his inspiring songs, to the reporters for their good reports, and to the citizens of Syracuse for their generous entertainment, the convention adjourned, to meet at the call of the Executive committee.

As I kept a record of the doings of the convention till near its close, in accordance with the wishes of Bro. Wallace I make this report. ISAAC HYATT.

WISCONSIN STATE MEETING.

The meeting at Menomonie on the 6th, 7th and 8th inst. was a local success, although not largely attended by friends from abroad. The effect of former meetings at which Mr. Ronayne worked the degrees was very perceptible, and a desire to know more expressed by a fair attendance the first evening. Pres. C. A. Blanchard's arrival on the second day added to the interest, and he was greeted by a good audience, who listened with the deepest attention to his lecture on temperance, the evening of the 7th. The following evening he spoke to a still larger audience upon the anti-Christian character of the lodge, and was listened to with marked attention.

A few of the friends with whom I spoke after the convention closed, expressed much satisfaction, and predicted good results. The day sessions were mostly given to prayer, business and free conference, in which many incidents were given showing the dangerous and destructive influence of the lodge system.

Capt. W. Wilson and his large and intelligent family have for years championed the cause of reforms in Menomonie, and were not wanting in zeal or liberality in sustaining the convention.

Capt. Wilson, M. R. Britton, and J. W. Wood were chosen delegates to the National Convention at Washington, and it is quite probable that Wisconsin will be represented in national council by these three able and experienced reformers.

The work of the State agent and other important features of the work in the State, and of this annual gathering will appear in the secretary's report forwarded in due time. J. P. STODDARD.

PRES. KEPHART'S ADDRESS AT AVALON, MO.

THE RELATION OF FREEMASONRY TO CHRISTIANITY.

A few thoughts presented by Pres. C. J. Kephart, in the College Chapel, Oct. 31st. There was a large, attentive audience, many Masons attending, and the most perfect order was maintained. The speaker asked a candid consideration of the facts presented.

It becomes us as Americans to inquire into the character of an institution that is professedly secret in its claims, and whose members are more than half a million.

It is not difficult for me to trust my neighbor, without questioning, in most affairs, but when an order making such claims and pretensions requires the most blind submission to its will, it is more than I can bear. For the proof of the statements we refer you to none but Masonic works, such as no intelligent Freemason can deny.

In these works we learn the principles of the order. I speak to you as a believer in the religion of Christ, and I speak to you as believers and not infidels. Freemasonry sets itself against no religion; but is a religion of itself, professedly so, as proven by Mackey; and also that it is a religion suited to men of every belief whatever.

Its much boasted charity is only a secondary matter with Masonry, but religion is the fundamental principle. Its religion is not the Christian religion, but pure deism, and is anti-Christian. Christ is the only mediator between God and man. Universal Masonry excludes Jesus Christ.

The adherent of the lodge is not compelled to a belief of the Bible. It is anti-Masonic to require a belief in the God of the Bible. Masonry professes not to interfere with the various beliefs of its adherents, but all it requires is a belief in God. The devils do as much; they "believe and tremble."

The question is not, are there good men in the lodge, but, what is its religious character? Masonry knows no Christ, no atonement, no mediator between God and man. The name of Christ does not appear in the ritual used in the Avalon lodge, and that his name is used is due to the fact that none object to its use. Masonry changes the reading of the Bible, by making slight but necessary changes, which changes are to leave out the name of Christ. To require the candidate to believe in the authenticity of the Scriptures would not be Masonry, but something else.

It proposes to bring salvation to its adherents, but not through the name of Jesus Christ. It teaches the immortality of the soul. It teaches the new birth, through the portals of Masonry; professes to cleanse the heart, making it pure and spotless, by the use of the gavel; and after all the Christless ceremonies the Master Mason represents a man complete in morality aud purity, and in all that the soul of man requires. REPORTER.

GLASSFORD AND GRAY IN SOUTHWESTERN MISSOURI.

RITCHIE, Mo.

EDITOR CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE:—The readers of your valuable paper would like to hear from southwest Missouri and know what the Anti-masons are doing. We are still cannonading along the line and preparing to bring on in 1884 a general engagement, and we think, if our friends will stand to their guns, and keep their powder dry, victory will be ours. We would say at least on the 7th day of November, 1884, let every Anti-mason be at the polls and be certain that he performs his whole duty, uothing more, nothing less; and between this and the next Presidential election let every one that can spare five cents invest it in anti secret tracts and hand them out to his neighbors and pray that God's blessing may attend his labors. If Antis will only work as the importance of the cause demands, we will soon have the pleasure of saying, We are all American citizens, nothing more, nothing less, aud that Kings and Knights and illustrious Knights are all things of the past.

On the first of this month we had Bro. Glassford and Bro. Gray of Carthage to come over and throw a few bombs into the camps of secrecy, in the way of a good lecture, and for the first time in all our meetings there were no Masons out to hear Bro. Glassford tell about their old dirty drawers, cable-tow and hoodwink; but we had a few young "Jack Masons" present who attempted to bray some, but their bray was very weak.

We have been informed that a bright Mason of Carthage got "snakes in his boots," and while crazy was heard to say that he would not kill Glassford for fifty dollars; that the man in Joplin could kill him for the fifty dollars. Well, Mr. Mason, if this is not a free country the sooner we find it out the better. If Bro. Glassford has not got the same right to kill Hiram out of the lodge that you have to kill him inside, we would like to know it. So show up and we will quit, or quit killing Hiram and then we will follow suit and let poor Hiram rest.

It seems to me that with all this killing Hiram in the lodge and out of the lodge, we ought to soon get through with this Hiram killing. On the anti-secret question Bro. Glassford is like old John Brown on the slavery question. If he is worth more to the cause dead than alive, he is prepared to make the sacrifice.

And now, brother reformers, let us stand shoulder to shoulder, and in the name of good government, and in the name of religion, and in the name of every thing that is sacred and dear to American citizens, let us never slacken our effort until our country is cleansed of lodge leprosy. C. P. WALROND.

ANOTHER VICTIM OF STRONG DRINK.—A special telegram to the Inter Ocean from New Haven, Conn., says: Ten years ago one of the prettiest, most accomplished, and most popular young ladies of South Norwalk was Miss Lula Morehouse. This morning this young lady was found dead in one of the cheapest rooms in a cheap hotel in this city. Last Saturday night she arrived at the hotel in company with a man older than herself, who registered as "Alfred M Joy and wife." That night strange noises were heard in their room, and caused comment among the other boarders. The next day she did not leave her bed, according to Joy's story, and last night he says she became dangerously ill. Skif called at the house and announced the woman was dying, and she died about 1:30 o'clock this morning. She fell so low through a fondness for strong drink.

—Just so soon as the world shall sincerely embrace the Christian religion, wars will cease unto the ends of the earth.

PRACTICAL.—THE CHRISTIAN COMBATANT.

1. His enemies. Satan and sin in its many forms—avarice, appetite, temper, ambition, selfishness, etc. Such enemies are not to be despised; for they are

(a) Giant-like in strength. "For we wrestle not against flesh and blood, but against principalities, against powers, against the rulers of the darkness of this world, against spiritual wickedness in high places" (Eph. 6:12).

(b) Well equipped. "And deceiveth them that dwell on the earth by the means of those miracles which he had power to do in the sight of the beast" (Rev. 13: 14).

(c) Boastful, terrifying. "Your adversary, the devil, as a roaring lion, walketh about, seeking whom he may devour" (1 Pet. 5: 6).

(d) Defiant. "The Philistine said, I defy the armies of Israel this day" (v. 10). "The Philistine cursed David by his gods" (v. 43). "He stretcheth out his hand against God, and strengtheneth himself against the Almighty. He runneth upon him, even on his neck, upon the thick bosses of his bucklers" (Job 15: 25, 26). "They set their mouth against the heavens" (Ps. 73: 9).

2. The conflict. (a) Hand to hand. "Let him that thinketh he standeth take heed lest he fall" (1 Cor. 10: 12). There is no fighting at long range in this conflict. There is no exemption in this war.

(b) Apparently unequal. So it seemed with David and the Philistine. So it seems often with the hosts of Satan and those of the Lord. "The children of Israel pitched before them like two little flocks of kids; but the Syrians filled the country" (1 Kings 20: 27).

3. Conditions of victory. (a) Self-control. "Eliab's anger was kindled against David, and he said, Why camest thou down hither? And David said, Is there not a cause?" (vs. 28, 29.) David's self control under this taunt seems but little less remarkable than his victory over the giant. "He that is slow to anger is better than the mighty; and he that ruleth his spirit than he that taketh a city" (Prov. 16: 32).

(b) Suitable armor. David's armor was the best in the circumstances. Not only was he skilled in its use, but it enabled him to fight at longer range than a heavier armor would have done, and so his skill and quickness would stand him well against the giant's clumsy machinery. So is the Christian armor in every way the best adapted to its purpose. For a full description of it see Eph. 6: 11–18.

(c) The courage that is born of trust in the Lord. "This day will the Lord deliver thee into mine hand" (v. 46). "Be strong in the Lord and in the power of his might" (Eph. 6: 10). This courage can exist only when we realize that "the battle is the Lord's;" that the cause is his own, and that if we keep close to the leader and obey his orders victory will crown our efforts.

Oh! that we would realize that we have an actual warfare to fight! that it is not imaginary enemies of which the Bible speaks! and that we could get our scholars to realize this solemn fact! One of the greatest battles on record was fought more than seven hundred years ago, by the merchants and artizans of Brussels against the arms of France. Reduced to straits by famine, the city one evening opened her gates that such as were able might make one more desperate effort for victory. They had resolved either to conquer or to die. The odds were apparently all against them. What could a few rude townsmen do in the face of the magnificent host of France? But they went from their knees to the charge. They chose their position so that the sun should throw its rays directly into the eyes of their enemies. Then they bore down on the chivalric ranks with irresistible might which scattered them like chaff before the wind. The incident well illustrates the motto of one who seldom lost a battle though he was in many a bloody fray: "I will never despise an enemy. I will always make allowance for possible reserve forces, and will make every exertion to be prepared to meet them."

Should not this be our motto in the Christian warfare? It is not men of straw with whom we have to contend; but "principalities and powers, the rulers of the darkness of this world, and spiritual wickedness in high places." The forces of evil are mighty indeed. Let us not despise them.—U. P. Bible Teacher.

APPLICATION.

1. God trains his instruments in secret. Thus they learn to depend on his Spirit, and not on the means used.

2. The low state of religion where the church resorts to worldly measures for relief.

3. True faith rests upon him whom the world hates, v. 46: "The Lord shall shut thee up into my hand."

4. What giants defy our God? and how must we overcome them? 1 John 5: 4; Eph. 6: 12.

5. Note the distinction between saying "The Lord be with thee," l. c. v. 37, and believing the Lord, v. 32.

6. What should move us now to overcome foes? v. 47; Acts 4: 24–28.

7. Is it right to carry on the church and missions for Jesus by worldly methods and motives? 2 Cor. 10: 3–5.

8. What means are we to use in resisting and overcoming spiritual foes? Eph. 6: 13–18.

9. What is specially needed now by all the children of God, under the present defiance of our God? Jer. 9: 23, 24; 2 Cor. 10: 17, 18; Heb. 12: 2.—Notes for Bible Study.

BAND OF HOPE BIBLE LESSON.

THE TEST OF TRUE AND FALSE TEACHERS.

1. Beloved, believe not every spirit, but try the spirits whether they are of God; because many false prophets are gone out into the world.
2. Hereby know ye the Spirit of God: Every spirit that confesseth that Jesus Christ is come in the flesh, is of God;
3. And every spirit that confesseth not that Jesus Christ is come in the flesh is not of God; and this is that spirit of anti-Christ, whereof ye have heard that it should come; and even now already is it in the world.
4. Ye are of God, little children, and have overcome them; because greater is he that is in you than he that is in the world.
5. They are of the world, therefore speak they of the world, and the world heareth them.
6. We are of God: he that knoweth God heareth us; he that is not of God heareth not us. Hereby know we the spirit of truth and the spirit of error. 1 John 4: 1-6.

GOLDEN TEXT.—For whatsoever is born of God overcometh the world. 1 John 5:4.

CENTRAL TRUTH.—The name of Christ is the touchstone by which to test false teachers.

1. We are not to believe any human teaching unless it agrees with God's Word.

2. By false prophets are meant false teachers who pretend to impart religious truth.

3. There was probably never a time when false teachers more abounded than at the present day.

4. There are many forms of false teaching, but Freemasonry is the most popular, and for that reason the most mischievous.

5. There have been a great many books written about Masonry for the use of Masons. We find from these that they have a ritual, i. e., prayers, hymns and other religious exercises. But these prayers have one very strange thing about them. They never mention the name of Christ.

6. Masonic prayers are always addressed to the Great Architect of the Universe. But the Bible tells us about no such being, nor commands us anywhere to worship him.

7. Passages of Scripture are also read in the lodge room, but instead of reading the verses just as they stand in the Bible, wherever the name of Christ occurs it is left out. For instance, if you take your Bibles, and read 2 Thess. 3:6 with the clause omitted "In the name of our Lord Jesus Christ," you will see how all such passages are read in Masonic lodges.

8. They do this because Jews, Mohammedans, and all who deny Christ's divinity would not stay in the lodge if obliged to pray to one in whom they did not believe.

9. Freemasonry claims to be a universal religion in which all men agree. We know that a religion in which all men, however godless and profane, agree, must be a Christless one.

10. Anti-Christ is any form of error which puts on the guise of religion while it denies Christ, and usurps the honor due him. Masonry is the anti-Christ of this age.

11. The religion of Jesus overcomes the world, but the religion of Masonry has no such power. It never conquers sin, or makes men lead holier or purer lives.

12. The reason is because it is of the world. It is founded on human selfishness. It offers those who join it an undue advantage over others. It does not require any denial of self. It flatters men with pompous, high-sounding titles. This is why it is so popular and has such immense power in the world.

11. This is true of all secret societies. They originated from Masonry, and like it they uniformly reject the name of Christ.

14. The test of Masonry or any other false system can only be made by studying the Bible. If Martin Luther had not found a chained Bible in his cell he might have lived and died ignorant of the terrible errors of the Romish church.

PRACTICAL TRUTHS.

All teachers of religious truth must be tested by the Bible.

False teachers reject Christ. True teachers confess him.

Masonry rejects him:—so do all the minor secret orders. This proves them to be anti-Christ.

Christ's religion condemns sin and overcomes the world. The religion of Masonry does the opposite. Another proof that it is anti-Christ.

LESSON TALK.

We sometimes see a paragraph in the papers warning people against a dangerous counterfeit coin which is in circulation. Now what makes the coin dangerous? It is because it looks so much like good honest money that it is hard to tell the difference. Freemasonry is just like counterfeit money. It tries to imitate Christianity. It preaches morality and benevolence, so that people who do not look very deep are deceived by it. While all the while it so hates and contemns Christianity's Divine Founder that it will not allow even the barest allusion to him. One of the most familiar of Masonic symbols is the five-pointed star. You may have seen it shining on Masonic badges. This used to be explained as a symbol of the Star of Bethlehem. But in 1842 a meeting of Grand Lecturers at Baltimore decided that such a meaning was too sectarian for a universal religion like Masonry. So they threw out the one solitary thing in Masonry that pointed to a Redeemer. Martin Luther used to call the papacy anti-Christ. And he was right. Rome was the anti-Christ of those days. She pretended to be the only true teacher of religious things, while she usurped Christ's seat and taught men to pray to the Virgin and saints instead of him. But now Freemasonry is much more powerful than the Pope, who has lost all his temporal possessions, and a great deal of his spiritual authority. Some people think because the lower secret orders are not so barbarous and blasphemous as Freemasonry it is not so much of a sin to join them. But let us think a moment. Everybody knows that of two pieces of counterfeit money the one that imitates the genuine coin the most nearly would be the worst. Freemasonry at best is a rather clumsy imitation of Christianity. In the minor secret orders the worst features are lopped off, so that they deceive good men much more readily; while in principle they are the same with Masonry. The only safe rule is to apply the touchstone to every one, and we shall find that it condemns all.

LESSON HYMN.

One there is above all others,
Oh! how He loves.

LITERARY.

PERIODICALS.

The bi-monthly number of the Missionary Review for November and December opens with an article on Corea, and the opportunities for Gospel work in that long unknown and isolated nation, of profound interest. In the wonderful providence of God this country, about the size of Minnesota, but supporting some 12,000,000 people, is opening to receive the Gospel in a manner that surprises and thrills the soul of every reader. The Review calls for 200 young men to volunteer for that field and urges the churches to be faithful on their part that the work may be carried on with the greatest energy. The action of the Presbyterian General Assembly in respect to a missionary who was dismissed from one presbytery in India and reinstated in another is reviewed, and the culpable management of the Foreign Missionary secretary in the case is condemned. The General Assembly action only reproved the presbytery in India, overlooking the culpable secretary. The review of the foreign missionary societies up to the one-hundredth. The American Board and the Armenian churches have another considerable notice; while "Field Notes," "Woman's Foreign Mission Boards and Work," and general missionary intelligence help to make a most valuable number. Princeton, N. J.

The November number of Choice Literature is rich with such topics as "Count Rumford," by Prof. John Tyndall, the eminent scientist; "The Age of Trees," "Russia after the Coronation," by Stepniak; "Earth Movements in Java," by Prof. Richard A. Proctor; "The Progress of Labor; "The Rise and Fall of Amsterdam," "The Foreign Policy of France," by Leroy Beaulieu; and "Victor Hugo," by the poet Swinburne. The large size new type now used in this magazine adds to its value to every reader. John Alden, publisher, 18 Vesey St., New York.

Vick's Monthly Magazine opens with a beautiful colored plate of "Salpiglossis." Its articles on the meeting of the American Pomological Society, the "Amaryllis," "November Work," "Clematis and its Uses," correspondence, foreign notes, etc., are practical in their nature and adorned with frequent illustrations. Rochester, N. Y.

The fourth number of the Faith Missionary quarterly for 1883 completes the third volume of this valuable missionary magazine. Beside interesting missionary correspondence from missionaries in Bulgaria and central India there are contributed articles, "The Early Moravian Missions in Ohio" and "A Voice from Yun Nan." Dea. O. M. Brown, Oberlin, publisher; who also forwards contributions to faith missionaries.

Mastery, the illustrated weekly magazine for young people, grows better with every number, and is replete with easy explanations of matters in science and art which are sure to interest the quick-witted boy or girl, whose minds will be informed and habits of observation and invention quickened by every number. Banish the foolish and sentimental stories for the useful, fresh and vigorous thought which such periodicals as this supply.

"H. H.'s" concluding paper on Southern California will appear in the December Century. It is a description of the founding of the "City of the Angels," Los Angeles, a story so picturesque and romantic that the author declares it "a tale for verse rather than prose."

The London Daily Times of Oct. 4th contains a four column article on the "Autobiography of Thurlow Weed." Its candid and respectful tone is as notable as its length, and its conclusions are not unamiable. "The reader," it declares, "commences with something of prejudice against one of the greatest experts in the art of political management after the American fashion. The system is distasteful to the English judgment. He ends with a sentiment of interest and almost of affection for the man."

The excellent literary weekly, Good Literature, is proving to be one of the most popular journals of its class. It is conducted with good judgment and its reviews, while not so learned as may be found in our magazines, are yet prepared upon principles of sound criticism and with a pleasing candor. Among its late articles are these, "Lord Beaconsfield's Character," "A German Country Clergyman," "Poet's Pets," and "Shakespeare's Grave."

An Arkansas man has sand-papered the shingles on his house so that a cyclone can't take hold.

A little girl was asked, "What is faith?" She replied, "Doing God's will, and saying nothing about it."

TO OUR SUBSCRIBERS.

The following from an exchange will interest you, because it is the experience of the Cynosure office:

If we stop all subscriptions promptly when they expire, we displease many of our friends, who think we are afraid to trust them. If we continue all papers until they are ordered stopped, we are blamed by strangers, who abuse us for not stopping papers when the subscription expires; and we also lose the papers, all of which cost us money. If we continued all papers, our list would soon be encumbered with a multitude of non-paying names, which would cost us a large amount, and bring us LO return.

To avoid doing this, we have spent many hundreds of dollars of hard-earned and much-needed money, in notifying subscribers that it was time to renew their subscriptions. We have sometimes done this by a postal card, which costs only half what it would to send a letter in an envelope. One or two persons have taken offence at this, and stopped their paper because they did not like to be dunned. Of course they escape dunning by stopping their papers, but a better way would be to pay up in advance, and thus save trouble for themselves, and expense for us.

We sympathize with our good friends who feel sensitive about the matter. If we were abundantly able to pay for a paper, we think we should feel a little ashamed to oblige a publisher to notify us by postal card that our subscription had expired, when we had the means of knowing the fact by the printed date on every paper that came to us. Perhaps some of our readers may get a hint on the subject, from the Wall Street News, which describes an interview between a sensitive man and his Sixth Avenue tailor, whose shop he entered one day, and said,

"Sir, I owe you $60."

"Yes, sir, you do."

"And I have owed it for a year."

"You have."

"And this is the fifth postal card you have sent me regarding the debt."

"I think it is the fifth."

"Now sir, while I cannot pay the debt for perhaps another year, I propose to protect my character as far as possible. Here are twelve two-cent stamps. You can use them in sending me twelve monthly statements of account, and can thus save your postal cards and my feelings at the same time."

It is said that the tailor has credited the twenty-four cents on account, and feels that he has secured more of the debt than he had any reason to hope for.

If any of our subscribers wish to take advantage of this suggestion, we will do anything we can to spare their feelings; but the best way in the world for subscribers to save their feelings, is to pay for their papers in advance.

"SECRETISM."

If you want good reasons for opposing every form of organized secrecy send for "Secretism," price 5c.

Are you opposed to Good Templarism? Send five cents for "SECRETISM."

Are you opposed to the little secret society that is trying to make headway in your place? Send 5c. for "SECRETISM."

HOLDEN WITH CORDS.

From "The Free Methodist."

"Holden with Cords, or the Power o the Secret Empire." Price, postpaid, handsomely bound in cloth, $1.00; paper covers, 50 cents.

There is no important history extant but has connected with it numerous other histories of which was the initial point or the dominating influence. The abduction and murder of Morgan set ten thousand secret springs in motion as the surrender of the charters of so many lodges at that time, and the severing of their connection with the order of some forty thousand of its members indicated. The story is one of these histories, and is a collection of facts woven into a story. It cannot fail to be read with interest. Address National Christian Association, 221 West Madison St., Chicago.

TAKE NOTICE.

You can order any book published in the Trade from the office of the National Christian Association, 221 West Madison street, Chicago.

NOTES.

We again wish to call the attention of canvassers for the Cynosure to the necessity of their stating in their letters that there is an extra copy due them, when such is the fact.

1ST. Unless you do state it, the subscription clerk may not think of it.

2D. When you send in a few names at a time, it is impossible for us to keep the account so as to know when each has his quota of subscribers, for we have not the time.

3D. Some have preferred not to take any commission though sending in full clubs. But we wish it clearly understood that if anyone who wishes it has failed to receive his extra number of the Cynosure or any commission due, we hope that they will write us at once that we may correct the error.

4TH. We are doing the business for you, friends and if it is not done satisfactorily we hope you will write us a personal letter.

NEW ENGLAND SUBSCRIBERS.

PLEASE TAKE NOTICE.—Rev. E. D. Bailey has a full supply of anti-secrecy literature at the office of the N. E. Secretary, No. 8 Portland street, Worcester, Mass.

POSTAL NOTES.

Some may have the idea that the new postal note ensures safety; but the only security is as heretofore in post-office orders, drafts, registered letters and by express. I prefer postage stamps to postal notes, but the better way is to send by registered letter or post-office money order.

W. I. PHILLIPS,
Treasurer.

NOTICE!!

Before sending a Postal Note be sure that POST MASTER HAS SIGNED it. Also, see that the date and amount of the note are properly punched in the margins.

I cannot collect where there is any irregularity or omission in filling them out by your Post Master.

The Christian Cynosure.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 15, 1883.

THE READERS OF THE INTERIOR

will some of them take up this paper. They have rejoiced with us, and we hope with every sincere lover of the truth as Jesus Christ taught it, in the moral courage of the Interior in opening its columns for several weeks to discussion of the lodge question. One zealous for the reform might find occasion for criticism, but no one will deny that the editor has shown a Christian manliness as unusual as it is praiseworthy. Since he has now thought best to close the discussion, as such, and many who have read the arguments pro and con will desire to know more of a subject which develops so much combustible logic and such (to many) astounding facts, they are respectfully asked to read the Cynosure now and henceforth. Please note the terms and continue an acquaintance with a reform which must soon be an absorbing one in the Christian church.

EDITORIAL CORRESPONDENCE.

Brooklyn, N. Y., Nov. 3, 1883.

Dear Cynosure:—I yesterday saw the Secretary of the American Missionary Association and also of the Home Missionary Society. These two secretaries collect and disburse, yearly, between seven and eight hundred thousand dollars, and they are striving to keep pace with the growth of the country; which means a million dollars a year soon.

The relation of the central offices of these great bodies, with their armies of contributors, beneficiaries, and dependents, to the secret lodges, is very material. Of course, the head secretaries cannot be ignorant of, or indifferent to the fact that their constituent churches are honey-combed by the lodge. There would be no societies in a little while, if they should be either.

But the present secretaries themselves could hardly be better men, or, personally, more opposed to the secret battalions of anti-Christ than they are. Secretary Strieby, (A. M. A.) was an Oberlin man. He has written a few articles against the freedmen putting on the lodge-livery of Satan. His assistant, Dr. Roy, spoke at the Morgan Monument, and his executive committee has opened their Southern schools and churches to our agents.

Yesterday I saw the new Secretary of the old American Home Missionary Society, so long under the good, and now sainted Milton Badger. His name is Walter M. Barrows. He is from Olivet College and he pleases me much. Though hard pressed to do so, he would never join, and never did join a secret society in college or out. He thinks few of all his missionaries are Masons, and, as Dr. Badger was, he would be pleased to have them receive our anti secret literature from Chicago, and would be glad to have them read and profit by it. I hope a prompt attention will be given to this matter. There are between fifteen hundred and two thousand ministers and missionary laborers spread over our whole country at those points where mind and opinion are most plastic and formative, and though the lodge-snake has coiled about some of them, they must all respect the principles and men which govern the centers which give them their bread.

Will the National Board give earnest thought to this matter, and, perhaps issue an appeal for money to send a thousand or two Cynosures to such of these missionaries, as will read and circulate them among their people, who must amount in the aggregate to at least fifteen or twenty thousand people, who profess fealty to Christ, and who are really "the light of the world," and "the salt of the earth," by virtue of their missionary character.

New York, Nov. 5, 1883.—I preached yesterday to the United Presbyterian church on 7he avenue (Rev. Mr. Kidd's). The congregation seemed stirred and interested in the most radical exhibitions of the wickedness of the lodge system; and I hope our cause will profit by it.

Before this reaches you Gen. Butler will be, or not be, governor of Massachusetts for the next term. The scale now hangs wavering, but to-morrow will decide. I incline to think he will be re-elected; and if he should be, by any considerable gain on his former vote, he will be Democratic candidate for President next year, and as he and Quint are interminable Masons, his nomination is to be desired by the American party—a fair, square, stand-up fight is always best for the right side.

I go from here to our excellent brother Conant; thence to Worcester, Northampton and Boston. Gen Pomeroy was born and reared in Southampton, Mass., which he represented in the legislature for eight years. Northampton has a great, fine, old town-house. If Pomeroy should be nominated by the American party convention at Washington, of which I have not the slightest doubt, a ratification meeting may be held at that town-house, which will shake Mt. Holyoke and Mt. Tom. Every student in Amherst College, and every farmer in the four Hamptons, North, East, South and West, will come to hear what the free State leader of Kansas has to say in the country of the Willistons; and when that meeting comes off "May I be there to see!"

Northampton has the glory of "The Old Commonwealth" in her keeping, almost as much as Worcester, as the great political center in the west of the State. Samuel Williston used to stand candidate for the Liberty party with Pomeroy, "turn-about," and J. P. Williston had the energy and meekness of Moses,—the courage of Elijah,—and best of all, the spirit of the Son of God!

On Saturday we rode through the Great Central Park, and visited the American Institute Fair, where every invention takes its turn on exhibition, from ore-crushers to chicken-hatchers, in which latter young chicks were coming out of their shells screaming with no mothers to quiet them. One is ready to hope that the massive statue of Daniel Webster, once the political idol of the American people, has been placed there, confronting the streaming multitudes of visitors, to teach all coming statesmen how vain are the hopes of those who sell the truth for the hope of political preferment.

We are indebted for the delightful panorama of Saturday to the politeness of our good friend, and the friend of truth, Henry Harrison, Esq., and his excellent lady. If the American party should succeed, Mr. Harrison is fit to represent the business interests of this country abroad.

And why may it not succeed? The women of this country are not Masons, and those who advocate Masonry are blind or foolish, and so not permanent forces. In the American Missionary Association at Brooklyn last week, a colored man said he followed his church to the lodge. "And," said he, "that was the last of my church. It was all lodge and nothing else." Fred. Douglass, at the Louisville Convention demanded the Vice Presidency for the colored people. But no colored man can be Vice President by the vote of either old party, who has not been stripped and sworn in the lodge. Why should not the American party succeed? The women and the negroes and all consistent Christians are its natural allies. B.

MOSES PETTENGILL.

A truly great man and prince among men has fallen. On Friday morning Moses Pettengill passed from earth. In meekness, in nobility of soul, in patience with perverse men, in executive force, in his influence in the church of God, and in physical strength he wonderfully resembled the great Hebrew law-giver whose name he bore. Nearly 82 years old, his eye was yet clear, nor was his natural force abated. To the last he took personal oversight of his large wholesale business, which included the employment of the inmates of two penitentiaries; and as well cared for the fine Female Seminary which his munificence founded, for the church to which he belonged, for mission enterprises, and for Christian reform. He conducted his extensive business with the vigor of middle age and with no failing in the excellent business judgment which had made him among the first citizens of his city and of his State. He spent fifty years of his life in Peoria, and has erected a memorial in the hearts of her citizens and in the religious and educational interests of that city which nothing can destroy. His warmest sympathy was given to the anti-slavery cause, and was naturally transferred to the anti-lodge reform to which was given his heartiest sympathy, his ripe and experienced judgment and his wealth by thousands; and among those who would have followed his body to the grave Sabbath morning, might have been numbered thousands who had been associated with him in this work. Servant in Christ, well done; the joy of thy Lord waited for thee.

—Rev. Wm. Moerdyk, of Milwaukee, called upon the Cynosure, on Monday, on his way to the meeting of the General Missionary Conference of the Dutch Reformed church. The report he brings of the working of the anti-lodge sentiment is extremely cheering. The classis to which he belongs are united in sentimenit, and strong in conviction against secretism.

—Our old friend, the American Wesleyan, which began the war on the lodge before there was any Cynosure, is to change its name to Wesleyan Methodist January 1st. The General Conference also voted at its late meeting that the advertisements should be discontinued as soon as possible.

AGITATION IN EUROPE AND DISCUSSION IN AMERICA.

If an actual "Reign of Terror" does not exist, there is at least a tremor of fear prevading European society at the present time. Every new discovery, recent explosion or fresh assassination intensifies this feeling of insecurity and awakens the uninitiated to greater diligence. These outbursts against constitutional government and violations of the personal and property rights of honest citizens, have been traced toward or to oath-bound, secret conspiracies, in every instance where a clue to their origin has been found, showing a common origin and united purpose to unify the factious and desperate elements of society in a combined effort to usurp the functions of government and administer laws of their own making. England, Russia, Spain and other powers are confronted with the formidable presence of a secret empire whose adroit emissaries mingle freely in their councils, as spies and reporters, and generally evade detection until too late to avert the mischief or murderous designs upon which they are intent. The situation has already become exceedingly complicated and is daily assuming greater proportions, as the lines between the secret and open goverments are being tightly drawn. Things in our own country are rapidly maturing to a like condition of hostility between open government under our Constitution and the demands of the unscrupulous hordes that make up the bulk and furnish the planning and excutive power in the system of American secret lodges.

What England is considering as a question of life or death to her authority and multitudes of her peaceful citizens to-day, America will be compelled to settle within the next decade unless the people bestir themselves to banish secret societies from our nation or the established order of cause and effect is reversed.

As the crisis approaches it is gratifying to note among the potent agencies ranging on the side of right the out-spoken utterances of the Interior, speaking to its scores of thousands of readers in language of unmistakable condemnation. To suppose that a Christian minister or editor of a Christian journal would suppress the utterance of his convictions on so grave a question for fear of personal consequences would be an imputation of moral cowardice which is certainly not deserved by the man who dares to antagonize the lodge power and proclaim its attitude toward the Lord Jesus that of an irate, proverbially stubborn brute, but words of honest commendation and assurances of hearty sympathy are certainly in order. The able and gentlemanly editor of the Presbyterian organ of the Northwest is fairly entitled to the cordial support of every Christian in maintaining the right of free discussion on the lodge question, and the noble example Bro. Gray has set, in opening the columns of the Interior for even a brief investigation of this mooted question, deserves a following by others whose convictions are right but whose silence hitherto has given aid and comfort to the enemies of Christ and the subverters of his Bride the Church. Who will be the next to speak out and take as advanced ground as the Interior occupies?

J. P. Stoddard.

OUR TRESTLE BOARD.

—Anti-masons, write for your paper.

—Secretary Stoddard is in Morris, Ill., lecturing this week.

—Bro. H. H. Hinman has been in Philadelphia for several days, arranging for addresses on reform. His health is far from good, but he does not wish to be laid by while so much is to be done.

—Bro. S. C. Kimball is preparing to take the lecture work in hand with energy in New Hampshire. This is by arrangement at the State meeting held in Canterbury which is pronounced the best ever held in the Granite State.

—Bro. Isaac Bancroft, the Wisconsin worker of noble and unselfish zeal, traveled last month 430 miles, visited 345 families, canvassed four villages, and supplied ten schools with the tract "Boys that hope to be Men." Tracts and papers were given to nearly every family visited, and many books were sold. He has the assurance of God's blessing in his work.

—Bro. John K. Hunter, employed by the Illinois Christian Association as colporteur in the southwestern part of the State, has begun work in Randolph county, in a district where all the people seemed to be either Masons or Catholics, and little effect seemed to be made upon them. He hopes for fair success in other neighborhoods which he will soon visit.

—Among the experiences of Elder Bancroft in Wisconsin, he mentions finding Odd-fellows who acknowledge that the exposition of Odd-fellowship sold at the office of the N. C. A. is correct. At Cedar Falls some sneaking Hiramite took a nut from his buggy so as to lose a wheel. The rascality was discovered in time to prevent trouble.

THE WASHINGTON PUBLISHING COMPANY.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Nov. 5th, 1883.

This is a busy spot just now. We are hastening the repairs and cleaning. Applicants are coming to engage rooms, and everything presents a most encouraging appearance. If we get this building paid for and the Publishing Co. organized, our cause will feel the stimulus, from one end of the land to the other. The more I study the situation the more convinced I am that those who planned this enterprise have not overestimated its importance. Great political consequences are certain to follow this movement speedily. Private letters are already received from leading politicians, who are looking with great interest to this party, anxious to know whether it has in it the elements of success. If we get on our feet in time to hold a rousing convention early in the coming year, right here in Washington, it will be a greater event than the Morgan monument and the Thurlow Weed letter.

Bro. Hinman and I went to hear Mr. Douglass and Mr. Ingersoll discuss the blunder of the Supreme Court in its now notorious decision on the Civil Rights bill. The opponents of that bill, or rather the defenders of the Court's decision, characterize the bill as an attempt to regulate the social rights of men. Mr. Douglass demonstrated and clearly illustrated the fact that the right to ride on the cars and eat in a hotel was a civil, not a social, right. Mr. Ingersoll compared the past decisions of the Court with the present, and showed a degree of incousistency which amounts to absolute contradiction. Quoting one paragraph of the Civil Rights bill he turned to Senator S. C. Pomeroy who was on the platform. and said, "The man who wrote that paragraph sits before you—Senator Pomeroy." The applause that followed was deafening and prolonged—a tribute to Mr. Pomeroy which was well deserved.

I want to ask publicly those friends, especially in the West, who take a deep interest in the proposed Publishing Co. in Washington, to write me their views on the whole subject, with the purpose of consulting the interests of all concerned. The company ought to be organized in a manner that will meet the approbation of those who have given thought to the subject. There are some points which need to be fixed before the charter is obtained, and these ought to be speedily determined. We must settle the question of the amount of the capital and the number of shares. All other questions relating to the management will belong to the company when organized. But a free comparison of views is indispensable in the inception of the work, and especially is it important that those who have to solicit the funds should be informed of the wishes and intentions of those who inaugurate the movement. My own views and those of the Eastern friends whom I have consulted have already been published, but they are, of course, subject to any modification which may be found necessary in order to meet the general approbation of friends. Letters may be addressed to me here, or at Worcester, Mass.

Meanwhile let the subscriptions for the stock be sent in. It is vastly important that we should hasten this movement. We have delayed too long already, and we shall be compelled to make forced marches to get on the field for the campaign before us.

There is another matter which needs immediate attention. The organization of political clubs must be commenced at once. Thorough organization is a necessity. This work was begun by Bro. Butler, in Missouri, some time ago, and the printed constitution sent out by him was suitable for the purpose. My copy is lost, but if more are at hand they should be sent out with circular instructions how to organize clubs. We have commenced in Washington by organizing a Central Executive Committee, for work here, and we do not intend to let the grass grow under our feet. E. D. BAILEY.

—The Illinois friends will take special notice in the next number of the Cynosure of the report of progress of the work in their State.

The fund for the free distribution of N. C. A. tracts is exhausted and but few tracts remain in stock. If six hundred of the Cynosure readers would sit down quickly and enclose fifty cents for this important work the gift would be as timely as it is needed.

—Rev. Levi Wood, of North Chili, New York, a well known name in the early history the Free Methodist churches, is mourning the death of his life companion, who died after long sickness from cancer.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 3, 1883.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—Last night I attended a lecture by Col. Robert Ingersoll in Lincoln Hall. In the main it was a repetition of his former address and though the tickets were sold at 50 cents each the attendance was large, about one-half being colored. Hon. Fred. Douglass and Hon. S. C. Pomeroy sat on each side of the speaker and both were roundly cheered.

The meeting was opened by Mr. Douglass in some eloquent remarks in which he answered the two false charges brought against them that they were dishonoring the Supreme Court and that they were endeavoring to establish social equality by law.

In introducing Mr. Ingersoll he repeated the fine poem of "The Vision of Ben Adhem," in which the name of the man who loved his fellow man was found highest in the list of those who loved the Lord. There was surely room for doubt as to its application to Mr. Ingersoll.

Mr. Ingersoll commenced by saying that while he paid all due respect to the members of the Supreme Court, he claimed the right to dissent from their decision, and that he should argue the question as he would do before the Court. He discussed the question mainly as a lawyer, quoting a large number of legal decisions and very clearly proving that the Court had in this case reversed its former decisions. The speaker was greatly applauded and the audience, both colored and white, were thoroughly sympathetic. The address lasted over two hours and was listened to with fixed attention. It will probably be published in pamphlet form and be regarded as an important political document.

I observe that the Ku-Klux trials in Georgia have resulted in conviction, but a new trial has been asked for and perhaps will be granted, so that the results will still be watched with interest; especially as by the Supreme Court decision the aggrieved parties have no redress except in the State courts.

The ex-detective cases seem to be resulting as was expected—in the escape of those who under the forms of law were guilty of the grossest crimes. The cup of iniquity for this city is about full, and the time of retribution is at hand.

THE CIVIL RIGHTS ACT.

The New York Morning Journal calls the decision of the Supreme Court the "modern Dred Scott decision."

In the humble judgment of one who claims no special knowledge of constitutional law, it is of stupendous importance and in fact re-opens all the issues of the war. Consider what were those issues, and how they were finally settled. Slavery denied all rights to a certain class of the people. The war secured the Thirteenth Amendment of the Constitution, granting them liberty, the Fourteenth declaring their equality before the law, with all other citizens, and the Fifteenth giving them the elective franchise; and to each Amendment is added "Congress may enforce by legislative enactments.

The Civil Rights Act was passed to enforce the Fourteenth Amendment and is now declared void in the States, on the ground that it is the duty of the States to secure civil rights to their citizens and that Congress can legislate only for the Territories and this District.

Doubtless it is the duty of the States. But suppose they fail to do that duty. Supposing (as is the actual case) the rights of the former slaves are trampled on by individuals and corporations, and no State law makes any provision for the enforcement of their constitutional rights, is there to be no redress? None whatever, if the National Government is powerless to protect: Suppose it is found that the vote of the negro is deliberately counted out (and in many instances such is the fact) and the States afford no protection what becomes of the Fifteenth Amendment if this theory of State rights is to prevail? Suppose, too, that the old slave-holders claim their property, and resume their pretended rights to their former slaves and their posterity. And suppose State laws give them no protection, what becomes of the Thirteenth Amendment? and in what respect as a nation do we differ from what we were in 1860? There is no danger of the restoration of slavery. It is morally impossible, but the theory of State rights held by the Court would make it possible for the States to permit slavery and impossible for the National Government to prevent it.

In this connection it ought to be remembered that slavery was no where established by positive statute. It was permitted by the States just as they now permit individuals and corporations to habitually deny equality of rights to the negro. Then he had no redress in the Federal courts. If he has none now then all these Amendments (Thirteenth, Fourteenth and Fifteenth) are void.

To the unsophisticated mind it would appear that the clause "May enforce by appropriate legislation" is not only sufficient warrant for the protection of citizens of the United States in their civil rights, but when the States fail to protect United States citizens, in any right guaranteed by the Constitution, then such permission becomes a mandate. If it is the right, it is manifestly the duty to secure to all men equality before the law, and any plea of want of authority under the Constitution looks like a most ill-timed and deplorable concession to the spirit of caste, which is the only real objection to this righteous and needful enactment.

As an old Abolitionist I always believed that the clause of the Constitution making it the duty of Congress to "guarantee to every State a republican form of government," was sufficient warrant for the abolition of slavery in the States as inconsistent with the republican government, that Congress was bound to guarantee. Such views got scant recognition before the war; but one of the lessons of that awful retribution was that State rights means the right of each State to protect human liberty and "National rights" the right to secure its protection. Any other theory of State rights leads directly back to the days and spirit of slavery. The duty of allegiance and the right of protection must go hand in hand. If the Federal government has no right to protect the negro in his civil rights, then he owes this government no allegiance, which is absurd.

H. H. HINMAN.

TWO MONTHS FOR 25c.

This offer is lapsed and the early issues for November are exhausted! But here is something better. Trial subscribers can send on twenty-five cents and the Cynosure will be sent them TWO MONTHS. This is a good offer, as the paper will be increasingly valuable week by week. For good reasons this offer must close December 1st. Then something new will be ready for all our friends who wish to extend their paper.

THE CYNOSURE FOR THE SOUTH.

Frequent calls for the Cynosure come up from the colored brethren in the South, most of whom, while engaged in preaching, are too poor to subscribe. It is a grand means of promoting the reform to put the paper in the hands of these pastors of colored churches. No people are more open to conviction on this question, and a wide circulation of the paper and N. C. A. tracts will in every case counteract the lodge. Who will send a contribution to this fund, and so help answer such letters as this from Wetumpka, Alabama:

DEAR EDITOR OF CYNOSURE:—I would be glad to have your paper if possible. I am pastor of about 700 or 800 members. Yours, SILAS JONES.

NOVEMBER 10TH, 1483.—The New York Christian Advocate makes the following note on the fourth centenary of Luther, and the conversion of John Wesley:

To Mr. Froude is attributed the saying that no man is what he would have been if Martin Luther had not been born; and if no man, then no country and no church in Christendom. The four hundredth anniversary will be the eve of a day greater than that named in honor of St. Martin, the Holy Sabbath. Every Protestant minister throughout the world should preach a sermon on that day in commemoration of Luther and the great work which, in the providence of God, he wrought. But every Methodist minister has a special reason for celebrating this anniversary with profound gratitude to God. For the following are the exact words of John Wesley's account of his entrance into light:

"In the evening I went very unwillingly to a society in Aldersgate, where one was reading Luther's preface to the Epistle to the Romans. About a quarter before nine, while he was describing the change which God works in the heart through faith in Christ, I felt my heart strangely warmed. I felt I did trust in Christ, Christ alone for salvation; and an assurauce was given me that he had taken away my sins, even mine, and saved me from the law of sin and death."

Let, then, those who praise God for Wesley, praise him also for Luther. In our hymnal may be found Luther's battle hymn, "A Mighty Fortress is our God." Let the choirs and Sunday schools practice it. The tune is peculiar, but easily learned, and on November 11th let it be heard all round the world. Yea, let the children in our Methodist missions in Rome sing it loud enough to be heard in the Vatican.

—In the London Record a "churchwarden" makes the assertion that "it is well known that auricular confession is resorted to in some large public schools (professedly Church of England schools), and that the book used for the confessional, called 'The Priest in Absolution,' is of such an obscene nature that it would be punishable under Lord Campbell's act to offer it publicly for sale, which alone ought to be sufficient to condemn the system."

THE HOME.

HAZEL BLOSSOMS.

The summer warmth has left the sky,
The summer songs have died away;
And, withered, in the footpaths lie
The fallen leaves—but yesterday
With ruby and topaz gay.

The grass is browning on the hills;
No pale, beloved flowers reeall
The astral fringes of the rills,
And drearily the dead vines fall,
Frost-blaekened, from the roadside wall.

Yet, through the gray and sombre wood,
Against the dusk of fir and pine,
Last of their floral sisterhood,
The hazel's yellow blossoms shine—
The tawny gold of Afrie's mine.

Small beauty hath my unsung flower,
For Spring to own or summer hail;
But in the season's saddest hour,
To skies that weep and winds that wail,
Its glad surprisals never fail.

O, days grown eold! O, life grown old!
No rose of June may bloom again;
But like the hazel's twisted gold,
Through early frosts and latter rain,
Small hints of summer-time remain.

And as within the hazel's bough
A gift of mystie virtue dwells,
That points to golden ores below,
And in dry, desert places tell
Where flow unseen the eool sweet well;

So, in the wise diviner's hand
Be mine the hazel's grateful part,
To feel, beneath a thirsty land,
The living waters thrill and start,
The beating of the rivulet's heart!

Suffieeth me the gift to light
With latest bloom the dark, eold days;
To eall some hidden spring to sight,
That in these dry and dusty ways
Shall sing its pleasant song of praise.

O love! the hazel wand may fall;
But thon eanst lend a surer spell,
That passing over Baea's vale,
Repeats the old-time miraele,
And makes the desert land a well.

—Whittier.

GRIEVING THE SPIRIT.

A voice has come to the earth, all the way from the eternal world, warning, and commanding, and entreating us "to grieve not the Holy Spirit of God, whereby we are sealed unto the day of redemption." (Eph. 4:30.) To obey is to inherit blessing. Not to obey is to suffer irreparable loss.

There is a sin which grieves the Holy Ghost. I will speak very plainly. It is neglect of Christ himself by reason of indolence. He was by your side this morning at six, calling you to the Scriptures, and to prayer, and to himself, and you did not rise till half-past seven, just in time to feed your body, too late to feed your soul. You saw many faces around the table, and they saw your face, but there was no light in it, none of heaven's joy, none of heaven's love. You had no time to see the face of God. And why do God's people rise so late? One reason is, because they sit up so late. If you would rise early you must retire early. Nature makes two hours before midnight the best hours for refreshing sleep, and when you spend those hours in self-indulgenee you violate Nature's law, you grieve Nature's God. If I had the value in gold of what Christians eat and drink and burn between ten and twelve at night, I could sow the earth with Bibles! If I had the time that Christians waste between ten and twelve at night I could preach the Gospel to every ereature! If I had the grace that Christians lose between ten and twelve at night I could convert the world!

I do not know of anything more likely to grieve the Holy Spirit than this habitual neglect of the Lord Jesus. He is very little sought after at all, and when he is, he is not sought after for his own sake, as the lover seeks after the one he loves. A coldness ereeps over the soul when secret communion is uncultivated—a coldness that may terminate in the chill of death. It was not thus that Jesus lived with his Father. "He wakeneth [me] monring by morning, he wakeneth my ear"—sueh is the language in Isaiah 50:4. "My voiee shalt thou hear in the morning, O Lord. In the morning will I direct my prayer unto thee, and will look up." (Psa. 5:3.) In the beginning of his ministry we find him "rising up a great while before day," (Mark 1:35,) and at its close, "all the people came early in the morning to him in the temple." (Luke 21:38.) I plead, therefore, for this "Early Communion." It is the sure highway to the enjoyment of the "Real Presence." The last thought at night will be, "A day at Court to-morrow with my Lord, my King! Jesus to awake me with the gentle touch of his right hand, and Jesus to be with me all the time." Onee aroused after healthy sleep, never sleep again. It is God's call. "Grieve not the Spirit."—Rev. H. B. Macartney.

"I LOVE TO PINT HIM OUT."

A gentleman while traveling, came to a river, which he must needs cross before he could reach his destination. Joe Brown, a colored boatman, was accustomed to ferry passengers over the river, and the boat being ready, the gentleman seated himself in the bow. Joe stepped into his plaee and taking up his oars, the two glided swiftly along. There were sloops going up and down the river as they did every day, when the winds would carry them on their way. Suddenly Joe drew in his oars, and springing to his feet pulled off his ragged old straw hat, and with his hand shaded his eyes while he strained his sight to some objeet on a sloop in the distance.

"As I'm a libbing man," he exclaimed, "dat am de Captain!"

The gentleman started out of his musing, followed the eyes of Joe, but eould distinguish nothing but the forms of three or four men on a sloop in the distance.

"See him, Mister?" exclaimed Joe.

"Don't yer see that strong, kind-looking man agin the mast," urged Joe.

"Perhaps I shall see him when the vessel gets nearer."

"I wish you could see the Captin," said Joe, in a tone which seemed to imply that he might if he would but look.

"Who is the Captain?" he asked.

"De Captin?" said Joe, turning upon him a look of surprise, as if he should have known.

"He am de man dat sabed me." But quickly turning his eyes again to the sloop, he said: "I can't miss seeing him while he am in sight," and gazed with an intense earnestness.

The sloop did not come very near, and passed by with no apparent signal to Joe, who stood as steady as a mast in a ship, with his hat in his hand and his eyes still shaded. As the sloop sailed on, the figures of the men became hidden, and Joe sat down again to his oars.

"I tole you, sar," said he, "dat he am de man what sabed me."

"How did he save you, Joe?"

"He strip off his coat, and jumped into de ribber and cotch hole of dis chile wid his strong arm, just as he was sinking into de great depths, wid de ropes around his feet. Dat's de way he sabed me," said Joe, growing eloquent with emotion.

"You have not forgotten to be grateful, I see."

"Grateful! Joe Brown would breave every breff he draw for him ef he could. I tole him I would work de rest of my days widout no pay. It would be enough and more and I pay him just to be allowed to sarve him. But," he added rather sadly, "so I stay as close by him as I ken. He runs by here once a month. I watches fur him allers, and I love to pint him out. It's all dis poor nigger can do."

The traveler, who was a Christian, was deeply moved by the earnestness of the poor negro, and at the depth and tenderness of his gratitude.

In a moment there flashed across him a humiliating sense of his own ingratitude toward One whose strong arm had snatched him from the jaws of an eternal death. Why should he ever forget the high privilege of pointing out "Him, whose name is above every name, the Man Christ Jesus."

Has not this little incident a voice for us too? What power there would be if it were practically true of us that we loved to "point him out." And this is the only thing that will keep us in this age of unreality—truth may be known and in a certain way enjoyed. but if Christ himself is not our object, "our sole desire," Satan will get power over us; O that there might be inwrought in us by the Holy Spirit, an ever increasing desire after himself, that so we might in our everyday walk "point him out."

SHUN SEEMING EVIL.

An old Chinese proverb says: "Do not stop in a cucumber field to tie your shoe." The meaning is very plain. Some one will be likely to fancy that you are stealing fruit. Always remember the injunction, "Abstain from all appearance of evil." Do not stop under a saloon porch to rest yourself, however shady the trees may be, or however easy the chairs. Some one may fancy you are a common lounger there, and so your good name be tarnished. Don't go to a liquor saloon to get a glass of lemonade, however refreshing it would seem to you. Rather buy your lemons and prepare the cooling beverage at your home, where others may share it with you, probably, too, at no greater expense than your single glass would cost you. Somebody seeing you drinking at the bar, will be sure to tell the story, and will not be particular to state that you were drinking only lemonade. Then, too, if you are careless about the appearance of evil you will soon grow equally careless about the evil itself.—Sel.

LIVES OF CELEBRATED MEN.

JOHN WYCLIFFE.

Suppose, my dear young readers, that you had never had a Bible in your hand and that you had never even seen a copy of God's Word.

Suppose that you had never been taught "The Lord is my Shepherd," or "Blessed are the pure in heart," or "Suffer little children to come unto me."

Suppose that you had never heard the story of Moses in the bulrushes, or of Daniel in the lions' den, or of the wonderful life of Jesus Christ.

Suppose that there were no English Bible. Then you would be as lonely and as ignorant as were the boys and girls of England five hundred years ago.

Then the people were taught by monks and priests who cared much more for getting their money than for saving their souls. Then the land was filled with a crowd of men supposed to be very holy, but who really were imposters of the worst sort.

These were the bare-footed Friars, or Franciscans, who, under pretence of imitating the lowly life of Jesus of Nazareth, went about deceiving everybody by their false words and actions. Clad in coarse, brown garments, they visited each village and hamlet, made themselves at home in both palace and cottage, begging everywhere for alms, which were so freely given that the friars, while pretending to be poor, became really very rich indeed.

They taught the people to pray to saints who could never hear their prayers; to look for help in trouble to little rags and to bones of animals; and to believe that they would be sure of reaching heaven if only they could pay their way thither with gold.

It seems strange to us that any one should have listened to such foolish teaching. Yet when people have not the light of the Bible to guide them, they are very easily deceived and led astray.

At length a man arose who had the courage to expose the false teachings of the begging friars. This was John Wycliffe, a very remarkable man, who has received the name of the Morning Star of the Reformation. He was born in Yorkshire, England, about the year 1324. He studied at Oxford University, which even then was an old and honored institution, and in course of time he took high rank as a professor in this seat of learning. His rare talents and manliness drew to him the attention of the king and of Parliament, so that at different times he was called from the University to give the benefit of his advice in important matters of state.

Once he was sent by the king, Edward III., to confer with the Pope, or his representatives, on a question which was then troubling England. As Wycliffe took the right side, and the Pope the wrong one, the reformer thus drew upon himself the displeasure of one whom it was dangerous to oppose.

After his return to England he was summoned to give an account of his heresies, but as he was supported by two eminent nobles, he escaped with his freedom. He went on preaching upon the errors of the Romish church, and was again brought to trial for his so-called false doctrine. But this time the people, who had learned to love him, crowded to defend him, and the queen-mother herself, the widow of the Black Prince, sent an order for his release.

At length the University which had long hesitated to part with its distinguished son, dismissed him from its service. Wycliffe then retired to his parish of Lutterworth, which had long before been given him by the king, and there in his last years he did some of the most important work of his life.

There he wrote a great many tracts on religious subjects, and these were carried through the country by a set of men whom he had already trained to go among the people and preach to them the word of truth. They went by the name of "The Poor Priests," and they were what we would call colporteurs.

Wycliffe's greatest work, which he completed during the time of his retirement, and which has earned for him the gratitude of all who have come after him, was translating the Bible into English. He was obliged to do this, not from the original Greek and Hebrew Scriptures, but from the Latin translation known as the Vulgate. He had more or less help from some of his friends, but to him belongs the honor of first giving the Bible to his nation in its mother tongue.

Of course it could not be printed, for printing was then an unknown art; but copies were made as fast as possible, and carried everywhere by the Poor Priests. A hundred and fifty of these copies still exist. Some of them are much soiled and injured from having been hidden away in damp, dark places, for the people were soon forbidden to read or to own the book in which they found so much comfort and joy.

Although Wycliffe himself died a quiet death at the age of sixty years, many of his followers suffered martyrdom.

Forty years after his death it was ordered by the Council of Constance that his bones should be burned. The order was obeyed, and the ashes of this first reformer were thrown into a little brook called the Swift, which flows into the River Avon.

"The Avon to the Severn runs,
The Severn to the sea,
And Wycliffe's dust is spread abroad
Wide as the waters be."

The waters are not spread abroad further than the happiness which has come through the reading of the book that Wycliffe loved and taught his nation to prize.

Here are the first and second verses of the second chapter of Matthew, according to Wycliffe's version. You will see that the English of his time is quite a different thing from the English of the present day:

"Therefore whanne Jhesus was borun in Bethleem of Jude, in the days of king Eroude: lo astronomyers camen fro the eest to Jerusalem and saiden, where is he that is borun king of Jewis? for we han seen his sterre in the eest; and we comen for to worschipe hym."

As Chaucer is called "the father of English poetry," so Wycliffe has been styled "the father of English prose." His version of the Bible is said to have been the first English book of any considerable size. As it was first to appear, so it was also first in importance of all the thousands of volumes which have been written in our language.

The Bible, read and studied by the people, has made England and our own country what they are, and has given them their high place among the nations of the world.—Christian Intelligencer.

GOD'S SPARROWS.

A good woman searching out the children of want on one cold day last winter, tried to open a door in the third story of a wretched house, when she heard a voice say, "Pull the string up high! Pull the string up high!" She looked up and saw a string, which, on being pulled, lifted latch; and she opened the door upon the two little half-clothed children, all alone. Very cold and pitiful they looked.

"Do you take care of yourselves, little ones?" asked the good woman.

"Yes, and God takes care of us," said the oldest.

"Are you not very cold! No fire a day like this!"

"Oh, when we are very cold we creep under the quilt, and I put my arms around Tommy, and Tommy puts his arms around me, and we say, 'Now I lay me,' and then we get warm," said the little girl.

"What have you to eat, pray?"

"When granny comes home, sometimes she fetches us something. Granny says God has got enough; granny calls us God's sparrows; and we say 'Our Father' and 'daily bread' every day."

Tears came into the good woman's eyes. She had a trusting spirit herself; but these two little "sparrows," perched in that cold upper chamber, taught her a lesson of faith and trust in a higher power and care which she will never forget.—Observer.

I have found nothing yet which requires more courage and independence than to rise even a little, but decidedly above the par of the religious world around us.—Dr. J. W. Alexander.

TEMPERANCE.

NATIONAL WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION.

The N. W. C. T. U. is at this writing near the close of its tenth annual meeting in Detroit. An imposing spectacle to be equaled only by itself.

So vast an audience of ladies, the very cream of benevolent and cultured society, is a sight not often enjoyed.

Although the majority of delegates were not on the ground till Wednesday, the ball was really opened on Sunday, P. M., by the magnificent address of the president, Miss Frances E. Willard, before an audience of 2,000, mostly men, by reason of the storm.

The first devotional service was conducted in the Central M. E. church, by Mrs. Thompson, the mother of the first crusade in Ohio. The church was nicely decorated with evergreens, arches, flags and mottoes.

The chief feature of the morning session was the annual address of Miss Willard, a portion of which I hope will appear in the Cynosure. Miss W. is a very remarkable woman endowed with many striking characteristics, and is evidently raised up for the work in which she is acting a prominent part. She is blessed with a voice musical as a silver bell, and so clear as to be heard by the most distant ear in any audience: and a soul so on fire with the greatness of her mission that she enlists unbounded enthusiasm, ever and anon causing the vast auditorium to ring again with applause, or suffusing many eyes with tears.

Both her addresses teemed with irrafragible logic and profound philosophy. The long array of under officers is composed of many prominent workers from every part of the nation, many of them excellent speakers.

In view of the age and magnitude and strength of the interminable array of all unutterable woes these ladies are waging war against, they are wonderfully buoyant and hopeful. They appear as sure of success as if the rum traffic were even now on the edge of the last ditch. They have unbounded confidence in their most conspicuous motto, "Not by might nor by power, but by my Spirit, saith the Lord." They are altogether sure that he who destroyed a hundred thousand enemies of God's ancient people in a single night is able to destroy a hundred and fifty thousand rum shops in the land.

The rapid growth and success of this Union furnishes ample occasion for hopefulness. It would be a pleasant task to devote a chapter to the leading workers of this N. T. U., but as nearly all are leaders, the chapter would be too long; and yet I must not omit a few names that may well pass for stars of the first magnitude.

What a master mind and what a master of this subject is Mrs. Forster of Iowa. Being a thoroughly educated lady and a thoroughly educated lawyer as well, she deals largely and wisely with the legal aspects of the temperance question. Her power over an audience is wonderful. In argument her responses are like flashes of lightning, quick and sharp. Mrs. Livermore of Mass. has a national reputation for her manifold labors with voice and pen, in many reforms.

Mrs. Chapin of Charleston, South Carolina, is also widely known. She is highly gifted in culture, intellect and great-heartedness. A pleasant speaker and an attractive writer. She is superintendent of the national work in the South.

Mrs. Judge Merrit of New Orleans is a marked character and a convert of Miss Willard. There lingers in her manner a tinge of the imperious. She gesticulates with great rapidity, but lacks grace.

A daughter of Cassius M. Clay attracted no little attention.

Mrs. Mary H. Hunt of Massachusetts is the observed of all observers. She delivered an address on scientific instruction. She is a master of her theme.

The speech of Mary Dickerson is unreportable. It is fragrant with flowers of rarest beauty.

Mrs. Governor Wallace of Indiana has the head of a philosopher, and speaks with authority. But why discriminate when there were scores who had proved themselves equally able and worthy of the great work in which so many noble women are engaged.

Compared with the meetings of the American Board recently held here, these ladies proved themselves to be anything but the "weaker vessels." Their sessions were characterized by more intense earnestness, and were of longer duration than were any of the sessions of the Board.

In the devotions a thousand sisterly voices drew us nearer the Cross than the rougher voices of our brothers of the Board.

RECOMMENDATIONS.

Presented by Miss Willard at the close of her address:

A memorial to the national political conventions of 1884, asking a plank in their platform which shall declare in favor of an amendment to the national constitution by which the prohibition of the liquor traffic shall become an integral part of national organic law.

A special series of meetings in Washington and hearings before Congress in behalf of our petitions, and to secure a commission of inquiry into the costs and results of the liquor traffic.

A definite plan of study laid down for our juvenile societies.

A special arrangement of leading speakers to visit college towns and to speak to young men and young women.

The establishment of western headquarters with a classification of four departments: 1. A bureau of organization. 2. A lecture bureau. 3. Bureau of the press. 4. Of correspondence. A separate secretary for each.

A commission to report one year hence plans for organization of a world's W. C. T. U.

These are taken from over a score of recommendations. There were side meetings for various purposes all through the sessions of the convention.

The meetings for spiritual instruction and personal consecration held by Mrs. Hannah Whithall Smith of Pennsylvania were largely attended. C. C. FOOTE.

Detroit, Mich., Nov. 3, 1883.

THE W. C. T. U. ORGANIZATION.

The National Woman's Christian Temperance Union were given a hearing lately before the Senate Committee on Education and Labor. Miss Frances E. Willard of Chicago, President of the Union, gave a condensed statement of the organization, growth, and methods of the work. She said the Union is often called the sober second thought of the crusade in the winter of 1874, and which, through prayer and persuasion, resulted in closing 250 saloons. The society comprises thirty-four State, and three Territorial organizations, with over 3,000 local societies, and a following of over 75,000.

Experience had suggested the advisability of dividing the work of the society into departments, and in every case where a special department of work has seemed to be called for some woman has been raised to stand at the head of such department. First in the order of evolution stands the department of "hereditary," which aims to teach women who come together in companies the relation of parental influences and natal inheritance to the drink habit. Besides this department is that of "hygiene" which aims to give a better understanding of the methods of daily living, especially regarding food, cleanliness, exercise, ventilation, and the whole physical conduct of life. Under the educational division of the work scientific instruction stands first, its subdivisions being Sunday-schools, juvenile unions, temperance literature, influencing the press, conference with ecclesiastical, Sunday-school, educational, and medical associations, and relative statistics. Scientific instruction embraces the introduction of text books into public schools, setting forth the nature and effect of alcohol on the system. The Sunday-school work aims to give the "Thus saith the Lord" regarding the use of intoxicating liquors as a beverage. The department of juvenile unions endeavors to teach children the duty of total abstinence by a regular course of study, scientific ethical and governmental. The military feature is introduced for boys, and prizes offered for the best essays.

Efforts are made to gain the co-operation of ecclesiastical bodies, and whenever a synod or conference is held some representative of the society is usually present to represent the cause. The department of relative statistics endeavors to collect the best and latest statistics regarding pauperism and crime, present the same to the people until such time as the government shall appoint a committee to take the matter in hand.

In 1833 the amount of liquor consumed in the State of Maine was three gallons for each inhabitant, and, at the same rate of consumption, the tax to be paid by that State into the United States Treasury would be $3,000,000 per annum; instead of that, the government tax on all the liquor consumed in that State for all purposes is but $28,000 per year. Yet we are told that "Prohibition does not prohibit," and that Maine presents a notable illustration of the failure of prohibition.

A scheme is on foot to organize a National association of brewers, saloon keepers, cigar and tobacco men, its professed object being to "combine against the 'persecutions' they are subjected to by people who are constantly crying out that the law is being violated." With a dreamed-of capital of $2,000,000 and the "influence" of their members, the Chicago promoters of this new scheme say they expect to accomplish something.

The fact that good order can be maintained in a city of 7,500 inhabitants by one policeman is suggestive; that in this city there is no court house nor jail is not surprising when one policeman easily maintains good order. The reason for this would be interesting. The inhabitants are an active energetic people. There is a fair admixture of foreign blood. They do business and labor for a living just as necessarily as those of any other city. American civilization touches the city on every side. Men and women rank not above the average in literary culture. The anxieties of life are as hard to endure in this city as in any other; why not have need for the jail and court house? This city has churches, schools, theatres, in fact everything that any average community enjoys. What is the explanation? Municipal government is the same. There is no tyrant behind the scenes. No superstitious dread haunts the citizens by day and night. What is it at last? We just stated that the city had everything that an average community enjoys. Allow us to modify that statement. THAT CITY HAS NO SALOONS. Prohibition prohibits. No saloons, one policeman, no court house, no jail. Every other known element in ordinary human society is present and in operation. Every other accommodation is afforded, and the people have all the protection that the most peaceable desire. This city has no jail in which to confine the prisoners, because there is no court house in which to try men arraigned for violation of the law; it has no culprits because no policemen to arrest them; it has no policemen, because there are no men to be arrested; it has no men to be arrested, because—eh? As we said, this city has churches, schools, libraries, theatres, workshops, stores, livery stables, etc., etc. No men to be arrested! No saloons!—Minnehahan.

AMERICAN POLITICS.

NOMINATIONS FOR 1884.

For President,

JONATHAN BLANCHARD,
OF ILLINOIS.

For Vice President,

JOHN A. CONANT,
OF CONNECTICUT.

PLATFORM.

We hold: 1. That ours is a Christian and not a heathen nation, and that the God of the Christian Scriptures is the author of civil government.

2. That God requires and man needs a Sabbath.

3. That the prohibition of the importation, manufacture and sale of intoxicating drinks as a beverage is the true policy on the temperance question.

4. That the charters of all secret lodges granted by our Federal and State Legislatures should be withdrawn, and their oaths prohibited by law.

5. That the civil equality secured to all American citizens by articles 13th, 14th and 15th of our amended Constitution should be preserved inviolate.

6. That arbitration of differences with nations is the most direct and sure method of securing and perpetuating a permanent peace.

7. That to cultivate the intellect without improving the morals of men, is to make mere adepts and experts; therefore, the Bible should be associated with books of science and literature in all our educational institutions.

8. That land and other monopolies should be discouraged.

9. That the government should furnish the people with an ample and sound currency.

10. That maintenance of the public credit, protection to all loyal citizens, and justice to Indians are essential to the honor and safety of our nation.

11. And, finally, we demand for the American people the abolition of electoral colleges, and a direct vote for President and Vice-president of the United States.

THE NATIONAL W. C. T. U. ON POLITICS.

This great meeting at Detroit, reported so kindly, so well, and with such hearty sympathy by Bro. Foote on another page, voted with great unanimity on some political questions, and the influence of this powerful organization will not fail of its effect in the election of 1884. The Union Signal thus reports:

Never before has the National W. C. T. U. committed itself so strongly and so unanimously to the effort to secure the ballot to woman. Nothing of late happening is so indicative of the rapid advance of thought in this direction. Even the most conservative, or those who have hitherto been so regarded, lifted no warning voice against this forward step and procedure. As the case now stands, the National society believes it to be the Christian and patriotic duty of woman to seek the ballot as a means to prohibition and home protection.

Very cautious was the expression of allegiance to any political party. In an assembly made up of delegates from every State, there could but be remembrance of the Democratic party, as the party of prohibition in the South, and of the Republican party in Iowa and Kansas as the instrument by which the attainment of prohibition in these two States has been reached, consequently the decision was for "that party, by whatever name called which shall give us the best embodiment of prohibition principles and will most surely protect our homes."

HOW BUTLER STANDS IN SYRACUSE.

GREENSBORO, Ind.

After staying in Syracuse with my brother two days, I went to the ticket office to purchase a ticket for Philadelphia, and while in the act of buying the ticket my satchel was stolen from me.

At ten o'clock a trial was in progress for the recovery of my property. The thief gave his name as Emanuel Spencer; his home was in Boston. He was defended on the plea of insanity. After stating diffcrent causes for his insanity, some one asked him the question: "Would you vote for Ben Butler if you had a chance?" His answer was: "You are just right. I would vote for Butler every time."

The police magistrate looked the prisoner right in the eye, then up with his hands and said: "The prisoner has just given the best evidence of his insanity that has been produced in this court to-day." The magistrate gave it as his opinion that no man could vote for Ben Butler and be in his right mind. This was said in the presence of the chief of police, the police officers, and many others, and nearly all seemed to indorse the magistrate's sayings. I said "amen" with a vengeance. W. A. HYLE.

—The Inter-Seminary Missionary Alliance of the students of the several theological seminarics of the country held a very spirited and profitable annual convention in Hartford a week ago, continuing from Thursday to Sunday evening. The day sessions were occupied with business and papers by the students present. The evenings were given to addresses by well-known ministers, Dr. A. A. Hodge, Dr. Behrends of Brooklyn, and S. Hodge of Boston, speaking among others.

THE CHURCHES.

—The American Bible Society cannot supply the demand for Bibles, although making arrangements for issuing 2,000,000 next year.

—The McAll Mission is to establish a mission in Calais, where, until a short time ago, no Protestant preacher's voice has been heard for two hundred years.

—The question whether or no he has the right or power to appoint a successor to the late Bishop Colenso of Natal, has for some time engaged the attention of the Archbishop of Canterbury. Natal, however, has an ecclesiastical community distinct from the English church, and hence it is considered probable that no bishop can be appointed by the head of the English church.

—In less than thirty years more than three hundred Baptist churches, comprising twenty thousand baptized believers, have been organized in Sweden. The work originated with Rev. Andreas Wiberg, a native of Sweden, educated at the University of Upsala, and for many years a Lutheran minister. Twenty thousand Swedish children have been gathered into the Baptist Sunday-schools. The temperance cause has also been constantly and successfully advocated. A large number of these Baptist church members have emigrated to the United States, and have formed churches all through the West.

—The project of consolidating the Northern and Southern Provinces of the Moravian churches of America has failed. This consolidation has been agitated for some years, and at the last association of the Northern Provinces held in Bethlehem, Pa., the matter was referred to a commission, to whom was delegated the power to perfect the union of the two provinces. When the contract was ready for signing, differences arose which have put an end to the scheme, at least for the present.

—David C. Cook, the well known Sunday-school publisher, has given a $2,500 Cottrell steam printing press to the American Mission publishing house of India. This Cottrell machine will be the first and only machine in India, except the ones used for English Government printing, and will be of similar make to those used in the Government printing office at Washington, and in Mr. Cook's establishment. The press will soon be on its way and serving the missions of various denominations.

—The expenses of the Episcopal General Convention held at Philadelphia during the month of October amounted to $40,000, including entertainment of delegates and traveling expenses.

—Hitherto in Hebrew congregations women have had no voice in the election of rabbi or any of the church business, but a Philadelphia synagogue has accorded to them equal privileges with the male members, except the holding of official positions.

—It is estimated that the Methodist General Conference which meets at Philadelphia next year will cost the church not less than $100,000. There will be 600 delegates, and Bishop Simpson will preside. Ex-President Hayes and possibly General Grant will be among the delegates.

—The receipts of the American Missionary Association for the financial year just ended were $312,567.29, an increase of $14,982.84 over the previous year. Of the total amount $126,366.73 was from legacies, the income from this source being unusually large. The payments for the year, less a balance in hand at the bginning of the year, were $312,018.97, and the balance now in hand is $548.32.

—The annual survey of the work of the American Board, presented at the annual meeting of the Board at Detroit, gives the following statistical summary: Number of missions, 20; number of stations, 80; out-stations, 742; number of ordained missionaries, six being physicians, 154; physicians not ordained, men and women, nine; other male assistants, seven; other female assistants, 263; total nmmber of laborers sent from this country, 433; native pastors, 144; native preachers and catechists, 369; native school-teachers, 1,014; other native helpers, 300; total number of laborers connected with the missions, 2,260; number of churches 278; number of church members, 19,364; added during the past year, 1,737; whole number from the first, 89,323; number of High Schools, Theological Seminaries and station classes, 58; pupils in these, 2,086; boarding schools for girls, 40: pupils in these, 1,538; common schools, 832; pupils in these, 31,016; whole number of pupils, 35,625.—Christian at Work.

—The demand in India for medical women for the treatment of Indian women and children is growing rapidly. About two years ago the Maharnee of Puranah, who was treated by an English woman doctor, wrote to Queen Victoria on the subject, and Sir Salar Jung represented that medical women would be a great blessing in India. Independent of what may have been done in this direction in connection with zenana missionary work, there have been attcmpts to supply women doctors from medical schools in India. Nearly ten years ago women were admitted to the Madras Medical College, with this end in view, and now the Calcutta Medical College has been opened to them and a scheme to found a woman's hospital in Bombay has been adopted, of which Miss Peechy, M. D., is to be in charge, and women who wish to cnter medical service will be educated for it.

—It was stated at the late meeting of the American Board that, during the last ten years, the work of the Board has increased 135 per cent. in conversions, educational institutions, and native agencies; but there had been little or no increase in the contributions, while the number of young men offering themselves for the mission work had grown constantly smaller, so that last year only four students in the theological schools had offered themselves for the missionary work. It was stated that the outlook in this particular was a little more favorable for this year.—N. Y. Christian Advocate.

—The American Sunday School Union has just adopted the following:

Resolved, That the American Sunday School Union, invoking the blessing of Almighty God, and relying upon the sympathy and co-operation of Christians and philanthropists, will undertake to establish and maintain a Sunday school in every needy community in the vast territory between the eastern base of the Rocky Mountains and the Pacific Ocean.

In 1830 the Union, under a similar resolution carried its banners into the great valley of the Mississippi, and in 1833 into the South Atlantic States. As the result hundreds of Sabbath schools were organized, and thousands of children instructed in the Word of Life. Many of the schools have become useful churches. Now the Union proposes an advance into the territories along the Red River of the North, the Upper Missouri, the Yellow Stone and Columbia rivers; also onward to the hamlets on the Sierras, and still onward to the fertile lands along the Pacific. The enterprise will be approved by thousands of Christian hearts and should have a place among the objects of Christian generosity.—Intelligencer.

THE WESLEYAN GENERAL CONFERENCE AND MASONIC DELEGATES.

The Northern Christian Advocate, in speaking of the refusal of the Wesleyan Methodist General Conference "to hold fellowship with" a fraternal delegate from the Methodist Episcopal Central New York Conference, who declared himself a member of two secret societies, queries: "If the Bishop had hired a district messenger boy at fifty cents an hour, instead of selecting a highly respected and scholarly member of the conference, would he have been subjected to the same examination and his message spurned?" If the Northern Christian Advocate can not discern any difference between receiving a message at the hands of a hired boy and "fellowshipping" a secret society fraternal delegate, we hope the action of the General Conference may slighty lift the "hoodwink" and shed some "light" from the "East" on the "poor blind candidate" for sympathy over the refusal of the Wesleyan General Conference to "fellowship" the secret "works of darkness" even in the person of a "highly respected and scholarly member" of secret societies, which the appointing power behind the delegate knew we did not as a church "fellowship." This is the second attempt to secure official "fellowship" of secret societies at the hands of our General Conference in the person of secret society delegates, sent in the face of the fact "known and read of all men" that as a people we are conscience-committed to refuse to "fellowship" such members. Query: Is the Methodist Episcopal church so generally "cable-towed" into membership in secret clans as to have no "highly respected and scholarly member" to appoint as fraternal delegate to a known anti-secret society General Conference, who is not in his personal relations in alliance with the secret lodgisms of the day? —Wesleyan.

FARM NOTES.

HOW TO SUCCESSFULLY TRANSPLANT TREES.

Many think it cheaper and better to take up large trees from the woods, and transplant them to their grounds or to the road-side, than to buy nursery trees. As a rule such trees die; they fail because proper precautions have not been taken. In digging up the tree, all the roots outside of a circle a few feet in diameter are cut off, and the tree is reset with its full head of branches. Whoever has seen trees in the forest that were upturned by a tornado, must have been struck by the manner in which the roots run very near to the surface, and to a great distance. When the roots of the trees are cut off at two or three feet from the trunk, few or no fibrous or feeding roots are left, and if the mass of tops is left the expansion of the buds in the spring will not be responded to by a supply of sap from the roots, and death must follow. If such trees have the tops completely removed, leaving only a bare pole, they will usually grow when transplanted. The tree is little more than an immense cutting; but there are roots enough left to meet the demand of the few shoots that start from the top, and growth above and below ground are well balanced. We have seen maples, elms, and basswood trees, fifteen feet or more high, transplanted in this manner without a failure. Some trees treated in this manner were planted in our neighborhood about ten years ago. They have now as fine heads as one would wish, and show no signs of former rough treatment. Trees in pastures, or on the edge of woods, are better furnished with roots. These should be prepared for transplanting by digging down to the roots, and cutting off all that extend beyond the desired distance. This will cause the formation of fibrous roots near the tree. It will be safer to take two years for the operation, cutting half of the roots each year. Such trees may be removed in safety, especially if a good share of the top is removed at transplanting.—American Agriculturist.

TRANSPLANTING TREES.—Large trees may be successfully transplanted by removing them in winter, while the ground is frozen, with a large ball of earth attached to the roots. The earth about them may be removed before the ground freezes, leaving sufficient to support the tree in position.

AUTUMN HINTS FOR KITCHEN GARDEN.

In a well-managed garden, as soon as one crop is off the ground is made ready for another, if the season allows. In stiff soils, especially, plowing or spading, and leaving them rough through the winter, greatly improves them.

Preserving roots in winter.—Parsnips, salisfy, and horseradish are not injured by hard freezing; all others must be stored for the winter, and a sufficient supply of the hardy kinds should also be taken up. We have described various methods of storing roots in back numbers of the American Agriculturist. If the cellar is not too warm, a supply for present use may be kept in boxes or barrels, and covered with earth to prevent shrivelling.

Cabbages.—The usual method is to pull the cabbages, set them in a dry place, heads downwards, and on the approach of cold weather, cover with a coating of leaves up to the ends of the roots; light soil is often used instead of leaves. For family use, it is convenient to dig a trench where water will not stand, and set the cabbages, with what soil adheres to the roots, close together, upright, in this. Make a sloping covering with boards. As cold weather comes on, place a layer of leaves or straw over the heads. Soft cabbages thus treated will very often form firm heads by spring.

Asparagus and rhubarb.—Though these plants are quite hardy, the beds will produce all the better and earlier if they have a covering of three or four inches of manure. All litter should be first cleared off, and if not already done, the asparagus tops should be burned.

Crops wintered in the ground, such as spinach, sprouts, onion sets, etc., will need two or three inches of leaves, straw, or marsh hay, as a protection during winter, in all but very mild localities.—Am. Agriculturist.

General Washington Opposed to Secret Societies. This is a republication of Governor Joseph Ritner's "Vindication of General Washington from the Stigma of Adherence to Secret Societies," communicated to the House of Representatives of Pennsylvania, March 8th, 1837, at their special request. To this is added the fact that three high Masons were the only persons who opposed a vote of thanks to Washington on his retirement to private life—undoubtedly because they considered him a seceding Freemason. 10 cents each; per dozen, 75 cents.

MASONIC OATHS,

BY

E. Ronayne,

Past Master of Keystone Lodge, No. 639, Chicago.

A masterly discussion of the Oaths of the Masonic Lodge, to which is appended "Freemasonry at a Glance," illustrating every sign, grip and ceremony of the Masonic Lodge. This work is highly commended by leading lecturers as furnishing the best arguments on the nature and actual character of Masonic obligations of any book in print. Paper cover, 207 pages. The Master's Carpet.

BY

E. Ronayne.

Past Master of Keystone Lodge No. 639 Chicago.

Explains the true source and meaning of every ceremony and symbol of the Lodge, thus showing the principles on which the order is founded. By a careful perusal of this work, a more thorough knowledge of the principles of the order can be obtained than by attending the Lodge for years. Every Mason, every person contemplating becoming a member, and even those who are indifferent on the subject, should procure and carefully read this work. An appendix is added of 32 pages, embodying which gives every sign, grip and ceremony of the Lodge together with a brief explanation of each. The work contains 429 pages and is substantially and elegantly bound in cloth. Price, 75 cents.

Freemasonry at a Glance,

HON. THURLOW WEED ON THE MORGAN ABDUCTION.

This is a sixteen page pamphlet comprising a letter written by Mr. Weed, and read at the unveiling of the monument erected to the memory of Capt. William Morgan. The frontispiece is an engraving of the monument. It is a history of the unlawful seizure and confinement of Morgan in the Canandaigua jail, his subsequent conveyance by Freemasons to Fort Niagara, and drowning in Lake Ontario. He not only subscribes his NAME to the letter, but ATTACHES HIS AFFIDAVIT to it.

In closing his letter he writes: I now look back through an interval of fifty-six years with a conscious sense of having been governed through the "Anti-Masonic excitement" by a sincere desire, first, to vindicate the violated laws of my country, and next, to arrest the great power and dangerous influences of "secret societies."

The pamphlet is well worth perusing, and is doubtless the last historical article which this great journalist and politician wrote. [Chicago, National Christian Association.] Single copy, 5 cents.

IN THE COILS;

—OR—

THE COMING CONFLICT.

A NEW AND RAPIDLY SELLING BOOK IN OPPOSITION TO FREE-MASONRY.

We desire to call your attention to this useful work, and ask you to help us in its circulation. We want Agents to canvass every community.

By selling this book one can do much good. It is by such literature that we must expect to awaken a popular sentiment against secret societies, and overthrow them. By selling this book one can make money. Liberal terms will be allowed, and any energetic Agent can sell many copies. Masons will buy it from mere curiosity. Anti-Masons will buy it for the facts and arguments presented. Many will buy it to send to their neighbors. Those on the fence will buy it that they may learn the truth on the subject. Those not interested in the discussion, and young people especially, will buy it for the story.

"A book which we trust may have a wide circulation."—National Baptist, (Philadelphia.)

"It is an attack on Freemasonry with a sprinkle of Slavery thrown in to make it go down well."—A. R. Presbyterian, (S. C.)

"So intensely interesting did I find it that it was hard to pause until the last sentence was read. This work places the author high among the writers of the best class of fiction."—W. W. Barr, D D., in Christian Instructor, (Philadelphia, Pa.)

"A charming work fit to be classed with 'Uncle Tom's Cabin,' it is indeed less a work of fiction. The volume is as valuable as a work of reference as it is agreeable, truthful and useful. Our young folks will not leave the book, if they begin it, till they 'see how it turns out.'"—Cynosure, (Chicago, Ill.)

The book is neatly and plainly printed, handsomely bound, 352 pages, thick paper. A specimen copy sent to any one contemplating accepting an agency for $1.10.

Single copy $1.50; Per Dozen. $15.00.

THE PUREST IS THE BEST.

In the selection of SUNDAY-SCHOOL PAPERS, the most important point to be considered is the moral tone of the subject matter. If this is of a questionable character, the papers should be shunned, no matter how large, how attractive, or how low the price. Such papers are

COSTLY AT ANY PRICE.

The country is being flooded with S. S. literature that is largely composed of what may be properly termed "RELIGIOUS FICTION," the tendency of which is to create a distaste for sound reading and foster an appetite for fiction of a more deleterious character.

The engravings of these papers are equally objectionable. In many cases a lady or girl dressed in the height of fashion is made the HEROINE OF A STORY, thus putting the highest sanction to extravagance and pride. With such instructors in our Sunday-schools we cannot expect the children to grow up with a love for sound literature and with correct ideas of Christian propriety. With a view of supplying S. S. papers, of a pure and elevating character, the publishers are issuing

FOUR MONTHLY PAPERS.

They are FREE FROM FICTION, and the cuts are chosen with great care. While they are thus carefully edited, they are not lacking in attractiveness. They are well printed on beautiful tinted paper. The children are delighted with them. The very low price at which this line of S. S. papers is issued, places them within the reach of even schools of limited means

IN BRIEF.

The estimated amount of postal revenues for the fiscal year beginning on July 1 next, including $430,000 estimated receipts from the money order business, is $47,104,178 The estimated expenditure for the same time is $50,062,189, which will leave a deficiency in revenue of $2,958,111. In his letter to Congress recommending the reduction of the letter rate to two cents the President expressed the opinion that the reduction would cause a deficiency of $3,000,000 the first year, and the official estimate above given shows his estimate to have been within $41,000.

—In order to preserve and maintain the National bank-note circulation, Mr. New, Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, suggests the issue of fifty-years 3 per cent bonds to the amount of $500,000,000, into which the 4 and 4½ per cents shall be convertible, the bonds to be used as a basis for circulation. Mr. New believes that such bonds would be eagerly sought by the National banks for that purpose, and that all fears for the safety and permanency of the National banking system would be removed.

—Over 19,400,000 acres of our public lands were disposed of last year. The Commissioner of the General Land Office recommends more stringent laws to prevent frauds, and they should be passed.

—It is estimated at the Treasury Department that the statement of the public debt will show a reduction the past month of about $10,500,000.

—On and after the 18th of November next the new time adopted by the railroads of the United States aud Canada will go into effect.

—G. N. Fox, who was Assistant Secretary of the Navy when Gideon Welles was Secretary under Lincoln's administration, died at New York Monday.

—For nine months of 1883 the exports of iron and steel from Great Britain amounted to 640,079 tons—410,826 tons less than in the corresponding period in 1882.

—Dr. Leonard Stegnejer arrived at San Francisco Monday from the Arctic, having in his possession an excellent specimen skeleton of the "northern manatic" or sea-cow. His trip was undertaken under a commission from the Smithsonian Institute at Washington.

—De Brazza, the French explorer, is reported to have been killed in a fight in the Congo region.

—Maurice Ranger & Co., cotton merchants at Liverpool, failed Tuesday for $3,250,000. The crash brought down two cotton brokerage firms, and it is reported houses at New York are involved for about £100,000.

HORSFORD'S ACID PHOSPHATE.

Marked Benefit in Indigestion.

WHAT EMINENT PHYSICIANS SAY.

THE CELEBRATED LONDON PHYSICIAN, Erasmus Wilson, says: "Several cases of incipient consumption have come under my observation, and they have been cured by a timely use of Liebig's Liquid Beef Tonic."

ERASMUS WILSON, M.D., F. R. S.

"I have had the process explained by which the beef in this preparation is preserved and rendered soluble by the brandy employed, and I am satisfied this combination will prove a valuable adjunct to our pharmacopœia."

DR. JOHN BULL'S

Smith's Tonic Syrup

FEVER and AGUE

Or CHILLS and FEVER.

AND ALL MALARIAL DISEASES.

The proprietor of this celebrated medicine justly claims for it a superiority over all remedies ever offered to the public for the SAFE, CERTAIN, SPEEDY and PERMANENT cure of Ague and Fever, or Chills and Fever, whether of short or long standing. He refers to the entire Western and Southern country to bear him testimony to the truth of the assertion that in no case whatever will it fail to cure if the directions are strictly followed and carried out. In a great many cases a single dose has been sufficient for a cure, and whole families have been cured by a single bottle, with a perfect restoration of the general health. It is, however, prudent, and in every case more certain to cure, if its use is continued in smaller doses for a week or two after the disease has been checked, more especially in difficult and long-standing cases. Usually this medicine will not require any aid to keep the bowels in good order. Should the patient, however, require a cathartic medicine, after having taken three or four doses of the Tonic, a single dose of BULL'S VEGETABLE FAMILY PILLS will be sufficient.

The genuine SMITH'S TONIC SYRUP must have DR. JOHN BULL'S private stamp on each bottle. DR. JOHN BULL only has the right to manufacture and sell the original JOHN J. SMITH'S TONIC SYRUP, of Louisville, Ky. Examine well the label on each bottle. If my private stamp is not on each bottle do not purchase, or you will be deceived.

NIGHTS IN A BAR-ROOM

T. S Arthur's great temperance book, complete and illustrated. By mail, 5c each; 50c per doz. By express, $3.50 per 100.

THE LIQUOR TRAFFIC THE GREAT SOURCE OF CRIME.

Leaves from the diary of an old lawyer.—By Hon. A. B Richmond, author of "Court and Prison," etc. A book of intense interest, rivalling the famous "Diary of a Physician," and, in its truthful, terrible pictures of the power and crime of Intemperance, excelling the well-known "Ten Nights in a Bar-room." The temperance issue of the present time is Shall prohibition be partial or entire? Shall the branches of the death-bearing tree be pruned and trimmed, or shall the tree itself be cut down and its stump be torn up by the roots? The answer of "Leaves from the Diary" is, "Cut down the tree, tear up the roots, leave not a shoot or shred behind." It is certainly a very strong and eloquent volume Complete edition on fine, heavy paper, with colored lithograph of Sewall's stomach plates By mail, 30c, each, $3 per doz. By express, $20 per 100. Abridged edition, by mail, 15c; $1.25 per doz. By express, $9 per 100.

THE LIQUOR TRAFFIC AND THE SOBER CITIZEN.

An able and telling work, by Rev. J H. Sherman which brings out the effects of the liquor traffic in a new light. The following are some of the commendations of the first edition

"The author drives the nails of conviction through and clinches them."—N Y Christian Advocate.

"Speakers and workers in the temperance field will find valuable aid in this pamphlet. It is crowded with convincing facts "—Zion's Herald

"One of the ablest reviews of the drink curse ever issued from the press."—The Morning and Day of Reform.

"The arguments are put in telling form "—Judge Pittman.

New revised and enlarged edition. By mail, 10c each, $1 per doz. By express, $6 per 100.

DRINKS FROM DRUGS.

A startling exposure of the liquor traffic, by El. Johnson. A book that cannot fail to arouse the American people to the gigantic swindle now being perpetrated. The writer was offered $10,000 by a leading brewer to keep still. Liquor not only doctored, but made entirely from drugs. Extracts from a whole library of secret books, giving receipts for making and doctoring; advertisements of essences, fac-similes of labels, engravings, etc., etc. Claret, port, sherry, champagne, whisky, brandy, gin, rum, etc., all out of one barrel, and made at less than 25 cents a quart. Wine that never saw grape juice; cider that never saw apples; beer factories in place of breweries, fine cream ale without barley or brewing; whisky from arsenic; millions of gallons of liquor that pays no revenue tax. The farmer's corn and barley "all in your eye." A wholesale liquor store in a ten-foot square cellar; more French wine sold in New York City than is produced in the whole of France. By mail, 10c each; $1 per doz. By Express, $6 per 100.

W. C. T. U. ORGANIZATION AND WORK.

A book of general information on how to organize and run successfully a Woman's Christian Temperance Union. This book should be widely distributed among W. C. T. U. presidents, pastor's wives and other representative women. By mail, 10c each; $1 per doz. By express, $6 per 100.

HOME PROTECTION.

A lawyer's view of it. By J. C. Wells, attorney-at-law. The question of female suffrage for the protection of home ably discussed from a lawyer's standpoint. A book for the times. By mail. 10c each; $1 per doz. By express, $6 per 100.

BAND OF HOPE RECITERS.

172 pages. 164 choice recitations of poetry and prose, containing some of the choisest bits of temperance material for the platform ever uttered, accompanied by an article on elocution. By mail, 10c each; $1 per doz. By express, $6 per 100.

GENERAL TEMPERANCE SONG BOOK.

"Temperance Songs," a Book for Adult Societies.—Eighty-three choice pieces, both words and music (old and new tune combination) choice selections from standard temperance collections; many choice new pieces. Book carefully edited by David C. Cook. Will prove just what is wanted by every temperance society Price in strong cardboard covers, by mail, 10c each; $1 per dozen; by express, $5 per 100.

TEMPERANCE ANTHEM BOOK.

Temperance Anthems.—A new idea; nothing else of the kind in existence. Will insure good music by the choir at temperance meetings Forty-eight pages of choice anthems by ablest writers By mail, 15c each; $1.50 per doz. By express, $10 per 100.

BAND OF HOPE SONG BOOK.

Band of Hope Songs.—Fifty-seven choice pieces for juvenile temperance gatherings, Bands of Hope, etc. Old, familiar tunes, also choice new words and music. Words far in advance of anything else issued. By mail, 8c each; 75c per doz. By express, $4 per 100.

DANIEL'S BAND.

A temperance concert exercise, with parts suitable for all ages; entirely new. Songs, recitations, dialogues, etc., of a thoroughly aggressive character; sure to carry weight with the rendering of it. By mail, 5c each; 50c per dozen, By express, $2 per 100.

THE COLD WATER ARMY.

For a primary temperance concert exercise. An entirely new exercise, containing songs and recitations, dialogues, etc., suitable for primary scholars. A pleasing and telling concert on temperance. By mail, 5c each; 50c per dozen. By express, $2 per 100.

THE PERSIAN SEAL BINDING Is very handsome and durable. It is this style of binding which is so much admired by Bible readers. Please notice particularly that these Bibles are kid lined and silk sewed. Many Bibles in this style outwardly are lined with black paper and sewed with thread in place of silk.

For $2.30 we furnish a small size Oxford, bound in Persian seal, full flexible; can be bent back, doubled or rolled, without injury. Divinity circuit, gilt edges, kid lined, silk sewed, with book-mark and band Postage, 10c.

For $3.30 The same style of binding, medium size. Postage, 12c.

For $5.75 The same style of binding, large size. Postage, 20c.

LEVANT MOROCCO BINDING.

The Persian Seal bindings are the best kept by most Bible dealers, and usually pass for the best teachers' Bibles made; and, to all appearance, they are so. There is, however, a better wearing binding of which the Persian Seal is a good imitation; this is known as "Levant Morocco" In all respects the Levant morocco Bible corresponds with the Persian Seal description, except as to leather used for cover which, though looking like the Persian Seal, is stronger, and will last a lifetime.

Prices on genuine Levant Morocco bindings:
For $4.50—Small size. Postage, 10c.
For $5.50—Medium size. Postage, 12c.
For $8.00—Large size. Postage, 20cts.

Handsome Gift Bibles at Low Prices.

For 45c. Embossed morocco cover, gilt edges, gilt title on back. Very neat and durable. This is the handsomest 45c. gift Bible we have ever seen. Postage, 5c.

For 60c. Morocco cover, brass bound and plated, with handsome gilt clasp and gilt edges; two patterns; square and round corners. Exquisite lettering on side; printed in large clear type. Bibles no better are sold as high as $1 and $2. Postage, 6c.

For 70c. Similar size and style of binding to our 60-cent Bible; square corners, brass bound, with clasp and handsome tasseled book-mark; also medallion inserted on side in gold and red.

This was a new importation with the fall of 1882, and a very pretty design. It should be seen to be appreciated. (See cut.) Postage, 6c.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

—It is reported that the President will seriously call the attention of Congress this year to the imperative importance of giving serious consideration at no distant day to the Isthmus Canal question. It is understood that the Executive regards the active operations of De Lesseps at Panama, under the French government as making it hazardous to delay much longer some definite action on our part, in order that our position may be clearly established with an eye to future contingencies.

—Pension Commissioner Dudley says that the estimate made by him of $40,000,000 as being requisite to pay pensions in 1885 is but one item in the whole estimated appropriation necessary. There is now available for the present fiscal year $124,000,000, and the Commissioner calculates that if this unexpended balance be made available the additional appropriation required from Congress will be $40,000,000. His calculations are based upon the settlements of two years and give an average of this and the year to come of $82,000,000 per year.

—According to the report of Mr. Andrew Paxton, general agent of the Chicago Citizens' League, ninety-eight cases have been prosecuted in October and September for infractions of the laws bearing on the selling of intoxicating liquors to minors and habitual drunkards.

—A tornado struck the northwest part of Springfield, Mo., a few minutes after two o'clock Monday afternoon last week, passing in an easterly direction along the north part of the city and the south part of North Springfield. At the northwest part of the city the Springfield Woolen Mills, owned by Lord & Regan, employing about forty hands, was made almost a total wreck. The building was of brick and the upper stories were torn to pieces and the walls crushed in, but fortunately no one was fatally hurt. The storm swept on through the city with fearful destruction. About 250 buildings were more or less injured, twenty were destroyed, and five persons killed during the passage of the storm. The wounded will number at least sixty.

—An order was issued at Boston Thursday dissolving the company which intended to build a railway from Cairo, Egypt, to Jerusalem.

—It is now believed the Democratic majority in Virginia will reach 30,000. They will have thirty-five majority on joint ballot in the Legislature.

—Owing to the scandalous weakness of Gov. Crittenden, of Missouri, for pardoning criminals of various grades, the grand jury of St. Louis recommend an amendment to the Constitution depriving the Executive of the pardoning power.

—While Alexander L. Strauss, a Baltimore merchant, was enjoying his wedding feast at Erie, Pa., Thursday, his pocket was picked of $20,000 in bank notes and checks by a colored waiter, who concealed the plunder, but indicated its hiding-place after being arrested.

—The entire roof and the inside walls and the iron and stone columns of the new south wing of the Capitol at Madison, Wisconsin, fell Nov. 8th, while forty men were at work. The cause of the terrible accident is somewhat uncertain, but the most plausible theory is that the heavy iron pillars supporting the roof of the second story of the balcony sank into the plank on which they rested, thus pulling the sound wall outward, which in turn caused the roof of the entire wing to cave in. Of the forty on the roof at the time of the accident, some fifteen escaped by running and leaping on to the roof of the old building. Of the rest four were killed outright, one has since died, and twenty were more or less injured. The inquest on the remains of the men killed by the Madison disaster began Friday. Seven of the wounded men are lingering between life and death. The pecuniary loss is placed at $15,000.

—Business failures in the United States the past week numbered 219, being 24 more than the preceding week, and an increase of 70 when compared with corresponding period in 1882.

—The boiler of a tug in New York harbor exploded Friday morning, making splinters of the boat and killing four of the crew. A flying piece of debris killed the helmsman of a schooner lying near by.

—A scaffold eighty feet high, supporting four men, fell at Newcastle, Pa., Friday morning. One of the men was killed and two fatally injured, while the fourth broke his fall by catching a crossbar.

—The people of Southampton county, Va., fear that the negroes are bent upon a massacre, and there is great excitement. In some places the women and children have been taken to the woods and guarded. A drunken negro is credited with the remark that the colorod people intend to kill all the whites in Southampton county. Negroes are reported missing from their usual haunts.

—At the Lord Mayor's banquet in London Friday night, Waddington, the French Minister, said his country's policy was not one of aggression, but simply an intention to hold her own. Mr. Gladstone remarked that England had only the best wishes toward France as regards an orderly government and a career of peace and prosperity. He stated that the question concerning Missionary Shaw tended to bring both nations closer together, the indemnity being offered rather than demanded.

—The Marquis Tseng, Chinese Embassador to France, is authority for the statement that it will take at least 40,000 French troops to make headway against the united forces of Annam and China.

—An explosion occurred in the Moorfield colliery, Lancashire, England, Wednesday morning, 110 men being at work at the time. Sixty-seven miners were killed.

—By the explosion of a quantity of benzine during a fire in a boot and shoe factory near Roubaix, France, ten persons were killed on the spot and twenty or more seriously wounded, many of them so badly that they will die.

—Upon the revolt of Montero's troops in Arequipa, Peru, recently, the Chilian Colonel Raygado attacked the mutineers and citizens, killing seventy persons, including the Mayor.

—The mob at Zaloevoe, Hungary, attacked the Jews, Friday, and fired on the police when they interfered. The police then fired on the mob, killing two of them and wounding several.

—Vera Philipora, recently arrested at Kharkoff, Russia, was the actual head of the Nihilist Executive Committee. She has written a voluminous confession, showing that she and another woman who chose South Russia as their field of enterprise alienated the allegiance of many army officers, many of whom have been arrested. The Nihilists are miserably weakened in men and means, having lost many prominent members. The arrest of Vera Philipora is the worst blow they have for a long time received.

—The Egyptian army under Hicks Pasha, defeated the False Prophet's forces in two sanguinary battles, and now occupy El Obeid. Communication between Khartoum and the Egyptian army is severed.

Tightness in the chest is a forerunner of disease. Samaritan Nervine is the antidote. $1.50.

President Arthur, it is now stated on good authority, is willing to be known as a candidate for re-election. The result of the elections has been, on the whole, favorable for the Republican party. Henceforth we may expect more "politics" in the administration, and rumor has it that Chandler and Gresham from the Cabinet are to be sent out on a mission to Pennsylvania and Indiana. Chandler is one of the most skillful manipulators of party politics and has not much to do in the Navy Department; he will be of more importance henceforth if Arthur has determined to begin again the part he used to play in New York before he became chief executive, and men of some use to the nation, like Lincoln and Folger, will talk of retiring. The Treasury Department, through its numerous employers throughout the country, is an indispensible part of a self-nominating, second-term machine. Under Folger it has become rusty and would be of little use. Unless the popular voice shall protest we may hear any day that Folger has been shelved in some foreign mission, and a wire-puller placed over the Treasury.

As a prudent and conservative President, Arthur has made an enviable reputation, but he is not therefore a safe one, nor a man whose principles the nation can afford to endorse by a re-election. His reviving the drinking customs about the capital ought to be a fatal blow to his expectations of re-election. If they are really entertained we shall hear of some startling recognitions of the liquor power. Perhaps this is one: A few days ago a Wine and Spirit Exchange was opened in New York, to harmonize the wholesale liquor trade throughout the country. Among the guests invited to the opening of an enterprise for the extension of the whisky business was President Arthur! He assisted in the formalities of the occasion, and at the following feast, for which $5,000 worth of the finest wines were provided.

An oak at Mt. Vernon, said to have been a favorite of Washington, fell last year in a storm, and has been devoted to the encouragement of theft and lying. How so? Thus: Freemasons got it to make Masonic gavels for distribution among the lodges. That was theft, morally, for the tree belonged to the American people, if to no individual. It is also an attempt to steal from Washington's reputation to make something for the lodge. It was lying in that it is an attempt to deceive the country lodges, and the dupes outside them, into believing that Washington was a great patron of the order. Washington left such evidence of his opinion of Freemasonry behind him, that were he now living he would be a good candidate for the president of our next National Convention.

The lodge has been put on the defensive in Lincoln, Illinois. A grain dealer named Carpenter was suspected of the murder of a young woman whom it was confessed he had seduced. The whole country was excited for weeks and his neighbors were so convinced of his guilt they were ready to lynch him. He is a Mason, and four of the six members of the coroner's jury are lodge brothers. When about to render a verdict those four men retired for consultation, and the verdict was according to their arrangement. Carpenter has since been bound over under $10,000 bond to answer to the grand jury for the murder. Throughout the case his lodge companions have stood by him, and so prominent did this Masonic partizanship become that Rob Morris was betrayed into publishing a letter defending the lodge from the harsh judgments that were accumulating upon its head. Such contributions to lodge literature are very acceptible to sensible readers, although written on the presumption that mankind is stupidly credulous on the subject of Masonry. They are a convincing proof that the system deserves all the approbrium it gets for the protection of the vilest criminals: and a writer whose books contain examples of this very character of the lodge is the one to defend it from public suspicion! Why not?

It is a notable confirmation of Monsignor Capel's theory, that the Roman Catholic church is the patron of republicanism, that Bishop Keene of Richmond, Va., reports Leo XIII. as saying lately, "There is no country in the world where I am so much Pope as in the United States." Nobody can deny that our free institutions interpose fewer restrictions upon the presumption of Romanism than do the monarchies of Europe. Of course the Pope is in favor of such institutions, as the camel is in favor of the tent he can enter easiest. But that the papacy is destructive of republicanism is as easy of proof as was Lincoln's wise saying that this country could not endure part slave and part free. There have been some unpleasant tokens of the aggressive spirit of Romanism of late. The New York Republican ticket in the late election was headed by a representative of Romanism and the rum power. The late Episcopal convention voted on a proposition to change the name "Protestant Episcopal" to "Holy Catholic." It was voted down but the bishops are in favor of it. Here in Chicago our demagogue mayor has appointed an intense Romanist as School Inspector, a man with little education, no interest in the schools, and no qualification except his nationality, Irish, and his religion, Roman Catholic. There are also two members of the Board of Education who are Catholics, and it is claimed will not send their own children to the schools put in their charge. Schools managed in this way will soon become a matter of unpleasant strife—as at East Caanan, Conn., lately, where Catholic control of the schools was ruining them. But a Protestant victory was followed by a Catholic refusal to trade at stores not kept by their partisans.

The new time standard was adopted on the 18th inst. by the railways of the country. After a few days we shall become accustomed to the change and to estimating the difference between the legal and the railway standard and the first annoyance will pass away. The immense influence of the railway business in our commercial affairs will soon draw every other interest into line as the train follows the locomotive. This inroad upon a time standard which has been good enough for 6,000 years has suggested several other changes. The Geodetic Congress recommends that a single meridian (that of Greenwich) furnish a standard time for the world; that is, without regard to our old friend the sun, we set our watches by one regulator the world around, and have every clock strike twelve at once. Somebody else proposes that we count to 24 o'clock instead of stopping at twelve, so that the patient hands that mark the hours need travel but one journey a day instead of two. Attorney General Brewster, who has been consulted about the change, says that so far as its legal basis is concerned there can be none without the action of Congress. This body will be ready to act if the railroads shall make the change popular.

SIR STAFFORD NORTHCOTE IN IRELAND.

BY REV. JOHN BOYES.

Sir Stafford Northcote has been paying a visit to Ireland, and if we judge merely from the enthusiasm manifested by the many and numerous audiences he has addressed, and from the cordiality of the welcome accorded to him, his visit has been an unqualified success with which he is wonderfully pleased. Now that the excitement has a little abated, we may venture to indicate its influence from a political point of view. His criticism on the doings of the government is somewhat dubious. It is very difficult to discover whether Sir Stafford approves or disapproves of the Land Act in his own mind. We have noticed the same uncertain sound when he has been considering important proposals made by Mr. Gladstone. His words of condemnation appear to be uttered in a perfunctory manner, just to please his party and not because he himself believes them. Speaking of the Land Act, he regarded it as resting upon two foundations, suggested by the figure seen by the Babylonish monarch, which had feet partly of iron and partly of clay. That said he, which rests upon the iron will last, that which rests upon the clay won't; but he was careful not to tell the people which portions rest upon the iron and which upon the clay. He rightly said that justice will live and injustice will die, but he gave no indication as to which he regards justice and which injustice; nor did he tell the Irish people that for six years of official power, the Tory government had busied itself in foreign brawls, in creating unnecessary panics, and that before handing over the government of the country to Mr. Gladstone and his colleagues, Erin was "in a state of veiled rebellion."

As one result of Sir Stafford's deliverances we infer that the Conservatives when they get into power, have no intention of introducing any honest measure of land law reform. If a statesman should ever arise with sufficient genius to increase the acreage of the country so that the landowners can retain all their present possessions, and squeeze out field and recreation grounds for the peasantry he will at once be placed at the head of the Conservatives. As this will involve the spreading out of the country a considerable distance into the Atlantic and will require a genius far superior to Sir Stafford or any of his friends, the case seems hopeless.

Satisfactory as the visit has been to Sir Stafford's party, we do not see that the existing government has any reason to be discontented with it. He virtually admits that the Land Act is good, but added that the value and importance of such legislation depends on the method of its administration; but he did not even hint that the Act was being either unfairly or inefficiently carried out. While he finds it impossible to curse the Act, he finds it exceedingly unpleasant and inconvenient to bestow his blessing upon it. What he has accomplished for Ireland, beyond telling the Orangemen of Ulster to be faithful to the constitution and to conservatism it is difficult to imagine.

Grimsby, England, Oct. 1883.

WHITE ETHIOHIANS.

BY REV. P. B. CHAMBERLAIN.

[The following article was sent to the Pacific of San Francisco, Cal., soon after the recent meeting of the Knight Templar Conclave in that city last August; but after some weeks delay it was returned to the author without publication. It is here printed as originally written.]

When the old prophet sternly asked, "Can the Ethiopian change his skin, or the leopard his spots," he has been generally understood to imply as the only right answer, a most emphatic negative.

The Pacific's recent unqualified laudations of the Knights-Templar as a body of "high-toned and fervently religious men" constrains me to inquire if there is a new version of this important passage?

On the occasion of their previous Conclave in Chicago, three years ago, the papers of that city gave them a very different character. Even some of the secular dailies went so far as to represent their conduct there as a carnival of dissipation—Sabbath desecration, theatre-going, dancing, drinking and licentiousness—declaring that the lowest haunts of vice were visited by many of them, and that single saloons, favorably located to catch their custom, took in $1,000 per day.

So notorious were these doings that, to save, in part, the reputation of the order, members were forbidden to wear, when off duty, any badges or uniforms by which they could be identified as Knights by outsiders; and the Pacific itself at that time published the damaging fact that the most important part of the outfit of the California delegation, both going and coming, was a lavish supply of intoxicating liquors. Are we not justified, therefore, in asking in all candor what has produced such a marvelous change in these thousands of men in these three short years? Have they, indeed, in such large numbers really been "washed and made white in the blood of the Lamb?" or are they simply being white-washed? If the latter is the fact, then surely somebody has sadly failed, as no reporter for the public should fail to learn their true characters before giving such high commendations. Where were many of these men, and what were they doing, when not on parade before the public gaze? Did none of the many haunts of vice in San Francisco do a very unusual amount of business while they were there, as did those of Chicago? "Speak every man truth with his neighbor." "Flattering lips are an abomination to the Lord." Again, how much reliance can be placed in your very flattering account of their religious services on the Sabbath? Have you failed to see in your wide spheres of observation what is clear to many others in narrower ones, that many of these same men, when at home, so far from being fervently religious, are notoriously irreligious, some of them grossly ungodly? What therefore, measured by any high Christian standard, must be the true character, the real value of any mere religious performances on their part in which they have simply been drilled to kneel and respond with military precision and promptness? What can be any such religious services on the part of such men but a clear case of "drawing near to God with their mouths, while their hearts are far from him," seemingly having forgotten that "the sacrifices of the wicked are an abomination to the Lord." Have all of the offenses of the cross ceased in behalf of these men alone, so that while living in utter disregard of all the spiritual demands of the Gospel, they need only to go through with imposing religious forms once in three years to win from both Christian papers and Christian pulpits the reputation of being eminent saints?

Once more, what of your highly approved quotation from the sermon on that occasion, in which the minister boasts as bravely as ever Falstaff did of their ability and readiness to actually fight with their carnal weapons for the defense of the cross? Will the cross ever need any such defense? Did the speaker forget? and have those who quote him forgot the very significant language of our Lord, "My kingdom is not of this world. If my kingdom were of this world then would my servants fight, but now is my kingdom not from hence?" Is it proposed to imitate the Mohammedan, and force our sacred Christian doctrines down the throats of infidels at the point of the sword?

In this age and in our country could there be a more monstrous anachronism than that of a vast military organization, composed largely of irreligious men, putting themselves forward as the self-constituted special defenders of the cross of Christ? Are we still in the dark middle ages? Have all our ideas of the sacred saving doctrines of the Gospel become so blurred or bewildered that even such momentous matters are to us but pleasing pageants?

Have the watchmen upon the walls of Zion, even those stationed at the most important points, no more heroic work than this to do in defending the truth against the encroachment of error? in "contending earnestly for the faith once delivered to the saints" against the wiles of the devil? When the trumpet gives no more certain sounds than these, who will prepare themselves for battle? If the religion of Christ is no more than a pompous parade, why should any of us sacrifice and suffer and die for it?

Walla Walla, W. T.

THE BRAHMO SOMAJ.

A new religion has sprung up in India. Its founder was one Ram Mohan Rai, rajah of Bardwan in 1830. Its present apostle is Kesab Chunder Sen, who has paid one visit to the United Kingdom and may next honor the United States. He is said to be well read in modern systems of thought and maintains that although the new religion is primarily for India, yet that it is destined to overspread the world. Like the Freemason he professes great regard for Christ and Mohammed and Guatama. He says "Christians are fools to think they can convert other religions," and so with all others except his Brahmo Somaj which is destined to absorb all other religions.

Its basis of faith is nature and intuition. Its propounder believes in a Supreme God and the immortality of the soul; culls truth from any source, be it Koran, or Bible, or Shaster; and extends its loving arms openly, not secretly, as far as we know, ready to welcome religionists of any or every name; and commends idolatry as well-meaning, but fails to see fully the divine character. He thinks there are 330,000,000 of gods and goddesses, and each is of God, and all are invited to become one in this Brahmo Somaj.

Freemasonry must look out for its laurels or hide its diminished head for an honest open advocacy of Brahmo Somaj with its membership for every one, man, woman and child, must be more heartily received by mankind that the very exclusive, Pharisaical, concealed (but revealed) system yclept Masonry.

But this new system lacks the "one thing needful." It needs to have the revelation of the God in-Christ who is reconciling the world to himself, and is thereby emancipating from the dark gropings through nature for the discovery and solution of the spiritual truths which can be found only in the Son of God who has brought life and immortality to light by the Gospel. As light to the eye, as food to the hungry, as rest for the weary, so is the Gospel of Christ for mankind the world over; and the heart of every true Christian yearns for their fellow men and loves to make known to blind and deaf and lame, and palsied humanity of every land the world over the knowledge of the Great Physician who saves to the uttermost all who come to God by him.

Alas, that in our Christian country there should be societies, secret or otherwise, which ignore the Great Physician of souls—the Saviour of the world! And alas, that the lives of professing Christians should obstruct the power of the truth as it is in Jesus!

O. D. G.

WEEK-DAY SERMON.

BY E. E. FLAGG.

"What the Lord doesn't see fit to put into folks—why, it isn't there, and they can't help it," shrewdly remarked Mrs. F. one day when we were talking over a terrible case of destitution which had lately come to light;—the result, not of misfortune or even laziness, but bad management of an income on which more thrifty and forehanded souls would have lived in comfort. "Now I remember the case of a minister on our circuit, one of the best of men, and his wife was just as good as he was; but they hadn't an ounce of calculation between them. They just lived from hand to mouth with no more forethought or planning than a couple of sparrows. So when we talked of getting up a donation party to supply their needs for the winter some of the brethren and sisters were not very willing to give. 'His wife was such a miserable manager,' they said, it was just like pouring water into a sieve to try to do anything for them. If she would only calculate and save there would be some encouragement." Well, I let them have their say out and then I had mine. "It is all true," said I; "sister B. hasn't a grain of what we call faculty. She can't get up a dinner out of nothing like you sister R., nor turn and twist an old garment till it looks as good as new like sister M.; but if the Lord hasn't given it to her to be a good manager, and has given it to us to be, don't it make it all the more our duty to help her? Bear ye one another's burdens and so fulfil the law of Christ. This is sister B.'s burden. She does as well as she knows how, and neither you nor I can do any better. Perhaps that is the very reason the Lord didn't make her a good manager just to see how many of us have got charity of the real sort."

"And what did they say to that?" I inquired.

"Most of them came round finally to my way of thinking. They were good women. Their hearts were in the right place. They only wanted a word to see the matter it its true light."

Happy are they to whom is given not only "the word" to speak, but the simplicity, the tact, the courage to speak it in the right spirit and at the right time! But to come back to the subject of burden-bearing, let us never forget that it is not the strong whose life load presses heaviest. In every community there are always a few who in common speech "have no faculty" to get along. They are deficient in judgment, in foresight, in ambition and enterprise, and everything else which goes to make success in life; and they must be helped by their more fortunate fellow-beings or drop hopelessly in the race. My dear sister, saving, prudent, thrifty, patterned after Solomon's virtuous woman, don't despise your weaker sister, but bear her burdens—for they are heavy, heavier than you can know unless with Christ-like sympathy you put yourself in her place.

And brother A, don't think it hard when you are called upon to help brother B who has had a constant run of ill-luck though you feel sure that in his place you would have avoided it all. As you have just what he lacks, thrift, shrewdness, brains, this is very probable. But the glory of Christ's religion is that the infirmities of the weak are the opportunities of the strong. Throw loving arms around your weak brothers, and lift them over life's hard places. These foolish, thriftless ones on whom the battle presses so hard bear God's divining rod to point out the hearts in which are the holy wells of a pure and living charity. Let Masonic benevolence like the priest and the Levite, pass them by on the other side, but let us "who have not so learned Christ" pour into their wounds the wine of hope and the oil of consolation, and leave it to the common sense of mankind to judge between the charity of Christians and the charity of the secret lodge.

Wellesley, Mass.

—Some are anxious to know why the secret lodge must forever curse the temperance question. One of the published commendations of Stephen Merritt, candidate on the Prohibition ticket in New York for Comptroller, reads as follows: "He was Grand Worthy Patriarch and Most Worthy Chaplain of the National Division Sons of Temperance, and is a Mason in very high standing." God save us from the twin curses of rum and Masonry!—Wesleyan.

We hear the rain fall, but not the snow. Bitter grief is loud, calm grief is silent.

Every good deed that we do is not only a present pleasure, but a prop for the future.

—A converted man went home from an Illinois camp meeting and publicly burned his stock of pipes and tobacco, amounting to $200 worth. That is apostolic. Such religion amounts to something.

A CATHOLIC CONDEMNATION.

[The council of bishops of the Roman Catholic church meeting lately in New York, have published their long pastoral letter. The following is the portion on "Secret Societies," almost entire. As the New York Witness suggested, if the word Christian were used instead of Catholic, the letter would be an excellent admonition for all churches].

Another most important question which has occupied our serious consideration during this Provincial Council has been the nature and evils of secret societies. Guided by the example of the sovereign pontiffs, as well as by our experience of the past years, which have impressed upon our minds so many sad lessons, we earnestly beseech you to regard secret societies as societies with which you cannot be connected, or which you cannot, in any way, abet or encourage.

"By their fruits you shall know them." In the countries of the Old World they seek the destruction of all existing order. They make direct attacks upon religion and her ministers. They publish the grossest falsehoods about the church; they slander and vilify her highest dignitaries. In every possible way they strive to undermine her authority. They excite the passions of the multitude against her. They try to withdraw the children from her influence and her teaching. They banish religious communities; profane and desecrate temples of worship; spread corruption amongst youth; caricature the holiest things; tear the crucifix from the walls of the school-house; cast out the image of the Saviour as an unclean thing. All these things are now perpetrated by governments in Europe, following knowingly or unknowingly the dictates of secret societies. They have a mania for destruction; they will never reconstruct. Burrowing beneath the earth, shrouded in darkness, they pursue skillfully and perseveringly the work of ruin, while the rulers of the world march on blindly as they are directed. The logical end to which they seek to drive society is well expressed by the term Nihilism. Chaos is the necessary result of their labors. And to gain these ends everything is lawful. Assassination and foulest murder are openly recommended and practiced.

We are well aware that the spirit of the age tends strongly towards the formation of associations. We know that in union is strength. Many advantages are expected from membership in organizations popularly supposed to possess influence and power. That these arguments have a certain force we are quite willing to admit. But the Catholic church never opposes associations founded on justice and in accordance with law. * * * Notwithstanding the calumnies so often uttered by her enemies the church has always held as a fundamental truth that the end does not justify the means. In this free land every legitimate object can be attained in an open manner. Men can here give full expression to their convictions and aspirations, and labor to attain them in the clear light of open day. What need, then, can their be of secret, oath-bound associations? Something must be wrong in the end proposed when men, in a free land, must meet in the dark to obtain it. When men hate the light it is a proof that their works are evil, since they love darkness rather than light.

Again, is it not a crime to join oath-bound associations, directed by irresponsible leaders, whose orders, whatever they may be, must be blindly obeyed? To place one's liberty of action at the command of unknown chiefs, to sacrifice one's free will and personal responsibility at the dictation of men without conscience or religion—is this not an act of supreme folly? Is not this the most debasing kind of slavery? And how often are those silly dupes lured into criminal excesses and even capital offences, which they expiate either in the hulks or on the scaffold, whilst their leaders are shielded from punishment by the darkness in which they were concealed, or by the blood of their victims handed over to justice in their stead!

Secret societies, bound by oath to obey orders, whatever they may be, given by chiefs oftentimes unknown to the greater number of the members, are dangerous everywhere and evil everywhere; but amongst us they are worthy of contempt, because entirely lacking any plausible justification. The laws of the Republic are just and equitable. Let us obey them faithfully, for they are the bulwark of our freedom. If we have grievances we can appeal to public opinion and to the spirit of fair play and justice which characterizes the American people. Let us, then, avoid societies of which, 1st, the objects are not lawful; 2d, where the means are sinful; and 3d, where the rights of human conscience and liberty are violated by rash and dangerous oaths. Let us carefully observe and faithfully obey the solemn words of St. Peter, the Prince of the Apostles, addressed to the early Christians regarding their duties to all civil rulers, under whatever form of government they might live: "Be ye subject therefore to every human creature for God's sake: whether it be to the king as excelling, or to governors as sent by him for the punishment of evil-doers, and for the praise of the good; for so is the will of God, that by doing well you may put to silence the ignorance of foolish men; as free, and not making liberty a cloak for malice, but as the servants of God. Honor all men. Love the brotherhood. Fear God."

Besides the societies openly condemned by the sovereign pontiffs, into which no Catholic may enter and remain in the church, there are many others not so explicitly denounced, and of which Catholics oftentimes become members. Yet some of these associations may be equally dangerous, and should therefore be avoided with equal care. To guide the consciences of our faithful people we here propose some rules by which they may form a judgment of the merits of various societies. They should consider as dangerous: 1. Societies which prevent the lawful exercise of liberty, either on the part of employers or employees, especially if to further the end proposed recourse be had to violence. It is an injustice to prevent men by violent means from earning an honest livelihood. 2. Societies in which anti-religious infidel doctrines are openly professed and advocated. No Catholic may remain united with men who assail religion. 3. Societies in which a ritual is introduced and a form of worship used at variance with Catholic teaching. Such societies are really religious sects. Again, we would advise all our people to abandon any societies where they find false professions made to blind the public, and various forms of rituals or rules prescribed to deceive the unwary. Honest societies will not need two weights and measures. Finally, we say to you in the words of the great Apostle St. Paul, and in the same charity which pressed him: "Bear not the yoke with unbelievers. For what participation hath justice with injustice? Or what fellowship hath light with darkness? And what concord hath Christ with Belial? Or what part hath the faithful with the unbeliever? * * * Wherefore, go out from among them, and be ye separate, said the Lord."
